[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 4 -- Kampuchean Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs Hor Nam Hong on Monday met Vietnamese Ambassador Ngo Dien who informed him of the tenure of the note sent on January 30 by the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry to its Chinese counterpart, and of the message from Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong to U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar concerning Sino-Vietnamese relations.

In both the note and the message, the Vietnamese Government again proposed that both sides continue to refrain from hostile armed activities along the common border as they have done during the recent Lunar New Year festival and resume the bilateral talks.

Hor Nam Hong declared that his government firmly supported the Vietnamese peace initiative and demanded that the Chinese authorities stop their provocations and their hostile policy toward Vietnam.

DO MUOI URGES PROVINCES TO MEET PLAN NORMS

BK051025 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] According to VNA, Do Muoi, alternate member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, in late January visited and inspected the production activities and efforts to fulfill grain obligations in Minh Hai, Kien Giang, Hau Giang, An Giang, Dong Thap and Cuu Long Provinces.

Do Muoi commended these provinces for their initial achievements in production and fulfilling their grain obligations. He urged localities to strive to understand the spirit of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau's directive No 120, which delineates the measures to be used to solve the food problem and specifies the nation's requirements for grain supplies from the provinces in the Mekong River Delta.

With regard to production, Do Muoi said that agricultural production plan norms for localities in 1982, especially for grain production, had been set higher than those established for previous years. As a result, each individual province and district must fully exploit all its favorable conditions in land, labor, weather and seeds in order to fulfill and overfulfill the yearly plan norms set for each crop.

Concerning grain obligations, Do Muoi urged localities to strive to fulfill and overfulfill state plan norms, especially with regard to the collection of agricultural taxes. Various administrative echelons and concerned sectors must carry out their propaganda and education tasks more effectively in order to make the public clearly realize that paying taxes is not only an obligation but also a duty as it is part of the cause of national building and defense.

Do Muoi also reminded localities that while performing their supervisory duties they must carry out various concrete tasks satisfactorily. These tasks include the perfection of agricultural production relations, especially among production collectives; building cooperatives at qualified localities; and the rearrangement of land and ricefields in the rural areas. They must establish trade and credit cooperative systems, perfect the organization and building of material bases for food, internal trade and agricultural material sectors and so forth and consolidate local party and mass organizations.

SK051537 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1528 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 5 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors who are leading the situation to the highest pitch of strain while making a massive shipment of aggression forces into South Korea infiltrated again the high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane "SR-71" deep into the air above Kosong, Kangwon Province of our country, at around 12 hours 44 minutes on February 5 and committed espionage against the northern half of the republic. This was the 21st espionage act of this sort by the U.S. imperialist aggression forces against our country this year.

The unceasing infiltration of spy planes into the air space of our country by the U.S. imperialist aggressors despite the repeated protests and warnings of our people is a malicious challenge to the patient efforts of our people for peace and peaceful reunification.

The aggressive acts of the U.S. imperialist war maniacs against our country's air space, which are becoming all the more undisguised these days, rouse the entire Korean people to indignation.

If the U.S. imperialist aggressors persist in their acts of aggression against our country, mistaking the patience of our people, they will be held entirely responsible for all the consequences arising from this.

NODONG SINMUN RAPS U.S. 'BELLIGERENCY' IN KOREA

[Text] Pyongyang, February 8 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINUM today prints an article titled "U.S. Imperialists' Aggressive and Provocative Manoeuvres in South Korea and Surrounding Areas." Noting that the danger of a war breaking out at any moment is increasing in Korea due to the belligerent manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists, the paper says:

Last year the U.S. imperialists largely increased the numerical strength of their troops occupying South Korea above the previous year. They announced at the end of last year that their air force would be reinforced by over 1,000 personnel.

They newly attached 46 "F-16" fighter planes to their air force in South Korea and announced that an information battalion [as received] would be set up at the U.S. Second Division. For the purpose of increasing the "information gathering capacity" and the "capacity of ground attack" on the northern half of the DPRK, they decided to newly set up an army information battalion 500-600 strong equipped with electronic apparatus and additionally deploy in South Korea a squadron of "A-10" close support planes along with 900 personnel on an "actual war footing" by September this year.

They also plan to increase the number of anti-tank helicopters carrying missiles for attacking tanks, introduce "M-60" tanks and increase the fire power of field artillery.

On the other hand, they are rapidly beefing up the South Korean puppet army. They decided to supply South Korea with military equipment worth 327 million dollars including 1,000 "M-551" light tanks and equipment for one Hawk missile battalion. Not a small amount of these weapons have already been transferred to the puppets. Besides, they decided to give the South Korean puppets military sales loan amounting to 167.5 million dollars in the fiscal 1982.

The U.S. imperialists are spurring on war preparations, building up their armed forces of aggression not only in South Korea but also in the surrounding areas.

They are further reinforcing their military bases in Japan proper, Okinawa, Hawaii, the Philippines, Guam and other parts and mobilizing their armed forces stationed there in military exercises regularly staged in South Korea every year.

In particular, they are further building up Okinawa as a military base directed against our country. In Okinawa there are 29,000 U.S. troops, the Kadena airfield and 60 other U.S. military bases. The military harbours of Okinawa have become the base of the newly activated "quick deployment forces."

In addition to this, they massed large armed forces, airplanes, war vessels and other military technical materiel in Japan proper, the Philippines, Guam, Hawaii and other parts surrounding our country and set up a system for their dispatch to the Korean Peninsula in case of "emergency."

While building up their armed forces of aggression on a large scale in Korea and surrounding areas, the U.S. imperialists frequently stage large-scale military exercises to lead the situation of our country farther to the brink of war.

The aggressive "Team Spirit" war exercise staged annually by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique from 1976 is planned to be staged again from the coming 13th.

This exercise is a "test war" and a "preliminary war" for attacking the northern half of the DPRK from the sky, ground and sea with the mobilization of the U.S. ground, naval and air force units from U.S. proper and Asian and Pacific regions.

Developments in Korea today clearly prove that the U.S. imperialist aggressors are precisely responsible for the danger of new war in Korea.

The U.S. imperialists try to obstruct the reunification of Korea, freeze her division by strength and thereby keep hold on South Korea indefinitely as their colony and military base. But this is an anachronistic delusion. They must withdraw their aggression forces from South Korea and give up the belligerent manoeuvres.

KCNA DENOUNCES 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982' EXERCISE

[Text] Pyongyang, February 6 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors and the South Korean military fascist clique are scheming to hold a large-scale military exercise dubbed "Team Spirit 1982" from February 13 to April 26, according to a report.

The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets announced this simultaneously on February 3. 157,500 troops and uptodate military equipment will be mobilized in this exercise planned on the pretext of "demonstrating the defence capacity" of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces and the South Korean puppet army and "testing their strategic manoeuvrability in case of emergency."

The scheme of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean military fascist clique to hold a large and very provocative "South Korea-U.S. joint" exercise at a time when public opinion at home and abroad is strongly calling for the relaxation of tension and the withdrawal of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces from South Korea is a challenge to the unanimous desire of the Korean people and the peaceloving people of the world.

RENMIN RIBAO CITED ON 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982'

[Text] Beijing, February 5 (KCNA) -- Chinese mass media denounced the plan of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces and the South Korean puppet army to hold a large-scale joint military exercise dubbed "Team Spirit 1982" from February 13.

The PEOPLE'S DAILY February 5 reported it under the title "The U.S. and South Korea Will Hold a Large-Scale Military Exercise. This Will Heighten Tension on the Korean Peninsula and Obstruct Korea's Peaceful Reunification." The XINHUA NEWS AGENCY reported it on February 4.

KCNA CITES SOVIET MEDIA ON 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982'

[Text] Moscow, February 5 (KCNA) -- Soviet mass media exposed the plan of the U.S. imperialist aggression forces and the South Korean puppet army to stage from February 13 a large-scale joint military exercise codenamed "Team Spirit 1982."

IZVESTIYA February 4 reported it under the title "In Bellicose Spirit." TASS reported it on the same day. It noted that the military exercise would impose a burden of 50 million dollars upon the U.S. and South Korean taxpayers.

SOUTH REPORTED TO STAGE NAVAL FIRING EXERCISE

[Text] Pyongyang, February 7 (KCNA) -- The South Korean military fascist clique plans to stage a provocative naval shooting exercise in the sea off Taechon port, South Chungchong Province, on the west coast for three days of February 11, 18 and 25, according to a report.

While talking about "peaceful unification," the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique is heightening tension with frequent criminal war exercises.

SOUTH MILITARY PLANE CRASH 5 FEB REPORTED

[Text] Pyongyang, February 8 (KCNA) -- A military plane of the South Korean puppet army crashed north of Mt. Halla, Cheju Island, in a criminal war exercise called "counter-infiltration operation." on February 5, acco[illegible] to a report.

The spokesman of the pupper Defence Minist[illegible] day admitted that the plane had gone into pieces and all the 53 men aboard it, 47 officers and men of the puppet army and 6 crewman, had died.

This is a disgraceful group death caused by the anti-communist rampage of the Chon Tu-hwan traitor clique for inciting antagonism and spirit of confrontation against the northern half of the republic among the South Korean people.

PROPOSED AGREEMENT ON BASIC RELATIONS SCORED

[Text] Pyongyang, February 6 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN February 6 anatomizes the "agreement on basic relations between North and South" brought forward by traitor Chon Tu-hwan in his "January 22 proposal."

Its signed article headlined "Swindle For Perpetuating Country's Division" reads in part:

The struggle for national reunification is a patriotic struggle for national sovereignty and national unity. Therefore, one should, first of all, uphold the principle of independence, firmly adhering to a patriotic stand, and proceed from a correct analysis of the actual conditions created in the country, if he wants to argue about the question of national reunification. But such stand can never be found in the "agreement" produced by traitor Chon Tu-hwan.

The "agreement" envisages the "maintenance of the present system of truce," "respect for treaties and agreements" signed with other countries, "opening of permanent missions," etc. In other words, it calls for the continued occupation of South Korea by the U.S. troops and maintenance of the aggressive and treacherous "South Korea-U.S. mutual defence treaty," "South Korea-Japan treaty" and so forth, and treating the North-South relations as those between different national states. This typically manifests the treacherous and flunkeyist stand of puppet Chon Tu-hwan.

The domestic issue of a nation can be solved in conformity with its own interests and the will of its people only when it is done by its own efforts. For the independent and peaceful reunification of the country, it is an essential requisite to force the U.S. troops to pull out of South Korea and end foreign interference.

With the U.S. occupation of South Korea and its policy of aggression maintained, the sovereignty of our people will continue to be violated and an independent solution of the reunification question is unthinkable.

Maintaining the "present system of truce" is tantamount to leaving South Korea under the U.S. imperialists' occupation and preserving all the evil consequences of this occupation policy. It is a well known fact that the U.S. imperialists oppose replacing the armistice agreement with a peace agreement for their continued domination over South Korea.

"Respect for treaties" proposed by the puppet means faithful execution of the policy of Korean aggression of the U.S. imperialists who, under the pretext of "treaty commitments," attempt to keep hold on South Korea indefinitely and threaten not to hesitate at armed intervention against the Korean people. It is neither permissible that traitor Chon Tu-hwan in the "agreement" attempted to treat the North-South relations as those between different national states, calling for the establishment of "permanent missions."

In his attempt to treat the North and the South as different states, traitor Chon Tu-hwan seeks the sinister aim of realizing his intrigue of the permanent division of the country by freezing the present state of division by law.

Other provisions of the "agreement," minus the veil, also envisage fixing the present division and confrontation between the North and the South under the cloak of "peaceful fixation." The word "agreement" itself is intended to pattern the North-South relations on those between states.

All this makes it plain that the "agreements" peddled by traitor Chon Tu-hwan under the label of "temporary" is nothing but a humbug for maintaining and legalising the division of the country by having the North and South recognised as two states by the world people.

The "agreement" advertised by traitor Chon Tu-hwan is a replica of the formula of a foreign country which is utterly different from ours in conditions and circumstances and a malrevised version of the June 23 splittist declaration of traitor Pak Chong-hui. The U.S. imperialists self-exposed that the puppet's "proposal" is a U.S. brainchild when they "hailed" it as soon as it was made public.

SPA ELECTION PROPAGANDA 'BRISK' THROUGHOUT DPRK

[Text] Pyongyang, February 6 (KCNA) -- Election propaganda is now brisk in Korea with the approach of elections of deputies to the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea scheduled for February 28.

Election propaganda is conducted in various forms and methods -- lecture, explanatory conversation, propaganda through visual aids and propaganda by mobile art agitation corps.

An election atmosphere is prevailing in towns and villages where there are put up posters and slogans, such as "All to elections of deputies to the Supreme People's Assembly!" "Let us consolidate as firm as a rock the revolutionary power of workers, peasants, soldiers and working intellectuals." "Let us further accelerate the independent and peaceful reunification of the country by consolidating rockfirm our revolutionary power!" and "All voters, demonstrate to the whole world the might of our people firmly united and rallied around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the glorious party in elections of deputies to the Supreme People's Assembly!"

Functionaries of local party and government organs, economic bodies and working people's organisations, agitators, five-family propagandists, teachers and college and university students are giving lectures and holding explanatory conversations at organs, industrial establishments, cooperative farms and residential neighborhood units on elections of deputies to the Supreme People's Assembly.

HELSINKI REUNIFICATION MEETING ADOPTS DOCUMENT

[Text] Pyongyang, February 8 (KCNA) -- A final document was adopted at the World Conference of Journalists for Korea's Reunification which was held on January 30 and 31 in Helsinki, according to a report.

Noting that supporting the peaceful reunification of Korea and the Korean people's struggle for its realisation is a pressing task which brooks no further delay, the final document says: Korea must be reunified, not divided into two.

The conference stresses that reunification should be realized by the Koreans themselves without any interference from outside. The Democratic People's Republic of Korea has made numerous proposals to heal the split of the Korean nation. The conference showed high appreciation for these proposals, among which the proposal made by President Kim Il-song in October 1980 on founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo is gaining worldwide interest and support.

Those who do not wish Korea's reunification are encouraging North-South confrontation and are trying to implement "simultaneous U.N. membership" in order to continue Korea's division. Any proposal for reunification not based on the withdrawal of all foreign troops and weapons from South Korea and democratization of its society is of no significance.

The conference supports genuine negotiations for reunification of Korea between North and South. Ending the military confrontation between the North and the South and the danger of a new war is a most important condition for the peaceful reunification of Korea.

In order to reduce tension and remove the danger of war, the Korean armistice agreement should be replaced by a peace agreement. All foreign forces should be withdrawn from South Korea.

The stationing of U.S. forces in South Korea constitutes a constant danger to peace in the world and is a violation of the Korean armistice agreement, the July 4, 1972 North-South joint statement and the resolution adopted at the 30th session of the U.N. General Assembly. It is an infringement upon the national sovereignty of the Korean people.

Stating that journalists from 68 countries want to express their unanimous solidarity with the journalists in South Korea who are working under extremely difficult conditions, the final document says: We demand the immediate release of all imprisoned colleagues. There must be an immediate end to the persecution of those who endeavour to report in a truthful and sincere way the aspirations, hopes and demand of the Korean people to be reunited.

All the illegally arrested and imprisoned people, including Kim Tae-chung, should be released at once and all penalties removed. It is our duty to tell the whole world about the struggle of the Korean people.

The conference expresses its conviction that all journalists who value independence and peace and wield their pens for justice should contribute to the reunification of Korea by supporting the Korean people's aspiration to end the division of their nation. The Korean people need our solidarity and full support.

The conference suggests the establishment of an international information center about Korea to let the world public know the facts about this situation.

We, representatives of the press from 68 countries around the world appeal to all journalists and their organizations, to all representatives of mass media.

Support the South Korean people and journalists fighting bravely for democracy, liberty and national reunification -- for peace and independence!

Support the Korean people in their struggle for the peaceful and independent reunification of Korea!

Letter to Kim Il-song

[Text] Pyongyang, February 6 (KCNA) -- The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song received a letter dated January 31 sent by Deputy Director of the ANSA news agency of Italy Amerigo Terenzi, Editor of the Indian paper BLITZ N.K. Nautiyal and Editor of the Nigerian paper DAILY SKETCH Kayode Awe, who were chairmen of the World Conference of Journalists for Korea's Reunification, upon the successful closing of the conference which was held on January 30-31 in Helsinki.

The letter extends wholehearted thanks to the great leader President Kim Il-song for sending a precious message of greetings to the conference which was attended by 145 journalists from 68 countries of the world to greatly encourage the attendants and make the conference more significant.

It says: The government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea led by Your Excellency President put forward fair proposals to reunify the divided country independently, in a peaceful way and on the principle of great national unity, and has made all possible efforts for their realisation.

The attendants of the conference paid a high tribute to the great, tireless efforts made by Your Excellency to provide a unified country to the Korean people.

The conference unanimously regarded it as the supreme national task of the Korean people and, at the same time, a common desire of the peace-loving people of the world to realise the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea as early as possible.

It expressed full support to the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and the ten-point policy of the unified state davanced by Your Excellency respected President, considering them to be a fair and aboveboard programme of reunification in which both the interests of the North and the South and the demand of the entire Korean people are taken into consideration and a peace-loving proposal making a positive contribution to the cause of peace in Asia and the rest of the world.

It pointed out that it is owing to the interference of outside forces that Korea has not yet been reunified and the tension has been heightened, resolutely opposad the splittists' "two Koreas" plot and their new war provocation maneuvers and violation of human rights in South Korea and held that the U.S. troops must withdraw from South Korea at once and South Korean society be democratised.

The attendants of the conference denounced the "proposal" brought forward recently by the South Korean rulers as one seeking their splittist purpose.

The conference stressed that to support the reunification of Korea is a lofty international duty of the journalists of the world and unanimously manifested the determination to make all efforts possible to accelerate the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea.

The journalists of the world will conduct more energetically their journalistic activities in support of the new porposal for national reunification advanced by Your Excellency respected President and the struggle of the Korean people for its realization, holding high the pen of justice.

We believe that the Korean people under the wise leadership of Your Excellency respected President will surely accomplish the cause of the country's reunification with the active support and encouragement of the journalists and peace-loving people of the world.

We heartily wish Your Excellency respected President good health and a long life for the reuvnification and prosperity of Korea.

PRESIDENT SAYS UNIFICATION POSSIBLE IN 1980'S

SK080114 Seoul YONHAP in English 0051 GMT 8 Feb 82

[Text] Cheju, Korea, Feb. 8 (YONHAP) -- South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan Sunday morning declared here that he was confident the unification of the fatherland would be possible within the 1980's only if the nation were to be strongly united. "Since South Korea is superior to North Korea in many respects," the president said, "unification will surely be realized during this decade."

After receiving a briefing from the municipal administration of Soguip City in this resort island, the chief executive also said, "The day will come when North Korea will open its society and Korean brethren visit each other freely, if we consolidate our national strength by increasing our economic power."

Chon stressed that all public servants, as well as the general public, should concentrate their efforts and energy on the realization of the goal of unification. He further called on the people to be more vigilant about maintaining order, and make it a habit to keep the environment clean in order to host the 1986 Asian Games and 1988 Summer Olympics successfully. Chon also inspected Cheju City and other areas in this southernmost island.

MINISTER ON NORTH RESPONSE TO 20-POINT PROPOSAL

[From the column "News Behind the News"]

[Text] In discussing the 20-point proposal for joint projects between the North and South, South Korean Unification Minister Son Chae-sik said on 5 February: "North Korea has not made an official response to it, but it seems to have softened its position when compared to its reaction to our 22 January proposal for drafting a constitution for unification." Minister Son's analysis is based on the derogatory language used against the South by Pyongyang radio and other North Korean media organs. Son said that "North Korea has markedly reduced its level of derision against the South." "We can say that North Korea has adopted a low profile because our 20-point proposal is so rational and the international community has shown great support," Son said. He added: "We may expect North Korea will reluctantly accept at least some of the 20 proposals."

Minister Son emphatically said that "the low profile adopted by the North must not be construed as a sign it is turning away from its ultimate goal to communize the South."

CHUNGANG ILBO OPPOSES OCEAN RESOURCES PACT

[Editorial: "Secret Agreement on Underground Resources"]

[Excerpts] A secret agreement among the United States, Great Britain, West Germany and France to monopolize ocean mineral resources is arousing indignation in the Soviet bloc and Third World nations, not to mention Japan. Taking advantage of the opportunity to conclude an international agreement on development of ocean mineral resources, the United States, Great Britain, West Germany and France decided to sign the secret agreement on monopolistic development of ocean mineral resources on 19 February.

We are surprised at the brazen nature of this agreement, which excludes other nations. Though other nations are allowed to participate in the development of underground resources after they have completed the amendment of their laws by March 1983, businesses in the United States, Great Britain, West Germany and France will monopolize most mining zones until then. We feel this agreement is a replica of the colonial agreement of the imperialist powers in the 19th century.

Regarding ocean resources as the common property of mankind, member nations at the UN Conference on the Law of the Sea repeatedly discussed the question of concluding a treaty -- making the formation of an international body to manage the mining of ocean resources a key point.

To prevent developed nations with capital and technology from mining underwater resources as a monopoly, some underground mining zones were reserved for underdeveloped nations in a treaty draft.

If such a treaty is concluded, the developing nations, including Korea, can achieve their desire to become nations with natural resources by forming a consortium and introducing capital and technology from developed countries. The United States agreed to conclude the treaty during the Carter administration. However, it appears likely that Reagan has pushed ahead with the conclusion of the agreement under the pretext that securing ocean strategic resources is linked to the security of Western civilization.

It is expected that the developing nations and the Soviet Union will protest the action of the four nations at the forthcoming UN Conference on the Law of the Sea. Korea, a consumer of natural resources, welcomes price reductions in natural resources through the development of ocean resources. However, without an understanding that Korea belongs to the Third World, we must oppose this agreement to monopolize the common resources of mankind by the enterprises of industrial powers armed with technology and capital.

DPRK PREMIER SAID TO CANCEL SINGAPORE VISIT

[Text] Tokyo -- By correspondent Sin Song-sun -- Citing a diplomatic source from Singapore, today's edition of the Tokyo newspaper ASAHI SHIMBUN says North Korean puppet Premier Yi Chong-ok, now visiting four Asian countries, has cancelled his visit to Singapore scheduled for 15 February.

It has been learned that the reason for the cancellation is because of Singapore Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew's foreign travel during Yi Chong-ok's scheduled visit to Singapore.

According to a Singapore government source, Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew plans to visit Taiwan and Hong Kong for about 10 days starting 10 February. The source said this schedule has been relayed to North Korea.

BREZHNEV ADDRESS ON DISARMAMENT HAILED

OW051907 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1711 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 5 Feb (MONTSAME) -- The Mongolian public assesses Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev's address to the representatives of the Consultative Committee of Socialist International on Disarmament as a great concern for the destiny of mankind. The Soviet leader expressed the strong conviction that any state building its policy on the reckoning for a nuclear war and winning a victory in such a war is senseless, and that it is an irresponsible, adventuristic gamble with the destiny of humanity. The most important task today is to avert the threat of a war. The Mongolian people warmly welcome and fully support the constructive position of the Soviet Union on the issue of reducing the nuclear weapon, meeting the interests of all nations, to whom peace on earth is dear. Having clearly defined this position, Soviet President Brezhnev put forward another peace initiative directed at complete refusal by East and West from all types of medium-range weapons, aimed at targets in Europe. This initiative has given a real "zero option" that is to achieve an agreement on saving Europe for good from nuclear weapons, both medium range and tactical ones. Such an objective approach of the Soviet Union to the destiny of mankind is on organic continuation of the Soviet peace programme.

UNEN ANALYZES 'CRISIS' AMONG CHINESE COMMUNISTS

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 4 Feb (MONTSAME) -- the present state of things in the C.P.C. (the Communist Party of China) clearly manifests to what results may lead the deviation from the Marxist-Leninist theory and practice of party construction, accumulated in the process of the world communist movement development, writes the daily UNEN in a signed article, "The Crisis in the C.P.C. Continues".

At present the C.P.C. has lost its role of the working class vanguard as well as of the directing force in socialist construction. The ideological and organisational pricniples of the C.P.C. testify to the fact that it has lost features of a true Marxist-Leninist party and has turned into a Maoist organisation.

Analyzing the reasons of such regeneration [as received] the newspaper stresses that the petty bourgeois faction in the party and state leadership, striving to change in its interests the essence of the proletarian party, has violated the Leninist party principles and norms. Beginning with "correction" of the Marxist-Leninist teaching, this faction ended with absolute deviation from it. Touching upon the "big leap" and the "Great Cultural Revolution", the daily points out that they had become a severe lesson, which showed to what results may bring the distortion of the essence of socialism's principles.

Today the Chinese working class is represented in the party quite insignificantly. Continues the so-called "regulating of the party ranks" which is in fact a struggle against those forces in the party which negate Mao Zedong's course. The C.P.C. leadership admit themselves that the party popularity with the masses has degraded. Judging by the latest Chinese news reports the party cadres and members do not accept and not rarely violate the party discipline. The number of purged has significantly grown and the changes of the party leadership on all levels become more and more frequent.

The results of the 1981 C.P.C. 6th session testify to the factional struggle within the party. The "Resolution on Some Questions of the C.P.C. History Since the Foundation of the P.R.C." adopted at the session proves that the power struggle in the C.P.C. is in full swing.

The present Beijing leaders go out of their way in order to "modernize" Maoism and preserve it as a leading ideology. It totally conflicts with the tasks of socialist construction and with the vital interests of the Chinese people. It is (?not) of any doubt that the Chinese Communist Party will be capable of getting the country out of a socio-economic depression only if it breaks away from Maoism, restores the party's vanguard and directing role, close ties and cooperation with the world communist movement, with anti-imperialist and democratic forces, concludes UNEN.

JAPANESE 'MILITARY BUILDUP' DENOUNCED

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 6 Feb (MONTSAME) -- A MONTSAME commentator writes: Today Japan goes through a true military boom. The L.D.P. (Liberal-Democratic Party) government generously makes donations for the needs of the "Self-Defense Forces." The military budget as compared to that of the last year has been increased by 7.75 percent. The military-industrial complex operates at full capacity: new types of tanks, missiles, new war-ships are being developed, and a purchase of the most sophisticated planes in the U.S. is being planned. It is envisaged to increase by almost one third the arsenals of ammunition and two times the number of different kinds of missiles in a span of a single year. The anti-militarist clauses in the country's Constitution are openly ignored. The Japanese Prime-Minister Zenko Suzuki speaking in the parliament declared that the Self-Defense Forces' zone streteches for 1 thousand miles off the country's coasts.

This, to say the least, expanded interpretation of self-defense conforms with changes occurring in the American-Japanese military cooperation which is acquiring the characteristics of a military alliance. The question is the joint actions of the two countries' armed forces in case of "extraordinary circumstances." The Japanese ruling circles have willingly yielded to the U.S. demands to extend the range of combat operations of the Japanese air and marine forces over the whole of the north-west Pacific as to release the U.S. 7th Fleet for muscle-demonstrating in the Indian Ocean. This does not conflict with their own ambitions. At the same time the Japanese ruling circles are not disturbed by a possibility to get involved in a strange military adventure.

Quite the contrary are the feelings of the country's peace-champions. Their demands "no to war preparations," "no to revival of Japanese militarism," "no to military cooperation with the U.S." are being voiced evermore loudly and resolutely.

The Japanese military build-up alarms as well the neighbouring countries which know by their own sad experience what the Japanese military are capable of. But nevertheless the present Japanese Government, expanding on its strivings for peace, at the same time does everything to let free this horrible ghost.

[Text] At 0800 on 7 February the high-ranking military delegation of the USSR led by Comrade Marshal Nikolay Ogarkov, first deputy minister of defense of the USSR and chief of the General Staff of the Soviet Armed Forces, called on cadres and male and female combatants undergoing training at the Kampuchean infantry school.

Speaking on this occasion, infantry school Director Keo Tan expressed a warm welcome to the visit of the high-ranking USSR military delegation which, he said, is a great encouragement for the Kampuchean soldiers in their training for national defense and construction. He stressed the steady development of the school under the leadership of the party and front and with the moral and material assistance of socialist countries, including the Soviet Union. This visit will further strengthen the bonds of solidarity and cooperation between the Kampuchean and Soviet armies, he said.

In his reply, Marshal Nikolay Ogarkov sincerely thanked all concerned for the cordial reception accorded to the delegation. This more clearly shows the consolidation of the bonds of friendship, militant solidarity and cooperation between the two armies and peoples, he said. On behalf of the Soviet army and people, Comrade Marshal Nikolay Ogarkov expressed sincere moral and material support for the Kampuchean army and people in the cause of defending and building Kampuchea on the road to socialism.

He exposed the destruction and crimes wreaked on the Kampuchean people by the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique. At the same time, he spoke of the efforts made by the Kampuchean army and people since the 7 January liberation to restore every field. He stressed: The firm advance and steady development of the Kampuchean people can be attributed, besides to the correct leadership of the KPRP and the efforts made by the Kampuchean people and army themselves, to the solid support of the Soviet Union and the socialist community; to the militant alliance of the three Indochinese countries, particularly the Kampuchean-Vietnam alliance and cooperation; and to the immense assistance of progressive peace-loving countries in the world.

Speaking on the same occasion, Comrade Marshal Nikolay Ogarkov, head of the high-ranking Soviet military delegation, expressed pleasure at the warm and cordial welcome given the delegation by the Kampuchean people and army. He said that this welcome proves that Soviet-Kampuchean friendship and solidarity remain strong and everlasting. He hailed the successes and achievements made during the past 3 years by the Kampuchean army and people under the correct leadership of the KPRP, which shows that the enemies of all stripes, including U.S. imperialism, Beijing expansionism, and lackeys such as Pol Pot, Ieng Sary, Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk and Son Sann, cannot set foot on Kampuchean soil ever again, nor can they provoke another war of aggression against Kampuchea. He stressed that the Soviet army and people will always continue to support and assist the Kampuchean people in the struggle against their enemies for the cause of independence, peace and national development.

Chea Soth 5 Feb Report

[Text] Phnom Penh, 5 Feb (SPK) -- The second session of the National Assembly continued its work this afternoon by adopting the list of three committees under the jurisdiction of the National Assembly: the Legislative Committee, the Economic and Budget Affairs Committee and the Cultural and Social Affairs Committee. The Legislative Committee is made up of 11 persons and presided over by Vandy Kaon, member of the Council of State; the Economic and Budget Affairs Committee consists of 12 persons and is headed by Men Chhan, member of the Council of State; and the Cultural and Social Affairs Committee has 11 persons and is led by Nu Beng, vice chairman of the National Assembly.

This afternoon, Minister of Justice Uk Bunchhoeun presented bills on the organization of the Council of Ministers and the judicial hierarchy.

During the morning session, Vice Chairman of the Council of Ministers Chea Soth made a report on successes achieved in preceding years in every field, particularly in agricultural production. He said: These successes have been achieved thanks to the wholehearted aid of Vietnam, the Soviet Union, other socialist countries and the international charity organizations.

1. Agricultural Production:

The young state power has mobilized the productive forces. In particular, thanks to the wholehearted aid and assistance of Vietnam and the Soviet Union in terms of foodstuffs and seeds estimated at 200,000 tons in 1979, and because the international organizations subsequently provided us with aid gradually until the end of the year, the bulk of the population was saved from famine and could recover their physical abilities. They started growing rice which, from the first period following liberation, yielded an estimated 500,000 tons of foodstuffs, and which constituted the basic source of food to stave off famine.

Following this initial success, the arable land quickly restored in 1980 was double that of 1979. Rice was planted on nearly 1.4 million hectares. Thanks to favorable weather, rice production in 1980 amounted to more than 1.6 million hectares, or 3 times that of 1979. The grand success in agricultural production in 1980 completely changed the outlook of our society. The danger of famine and disease left behind by the genocidal regime was completely removed. Markets for rice and other agricultural products were established. Concurrently, the economic and social activities functioned brilliantly.

Entering 1981, agricultural production encountered new difficulties due to excessive rainfall. A part of the early rice land was flooded by rainwater, while another part was hit by drought. Cultivated land amounting to nearly 200,000 hectares was completely damaged, and production diminished greatly. In 1981 the drought lasted more than 3 months, causing great difficulties for rice crop in the highlands. Under the leadership of the party and following the instructions of the state powers at all levels, with assistance in all fields, our farmers hurried to implement measures against the danger of drought to safeguard seedlings and transport and select them.

Cadres from central to provincial and district levels gave directives to farmers in the communes and villages and took part in the broadcasting and transplanting of early rice on tens of thousands of hectares reserved for 1981, expanding the area to nearly 1.35 million hectares -- almost equal to that cultivated in 1980. This constitutes a great victory for our peasants, party and government in the struggle against natural calamities.

With rice production, industrial crop production was restored and expanded from 13,500 hectares in 1980 to 24,700 hectares in 1981. In particular, the rubber plantations were restored gradually. In 1980 the exploited land was 5,000 hectares; in 1981 this area had risen to 8,700 hectares, supplying about 5,800 tons of latex and 3,990 tons of gum.

The raising of animals, particularly cattle, scored important advances. In 1981 the number of cattle increased by more than 10 percent compared with 1980. The number of hogs doubled. The number of fowl, particularly those raised within the family, increased seven times compared with 1979. During the fishing season, we hauled nearly 50,000 tons of fish, or 2.5 times more than in 1980. Salt production amounted to 40,000 tons.

2. Industrial and Artisan Production:

Following liberation, several industries were closed for a long time, while some others functioned on a limited scale because of the lack of spare parts, raw materials and, above all, cadres, workers and technicians, who were practically all massacred by the genocidal regime. Our state reassembled cadres, workers and technicians. Concurrently, we restored and returned to operation 54 enterprises at the central level and a certain number of basic small industries. More than 2,000 artisan bases started producing goods, such as farm tools and items for daily use, and processing agricultural products.

3. Communications, Transport and Posts:

The most remarkable exploits in the field of telecommunications, transport and posts can be seen in the unloading and transport of imported goods and equipment. The radio telegraphic and mail networks have been reorganized. In particular, thanks to the assistance of Vietnam and the Soviet Union, postal, harbor, rail and highway activities are also progressing.

4. Trade, Prices, Currency and Finances:

From the social structure left behind by the genocidal clique -- the only one in the world without money -- our state has paid special attention to creating conditions for the restoration of goods distribution and transport activities linked with the restoration of production. In this field, we have enjoyed the devoted assistance of the Soviet Union and Vietnam since the first day of our country's liberation. More than a year after liberation, the PRK riel was put into circulation, contributing to normalizing the social life and economy. This is proof of the energetic force and patriotism of the new regime and also of the victory in the field of production, particularly agricultural production. State-run trade has been organized from the central to grassroots levels. At the end of 1980 and the beginning of 1981, farmers throughout the country sold to the state 160,000 tons of unhusked rice in exchange for goods. Markets have resumed their activities.

5. Education, Teaching, Public Health, Culture and Social Welfare:

Following liberation, our state started building from scratch a new infrastructure for education, teaching and public health. We reassembled cadres who survived the genocidal regime for immediate training, and developed the potential of new cadres. Concurrently, the state rebuilt basic establishments in order to cope with the needs of the people.

We have 1.5 million students in the 1981-82 school year. The number of primary, secondary and tertiary education students has increased by 11.8 percent compared with the preceding school year. The number of teachers has risen to 43,000, that is, an increase of 8 percent. The anti-illiteracy movement and the training of teachers is developing with every passing day. The School of Medicine and Pharmacy and the School of Higher Pedagogy have been reopened. Nearly 600 students have been sent to further their studies in various faculties and secondary technical schools in socialist countries.

The health network has been restored and extended down to the commune level. Consultations and treatment have been organized for the masses. Cultural, cinematographic, artistic and sports activities have been developed. The state practices a free medical assistance system for patients and distributes school items free to students.

Chea Soth went on to say: After 3 years of struggle to surmount difficulties, our people have won great successes in the economic and cultural fields. These successes are encouraging to them and to their friends in the five continents. These successes have confirmed that the situation of the Kampuchean revolution is irreversible. They are attributable to the just leadership of the party and state. They are the fresh flower of our people's patriotism, their will to fight and their persistent work, a fresh flower imbued with international solidarity. They are the result of the concerted forces under the regime of the PRK.

On behalf of the Council of Ministers, Chea Soth expressed his profound gratitude to the people, parties and governments of fraternal socialist countries, particularly Vietnam, Laos and the Soviet Union, friendly countries and international organizations for their wholehearted aid.

On the economic development plan in 1982, Vice Chairman Chea Soth stressed the tasks to be carried out, namely:

1. To promote agricultural production in order to increase the quantity of rice produced in 1982 and to expand the arable area, and to establish experimentation centers in the provinces and districts; to interest the peasants in raising cattle, pigs and fowl and intensifying rubber plantation work; to prepare, organize and manage all sectors of production and the processing of fish by the end of 1982 and the beginning of 1983.

2. To further enlarge and promote the movement of goods, particularly in rural centers, in order to increase agricultural production; to encourage the peasants to sell agricultural products to the state, reserve for them the right to freely use their products and accord them a necessary selling period. Assistance should be given to production solidarity groups and to collegial merchant groups of each village which have direct relations with the commercial establishments of the state to sell agricultural products and purchase industrial goods in order to distribute them to the peasants. It is necessary to intensify commercial relations between the Kampchea-Vietnam border and sister provinces on the basis of the spirit of solidarity, assistance and reciprocal interests.

3. To multiply the production of export goods and expand economic relations with foreign countries. In 1982 it is imperative to increase the production of rubber, corn and tobacco for export and organize the exploitation and processing of farm products such as coconuts, cotton and kapok. We are ready to expand economic relations with other foreign countries.

4. To intensify cottage industries and rehabilitate industrial production. In order to rapidly increase tools and means of production necessary for basic construction, and to increase consumer goods and export-oriented products, it is necessary to develop cottage industries.

5. To increase the reliability of transport and radio communications. Maximum efforts should be made to maintain the network of radio communications broadcasts. Attention should be paid to repairing routes, particularly railroads, to reactivating river communications and to keeping harbors in good condition.

6. To organize and implement basic construction work. Making investments in basic construction is of important significance in the restoration and intensification of material and technical sources necessary for the construction of economic bases to contribute to actively promoting agricultural production.

7. To develop the management of finances, money and prices. Concurrent with the gradual development of the role of the state plan in conformity with the economic direction and management, we must, necessarily, gradually tidy up the management of the state budget.

8. To develop and further improve work in the cultural, education, public health and social welfare fields.

It is imperative to rationally use the existing bases of the cultural sector and broaden the opportunities for the state and the people to organize cultural, artistic and sports activities by increasing the publishing activities and taking care of important historical and cultural vestiges. In the field of education and teaching, it is imperative to take into consideration the development of the secondary and tertiary education as well as the education of adults. In the public health sector, it is imperative to strengthen all existing bases at the central level as well as in the provinces and, in particular, the districts and communes; to develop and use local drugs in concert with traditional medicine; and to ensure that health cadres are trained.

SRV PROPOSAL TO RESUME TALKS WITH PRC LAUDED

[Text] Phnom Penh, 6 Feb (SPK) -- On 30 January the SRV Foreign Ministry sent a note to the Chinese Embassy in Hanoi proposing that the two sides put an end to their border conflict and resume, as soon as possible, the third phase of the Sino-Vietnamese talks which are unilaterally broken off by the Chinese side in March 1980.

This was an act of good will on the part of Vietnam, which wishes to resolve the question of peace and stability at the Sino-Vietnamese border.

The Vietnamese side has on several occasions shown its good will to restore normal relations and settle all disputes between the two countries by peaceful means. China, nurturing expansionist ambitions, has always opposed Vietnam's positive proposals. Recently, it turned down a Vietnamese call for cessation of border hostilities for 10 days during the traditional New Year festival of the two countries. In unilaterally observing a cease-fire, Vietnam has shown its desire for peace and its good will to live on good terms with its big northern neighbor.

It is necessary that Vietname and China resume talks because this will contribute to reducing tension in the region -- tension which stems from the Chinese expansionists' hostile policy against Vietnam. Since the shameful defeat of its February 1979 aggression against Vietnam, expansionist China has constantly committed armed provocations at the border between the two countries, threatening the Vietnamese people's peaceful life.

The Kampuchean people want to show their firm support for the peace initiative taken by Vietnam to end the hostilities and to resume the third phase of talks with China. The Kampuchean people demand that China cease immediately its military activities against the Vietnamese people.

VODK VIEWS REASONS FOR OGARKOV PRK, SRV VISIT

BK051210 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary: "What Is the Purpose of the Chief of the Soviet Armed Forces General Staff's Visit to Hanoi and Phnom Penh?"]

[Summary] At a time when the Le Duan Vietnamese aggressors are totally bogged down on the Kampuchean battelfield and when they have suffered repeated failures in their maneuvers to legalize the Vietnamese war of aggression in Kampuchea, the Soviet international expansionists -- Vietnam's bosses, supporters and accomplices in their war of aggression against Kampuchea -- have ordered Ogarkov, chief of the Soviet Armed Forces General Staff and deputy defense minister, to visit Hanoi and Phnom Penh at the beginning of February.

"This visit was officially announced in the Soviet army paper KRASNAYA ZVEZDA on 31 January. Why is Brezhnev sending his chief of staff to visit Hanoi and Phnom Penh at a time when the Vietnamese are at a total impasse -- militarily, politically and diplomatically -- and when the whole world is condemning Vietnam and vehemently demanding that it respect and abide by the resolutions of the UN General Assembly by withdrawing all of its aggressor troops from Kampuchea?"

It is general knowledge that the Soviet Union spends $6 million a day to enable Vietnam to wage its war of aggression in Kampuchea and it has sent its own troops to invade Afghanistan in order to implement its strategy of aggression and expansion aimed at dominating Southeast Asia, the Malacca Straits, the south Pacific region, the Indian Ocean, the Persian Gulf and the oil sources in the Middle East. The Soviet Union and Vietnam have carried on their war of aggression against Afghanistan and Kampuchea for over 3 years now in order to realize this strategy. But, they still are unable to fulfill this criminal design.

"In Kampuchea, Vietnam and the Soviet Union have come to realize that if they allow the situation on the battlefield to develop as it has been, sooner or later the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy's war of aggression in Kampuchea will face total defeat. This is why Vietnam has struggled desperately on the battlefield and at the same time launched deceitful diplomatic maneuvers in the international arena in order to postpone its defeat.

Thus, Brezhnev has sent the chief of his armed forces to Hanoi and Phnom Penh in an attempt to encourage Vietnam to struggle on in order to postpone its defeat and redress its total impasse on the Kampuchean battlefield. Moreover, this visit is aimed at making an on-the-spot assessment of new strategies and tactics in preparation for further advance, as well as at threatening the countries in Southeast Asia."

But, since the Southeast Asian countries and other peace and justice-loving countries are well aware of the tricky, aggressive and obstinate nature of the Vietnamese-Soviet expansionists, they will certainly heighten their vigilance against all the perridious and dark maneuvers of the Vietnamese-Soviet expansionists.

"They will certainly strive to increase the defense of their respective countries, jointly check the dangers of the Vietnamese-Soviet strategy of aggression and expansion and jointly provide further support and assistance -- political, diplomatic, material and moral -- to the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea, who are struggling against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors directly on the battlefield." Moreover, they will certainly take further steps to press Vietnam to withdraw its troops from Kampuchea. Only after Vietnam withdraws all of its aggressor troops from Kampuchea can the danger of war in Southeast Asia be prevented and can long-lasting peace, stability and security be ensured in this region.

VODK URGES UNION OF FORCES TO OPPOSE SRV

[Unattributed commentary: "All Peace- and Justice-Loving Countries in the World Resolutely Adhere to the Principle of International Law and Practice in Order To Solve the Kampuchean Question"]

[Summary] The Vietnamese aggressors have invaded and occupied Democratic Kampuchea -- an independent, sovereign, neutral and nonaligned state and a member of the United Nations -- in violation of the UN Charter and international law and practice. The world is fully aware that Vietnam is the aggressor, while the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea are the victims. For this reason, world opinion categorically opposes the act of aggression committed by the Le Duan authorities and demands that they withdraw from Kampuchea so that the Kampuchean people may settle their own problem and determine their own destiny without outside interference or pressure.

At the United Nations during the past 3 years, additional UN members have voted in support of Democratic Kampuchea as Kampuchea's sole legal and legitimate representative, and they have demanded that Vietnam unconditionally withdraw all its troops from Kampuchea and respect the Kampuchean people's sacred right to determine their own destiny through UN-supervised elections.

However, the Vietnamese are very stubborn. "For 3 years they have refused to abide by the wishes of the international community, and even now there is no sign that Vietnam wants to withdraw its troops from Kampuchea. On the contrary, both its military activities on the Kampuchean battlefield -- along the western border where its forces are engaging in daily provocations against Thailand -- and its diplomatic activities on the international stage to eliminate Democratic Kampuchea's forces -- both its fighting forces on the battlefield and the force of its legitimate status -- and to split the international front that opposes its aggression and supports the Kampuchean people's just struggle clearly show that Vietnam wants to occupy Kampuchea forever in order to use this country as a springboard in the implementation of the aggressive and expansionist strategies of Vietnam and its master, the Soviet Union, in Southeast Asia."

It is true that Vietnam is determined to continue its aggression and expansion, but the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea are determined not to allow Vietnam to annex their country and exterminate their race without a struggle. Likewise, the people of the world and peace- and justice-loving countries can in no way permit the Vietnamese aggressors to set a bad precedent for a bigger country to violate a smaller country with impunity. They will continue to cooperate in putting pressure on Vietnam to withdraw all its troops from Kampuchea in accordance with the UN resolutions and the statement of the international conference on Kampuchea and will continue to support the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea in all fields.

It is the duty of peace- and justice-loving forces to maintain unity in opposition to acts of aggression, expansion and interference and to protect the UN Charter, international law and peace, security and stability in the world. They should support those suffering from arbitrary acts of aggression and those fighting to defend their country and contributing to the defense of international law and practice and world peace. "They must not do anything that might affect or weaken the forces that are fighting in opposition to aggression through whatever means."

There is only one solution for the Kampchean people and Democratic Kampuchea: To fight against the Vietnamese aggressors until they are driven out of Kampuchea. The Kampuchean people want it to be a sovereign, independent nation, with dignity and territorial integrity like any other country. They do not want to be anyone's slave. During the past 3 years, Kampuchea -- under the leadership of the Democratic Kampuchean Government -- has fought and overcome many obstacles for this glorious national cause. It has caused the more than 300,000 Vietnamese aggressors to become inextricably bogged down in Kampuchea. "If the Government of Democratic Kampuchea has pursued the new strategic political line and the PDFGNUK political program, it is because it intends to rally all the national forces both at home and abroad in order to fight the Vietnamese and safeguard the nation.

"During the past 3 years, though it has been busy leading the Kampuchean nation and people to struggle on the battlefield, the Government of Democratic Kampuchea has earnestly sought meetings with other Kampuchean factions in the sincere hope of establishing an anti-Vietnamese union. Democratic Kampuchea and the Kampuchean nation and people have firm confidence in the union in order to increase the resistance forces both now and in the distant future, when Kampuchea will need all its national forces for national defense and construction.

"With this confidence, we appeal to all national forces to hold aloft the traditional banner of a great union, to place the national salvation cause above all else and to make every effort to continue discussions in order to quickly achieve a coalition on the basis of the principle of equality and harmony, so as to increase the resistance forces to quickly drive the Vietnamese from our beloved Kampuchean land and bring a rapid end to the misery and hardship of our people.

"At the same time, the Kampuchean nation and people and Democratic Kampuchea would like to appeal to all peace- and justice-loving countries to continue to support the just struggle of the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea and avoid any action that may harm the anti-Vietnamese forces on the battlefield and that could benefit Vietnam and the Soviet Union." Only in this way can the Kampuchean question be correctly solved and peace and security be maintained in Southeast Asia.

VODK LAUDS ASEAN POLICY STAND, EFFORTS

[Unattributed commentary: "It Is Necessary To Implement the Resolutions of the UN General Assemblies and the Declaration of the International Conference on Kampuchea in Order To Solve the Kampuchean Problem"]

[Text] On 31 January Datuk Mokhtar Hashim, Malaysian minister of culture, youth and sports, who headed the Malaysian delegation at the Fourth ASEAN Interparliamentary Conference in Kuala Lumpur, stated that ASEAN legislatures will seek to solve the Kampuchean problem in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assemblies and the international conference on Kampuchea. He said: We believe that it is the only way to solve the Kampuchean problem.

At the same time, Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila told Thai reporters in Bangkok that ASEAN's policy and stand in solving the Kampuchean problem have not changed.

During the past more than 3 years in which the Hanoi Vietnamese enemies have waged aggression in Kampuchea, the ASEAN countries -- which are Kampuchea's neighbors and are directly and greatly threatened by the Hanoi Vietnamese enemies' aggressive war waged with Soviet support and participation -- have adopted a firm political stand by opposing the Vietnamese enemies' aggression and supporting the just struggle of the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea. They have exerted determined efforts seeking a complete withdrawal of Vietnamese aggressive troops from Kampuchea and respect for the Kampuchean people's right to determine their own destiny by themselves with no external interference.

This political stand by ASEAN and their efforts regarding the Kampuchean issue are correct and just, conforming with the UN Charter and international law. At the same time, they have obviously contributed to the defense of peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Their efforts also serve to heighten the banners of the UN Charter and international law and demonstrate that they will not let the Vietnamese and Soviet expansionists trample them under foot and destroy them as they wish.

Because of their just and correct stand, conforming with the principle of opposing external aggression and interference and assisting as well as supporting the victims, ASEAN has received overwhelming sympathy and active support from peace- and justice-loving peoples and countries in the world for their efforts. This has strongly encouraged all the peoples and countries who have suffered from threats, interference and aggression by the Soviet, Vietnamese and Cuban expansionists and their companies.

Concerning the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea -- direct victims of the Vietnamese enemies' aggression -- the assistance and support of the ASEAN countries and all peace- and justice-loving countries in the world are very valuable. Thanks to this assistance and support, the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea have struggled and overcome countless difficulties and obstacles in their fight against the Vietnamese enemy aggressors, and have scored successive victories improving the Kampuchean people's situation as well as the destiny of the entire Kampuchean nation. The Vietnamese enemy aggressors are deeply bogged down in Kampuchea and they cannot advance as they wish according to their own aggressive and expansionist strategy as well as that of the Soviets in Southeast Asia.

Consequently, the struggle of the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea for the Kampuchean nation's salvation has obviously contributed to the resistance against the danger of the aggressive and expansionist strategy of the Vietnamese and the Soviets in the region. It also contributes to the defense of peace and stability in the world.

The UN General Assemblies held successively over the past 3 years, as well as the international conference on Kampuchea convened in July 1981, adopted resolutions and declarations with reasonable principles to solve the Kampuchean problem by demanding the complete withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and the implementation of the sacred right of the Kampuchean people to determine their own destiny by themselves through free elections under UN supervision. This is the only way to solve, correctly and permanently, the Kampuchean problem. An overwhelming number of countries -- and this number has increased over the past 3 years -- have supported this stand in order to solve the Kampuchean issue.

The situation on the battlefield, where the Le Duan Vietnamese enemies are intensifying their aggressive war inside the country and on the Kampuchean-Thai border, and are increasing their provocations against Thailand with each passing day, reinforces the view that it is necessary to solve the Kampuchean problem in conformity with the resolutions of the UN General Assemblies and the international conference on Kampuchea through a complete withdrawal of aggressive Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. By so doing, peace can be restored in Kampuchea, tension along the border and throughout Southeast Asia can be eliminated and peace and stability in Southeast Asia can be guaranteed for a long time.

Therefore, it is essential for all peace- and justice-loving countries in Southeast Asia and throughout the world to continue to unite with each other, to assist and support the just struggle of the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea, and to take measures to bring pressure to bear on the Vietnamese. In this way, their difficulties will increase until they are forced to withdraw all their aggressive troops from Kampuchea as demanded by the UN General Assemblies and the international conference on Kampuchea.

POST REPORTS ARMY FIRING ON KAMPUCHEAN BASES

[Text] The Thai Army on Tuesday fired live shells at two Heng Samrin Kampuchean artillery bases in retaliation for a number of stray shells that fell on Aranyaprathet border villages, Army Assistant Commander in Chief Gen Athit Kamlangek told reporters yesterday. The retaliatory fire had stopped stray shells falling in Thai territory, he said after an inspection trip to the border district on Wednesday. He said the army's action followed the firing of "warning shot" smoke shells into the two Kampuchean bases at Phum Po Samton and Phanom Mak Huen, which failed to stop the stray shells.

Gen Athit said the retaliation was carefully considered because of the sensitive nature of the Kampuchean situation. The general also said that Ban Khok Sabaeng villagers, who had suffered the most from stray shells, received money, sandbags and instructions on how to build proper bunkers. The received 50,000 baht and 30,000 sandbags raised from public donations. He said the villagers are in good spirits despite their ordeal, and have rejected the army's offer to evacuate them to a safer place. He said he instructed soldiers to help the villagers build bunkers that would withstand stray shells from fighting between Heng Samrin's troops and the Khmer Rouge.

More than 40 shells fired from inside Kampuchea landed in Thai border districts on Tuesday. Last Saturday night two young boys were killed and three members of their family seriously injured when an artillery shell slammed into their border village home.

QUESTION OF KHMER MEETING IN BEIJING VIEWED

Official's Remarks

BK051459 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Chet Sutcharitkun, director general of the Foreign Ministry's Information Department, told newsmen this morning that Thailand has proposed Beijing as the venue for the meeting of the three Kampuchean anti-Vietnamese factions because Prince Sihanouk, now living in Beijing, said that he could not afford the expense of traveling if the meeting were held somewhere else. Meanwhile, Son Sann is reportedly going to make a trip to Beijing. Therefore, it will be convenient to hold the meeting in Beijing. Chet revealed that Malaysia has proposed Kuala Lumpur for the meeting. The director general disclosed that Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong, during his trip to the PRC to attend a meeting on technology with PRC officials, informed the Chinese side about ASEAN's attitude toward the Kampuchean problem and the efforts to form a coalition government in Kampuchea. ASEAN wants China to play an effective role in seeking a solution to the political problem in Kampuchea which will lead to the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and, eventually, a free election for the Kampuchean people so that they can choose their own government. In this regard, the Chinese side has announced that it wants a coalition government to be set up quickly in Kampuchea.

Asked if the ASEAN member countries would convene a meeting to consider Malaysia's move to withdraw its recognition of Democratic Kampuchea which was announced by the Malaysian prime minister recently, the director general of the information department said: The meeting has not yet been planned. The Singapore foreign minister, in his capacity as chairman of the ASEAN standing committe, is now in Indonesia and will visit all ASEAN countries for consultations on this matter. He will come to Thailand next week.

PRC Response

[Excerpts] Bangkok, 5 Feb (AFP) -- China, through its ambassador here, today expressed reluctance to host a new summit of Cambodian resistance forces, Thai official sources reported.

No exact wording was availble of China's response to the Thai suggestion that the summit, to bring together Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan, ex-head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk and one-time Premier Son Sann, be held in Beijing. The Chinese position emerged after a 40-minute meeting between Chinese ambassador Shen Ping and Thai foreign minister Sitthi Sawetsila.

According to the sources, China preferred the summit to be held in an ASEAN capital because it feared the non-communist grouping would accuse Beijing of pro-Khmer Rouge bias should the tri-partite meeting fail to make headway toward a coalition. The sources noted that China was not keen on ASEAN's "loose coalition" formula, which it saw primarily as a bid to control Khmer Rouge growth, with the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia a secondary priority.

Meanwhile, a Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman said Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan was discussing the coalition effort on a current ASEAN tour in his capacity as chairman of its Standing Committee. Mr Suppiah is meeting foreign ministers of Singapore's ASEAN partners, but his trip to Thailand is yet to be scheduled, the spokesman said.

BANGKOK URGES UNITY AGAINST VIETNAMESE THREAT

[Unattributed Commentary]

[Text] The situation in Kampuchea is currently of global interest, particularly the move to establish a coalition government among the Kampuchean factions opposed to the Vietnamese. This coalition would comprise Prince Sihanouk, a former head of state; Khieu Samphan, leader of the Khmer Rouge; and former Premier Son Sann, who heads the Khmer People's National Liberation Front. The three factions have held several meetings among themselves but they have yet to produce any tangible results. It appears that more meetings will be held, something that is in the interest of Kampuchea itself.

As for the fighting in Kampuchea, which broke out as a result of the Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea territory, Vietnamese actions against pockets of popular resistance continue. Repeated clashes between the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin troops and Khmer Rouge forces near the Thai border has led to a situation where Thailand is continuously being hit by stray rounds fired by the belligerents. This is a serious situation, as many Thai people have been killed and much property damage sustained as a result of these shellings.

The Thai Foreign Ministry has instructed Thailand's permanent mission to the United Nations to inform the secretary general of these incidents and ask him to make the other members of the United Nations aware of the situation.

An additional factor, according to the director general of the Foreign Ministry's Information Department, is that over the past few weeks Vietnam has stepped up its slanderous propaganda campaign against Thailand. For instance, it has made baseless accusations against Thailand, saying that Thailand has violated Kampuchean territorial waters and airspace. Such charges are utterly baseless and the Thai Government has already refuted them.

The fact that Vietnam has stepped up its campaign of slanderous fabrications against Thailand indicates that Vietnam might actually have certain ill designs against Thailand. All Thai people must therefore be vigilant to what is going on in Kampuchea, because we share a common border with that country. The clashes inside Kampuchea will unavoidably affect our country. All Thai compatriots must strengthen their unity and act as eyes for the authorities in a concerted effort to resist any penetration of our country.

The situation is unstable, especially with a certain Indochinese country behaving like a colony-hunter. A clear example of this is the actual situation in Kampuchea, a state of broken homes where large numbers of people have had to flee to other countries for their own safety. All Thai people should heed this and should not be overconfident.

UN OFFICIAL DISCUSSES REFUGEES, OTHER ISSUES

Meeting With Sitthi

BK021245 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 2 Feb 82

[Text] Deputy United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees [UNHCR] William R. Smyser met Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila yesterday after his arrival in Thailand. They reportedly discussed the refugee situation and other related problems in the region. Smyser will inspect refugee camps at Khao I-Dang and Nong Chan in Prachin Buri Province today.

Thai authorities are expected to inquire of the deputy UNHCR chief about the progress in its promised financial assistance for the Thai antipiracy program during their talks with him. UNHCR has received pledges from donor countries for 62 million baht for the antipiracy program in Thailand.

Smyser is making a visit to ASEAN countries for a firsthand look at the refugee situation in the region.

Meeting With Prem

[Text] Deputy High Commissioner for Refugees Smyser and his party called on Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon at Government House yesterday. Secretary General of the National Security Council Sqn Ldr Prasong Sunsiri was also present at the meeting.

The UN deputy high commissioner for refugees said the aim of his visit is to understand the refugee problem in Southeast Asia in order to provide aid and cooperation in this problem. His visit to Southeast Asia is possible now because of the improved refugee situation in Pakistan and Afghanistan. He does not want the world to think that the refugee problem in Southeast Asia has been ignored by the United Nations.

The prime minister expressed his thanks for UN concern and noted that the Thai Government realized the need for humanitarian assistance for the refugees it is sheltering. Thailand, however, is unable to maintain these refugees permanently, and therefore would like to see efforts by the United Nations to convince other countries to accept more refugees for resettlement. The UN deputy high commissioner for refugees said he sympathizes with Thailand and will do his best to help Thailand on this matter.

Refugee, Antipiracy Aid Pledge

[Text] The UNHCR will maintain its cooperation with Thailand to solve the influx of refugees into Thai territory. The visiting deputy high commissioner, William R. Smyser, has said that. In solving the refugee problems, the UNHCR will facilitate the sending of refugees for resettlement abroad for those who prefer to repatriate [as heard] and also try to provide citizenship for the refugees in the countries they move in. About 700 Laotian refugees have so far voluntarily repatriated and it is expected that more Laotian refugees will gradually apply for repatriation.

Mr Smyser, who visited the refugee holding centers in Prachin Buri Province a few days ago, has stated that he would bring the matter of the refugees' problems and what he has seen in Thailand before the UNHCR office and seek further assistance.

On the problem of piracy in the international seas, he said the UNHCR is gravely concerned about this problem and had urged many countries to help suppress the piracy. The UNHCR has allocated some amount of $2.4 million plus an additional emergency fund of $2 million for the piracy suppression project.

THAI-BURMESE BORDER POLICY COMMITTEE MEETS

[Text] According to a report from the Supreme Command Information Center, on 3 February Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon, in his capacity as the director of the Thai-Burmese Border Policy Operations Committee, chaired the meeting of the committee. The results of the meeting are as follows:

The Thai Government will pursue a firm policy of not allowing any alien forces to take refuge or carry out activities in Thai territory, since that constitutes a threat to the security of the kingdom as well as its relations with its neighbor. The government will also take a firm stand in suppressing border smuggling and narcotics trafficking.

The Thai-Burmese border policy operations committee also formulated guidelines for the prevention of untoward incidents, for the development of the border areas and border security and for the suppression of outlawed elements and those violating Thailand's sovereignty. The meeting decided to set up a northern border defense command with special attention given to the area along Thai-Burmese border bounded by Chiang Rai, Chiang Hai and Mae Hong Son, about 30 km inside Thai territory. Priority will also be given to rugged and remote areas such as Ban Hin Taek and Ban Mae Salong, in Mae Chan District, Chiang Rai Province, Ban Tham Ngop in Fang District, Chiang Mai Province and Ban Hae Saya, in Muang District, Mae Hong Son Province, where officials have had difficulties in reaching the villagers. The border in these areas will be developed and cleared of narcotics movements and foreign elements.

Meanwhile, efforts will be made to rapidly develop 12 villages in the three provinces where former Kuomintang troops are staying in order to improve social and economic conditions and to restore law and order under Thai jurisdiction. Authorities will launch the program of village development around the country for strategic purposes, similar to what has been undertaken in the border provinces in other parts of the country. In addition to the deployment of operational units and equipment as a remote warning system, the strategy for this development of border security will also consist of introducing basic materiel for self-development and self-defense to the local people in coordination with the regular defense system, and of creating a strong union between the government and the private sector.

The northern border defense command will have its headquarters in Chiang Mai Province and will be operated by civilian, police and military officials. Its operations will come under the supervision of the Joint Operations Center of the supreme command headquarters. It is believed it will be possible to start operations soon, and this will enhance border security protection to the north, as well as effectively contribute to the government's policy of suppressing narcotics trading elements and foreign armed forces.

VNA REJECTS THAI 'FABRICATION' ABOUT SHELLING

OW051155 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] According to the 4 February Thai paper NATION REVIEW, the commander of the 9th Division and 1st Military Region of the Thai Armed Forces has spread the news that Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea bombarded Thai territory. The VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY is authorized to issue a statement categorically rejecting this slander. Obviously, the dissemination of this fabrication only serves the Chinese scheme to pit ASEAN against Indochina and to distract public opinion, which sternly condemns China's expansionist and hegemonist savage ambitions in this region.

The SRV Government's unswerving policy is to strictly respect the independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and security of Thailand and, at the same time, it is hoped to develop friendly, good-neighbor relations with the Kingdom of Thailand.

In a speech marking the Thai Army Day on 25 January 1982, Gen Saiyut Koetphon said this superpower had applied all measures to turn Thailand into a situation like a war with neighboring countires and finally to get involved in a war and fight for that superpower, namely, China, though he did not mention the name.

NHAN DAN SCORES PRC FOR TENSION ALONG BORDER

OW060739 Hanoi VNA in English 0716 GMT 6 Feb 82

["NHAN DAN: China Deliberately Maintains Tension Along Border" -- VNA Headline]

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 6 -- NHAN DAN today condemns the Chinese authorities for turning a deaf ear to Vietnam's good will and deliberately maintaining tension along the common border. The paper recalls U.N. secretary general's remark in his recent message to Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong that "the situation was quiet along the common border of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the People's Republic of China" during the recent Tet (Lunar New Year festival). Vietnam's good will in creating that situation cannot be denied, the paper stresses.

Nevertheless, the paper goes on, the Chinese authorities have made black white. On January 20 Radio Beijing claimed that Vietnam tried to "pull the wool over one's eyes". The mouthpiece of the Beijing authorities even asked: "If Vietnam really has good will why has it not ended for good its hostile acts thus enabling the people of the two countries along the common border not only to enjoy a peaceful Tet, but also to live in peace forever?"

"In point of fact," NHAN DAN says, "during the Tet period 'the situation was quiet along the common border' as has been noted by the U.N. secretary general. That was thanks to Vietnam's good will.

"On January 30, 1982, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry sent a note to the Chinese Foreign Ministry proposing that the two sides end all armed activities along the common border and quickly resume the Sino-Vietnamese negotiations. Vietnam's words have always matched its deeds. That has put the Chinese authorities in a very awkward position. So, all that they could do was to invent the story of Vietnam committing military provocations on 44 occasions in the border area during the Tet period in order to prove that their statement on January 20 was correct."

The paper continues: "That is a trick very familiar to the propaganda machine of the Beijing ruling circles which consists in feeding slander with slander, cooking up 'evidence' to 'substantiate' their allegations. However, as in the past, this trick did not cut much ice. "Brazen slander cannot help the Chinese authorities to shirk their responsibility of seriously responding, by concrete deeds, to Vietnam's good will and to the just demand of peace-loving people all over the world," the paper concludes.

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 7, -- Nguyen Duy Trinh, Political Bureau member of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee and head of the party delegation to the 24th Congress of the French Communist party on Feb 5 attended a mass rally in Paris in honour of the foreign delegations participating in the congress, V.N.A. correspondent in the French capital reports.

The meeting was presided over by Paul Laurent, Political Bureau member of the P.C.F., and Henri Malberg, member of the party C.C. and secretary of the party organization in Paris.

Nguyen Duy Trinh delivered the following speech of greetings: The delegation of the Communist party of Vietnam is very happy to attend the 24th Congress of the French Communist Party, the well-tested revolutionary vanguard and loyal defender of the fundamental interests and noble spiritual values of the French working class and people. At today's meeting filled with internationalism, allow me on behalf of the Vietnamese working class and people, and of the Communist party of Vietnam, the party and President Ho Chi Minh, the first Vietnamese to become a member of the Communist Party at the historic Tours congress, to extend to your congress, our warm greetings and our best wishes of success.

Your congress is held at time when the political life in France is going through an important turning point. The victory of the French leftist forces in the last summer elections has brought the leftist government back to power. For the first time in 34 years the Communists are present in the government to join the representatives of other leftist forces in managing the affairs of the country. This is an event of major signifance the impact of which would certainly transcend the borders of France.

The victory of the French leftist forces cannot be separated from your own contributions. This proves that with its force and influence the French Communist Party today is an indispensable factor in the political life of France.

A new stage has been reached in France's history. Socialism no longer remains a distant vision but has become the answer to the urgent problems of the country. This congress will sum up the experiences in the struggle of your party during the past one-third of a century, amend and develop the line worked out by the 23rd congress to make it conformable with the realities of France and the world, thus bringing about a new impetus to the struggle of the French working people for welfare, democracy, peace and social progress. From the bottom of our hearts we sincerely wish you many new successes in this struggle.

More than sixty years have passed since Comrade Ho Chi Minh took part in the Tours congress, laying the foundation for the revolutionary friendship between the two communist parties and the working class of Vietnam and France. This relationship is a noble expression of the solidarity between the workers' movement and the national liberation movement. Since then, the friendship and militant solidarity between our two parties has constantly strengthened and developed and has become ever closer through trials in the common fights. Vigorous actions with French communists, working class, and people have consistently sided with the vietnamese communists and people, contributing to defeating the brutal aggressive wars of the French colonialists and U.S. imperialists against our country. The images of the stormy demonstrations in France organized by more than 50 democratic parties and organizations in support of our anti-U.S struggle for national salvation will never fade in the memory of the Vietnamese people. Each Vietnamese still bears in his mind this statement of Comrade Jacques Duclos at the 18th Congress of the French Communist party: "Each of us considers it our sacred duty to assist the Vietnamese people now fighting courageously against the U.S. imperialist aggressors."

In recent years when our country embarked on a new struggle, the French Communist party headed by Comrade Georges Marchais has continued to give our people its valuable assistance. I take this opportunity to extend, on behalf of the Communist party and the working class and people of Vietnam, to you our heartfelt gratitude. May we also express our sincere thanks to the democratic and progressive organisations, parties and personalities in France who have warmly supported our just cause.

The present situation allows us to assume that the relations of friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and France have been provided with new conditions to develop further in conformity with the interests and aspirations of the people of the two countries, and the interests of world peace. Let us strive together to make this realisable.

After 30 years of continuous war to regain complete independence for their motherland, the Vietnamese people are today facing the hostile policy of the Beijing authorities and U.S. imperialists. This policy has made of Southeast Asia a hotbed and explosive area.

To defend our peaceful construction, our foremost task is to undertake a protracted and very complex struggle to defeat the said policy of Beijing of which we are victims.

We are, on the one hand, standing at all times ready to defend our motherland and, on the other, putting a high value on the friendship with the Chinese people and consistently seeking through peaceful negotiations a solution to the problems concerning the relations between the two countries and in order eventually to normalize these relations. However, so far, China has answered with an obstinate refusal. Conscious of our mission to contribute to the maintenance of lasting peace and stability in the region, we have many times, and jointly with Laos and Kampuchea, put forward constructive proposals aimed at establishing a peaceful, stable, friendly and cooperative Southeast Asia.

Our policy regarding the ASEAN countries consists in normalizing our relations with them on the basis of the principles of peaceful coexistence, promoting the trend toward dialogue. We are confident that our peace policy will win and the Beijing and Washington-instigated policy of confrontation in the region will surely fail.

The 5th congress of our party will be held shortly to sum up the lessons and experiences in the past five years, concretize the revolutionary line in the immediate stage of the revolution and work out measures to implement this line. We are firmly confident that by giving play to our national spirit of self-reliance and with the support of the socialist countries, the forces of peace, democracy and socialism throughout the world, including the French Communist Party, working class and people, we will overcome all trials and step by step surmount all difficulties to go forward and fulfill our historic tasks.

-- May the 24th Congress of the French Communist Party be crowned with success!

-- May the militant solidarity between the two parties and the working class of France and Vietnam grow stronger with each passing day!

-- May the friendship and cooperation between the peoples of France and Vietnam strengthen and develop continuously.

TAX, MARKET-MANAGEMENT SHORTCOMINGS NOTED

["Excerpt" from article by (Le Nhu Bach) published in January 1982 issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN: "On the Front of Taxation and Market Management"]

[Text] Over the years, tax collection has not been carried out scrupulously in the private individual and collective industrial-commercial economic sectors; the collection of many kinds of taxes has fallen far below the target; and state control and supervision over production and business activities have slackened.

This shortcoming has not only prevented taxes from playing a positive role in production and the people's livelihood but has also been one of the causes of such negative phenomena as speculation, hoarding, smuggling, price increases, market monopolies, and so forth. Illegal tradesmen and those who refuse to implement party and state policies have reaped illegitimate high incomes. This is unfair and unreasonable. In some cases, the free market has encroached on the organized one. The state has failed to control goods and money and private merchants have competed with the state-operated trade sector in buying up commodities. This has upset the market and prices and worked against the collection purchase and socialist transformation policies of the party and state. Many localities have been lax in managing and controlling the private economic sector and in struggling against the negative aspects still prevalent in society. In particular, they have not yet paid due attention to using taxes as an effective weapon in the front of market management.

Resolution No 26 of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau clearly pointed out: The role of industrial and commercial taxes must be promoted to encourage small industrial and handicraft production, broaden the circulation of goods, strengthen market management, support the state's collection-purchase efforts, adjust unreasonable incomes and actively struggle against speculation and smuggling.

To implement the Political Bureau's resolution, the state has promulgated regulations on the registration of industrial, commercial and service businesses and has revised and amended some points of the industrial, commercial and slaughtering tax policies. Subsequently, it has issued many documents and directives on strengthening the organizational system of the tax collection apparatus and cadres and on market management.

In the individual and collective industrial-commerical sector, taxes are an effective tool for use in prompting the industrial and commercial production and business sectors to develop in such a way as to benefit the economy and the people's livelihood and in mobilizing in a fair and reasonable manner the contribution of individuals and units engaged in business to the cause of national construction and defense. At the same time, taxes play a role in properly adjusting all unreasonable incomes and preventing activities detrimental to the national economy. Moreover, taxes can help promote market management and the struggle against illegal activities such as speculation, hoarding, smuggling, and upsetting the market, thereby creating proper conditions for stabilizing the monetary system, prices and the people's living conditions. For this reason, taxes are an effective tool in implementing state control and supervision over the private individual and collective industrial-commercial economic sectors.

Control and supervision through taxation not only ensures the regular and precise operation of the production and business processes and contributes to increasing labor productivity but also plays an extremely important role in the struggle against saboteurs of socialist transformation, in the building of socialism and against the tendency of capitalist spontaneity of small producers. In this way, control and supervision through taxation will help the state of proletarian dictatorship exert both of its basic functions: coercion and organization of construction.

Through the registration of businesses and the declaration of production, business and income of each household and each industrial and commercial establishment for tax purposes, and through tax control and tax collection, the state can acquire a constant and accurate knowledge of the activities of these economic sectors as well as prices, the market situation and the income of the people of various strata. In this way, the state will be able to guide these sectors in joining various production and business branches in a manner beneficial to the economy and the people's livelihood.

Through the declaration and registration of business services over the past few months, it has been noted that although certain households have failed to register or have registered inadequately, the figures for household and business revenue have increased considerably.

According to documents and reports from 40 provinces and cities, the number of people who have already registered their business revenues is triple that of previously registered and taxed establishments. As for households in those sectors whose cadres are themselves deeply involved in conducting surveys and helping households declare and register their business services, the amount of business revenue has increased from 3-4 or even 9-10 times over the previous figure of taxed business income. This situation clearly shows that the shortcomings and deficiencies found in the management of private industry and trade, both individually and collectively owned, are relatively serious.

The price situation is now developing in a complex manner: on the one hand, the state price system is being readjusted on a large scale, while on the other hand the free market price system is fluctuating. Therefore, faced with demands in economic management, we must, now more than ever before, exert tighter control over prices; uphold a sense of discipline in pricing; and prevent prices from fluctuating spontaneously, as this may cause more difficulties to the economy and society.

To achieve this aim, first of all we must undertake the readjustment of prices on the organized market in accordance with state plans and policies, in a disciplined manner and in conformity with other measures. We must, right from the outset, prevent all illegal price increases made without orders from the authorities concerned. Making exorbitant price increases for the benefit of one's own unit or locality without taking into account the resulting impact on the national economy will create an imbalance between currency and goods, cause upheavals in management, create conditions for corruption and theft and foster a tendency to favor speculative hoarding, thus sending the market prices soaring.

It should be correctly noted that the current readjustment of the retail price and service system, though being directed flexibly, falls within the sphere of state-directed prices. It has a guiding character, the objective of which is to struggle to stabilize the market instead of running after spontaneous price increases in the free market. Fixing prices in a manner contrary to state-prescribed prices is to be avoided as this will create a pretext for traders to increase the market price. In addition, we must struggle to keep the market price at the lowest level possible.

Opposing the spontaneous tendency to increase prices on the free market is a pressing demand and a collective responsibility of all sectors and echelons. It is due to a situation in which production is still fraught with difficulties, where supply and demands are still imbalanced and where the free market is still rather large that we cannot loosen our control over the free market and leave it floating. Instead, we must enhance our management over it and take the initiative to adjust it through administrative and economic measures, with the economic measures being the prime ones.

Alongside economic measures, we must satisfactorily carry out administrative measures. As an immediate task, we must quickly punish those speculators and smugglers who are disrupting the market. Combining all measures governing the registration of business services, we must fully collect all kinds of taxes according to the amount of trade and market price, enforce the posting of prices and resolutely punish all cases of violations, such as selling goods above the state-prescribed or posted prices.

In a number of localities, the struggle to enforce the posting of prices and to have goods sold according to posted prices has achieved some success. This has duly contributed to stabilizing market prices. We must continue to carry out the registration of industries, trades and services in a way suitable to the situation, production and trade capacities and must consider and issue business licences correctly. On this basis, we must carry out planning activities on a step-by-step basis for various services and trade if demands arising from production and the people's livelihood are to be met. We must resolutely do away with all illegal trade activities and eliminate those private traders engated in illegal dealings with goods that are under uniform state control.

It is necessary to arrange for honest merchants with professional and technical backgrounds, helping and encouraging those fully qualified, to switch to production while allowing a number of them to continue to deal in certain goods and engage in certain occupations authorized by the state, while employing others to serve as dealers in certain products or as workers responsible for transportation, processing and packing under contract to the state-operated trade sector and marketing cooperatives.

We must develop the role of taxation vigorously in all branches and levels of production and business in both collective and individual industry and trade and strive to manage all collective establishments engaged in business and almost all households, ensuring that they are correctly classified as large households, medium households or small households. Efforts must be made to grasp the operational dimensions of industry and trade successfully in concentrated areas which are affected by production seasons, as well as their operational schedules, in order to conduct effective management and collect taxes fully and without omission. It is also necessary to successfully manage all production and business establishments from their roots up and firmly grasp the operational law of traders so that effective control can be exercised.

By conducting inventories and inspections down to the lowest levels in conjunction with the effort to control circulation closely, the state should correctly adjust the incomes of the people of various strata through tax policy. We must pay great attention to carrying out propaganda and motivation work among the masses in order to make the people and households engaged in industrial and trade activities understand the line and policies of the party and state thoroughly and, on that basis, build a firm foundation for the work related to taxes and market management.

It is necessary to struggle against the contention that the laboring people are not capable of participating in inventory and inspection work and state management. Lenin maintained that this idea is a prejudice left behind by the old society and that all honest workers and peasants are capable of conducting inventories and inspections provided the state knows how to inspire their organizational skills.

Efforts must be made to overcome the tendency of relying only on administrative measures without following the mass line and without persistently educating and motivating the laboring people or creating favorable conditions for them to participate actively in the struggle against speculation and smuggling and in market management, thus helping the state detect all illegal activities by dishonest merchants and all acts of sabotage by the class enemy and reactionaries in the country and abroad. On the other hand, we must safeguard against the negative tendency to balk at adopting administrative measures.

It is necessary to hold public trials and mete out severe punishment to speculators and smuggling ringleaders and masterminds while trying to arrest all saboteurs and reactionaries who are the henchmen of the Beijing expansionists and the U.S. imperialists. It is necessary to launch a seething and extensive movement among the masses to encourage them to participate energetically in activities related to taxes and market management.

We must support those engaged in production and trade activities honestly and in accordance with the line of the party and state, which is beneficial to our economy and life. We must also criticize those engaged in illegal activities and tax evasion and denounce dishonest merchants, speculators and smugglers who disrupt the market. At the same time, we must inspect tax collection regularly and work out plans to settle the people's complaints about taxation. It is also necessary to take drastic action against cadres found guilty of corruption and oppression of the masses while streamlining and consolidating the system of tax collection and improving the skills of the contingent of cadres responsible for this task.

VO NGUYEN GIAP PAYS TET VISIT TO GEOLOGY CADRES

[Text] On the occasion of the Lunar New Year, Comrade Vo Nguyen Giap, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, visited and worked with cadres of the geological sector.

Over the past years the geological sector has recorded appreciable achievements in prospecting for minerals and evaluating the deposits of 50 minerals belonging to both the metal and nonmetal groups such as coal, rich coal, pyrite, tin, iron, copper and lead. The sector has drawn many regional and subregional geological maps on the 1/52,000, 1/200,000 and 1/500,000 scales. It has met the demands of various economic sectors such as the mine and coal, engineering and metallurgical, chemical and water conservancy sectors. It has implemented national-level scientific and technological programs according to Resolution No 37 of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and has conducted many scientific researches in support of both short and long-term development plans of various economic sectors.

The geological sector has developed relations of cooperation with and received valuable assistance from the Soviet geological sector. It has aided the LPDR in prospecting for iron ore, salt and underground water and in drafting geological maps on the 1/50,000 and 1/200,000 scales.

Vice Chairman of the Council of Ministers Vo Nguyen Giap conveyed the VCP Central Committee's and the Council of Ministers' regards to all cadres and workers of the geological sector. He commended the sectors many efforts to coordinate with other sectors in formulating 5-year 1981-85 development plans and long-term orientation up to the year 2000.

SUNOBE DISCUSSES SANCTIONS AGAINST USSR, POLAND

OW090025 Tokyo KYODO in English 0013 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 9 (KYODO) -- Vice Foreign Minister Ryozo Sunobe has indicated to Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki that Japan may enforce sanctions against the Soviet Union and Poland as early as during this week because of the imposition of martial law in Poland. He told the prime minister on Monday that Japan also may take sanctions against the two countries shortly. He was referring to the restrictions announced by Britain last week against the Soviet Union and Poland and moves of other West European countries to impose similar sanctions. Informed sources said the government, in studies conducted up to now, is considering to take such steps against the Soviet Union as strengthening conditions for export credits extended to that country and scaling down scientific and technological exchanges. As for Poland, they said such steps as restricting movements of Polish diplomats, curtailment of scientific and technological exchanges and halt in extension of new credits were being considered. But the informed sources said the government plans to continue extending assistance of a humanitarian nature to Poland while carrying out the sanctions. On steps to be taken in respect to the Soviet Union and Poland for the Polish situation, the government has been taking the basic policy of acting in concert with West European nations. Based on this, it has been making preparations while studying the moves of the West European countries.

JAPANESE FISHING BOAT SEIZED BY USSR PATROL BOAT

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 6 (KYODO) -- A Japanese fishing boat has been seized by a Russian patrol vessel, apparently for allegedly violating the Soviet fishing territorial waters, south of Kamchatka Peninsula, the Maritime Safety Agency reported Saturday. The 96.57-ton No 30 Kotoku Maru from Furubira, Hokkaido, was stopped by the Soviet ship on January 29, while operating about 85 kilometers off Lopatka point on the peninsula, officials said. The captain, Kunizo Hosono, and his 15-man crew were taken away by the Soviet vessel. This is the first capture of a Japanese fishing boat this year by the Soviet Union.

ROK AGREES TO SECOND ROUND OF LOAN TALKS

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 6 (KYODO) -- South Korea has agreed to hold a second round of working-level talks in Tokyo to discuss its request for dollar 6 billion in Japanese loans, Foreign Ministry sources said Friday. They said officials of the two countries will work out details of the negotiations next week. The second round of talks was proposed by Japan to further discuss the loan issue which was taken up in a meeting in Seoul last month.

Seoul's YONHAP NEWS AGENCY reported earlier Friday that the Tokyo meeting may be postponed because the Japanese Government has not made a "political decision" to settle the economic aid as a package as requested by South Korea. The sources said, "Japan will not specify the amount of its loans to South Korea even at the second meeting."

The coming negotiations are designed to "reexamine" 11 major industrial and construction projects, which the South Koreans want to be financed by Japan, the sources added. The projects are key part of South Korea's Five-Year Economic Development Plan which started this year.

NIHON KEIZAI ON AID PLANS TO SOUTH KOREA

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 8 (KYODO) — Japan plans to extend yen 80 billion (dollar 350 million) in combined low-interest government-to-government yen credits to South Korea in fiscal 1981 and 1982, a leading economic daily reported Monday.

The NIHON KEIZAI SHIMBUN report said additional loans would be given to Korean enterprises by the governmental Export-Import Bank (Eximbank) and commercial banks. The Japanese Government will thus be responding to a outh korean request for dollar 6 billion in economic assistance — dollar 3.5 billion for 11 nation-building projects and dollar 2.5 billion in commodity credits -- the daily said. Officials of the two countries will shortly hold a working-level meeting to discuss the matter.

According to the newspaper, the government's yen credits, which must contribute to the development of social infrastructures of a nation, will be given for six out of the proposed eleven projects, including construction of water supply, sewages, roads, dam-flood control, educatonal and medical facilities. A housing project will be excluded from the credits, the paper said.

The paper quoted sources as saying the government plans to extend Eximbank loans for the remaining four projects, including installation of anti-pollution equipment in private companies, construction of subway systems and establishment of liquefied natural gas distribution networks and modernization of railways.

The paper said the Japanese Government will not present clear figures for the total amount of yen credits to the South Korean Government, except the yen 80 billion to be extended in fiscal 1981 and 1982. However, the government expects the total to reach dollar 1.5 billion over the next six years, assuming an inflation rate of about 10 percent a year. The government estimates total Japanese economic assistance to South Korea will reach dollar 3.5 billion over the term of the Korean Government's new five-year economic plan, the newspaper added.

WAYS TO 'MOLLIFY' U.S. MARKET COMPLAINTS SOUGHT

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Feb 6 (KYODO) -- A new "eye-for-eye" bill introduced by a U.s. senator to seek a "reciprocal" market accessibility for American goods had sent Japanese officials into hurried huddles over how to placate American complaints about Japan's import barriers in a bid to prevent the bill's passage. Leaders of the Ministry of International Trade and Industry (MITI) agreed to hasten work on additional measures for opening the Japanese market wider to foreign products, ministry sources said.

As a preliminary step, they decided to send Tomio Tsutsumi, director of the International Trade Policy Bureau's Americas-Oceania Division, to Washington early next week on a pulse-taking mission to confirm exactly what are the causes of dissatisfaction among U.S. officials and congressmen. A ranking Foreign Ministry official, meanwhile, emphasized the necessity of removing "residual import restrictions" as a means of mollifying American complaints.

The MITI sources noted a strong apprehension within the ministry that the newly introduced bill might after all pass Congress in view of the uncertain prospects of the U.S. economy, which has already entered a recessionary phase, coupled with the off-year election scheduled for November this year. Under consideration by MITI officials to forestall such an eventuality are redoubled efforts to increase the accessibility of the Japanese market through such means as lifting of residual import curbs and expansion of import quotas.

The sources also described MITI officials as being inclined to take positive measures for further liberation in the service sector, such as banking and stock dealings. Another step considered is promotion of cooperation between U.S. and Japanese industries, they added. The officials are apparently alarmed by the danger of the new bill turning the U.S. in the direction of protectionism, they said.

The anxiety is deepening in Tokyo that a set of measures for reducing Japan's huge trade surpluses with the U.S. and Western Europe, adopted only last Saturday, would not suffice to placate American dissatisfaction.

Foreign Ministry leaders are afraid that unless additional measures are taken to open the Japanese market wider, Japan might come under attack at an economic summit of industrialized democracies, scheduled for June in Paris, the ministry sources said.

The ranking ministry official's reference to the need for easing the residual import curbs was prompted by such apprehension, they said. It represented the first indication that the Foreign Ministry would seek such a step when the government gets down to the task of working out additional measures for greater market accessibility.

ESAKI TO EXPLAIN TARIFF MEASURES TO U.S., EUROPE

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 8 (KYODO) -- The government and ruling Liberal-Democratic Party officially decided Monday to dispatch a mission to the United States possibly late this month in a bid to solve trade friction between the two nations. The mission, led by Masumi Esaki, chairman of the LDP's Special Committee on International Economic Policy, will carry Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's personal letters to President Ronald Reagan and U.S. Congress leaders, officials said.

While in the U.S. the mission consisting of five or six members plans to seek the U.S. understanding of Japan's move to open the Japanese market by explaining Japanese measures to lower tariffs and ameliorate nontariff barriers. Esaki is a former minister of international trade and industry.

The talks are likely to face difficulties in view of the huge U.S. trade deficit with Japan amounting to all-time record dollar 18 billion last year and Japan's failure to meet U.S. demand for importing more farm products, and other trade demands. The mission is also scheduled to go to Britain, France and other European countries later.

MIYAZAWA DISCUSSES MILITARY TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 6 (KYODO) — Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa said Saturday exchanges of Japanese and U.S. military-related technology and knowhow involve "a number of difficult problems." "The issue remains debatable, and I don't think ministry officials concerned will come up with a conclusion before the current Diet deliberation on the fiscal 1982 budget is over," Miyazawa said. The next fiscal year starts in April.

The Cabinet spokesman referred to Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's statement Friday that Japan-U.S.cooperation in the field of military technology is important as part of the "smooth and effective execution of the bilateral security treaty. But Miyazawa said it is yet to be settled whether Japan is legally "bound" by the security treaty and the Japan-U.S. mutual defense agreement to provide military technology to the United States. It is also problematical if Japan can offer military technology to the United States without infringing government policy banning the export of arms as well as weapons production technology, Miyazawa added.

MIYAZAWA SAYS JAPAN NOT TO CHANGE DEFENSE POLICY

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 8 (KYODO) -- Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa said Monday that Japan will not change its defense policy even though U.S. President Ronald Reagan called on its allies to improve their defense capabilities in his statement to Congress on the fiscal 1983 budget.

Miyazawa told newsmen that the contents made known in Reagan's statement had been made public on various past occasions and he believed there was nothing new.

VRPR SCORES WEINBERGER'S REMARKS ON NORTH

SK082348 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 8 Feb 82

[Text] On 6 February U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger submitted a report on national defense to the U.S. Congress. In this report, he clamored again about a military buildup in the North, the heightened level of tension due to the North's military buildup, the possibility of the North's invading the South and so forth. With the joint South Korea-U.S. war exercise Team Spirit 1982 -- the largest in history -- simulating an attack against the North just before us, such a brigandish sophistry uttered by the U.S. defense secretary is like a thief turning on the master.

As is well known to the world, the so-called threat of southward invasion the United States has clamored about is nothing but a hackneyed slogan to justify the U.S. occupation of South Korea and its colonial policy there and to cover up its war preparations for northward invasion. In fact, the ringleaders who are aggravating tension and increasing the danger of war on the Korean Peninsula today are none other than the U.S. imperialists. They have established a long-term plan to increase the combat capability of the U.S. forces stationed in South Korea. In accordance with this plan, they have constantly dragged lethal weapons of mass destruction and sophisticated operational equipment to South Korea.

It has been reported that the U.S. imperialists plan to activate a new army electronic intelligence battalion composed of 500 to 600 men by September for deployment in South Korea and that they also plan to deploy there an A-10 squadron, together with its 900 support personnel. The U.S. imperialists are also accelerating the reinforcement of the combat capability of the U.S. forces stationed in South Korea by dragging in antitank helicopters and M-60 tanks and by increasing their artillery firepower. In this connection, the latest issue of NIHON KEIZAI exposed that this is the most drastic reinforcement of U.S. forces stationed in South Korea and that the Reagan administration is accelerating war preparations in earnest. This is by no means accidental.

The Team Spirit 1982 military exercise, which will be staged from 13 February to late April, is also part of such war schemes by the U.S. imperialists. This military exercise is, in fact, a test war or preliminary war for attacking the North by surprise, mobilizing the armed forces from the U.S. mainland and the areas around the Korean Peninsula. This exercise also amounts to an evil omen of an all-out war.

Because of the U.S: schemes for a new war, more obstacles have been placed on the road of reunification of the country and the danger of war is increasing. Despite this fact, U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger clamors about the nonexistent threat of southward invasion, slandering the North. This is indeed a preposterous and shameless act.

There has never been a threat of southward invasion on the Korean Peninsula. This is unanimously recognized by fair world public opinion, including U.S. citizens. Nevertheless, the U.S. aggressors are making a noisy fuss, clamoring about a nonexistent threat of southward invasion. This shows that the U.S. aggressors' schemes to justify their maneuvers for aggression and war, to dominate South Korea forever by inspiring the Chon Tu-hwan clique to war and division and to grasp at last all of the Korean Peninsula have reached a very reckless stage.

Weinberger cannot justify the U.S. occupation of South Korea and its policy of war no matter what slanderous and absurd remarks he may make. The U.S. aggressors should not resort to such a foolish scheme but leave this land without delay, taking along the U.S. forces stationed in South Korea and the lethal weapons, including nuclear weapons, as unanimously demanded by people at home and abroad.

VRPR HITS REAGAN'S PROPOSED 1983 DEFENSE BUDGET

SK090523 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Text] In his budget submitted to Congress on 7 February, U.S. President Reagan revealed that one of the most important considerations in drawing up the defense budget for fiscal year 1983 was to improve and strengthen the capability to deploy U.S. troops to the Korean Peninsula in case of an emergency there. This shows that the U.S. imperialists are giving top priority to provoking a war on the Korean Peninsula and are speeding up preparations for this.

Such war maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists threaten peace in Asia and the world as well as on the Korean Peninsula and raise grave obstacle to the country's peaceful reunification. This is intolerable. The U.S. imperialists are now scheming to grab the entire Korean Peninsula and to attain their strategic goals in Asia on the basis of this by provoking a northward war. Nonetheless, this is a foolish dream.

The U.S. warmongers should not run counter to the trend of the times, but should stop new war provocation maneuvers on the Korean Peninsula and immediately withdraw the U.S. troops and their equipment from South Korea in conformity with the unanimous demand of our masses and the world's peace-loving people.

1983 BUDGET TO BE FROZEN AT 1982 LEVEL

[Text] Budget reform work is high on the list of priorities and the government has decided to hold down next year's national budget for current expenses and public projects at around this year's level.

In a major move to significantly reduce budgetary waste and apply a tight curb on budget growth, the Economic Planning Board (EPB) said yesterday the government will also put the ax on various kinds of subsidies to the private sector.

To that end, the EPB's budget bureau revealed that the 225 private organizations which were granted a total of 216 subsidies will undergo close examination. If found unsatisfactory in their effectiveness, those projects will be jettisoned to lighten the government burden, the bureau said. At the same time, the plan calls for overhauling 24 government as well as five private funds such as the national investment fund and other funds for the promotion of fisheries, machinery industry, shipping and tourism.

The 1982 budgets for the government subsidies are set at 275,809 million won (private sector), 389,763 million won (local autonomous bodies) and 19,625 million won (Korean residents abroad) to make a total of 685,196 million won. Earmarked for government and private funds are 163,834 million won -- 131,334 million won for the government funds and 32,500 million won for private funds.

In the nation, which has the same fiscal year with the calendar year, the government starts its work on the annual budget for next year usually around May. The 1981 general-account budget is scaled at 9,578,124 million won, up 19.1 percent over the prior year.

From late last year, the authorities have worked on a reform plan, largely oriented toward the zero-base budgeting (ZBB), in an effort to realize a smaller and more efficient budget. The ad interim report on the work said that in principle, the government will cut off the financial assistance to a variety of private associations such as the Korea Youth Hostel Association.

When losses from a certain utility service can be made up by other profit-making ventures, the government will not subsidize those concerns, either. Included in this category are transporatation services to a remote area and container ship services, losses which the government has financed fully or partially. In addition, small-amount subsidies to several public-service projects will be abandoned as well because they have proved to be undeserving of financial support.

The EPB said that the machinery industry promotion fund and the fisheries promotion fund will be discarded because of lack of efficiency; and also the tourism promotion fund and the shipping promotion fund, because they are transferable to banking facilities. The machinery industry promotion fund and the electronics industry promotion fund and the national investment fund will be incorporated into one entity since they are similar in their purpose.

Another area where the cuts in budget are sought is the government publications, which number 321 kinds yearly. The report said that publications without any practical merits will cease to be, while others with a demand will be continued. The cost of various public events will also be reduced greatly by spending less on ground-breaking and dedication ceremonies, posters, arches and the leasing of ceremonial places.

To undertake all the reform programs, the goverment has already established an ad hoc committee, chaired by the prime minister and comprising the deputy prime minister, other competent ministers and representatives from the business circle, labor, academic circles and press.

GOVERNMENT REPORTS DECREASE IN UNEMPLOYMENT RATE

[Text] Seoul, Feb. 8 (YONHAP) -- Korea's unemployment rate last year averaged 4.5 percent, down 0.7 percentage points from the previous year, according to a report released Monday by the Economic Planning Board (EPB). The annual report on the job market situation showed that on the average 661,000 were jobless, down 88,000 from 1980. The report also showed that the number of employed persons averaged 14,048,000 for the whole of 1981, up 342,000, a 2.5 percent increase over a year earlier.

The EPB attributed the improved employment situation primarily to the country's slow but steady economic recovery. A recession has been hampering development since 1979.

The social overhead capital and service sector registered the largest employment increase of 4.9 percent, followed by the agriculture and fisheries sector with 3.2 percent.

The number of people employed in the manufacturing and mining industries dropped by 3.4 percent and 3.2 percent, respectively.

The social overhead capital and service sector employed 44.5 percent of the total workforce, agriculture and fisheries 34.2 percent and mining and manufacturing 21.3 percent.

The report also showed that the employment rate in the final quarter of last year stood at 4.6 percent, down 1.7 percentage points from the same period in 1980.

Editorial Welcoming Visit

BK081226 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 6 Feb 82

[Station editorial: "Warmest Welcome to the High-Ranking Soviety Military Delegation Which Is Visiting Our Glorious Angkor Land"]

[Text] Today, our armed forces and peoples throughout the country are very elated to sincerely welcome the high-ranking Soviet military delegation led by Comrade Marshal Nikolay Ogarkov, first deputy minister of defense and chief of the General Staff of the Soviet Armed Forces, which is visiting our glorious Angkor land at the invitation of the PRK Defense Ministry. This visit clearly shows improvement in the strengthening and developing of the perennial friendly relations, solidarity and close cooperation between the armed forces and peoples of the two countries -- the PRK and the USSR.

The Soviet Armed Forces, always maintaining noble discipline and deserving to be born of the people and to serve their basic interests, are the strongest armed forces in the world. On the other hand, these valiant armed forces have had the best relations with the armies of the three Indochinese countries. We realize clearly that the Soviet Armed Forces were founded by the great Lenin in order to topple the Russian feudal regime -- capitalists and landlords of Russia. This army is the dictatorial instrument of the Soviet workers and peasants' state power under the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the CPSU. After its creation, this courageous and heroic army struggled against and toppled the Russian feudal regime, the capitalists and landlords. It won rights and freedoms for the working and peasant classes, and the glorious October revolutionary state power was founded.

The October 1917 Revolution was the first proletarian revolution in the world. The Soviet Armed Forces have always scored victories and have steadily developed by passing through periods of struggle with countless and complicated difficulties. Under the correct and clear-sighted leadership of the CPSU, this army achieved brilliant victories over the feudalists, capitalists, landlords and external reactionary imperialists who attempted to destroy the USSR's revolutionary gains. More than that, the Soviet Armed Forces strongly struggled against Hitler's fascists during World War II, from 1939 to 1945. Parallel with the liberation of its country from the Hitler fascist aggression, the heroic Soviet Armed Forces actively assisted, supported and liberated a number of Eastern European countries from oppressive, feudal, reactionary capitalistic regimes and rebuilt these countries in conformity with genuine socialism.

Due to permanent education and advice conforming to genuine Marxism-Leninism, male and female combatants of the Soviet Armed Forces have heightened their spirit of patriotism and proletarian internationalism. At present, the Soviet Armed Forces are steadily developing, have modern and up-to-date weapons and, due to their strategy, are the strongest army and a firm column to defend world peace. These strong forces have defended Soviet independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and are also a firm support to various fraternal socialist countries. Therefore, the friendly and official visit of the high-ranking Soviet military delegation to the glorious land of Angkor is evidence that clearly shows the strengthening and development of friendly ties, solidarity and close cooperation between the armed forces of our two countries -- Kampuchea and the USSR. We realize clearly that, in the past and at present, perennial feelings of friendship and solidarity between the armies and peoples of our two countries are flourishing, and we are most grateful for the assistance and support the USSR has accorded to the PRK in all fields. The Soviet party, government and people expressed their warmest congratulations for the great revolutionary gains scored by our party, government and people during the past 3 years and for our future achievements in the building and defense of the Kampuchean fatherland and the struggle against the enemy, particularly the Beijing Chinese expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and the international reactionaries.

On the other hand, the USSR has actively assisted and supported the correct and just cause of struggle of the three peoples in the Indochinese Peninsula -- Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos. Therefore, the current friendly and official visit of the high-ranking Soviet military delegation to the glorious Angkor fatherland encourages and develops the friendly feelings, militant solidarity and strong and close cooperation between our armies and peoples. The valiant tradition of struggle, the highest proletarian internationalist spirit and the rapid development of the Soviet Armed Forces certainly provide active lessons and good experience as a foundation for our Kampuchean Armed Forces and people in fulfilling our duties to construct and defend our beloved fatherland. It is a great honor for our country and nation that the high-ranking Soviet military delegation is paying a friendly and official visit to our glorious Angkor fatherland at a time when our armed forces and people are acclaiming the second session of our National Assembly's first legislature.

With friendly feelings and militant solidarity, our armed forces and our entire people would like to sincerely welcome the high-ranking Soviet military delegation led by Comrade Marshal Nikolay Ogarkov that is visiting our glorious Angkor land, and would like to wish all members of the delegation the best of health and brilliant successes in fulfilling their noble duty.

U.S. ASSISTANCE TO 'REACTIONARY GROUPS' SCORED

[Text] According to a recent issue of the FAR EASTERN ECONOMIC REVIEW published in Hong Kong, during a trip to Southeast Asia in December 1981, a U.S. assistant secretary of state told officials of the ASEAN countries that the United States has decided to provide aid in the amount of $3 to $4 million to the noncommunist reactionary groups that are opposing the PRK Government.

This decision clearly shows that the Washington powerholders are taking a dangerous step in their contact with those reactionary groups who are betraying the Kampuchean revolution. This decision, taken blindly by Washington, is aimed at colluding with the Beijing expansionists in order to regroup the Pol Pot remnants and other reactionary Khmers and bring the Kampuchean people to the deep abyss for the second time. Unsatisfied with its lesson of defeat in Indochina and desiring to embark on another adventure against Kampuchea and the other Indochinese countries, Washington has made this attempt in order to destroy peace in Southeast Asia.

[Speech by Souphanouvong, president of state and chairman of the Supreme People's Council and the Lao Front for National Construction, at opening ceremony of the front's ordinary plenum for 1982 in Vientiane on 5 February -- read by announcer]

[Text] Respected deputy prime minister, respected adviser to the government, respected vice chairmen, members of the Standing Committee and the Central Committee of the Lao Front for National Construction [LFNC], respected distinguished guests, beloved friends and comrades: I am elated to see that all members of the LFNC Central Committee have overcome all obstacles to attend the opening ceremony today of this significant ordinary plenum for 1982 of the LFNC Central Committee. The basic purpose of this session is to hear the report of our prime minster on the situation in 1981 and the direction of the state tasks for 1982; that is to say, the tasks that must be successfully fulfilled by our entire people this year.

On behalf of the LFNC Central Committee and in my own name, I would like to hail your perseverance and efforts, together with your spirit of endeavor and activeness, in advancing the unity among the people of all tribes and all classes into a massive strength enabling them to fulfill their obligations to the party, the state and the nation, particularly regarding the successful fulfillment of the 1981 State Plan. As chairman of this session, I propose that all participants applaud Deputy Prime Minister Nouhak Phoumsavan, representative of the Council of Ministers, together with the adviser to the government and the representatives of the Supreme People's Council [SPC] and of various mass organizations, including the Unified Buddhist Association, to commend them for giving us the honor of attending this ceremony.

Beloved personages and distinguished guests, this session is considered an event of political significance. This is because it is being opened in an atmosphere of great successes in several fields which have been achieved by our entire party, army and people of all tribes in implementing the 1981 State Plan, for example, the success in the agricultural production sector which has helped us maintain self-sufficiency in food and which has created the basic conditions for development in the industrial, cultural, educational and public health fields. As a result, our people's living conditions have been gradually normalized. We are also holding this session at a time when the victories of the three revolutionary currents in the world have been raised to a higher level in an offensive position, and at a time when the Soviet Union -- an increasingly more vigorous core of the world socialist system and revolution and of forces for the defense of world peace -- is invincibly marching forward, overwhelming the U.S. imperialists in the political, economic, national defense potential and other fields.

Beloved personages and comrades, we are jubilant over the various successes scored during the past year under our party's correct, just leadership and with the attentive cooperation and facilities provided by the administrations at all levels. Our LFNC has endeavored in surmounting all obstacles and difficulties and has worthily contributed to the movements in implementing the line, plans and policies of the party and state and in defending and building the country. Our LFNC has promoted, encouraged and strengthened the unity among the people of all tribes, all classes, both sexes and all ages, and among all intellectuals to enhance their patriotic tradition and their tradition of cherishing the new, socialist system, and positively participating in the movements to defend the country, maintain public peace and security and social order, develop and restore the economy, eradicate illiteracy, and advance the cultural training movement. Our front has persuaded and motivated the people to fulfill their task of paying agricultural taxes, selling rice to the state, and so forth.

Beloved personages and comrades, this ordinary plenum of our LFNC Central Committee aims at reviewing the front's activities over the last year and continuing to implement the contents and spirit of the LFNC's plan and tasks for 1982. During this session, we will also discuss and study our prime minister's report presented to the recent plenum of the SPC. Therefore, I would like to request that you pay special attention to the publicizing of this important report. It is certain that the LFNC and various mass organizations at all levels have contributed to the various achievements scored during the past year. I think that through observation and evaluation of the results, the strong and weak points and the various shortcomings in the past year, however, you can come to understand your roles, obligations, responsibilities and duties so as to constantly improve your work. Through these means, the successful implementation of our common line and tasks will be guaranteed.

On this glorious occasion, I would like once again to praise, hail and ask you to persist and concentrate all of your energy, abilities and intelligence on contributing to making our session successful as expected.

I now announce the opening of the ordinary plenum for 1982 of the LFNC Central Committee.

At this significant session, we have unanimously agreed on our prime minister's report, which has been effectively publicized and studied, on the situation in 1981 and on the direction of the tasks for 1982. I am convinced that all your members of the LFNC Central Committee in various localities will cooperate in striving to promote and expand on our fine successes and to put them into actual practice by solving all weak points and shortcomings step by step. There must be effective coordination with local administrations and various mass organizations at different levels in order to jointly push forward the movements of the people of all tribes and classes, so as to smash all enemy schemes and acts of psychological warfare in a timely fashion and to defend and build the peaceful, independent and socialist country.

On behalf of the session, I would like to once again express profound thanks to the prime minister and all distinguished guests for attending the closing ceremony of our session. I would also like to wish the prime minister good health and success in leading our socialist revolution to total victory. I wish all distinguished guests here good health and successes in fulfilling their tasks. I wish all members of the LFNC Central Committee a safe trip back to your localities, good health, and glorious successes in carrying out your tasks.

In conclusion, on behalf of the LFNC Standing Committee, I would like to convey best wishes to the fraternal people of all tribes and classes and call on them to strengthen solidarity, mutual love and assistance as genuine brothers in the same family of our heroic nation.

I now pronounce the ordinary plenum for 1982 of the LFNC Central Committee closed.

There was heavy fighting there from this morning to this afternoon. At 1000 an artillery shell from Kampuchea landed at Khao Saraphi Monastery in Watthana Nakhon District, damaging it and wounding a Thai soldier.

The 9th Division, which is responsible for security along the Watthana Nakhon District border, is undertaking security measures along the border and protecting the local people. It is also considering drastic and timely retaliatory measures against the offending party. The people along the border are in good spirits and they are receiving close and constant protection and assistance from the military and civilian officials concerned.

PRESS VIEWS MAHATHIR'S REMARKS ON KAMPUCHEA

NATION REVIEW Editorial

BK040237 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 4 Feb 82 p 4

[Editorial: "Mahathir Sends Clear Message to Khmer Rouge"]

[Text] What Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed said indicating that his country may not continue to recognize Democratic Kampuchea, which holds a seat in the UN only because of intensive ASEAN support, could have been using a variety of techniques common to politicians. He could be flying a kite; he could be threatening the Khmer Rouge; he could be giving vent to his frustration; or, as Malaysia's ambassador here said, he could be interpreted as making "an expression of intention."

That Mahathir has thrown a spanner in the works cannot be disputed, but what his intentions are -- since they will reflect ASEAN policy -- is extremely important to us. To understand his "intention," one must understand Mahathir himself. There are a number of laudatory and pejorative words or phrases that can be used, and have been used, to describe him, but he himself and those who know him well will describe the prime minister of Malaysia as a "no-nonsense man." Mahathir is not a man who will throw around phrases for cheap effect or for grabbing headlines -- when he speaks, his words have full meaning. While the interpretation of his ambassador in Bangkok has necessarily to be diplomatic, our own thinking will be that he has intentionally stirred brew that had to be stirred by somebody.

It is not Malaysia alone that is frustrated by the dilly-dallying of the Khmer Rouge to form a front against the Vietnamese along with the groups headed by Prince Norodom Sihanouk and Son Sann -- it is no secret that Manila, Singapore, Bangkok and Jakarta are equally frustrated and are possibly thankful that Mahathir was able to bring into focus a problem that the leaders in the various ASEAN capitals have been sitting on. Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan, who made a quick day-time visit to Jakarta yesterday, continues to sound a hopeful note, saying that the Khmer Rouge has sent the signal that they would like to meet the other two factions in any ASEAN capital for further discussions.

Second-guessing a man of Mahathir's stature could prove perfunctory, but if we are to do it, we would say that he is disabusing the Khmer Rouge of its belief that its leadership has ASEAN by the short hairs. It is possible that the Khmer Rouge, and its sponsors, think that for three consecutive years ASEAN leaders and representatives have lobbied hard in the United Nations to make Democratic Kampuchea keep its seat, and have scored resounding success. From their point of convoluted thinking -- one would not expect genocidal leaders like Khieu Samphan and Pol Pot to think straight -- ASEAN has committed itself, and ASEAN cannot retreat now from its stand in the UN General Assembly.

As every ASEAN leader has said in every available forum, ASEAN is not committed to anything in Kampuchea except for her deep desire to find a political solution to the problems of that tortured country. In the UN General Assembly, in last year's conference on Kampuchea in New York and in numerous other international forums, ASEAN leaders have strongly condemned Vietnamese invasion and occupation of Cambodia and have pushed for a government in Phnom Penh chosen by the people of Kampuchea. Apart from this political solution, ASEAN is not committed to anything else, but she has made all her efforts and prestige available to get a viable coalition of all the patriotic forces of Kampuchea into a unified force which would get better international acceptance. The Khmer Rouge would be making the biggest mistake if they think that ASEAN will support them immaterial of what they do. ASEAN has done a lot, and if the Khmer Rouge do not meet Son Sann and Sihanouk halfway, with ASEAN as the catalyst, ASEAN's good will would be exhausted.

We believe that we have interpreted Mahathir's words correctly, and it is for the Khmer Rouge leaders to listen to his words with both ears open. To repeat, Mahathir is a "no-nonsense man."

POST Editorial

[Editorial: "Mahathir Lays It on the Line"]

[Text] The Malaysian prime minister's warning to the Khmer Rouge should not be taken lightly by either the Khmer Rouge themselves or by their supporters in Beijing. It is about time that an ASEAN head of government gave vent to the feeling that appears to pervade the regional community. Disappointment and depression have followed China's refusal to do anything to persuade their protege, the Khmer Rouge, to respond positively to the ASEAN appeal for the major Khmer resistance factions to form a coalition government. So far, the Khmer Rouge have been dragging their feet and, despite a request made personally on behalf of ASEAN by our Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong, the Chinese authorities have also been doing the same.

Obviously, they do not see any advantage in expediting the establishment of a coalition. After all, the ASEAN had done their work for them only too well. They had worked hard, lobbying many countries, to obtain the vote of the majority in the General Assembly to maintain the Democratic Kampuchea seat in the United Nations. Every year since Vietnamese invaders captured Phnom Penh from the Khmer Rouge, the efforts of ASEAN have brought about an annually increasing majority of supportive votes in the assembly. The result is that the Khmer Rouge today probably feel that there is no need for them to do anything but sit tight. And China also appears to encourage that attitude. Let Khmer Rouge President Khieu Samphan understand very, very clearly that if ASEAN is suddenly fed up with the intransigence of his party he risks losing the support of this Southeast Asian group altogether.

What the Malaysian prime minister said was only the tip of an iceberg which could shake the Democratic Kampuchea set-up. The Chinese leadership, which should be more aware of the delicateness of the present situation, needs to urge the Khmer Rouge to get moving on the coalition issue. At the same time, Son Sann of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front should make himself more flexible. He cannot insist on impractical demands which are totally unacceptable to the Khmer Rouge which, after all, are doing almost all the fighting against the Vietnamese occupation forces. There has to be equitable sharing of power at this stage. Prince Norodom Sihanouk of the Moulinaka faction, well-known for his mercurial personality, has strangely enough been the most sensible and tolerant of the three.

The question that seems to have been forgotten in all this factionalism and in-fighting is: How do we get the Vietnamese invading forces out of Kampuchea? Certainly not by bickering over which came first — the chicken or the egg!

BRITISH FOREIGN SECRETARY CARRINGTON VISITS

Carrington Dinner Speech

[Text] British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington last night hailed the emergence of ASEAN as "one of the most encouraging international developments of recent years," and pledged total support for its efforts to find a solution to the Kampuchean problem.

Speaking at a dinner hosted in his honor by Foreign Minister ACM Sitthi Sawetsila, Lord Carrington declared: "I would like to reiterate tonight Britain's wholehearted support for Thailand as the country in the front line and for ASEAN as a whole. We earnestly hope that ASEAN will succeed in its efforts to unite the resistance groups, and that with the active support of their friends around the world, a solution to the Cambodian question can be found which safeguards the interests of all concerned." Lord Carrington also said that Britain "noted with admiration" the recent drive against narcotics trafficking in the north of Thailand, and said "the world community at large must be grateful to Thailand for these efforts."

Quoting a Bangkok POST editorial that said a special relationship had always existed between Thailand and Britain, the British foreign secretary said he was particularly honoured to have been invited to Thailand during the bicentenary year of the Chakri Dynasty, and paid particular tribute to their majesties the king and queen.

In his remarks, ACM Sitthi expressed appreciation for the support Britain had given Thailand and the ASEAN countries in the search for peace in Kampuchea, and said that closer relations between ASEAN and the European Economic Community would be of great benefit to both sides.

On his arrival at Don Muang Airport yesterday afternoon Lord Carrington had said that the situation in Kampuchea and the stability of Southeast Asia would be the key topics of talks with Thai leaders. He added that he would visit the Kampuchean border to see for himself the problems facing Thailand since Vietnam's invasion of Kampuchea. Lord Carrington is making his first official visit to Thailand. He will be holding discussions with Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon, ACM Sitthi and other cabinet ministers.

[Speech by Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, Thai minister of foreign affairs, at dinner in honor of Lord Carrington, British secretary of state for foreign and Commonwealth affairs, on 3 February at the Thai Ministry of Foreign Affairs -- read by announcer]

[Text] The Right Honorable Lord Carrington and Lady Carrington, distinguished members of the party, Excellencies, ladies and gentlemen: On behalf of the Government of Thailand, as well as that of my wife and my own, I would like first of all to extend our warm welcome to the Right Honorable Lord Carrington and Lady Carrington and to wish all of you and your party a most pleasant stay in our country. We are particularly honored to have such a distinguished and world-renowned statesman with us in Thailand. My wife and I are also pleased to have an opportunity to reciprocate the warm hospitality that you kindly accorded me, my wife and the members of my party during the third ASEAN-EEC ministerial meeting held in London last October.

Your Excellency, it is gratifying to note that, in the context of the bilateral relations, Great Britain and Thailand have always enjoyed a long and mutually beneficial relationship dating back to the Ayutthaya period. In recent years, this happy relationship has been strengthened in all dimensions, both at the national and international level, and it is today strengthened further by your visit.

Furthermore, it is most opportune that you are also paying visits to the other member states of ASEAN. These are important times for ASEAN and the other countries of this region. There are major problems facing us all that are yet unresolved. These problems of peace and security are not isolated. They are clearly linked to others in different parts of the globe. As such, they are of international concern.

For us here, we are striving to find a just and lasting solution to the Kampuchean problem in order to restore peace and stability in Southeast Asia. At the heart of it is the question of fundamental principles of international conduct. ASEAN cannot abandon those principles, for to do so would inevitably invite further violations of the very principles that all peaceful nations pledged to uphold.

Thailand and the ASEAN countries have looked to the United Kingdom for support in our endeavours for peace. You have given us steadfast support. I would like, therefore, to place on record our deep appreciation for such valuable support.

The cordial relations between ASEAN and the European Community exist between the two groups because they share similar concerns and outlooks. Development of closer relations between the two regional groupings would be of great benefit to both sides, and therefore should be further strengthened. Your Excellency's role has been a significant one. I recall in particular your valuable contribution which assured the success of the third ASEAN-EEC ministerial meeting in London last October. We in ASEAN would welcome hosting the next ministerial meeting in our region.

Your Excellency, I sincerely hope that your visit to Thailand will be both enjoyable and pleasant. I very much look forward to having our talks tomorrow, and I will be eager to hear your views and to seek your counsel on important issues affecting us here in Southeast Asia and elsewhere.

Excellencies, ladies and gentlemen, may I invite all to join me in a toast to the continued good health and happiness of the Right Honorable Lord Carrington, secretary of state for foreign and commonwealth affairs; Lady Carrington; and to the everlasting friendship between the United Kingdom and the Kingdom of Thailand.

Meeting With Prem

[Text] British Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs Lord Carrington and his party, accompanied by the British ambassador to Thailand and Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila, paid a courtesy call on Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon at Government House at 1130 today.

The prime minister welcomed Lord Carrington and his party and expressed his pleasure with their Southeast Asian tour. He expressed the hope that Lord Carrington would gain a considerable understanding of the Kampuchean situation, and stressed that Thailand is concerned about the security and refugee problems. He said Thailand and ASEAN will take joint actions to solve the problems and restore peace in this region. Lord Carrington said that Great Britain and other West European countries understand ASEAN's policy toward the Kampuchean problem, which his country has been supporting.

Both sides discussed Thailand's economic problems. The prime minister told his guests that although Thailand is facing some problems, the countries which invested in Thailand understand the situation well. He noted that the investment climate in this country is on a good trend, particularly following the discovery of natural gas, with the possibility of discovery of oil in large quantities.

Lord Carrington said his mission is to lead business executives to study opportunities for trade expansion and industrial and investment cooperation, particularly in the energy industries.

The prime minister also hosted a lunch in honor of Lord Carrington and his party.

Remarks on Khmer Coalition

[Excerpts] Bangkok, 5 Feb (AFP) -- British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington today reiterated his support for a coalition of anti-Vietnamese resistance groups in Cambodia.

Speaking at Bangkok's Don Muang Airport before leaving for the northern capital of Chiang Mai for an audience with the Thai monarch, the British statesman said: "Neither the ousted Khmer Rouge nor the Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin party are choices that the Cambodian people should be asked to support."

"A third party would certainly attract support elsewhere," he suggested. Foreign aid, he added, would be better spent on the people forced to flee Vietnam's actions than on the Hanoi regime itself.

Lord Carrington, who arrived in Thailand February 3 at the head of a high-powered team of top business executives, has held wide-ranging political discussions with senior Thai Government officials that have focused on regional problems, including Vietnam and Cambodia. "I have reaffirmed to the Royal Thai Government the steadfast support of Britain for ASEAN's efforts to secure Vietnamese withdrawal from Cambodia, and to make it possible for the Cambodian people freely to determine their own future," he said.

Lord Carrington said today that Britain supported the idea of China seeking to promote the idea of the coalition. "A coalition would enhance the aspect of resistance in Cambodia," he said. "We find the negative attitude of the Khmer Rouge to the coalition proposals disappointing, and hope that this is not the last word."

Lord Carrington and his party will meet later today with King Phumiphon Adunyadet and Queen Sirikit at Bhuping Palace in Chiang Mai, and will fly to the Malaysian capital of Kuala Lumpur tomorrow afternoon.

OFFICIAL CONFIRMS THANAT KHOMAN RETAINS POST

[Text] Lt Gen Chantharakhup Sirisut, secretary to the prime minister, told newsmen at Government House today that the government has asked the Juridical Council to interpret the regulations pertaining to resignation of ministers. The interpretation will be used as a guide in future resignations. Chantharakhup noted that the government did not ask for interpretation of a case involving any specific person. He pointed out that the Constitution stipulates that a minister is relieved of his position by death or resignation, but it does not stipulate exactly when a resignation is effective, leading to various interpretations. This is why an interpretation by the Juridical Council is necessary, in order to serve as future guidance.

Asked if Col Thanat Khoman is still deputy prime minister, Chantharakhup said the government does not regard a resignation as having taken place, and it regards Col Thanat Khoman as still in his position.

HANOI: THAILAND IN SERVICE OF U.S., CHINA

BK090839 Hanoi International Service in Thai 1130 GMT 8 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary: "For Whose Interest Is Thailand Working?"]

[Text] Despite previous defeats, the Bangkok ruling circle will not learn the lesson of cooperating with neighboring countries to preserve peace and stability in Southeast Asia. While increasing armed provocations along the Kampuchean border and support for remnant Pol Pot soldiers and other wild bandits recently at the instigation of Beijing and Washington, the Bangkok rulers clamored that Vietnamese soldiers violated Thai territory and fired artillery shells into Aranyaprathet District; that Vietnam has been dispatching its troops and weapons to the Thai border in preparation for an offensive against the Khmer Rouge which could cross into Thailand; and so forth. This sly propaganda, however, deceives no one as it is nothing but wornout propaganda used constantly by Beijing.

Only a few days ago the Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman clamored, as a service to Beijing, that Vietnam's truce proposal to China is just propaganda. He also said Vietnam wanted to end the confrontation on the Chinese border in order to devote more of its troops to Kampuchea to launch a bigger suppression drive against the Kampuchean resistance forces.

Much of Thailand's words and actions make obvious the extent of its service to Beijing. If Bangkok's attitude is not the result of instructions from Washington and Beijing then it must be due to their manipulation.

The Bangkok ruling circle's concoction is aimed at finding a pretext to step up its opposition to the PRK, at seeking more U.S. military assistance and at creating conditions for increased U.S. and Chinese interference in Southeast Asia against the three Indochinese countries. It is clear that the action of the Bangkok ruling circle is for the purpose of helping the Chinese expansionists and U.S. imperialists to oppose the three Indochinese countries and destroy peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Its action runs counter to the interests of the people in the region, particularly the interests of the Thai people themselves. Bangkok continues to collude with China and the United States in harboring the Pol Pot remnant soldiers and other reactionary groups, hoping to reverse the situation in Kampuchea. Bangkok is working the hardest to pressure the reactionary Kampuchean groups to form a coalition against the Kampuchean people. Alas, this is just a dream of those who would not learn the lesson of the defeats they faced throughout the past 3 years. The consequences of Bangkok's erroneous policy are certain to be sharp denunciation by the Thai people themselves as well as from progressive mankind.

PARTY JOURNAL ON IMPLEMENTING 1982 STATE PLAN

[Excerpts to January 1982 TAP CHI CONG SAN editorial: "Struggle To Implement the 1982 State Plan Successfully"]

[Text] In 1981, despite the major difficulties and imbalances in the economy which continued to worsen, our people throughout the country have scored new successes in economic construction as well as in ensuring their livelihood, thanks to the great efforts of all sectors, echelons and primary production installations, and to the initial improvement of our economic management. Many new factors are developing, especially in agricultural production.

In agriculture, we have recorded several many-sided achievements in both the cultivation of grain and industrial crops and animal husbandry. The volume of grain production amounted to more than 15 million tons, the highest figure ever recorded. The collection and purchase of agricultural products has progressed well.

In industry, many factories actively tapped raw materials from agricultural, forestry and maritime products, and optimally used discarded materials and supplies to maintain and develop production continually and firmly. The handicrafts and artisan industry in several localities have developed well. The capital construction sector has concentrated more than before on major projects. The education sector has begun to implement its reform program.

As a result of the good harvest, the demand for grain in rural areas has been met better than before, even in those localities where such a demand was previously serious. With respect to workers and civil servants, our state has implemented and is implementing measures to alleviate difficulties in their living conditions.

The achievements in 1981 and previous years have asserted that the general and economic lines of our party throughout the period of transition to socialism are correct and creative. At the same time, they demonstrate the strength of our laboring people's mastery.

It is mainly in light of the party lines and the policies and guidelines of the party and state that our people in many localities have surged forward on their own to create good working methods and rekindle much of the latent force, thus achieving encouraging results.

Then the editorial points out the weaknesses and shortcomings in 1981 and specifies: The important and realistic lessons which we can derive from the implementation of the economic tasks and the state plan in 1981 are: We should thoroughly understand the party lines; firmly control the situation of each sector, each locality and each primary production installation; correctly apply the lines; policies and guidelines of the party and state, and basically change anew the management and planning systems. By doing so, we will certainly find the correct way to tap all the potentials to overcome difficulties and to stabilize and develop the economy.

The editorial continues: In 1982, the economic tasks and state plan have been set forth to fulfill the general economic strategy of the 1980's, which consists of bringing agriculture a step further toward large-scale socialist production. Its main objectives are to exercise collective mastery over the land and labor, to formulate an agricultural zoning plan throughout the country, to distribute social labor on a large-scale basis in order to use the labor force fully, to exploit tens of millions of hectares of arable and forest land, to expand comprehensively various branches and trades and to establish concentrated production zones and agro-industrial districts.

Along with and on the basis of agricultural development, we should rationally develop industrial zones and sectors, expand communications and transportation, gradually build the infrastructures, accelerate socialist transformation, reorganize the economy, combine indepth development with lateral expansion and apply scientific and technical innovations.

We should establish new structures and new balances between industry and agriculture, between the central economy and the local economies, between production and construction and communications and transportation, between capital accumulation and consumption, and between export and import. By doing so, we will further stabilize and improve the people's livelihood and fairly fulfill the immediate demands while creating good bases and conditions for development in the 1980's.

We should accelerate socialist industrialization vigorously on a large scale and build a modern industrial-agricultural structure of which the backbone must be the relatively developed network of heavy industries.

The fundamental tasks of the 1982 State Plan are: to uphold self-reliance; to enhance the initiative and creativity of all sectors and localities, especially the primary production installations; to develop the laboring people's collective mastery and the revolutionary movement deep among broad segments of the masses; to implement the guidelines for cooperation between the central and local governments and between the state and the people; and to resolve to create a new and vigorous change in the economy and the people's livelihood.

While accelerating economic construction vigorously, we should combine the economy closely with national defense and vice versa by fulfilling the requirements of defending the country and consolidating national defense and security and by developing the capability of the armed forces to participate in economic construction and to increase products for the society.

In 1982 and henceforth we will continue to reorganize the economy mainly by correctly settling the relationship between industry and agriculture; reorganizing production, construction, the work force and population; redistributing the national income; and satisfactorily use all the economic components on the basis of firmly maintaining the leading role of the national economy.

From the standpoint of advancing agriculture to large-scale socialist production as a criterion for building a rational industrial-agricultural structure, all economic sectors, especially industry, communications and transportation, and capital construction, must make full use of their capacity to support agriculture primarily, ensuring a uniform balance among the main objectives of agriculture.

We must concentrate intensively on the production of grain and food products by stepping the cultivation of rice, secondary food crops, vegetables, legumes -- especially soybeans -- peanuts, sugar cane and fish in order to resolve our food problem. Every locality, especially districts, must establish a food program and a structure of food production and consumption suitable to its local conditions in order to meet its own demand for food.

We must balance the grain distribution in districts, and develop vigorously the cultivation of short-term industrial plants, especially soybeans, peanuts, tobacco, sugar cane, rush and hemp. With regard to long-term industrial plants, we must mainly concentrate on their intensive cultivation on the existing areas, paying attention to coffee, rubber and tea while we must vigorously develop the planting of mulberry for sericulture and the growing of such other fibrous plants as cotton, ramie and sword hemp in order to resolve gradually the clothing problem.

In industry, we must develop all of its potentials, especially in terms of domestic raw materials and the present production capacity of artisan industry and handicrafts. We must strive to step up the production of consumer goods, especially the commodities essential to the people's livelihood, partly easing the present tense situation of consumer goods, namely cloth, paper, medicines and bicycle tires. At the same time, we must secure all the necessary favorable conditions for the key heavy industry sectors such as electricity, coal, engineering, fertilizer and chemical.

We must develop our production capacity to the highest extent and concentrate on supporting effectively agriculture the production of consumer and export goods, and communications and transportation. We should strongly encourage the artisan industry and handicrafts to use optimally locally available raw materials, discards, rejects and recycled raw materials to develop the production of consumer goods.

Export is an extremely important task to be carried out by every sector, locality and establishment. It is necessary to effect a vigorous change in export in order to reduce gradually the imbalance between export and import. It is mandatory to give priority to the making of capital investments in and the reorganization of production in order to increase export capacitites. Efforts must be made to create a main source of exports -- which must have a stabilized position in the world market -- with specific attention given to agricultural, forestry, marine and mineral products and mechanical items.

Capital construction is of great importance for ensuring various existing and long term production tasks. On the basis of achieving a good balance for capital, construction equipment, gasoline, oil and construction materials, we must rearrange capital investments in such a way as to suit the present economic objectives. We must, on a priority basis, concentrate on ensuring all the necessary conditions and on satisfactorily accelerating the construction of key projects for the state and of important projects designed to serve the production of grain, electricity, coal, natural gas, fertilizer, machinery, textiles, paper and construction materials.

In order to ensure smooth implementation of various production and construction activities, we must develop communications and transportation so as to ensure the transportation of imports, the transportation of goods in support of agriculture, the transportation of goods from the north to the south and vice versa, and the transportation of anthracite and cement for various key areas and key construction project sites. Priority must be given to developing riverine and sea shipping networks, increasing railroad transportation capacities and reorganizing truck transportation activities. In addition, we must pay specific attention to using widely all rudimentary means of transportation.

We must manage transportation activities more tightly, with emphasis placed on ensuring economical use of gasoline and oil and doing away with all cases of theft of goods in transit.

There is another important task which is to reestablish order in the area of distribution and circulation along the socialist business direction in order to better serve production and the people's livelihood. Our key task at present is to organize purchase activities satisfactoritly and to secure the sources of goods, trying to create a stockpile of goods in order to ensure the supply task, especially the supply of those important items as grain, [and other] agricultural products, raw materials, industrial products and important exports.

State-run industrial enterprises and artisan and handicraft cooperatives must fully implement their plans to deliver products to the state and, at the same time, must satisfactoritly carry out various measures concerning price readjustment, market management and wage readjustment in order to ensure the "each according to his work" principle and to suit the situation dictated by a change in prices. These are the very great and urgent tasks outlined in the 1982 State Plan. Satisfactorily carrying out these planned tasks will contribute greatly to further overcoming difficulties and effective a new change in the economy and in the people's livelihood, thus creating a momentum for the ensuing years.

In order to implement the 1982 State Plan satisfactorily, the party, people and army must exert new and extraordinary efforts and must effect a drastic change in organization and in implementing guidance. This is an area of activity in which we have little experience and where many shortcomings and mistakes have been found. These shortcomings and mistakes have been a great obstacle to our success.

This year our efforts must be focused on exploiting to the fullest all favorable factors and practical capabilities in conjunction with the three central elements, which are to apply scientific and technological processes widely in order to improve the output, quality and efficiency of various production and construction activities; to improve the organization of economic management; and to revise planning activities and link the planning task with economic accounting and socialist trade along with strict efforts to practice thrift in all areas -- production, construction, living expenses, electricity, coal, gasoline, oil, raw materials and grain -- as economization is regarded as a national policy.

Our most powerful driving force in socialist construction is the socialist collective mastery system. We must further develop the combined strength of collective mastery through the organization of production and labor. We must more satisfactorily use our most valuable assets -- manpower and lands, including forested and sea areas -- in the initial stage of the process of advancing directly from small production to large-scale socialist production. We must closely link labor with lands, create more jobs locally and simultaneously organize a widespread motivation drive to redistribute labor and population on a national scale in order to turn out more products for society and to make ends meet.

The fifth party congress will further materialize the socialist revolutionary line and the way to build the socialist economy in our country. It will point out the direction and measures to be taken to improve the economy in the period ahead and will create a high degree of singlemindedness throughout our party, people and army.

In the light of the resolution of the forthcoming fifth party congress, it is certain that we will be able to fulfill the 1982 State Plan successfully and to continue to move our country's revolutionary undertaking another step forward.

SOVIET DIPLOMAT EXPELLED; CONSULATE CLOSED

Release on Attache's 'Spying'

BK081650 Jakarta Domestic Service in indonesian 1500 GMT 8 Feb 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja summoned Soviet Ambassador Shpedko to Pejambon [Foreign Affairs Department complex] this afternoon. The meeting at the Foreign Affairs Department lasted approximately 1 and 3/4 hours. Sphedko was flanked by a staff member of the Soviet Embassy in Jakarta, (Kmelsiksi).

Following the meeting the head of the Foreign Information Directorate, Foreign Affairs Department, Alaidrus, read a press release for Radio Republik Indonesia as follows: [Begin recording] 1. The Government of the Republic of Indonesia has declared the assistant military attache at the Soviet Embassy, Lt Col S.P. Igorov, persona non grata, and asked him to leave Indonesian territory in 24 hours because he had engaged in spying activities which endangered the security of the state and which were incompatible with his status as a diplomat. This matter was relayed to the Soviet ambassador on Friday evening, 5 February 1982, and Lt Col S.P. Igorov left Indonesia on Saturday, 6 Feburary 1982.

2. The Indonesian Government was very much surprised that a diplomat from a country which has friendly relations with Indonesia had engaged in an activity which was very harmful to Indonesia. Nevertheless, the Indonesian Government had delayed the announcement concerning this incident on the grounds that the investigation had not yet been completed as well as for the sake of maintaining good relations between the two countries.

3. However, something regrettable took place at the time of Lt Col S.P. Igorov's departure from the Halim Perdanakusumah Airport. Lt Col Igorov arrived at Halim with a sendoff party composed of a number of Soviet Embassy staff members, including Mr Aleksandr Finenko, the head of the Aeroflot office in Jakarta. Mr Finenko was sought by Jakarta authorities because there were strong indications that he was involved in the case which led the government to declare S.P. Igorov persona non grata. When our security agents tried to stop him and cordially invited him to go to another room, Soviet Embassy officers in the sendoff party forcibly blocked them, despite the display of an arrest warrant for Mr Aleksandr Finenko, who has no diplomatic status. In the ensuing argument, a Soviet Embassy officer struck a security agent. A fight ensured. Mr Aleksandr Finenko was finally arrested and another person, who came along with him and refused to be separated from him, was also arrested.

4. It was clear from the incident, that an attempt to arrest Mr Aleksandr Finenko without public knowledge failed due to the aggressive attitude of the Soviet Embassy officers.

5. Upon finding that the Soviet Embassy staff member Mr F.M. Odariyouk, who was arrested along with Mr Aleksandr Finenko, had diplomatic status, he was immediately set free.

6. The Indonesian Government has always tried to maintain the best relations with all countries, including the Soviet Union, with which we had good relations. [Words indistinct] attitude in the Lt Col S.P. Igorov incident was demonstrated by the fact that: a) Although the violation committed by Lt Col S.P. Igorov was very serious, the Indonesian Government first postponed announcing the incident because the investigation was not yet finished and because it wished to maintain good relations with the Soviet Union; b) The Indonesian Government immediately freed Lt Col S.P. Igorov and Mr G.M. Odariyouk when it was learned that they had diplomatic status. Thereby, the Indonesian Government was adhering to existing international norms and the stipulations in the Vienna Convention governing diplomatic relations.

7. On the other hand, it was noted that there was a series of violations against the norms and stipulations committed by the Soviet Embassy. The violations are: a) abusing diplomatic immunity and facilities provided by the Indonesian Government, as was done by the Soviet Embassy staff members in their various acts which were very harmful and unfriendly toward the Indonesian people and state; b) the unilateral action of the Soviet Embassy staff in obstructing Indonesian security agents in carrying out their assignment, as happened at the Halim Perdanakusumah Airport.

8. In view of the incidents, the Indonesian Government strongly protested the (?actions) of the Soviet Embassy officers, particularly the diplomats who were supposed to foster good relations between the host country and the country they represented and respect the law as well as local regulations. Therefore, should less favorable consequences arise in Indonesian-Soviet relations, this will be entirely the responsibility of the Soviet Union and not that of the Indonesian Government. AFP on Envoy's Expulsion

[Excerpt] Jakarta, 9 Feb (AFP) — Relations between Indonesia and the Soviet Union have plunged to a low ebb following the discovery of a Soviet espionage ring in Jakarta that led to the expulsion of the Soviet assistant military attache.

The head of the Soviet airline Aeroflot in Jakarta, Aleksandr Finenko, was still in custody today following a fight at the airport Saturday night between Soviet officials who were seeing Lt Col S.P. Igorov off and Indonesian airport officers. An Indonesian military officer was also being held. He was quoted as saying Mr Finenko had played an important role in the espionage network. The Aeroflot chief was suspected of being a member of the Soviet KGB intelligence service.

Another Russian, G.M. Odariyouk, was detained in the airport scuffle, but was released after Soviet Ambassador Ivan Shpedko, accompanied by 10 embassy officials, personally went to the military command and later telephoned Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja that same night. The expulsion of the Soviet diplomat here was not the first such case, observers said, adding that similar situations had arisen before, but the Indonesians did not announce them for the sake of preserving good ties between the two countries.

The smashing of the Soviet spy network was reported today by the official organ of the ruling Golkar (functional groups) Suara Karya, which said it all started on February 4 when Col Igorov went to a restaurant in central Jakarta in the evening. He was said to have been met by an Indonesian officer from the Compulsory Training Department (Walil), who gave him a camera and a roll of film. Intelligence officers, who had been tipped off and had followed Col Igorov, detained the Russian and the Indonesian. Col Igorov was, however, released until his departure after the Soviet ambassador was summoned to the Foreign Ministry Friday and told the colonel would have to leave Indonesia within 48 hours.

Closing of Soviet Consulate

[Text] Jakarta, 9 Feb (AFP) — Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja announced today that he had told the Soviet Embassy here to close down its consulate in Banjarmasin (south Borneo).

He told parliament that the consulate was no longer necessary, and applications for visas for Soviet officials to be posted in Banjarmasin had been rejected.

Mr Mokhtar said the expulsion of Soviet Assistant Military Attache Lt Col Sergey Igorov on espionage charges was a correct step by the government. The colonel's activities were incompatible with his position as a diplomat, Mr Mokhtar said.

Arrest of Indonesian Officer

BK091305 Hong Kong AFP in English 1248 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Text] Jakarta, 9 Feb (AFP) -- Jakarta's military commander, Maj Gen Norman Sasono, today confirmed the arrest of an Indonesian Army officer charged with involvement in a Soviet espionage ring. General Sasono identified the officer as Lt Col Susdaryanto of the Compulsory Training Department, and said he had established close links over the past 5 years with Lt Col Sergey Igorov, the Soviet assistant military attache who was expelled last Saturday on spy charges. Colonel Susdaryanto is still being interrogated, General Sasono added.

Mokhtar's Remarks

BK091020 Jakarta ANTARA in English 1004 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Text] Jakarta, 9 Feb (OANA-ANTARA) -- Foreign Affairs Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said here Tuesday the government could do nothing other than declaring persona non grata to the assistant military attache of the Soviet Union's Embassy here, Lt Col S.P. Igorov, for his involvement in espionage threatening the security of the state. Minister Kusumaatmaja said such negative activities of Lt Col Igorov was incompatible with his position as diplomat.

The foreign minister stated this in answer to a question of member of parliament, Rusli Desa, of the Golkar faction in a hearing at the parliament building here Tuesday.

The Indonesian Ministry for Foreign Affairs in its press statement issued Monday said that the Indonesian authorities had ordered the Russian diplomat to leave the country within 24 hours. The statement was conveyed to the Soviet Embassy on Friday evening, whereas Lt Col Igorov left Indonesia on Saturday.

Kusumaatmaja pointed out that the measures taken by the government were reasonable, for they were taken within the Indonesian jurisdiction. The minister, however, declined to make concrete elaboration on the violations conducted by the Russian diplomats.

Asked on the Russian consulate building in Banjarmasin, South Kalimantan, Kusumaatmaja said the government had sent a note to the Russian consulate general here in this connection, for the reasons that establishment of such a building in the area had no longer any relevancy.

SUZUKI, ITO LAUD REAGAN DEFENSE SPENDING REMARKS

OW091151 Tokyo KYODO in English 1133 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Feb 9 (KYODO) -- Japanese Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Tuesday sided with U.S. President Ronald Reagan in calling on U.S. allies to expand their defense capability to meet a rapid Soviet military buildup. "It is quite natural that the United States should pay keener attention to Japan's defense efforts based on the (bilateral) security treaty," Suzuki told a House of Representatives Budget Committee.

Suzuki was replying to an opposition questioner who expressed concern that the U.S. Government might press Japan to further increase its defense spending.

Suzuki said the United States is trying to expand its defense capability at the expense of social welfare, education and other social programs. "The United States could naturally expect similar defense efforts from the member states of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and other allies," Suzuki said.

Defense Agency chief Soichiro Ito told the same committee session that he highly esteems Reagan's defense spending proposal. Ito thus indicated that he will respond positively to U.S. calls for expanding Japan's air and maritime defense capability and for defending sealanes within 1,000 nautical miles from its shore.

INAYAMA FAVORS SUPPLYING ARMS TECHNOLOGY TO U.S.

OW081241 Tokyo KYODO in English 1233 GMT 8 Feb 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Feb 8 (KYODO) -- Yoshihiro Inayama, the doyen of Japan's business community, Monday expressed himself in favor of providing weapons technology to the U.S.

The head of the federation of economic organizations told newsmen Japan should consider altering its three principles governing weapons exports now that the world situation has changed. But he qualified his remark by saying a "national consensus" would be necessary as a prerequisite, apparently leaving the matter to the discretion of the government.

Inayama's remark amounted to endorsing Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki's recent statement in the Diet, which indicated the government would give positive consideration to the U.S. request for exchange of weapons technology.

SUZUKI ON PARTNERSHIP WITH WEST, AID TO ROK

OW090627 Tokyo KYODO in English 0610 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Feb 9 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Tuesday the nation must develop its partnership and cooperation with the Western bloc from a viewpoint of international political realities rather than following a peace diplomacy line with no basic principles. Suzuki made the remark in answer to a question by socialist Toshiharu Okada at a session of the House of Representatives Budget Committee.

Suzuki said Japan would hold on to the spirit of "omnidirectional diplomacy," with Japan-U.S. relations as the axis, but the nation could not follow a peace diplomacy line with no principles in view of severe East-West relations.

When asked about the Japan-South Korea economic cooperation problem, Suzuki said he intends to meet with South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan to solve the knotty problem of Seoul's request for Japan's loan of $6 billion over five years in a summit meeting to be held following a meeting of Japanese and South Korean foreign ministers.

SUZUKI ADDRESSES NORTHERN TERRITORIES DAY RALLY

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 7 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Sunday the government would continue persistent talks with the Soviet Union for the return of four Soviet-held Japanese islands located off eastern Hokkaido. Suzuki was speaking at a national rally for the return of the islands held at Kudan Kaikan Hall here on the second government-established "Northern Territories Day." February 7 was designated Northern Territories Day and observed as such since last year to promote a national campaign for the return of the four islands.

Speaking at the rally, Suzuki expressed his determination to solve the territorial issue and conclude a peace treaty with the Soviet Union. Suzuki, who inspected the northern islands from the air as the first prime minister to do so last September, regretted the Soviet position that there exists no territorial issue between the two countries, in disregard of the Japanese demand for the islands' return. He stressed that the territorial issue must be settled for truly friendly relations between the two countries.

The national rally sponsored by the government and other organizations was attended by about 1,300 persons, including Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and five other Cabinet ministers, the president and the speaker of the houses of the Diet, ruling and opposition party representatives and nongovernmental representatives.

Similar rallies and other programs were also held in Nemuro, the eastern Hokkaido city nearest to the islands, Sapporo, Shimoda in Kanagawa Prefecture and various other cities across the country to press the call for the return of the islands seized and occupied by the Soviet Union since the end of World War II in 1945.

MITI'S ABE SAYS JAPAN WILL NOT JOIN SEABED PACT

OW050501 Tokyo KYODO in English 0451 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Feb 6 (KYODO) -- Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry, said Friday Japan will not join the United States and three other nations in an agreement to develop seabed mineral resources. He told newsmen following a semiweekly Cabinet meeting that Japan will instead try to resolve the issue at the United Nations Conference on the Law of the Sea.

The United States, Britain, West Germany and France recently told Japan that they would sign a "tentative agreement" on the development of seabed mineral resources on February 19. Abe said, "It is not desirable for the four countries alone to sign such an agreement."

Under the agreement, private enterprises of the four nations are to start prospecting for various seabed mineral resources earlier than any other countries. The agreement is not "exclusive" and is temporary until a formal treaty is reached at the UN conference, according to Foreign Ministry officials. Japan did not join the agreement since it considers that development of such mineral resources should be promoted under international laws now being worked out at the UN, they said.

UK MINISTER BIFFEN DISCUSSES TRADE ISSUES

Meeting With Abe

OW030255 Tokyo KYODO in English 0245 GMT 3 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 3 (KYODO) -- Shintaro Abe, minister of international trade and industry [MITI], Wednesday requested Britain's stepped-up efforts to sell more to Japan.

Abe made the request when British Trade Secretary John Biffen paid a courtesy call on him. Abe explained Japan's market-opening measures including just-announced simplification of complicated import precedures and advanced execution of tariff cuts. The British secretary appreciated them, according to a MITI spokesman.

Biffen said Japan-British industrial cooperation on the private level is making good results, the spokesman said. Biffen is here to attend an exhibition in Tokyo of the Society of British Aerospace Companies (SBAC), and is to leave for Seoul Thursday.

Meeting With LDP Leader

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 3 (KYODO) — A ruling Liberal-Democratic Party leader told visiting British Trade Secretary John Biffen here Wednesday that Britain must make efforts of its own to benefit from Japan's recent moves to open its market wider to foreign goods. Masami Esaki, chairman of the party's special committee on international trade policies, said during a meeting with Biffen that efforts must be mutual if the current trade disputes between Japan and other countries are to be resolved.

Biffen, who arrived in Japan Monday for a three-day visit, called on Esaki at the LDP headquarters. He said he greatly appreciated the recent Japanese announcement of measures to simplify checking procedures for foreign goods imported into Japan and to reduce other nontariff barriers. But Biffen told Esaki he wanted to know how the measures would work concretely to rectify Japan-Britain trade problems.

While calling for British efforts to increase its exports to Japan, Esaki also pointed out that both the government and the LDP now have special machineries to handle complaints concerning Japanese markets.

ECONOMIC COOPERATION TALKS WITH CANADA ENDED

OW040631 Tokyo KYODO in English 0620 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 4 (KYODO) -- Japan and Canada ended Thursday three days of discussion here on bilateral economic cooperation after affirming that the relations between the two nations have been making progress in multilateral fields.

W.J. Jenkins, assistant deputy minister [illegible]anada's external affairs, told newsmen following the meeting both sides confirmed that th[illegible] has been development in Japan-Canada relations not only in trade, but also in resources and energy, in which there has been progress in Japanese investment and financing.

Touching on moves for legislation for trade reciprocity in the U.S. Congress, he said this would destroy the world trade system and threaten to push the world economy into a dangerous slope. Jenkins thus emphasized the necessity for Japan and Canada to curb such moves through the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

The world economy and bilateral relations were discussed at the fourth meeting of the Japan and Canada joint economic committee held at the Foreign Ministry. Five working sessions on resources and energy, manufacturing, agriculture, fisheries and forestry were held. At the meeting, the Canadians appreciated smooth and multilateral development in relations between the two nations since the first meeting took place in September 1980.

Concerning the series of Japanese Government measures to open up wider the Japanese market, the Canadian delegation expressed the view that several items need to be watched further, but generally welcomed the latest steps.

No specific discussion was held on the question of the volume of Japanese auto exports to Canada next year. The Canadians only explained the present situation in the Canadian auto industry and its future prospects.

CANADA TO EASE NUCLEAR-FUEL-REPROCESSING LIMITS

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 6 (KYODO) -- Canada has agreed to sign a long-term agreement with Japan under which the largest uranium supplier for this country will substantially ease restrictions on reprocessing of used nuclear fuels, officials said Saturday. Science and Technology Agency officials said that Japan and Canada would start talks around June on details of the agreement. They said its conclusion was proposed by Canada when officials of the two countries met in Ottawa late last month to discuss the execution of the existing bilateral nuclear power agreement. Japan recently concluded a similar arrangement with Australia for reprocessing of spent nuclear fuels.

Under the existing agreement concluded in 1978, Japan is required to get prior approval from Canada in reprocessing used nuclear fuels in and out of Japan. According to the Canadian proposal, it is no longer necessary to obtain such prior approval. Japan will only be required to present Canada a list of plants used for reprocessing used nuclear fuels, including overseas commissioning, under the proposed long-term accord.

The officials expressed the belief that Canada had made such a proposal since it did not like to lag behind Australia in exporting uranium to Japan.

POLAND SCRAPS CONTRACT FOR FIBER PLANT

OW100427 Tokyo KYODO in English 0410 GMT 10 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 10 (KYODO) -- Poland has unilaterally scrapped a yen 24.7 billion ($105 million) contract with two major Japanese firms for construction of a polyester fiber plant in Pila, some 200 kilometers south of Warsaw, it was disclosed Wednesday.

C. Itoh and Co had negotiated the deal in 1979 on behalf of Teijin, Ltd with Polimex-Cekop, the Polish state-run chemical plant trading corp, for the polymerization and spinning plant with a projected annual production capacity of 40,000 tons. A spokesman for C. Itoh said 85 percent of the cost was to be financed by the governmental Export-Import Bank of Japan and a consortium of Japanese city banks.

The trading firm had exported one-third of the equipment worth yen 8 billion ($34 million) to the Polish corporation up until last August and received the money from the Eximbank and the consortium, he said. But since then, the company had suspended the shipment of the remaining equipment at the request of the Polish side due to the country's deteriorating economic situation, the spokesman said.

He said the company will eventually ask the Ministry of International Trade and Industry [to] pay compensation through its ordinary export insurance scheme. However, such insurance has not been applicable to exports to Poland since last April.

A number of major Japanese general trading houses failed to collect their export bills before the embargo, and sources said the damage to the general trading industry is expected to be considerable.

TEXT OF 10 FEB CPRF STATEMENT ON N-S TALKS

SK101206 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1141 GMT 10 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 10 (KCNA) -- The Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] issued a statement on February 10 calling for the convocation of a joint conference of politicians in the North and the South and abroad as a consultative body for the reunification of the country. Follows the full text of the statement:

The tragedy of the national split which started in the 1940's is still continuing today in the 1980's. The barrier bisecting one territory into the North and the South remains as ever, the sufferings of the nation caused by the division have not been removed and the misfortunes of no separated family have been allevaited. On the contrary, the demarcation which had been a mere line between the North and the South is more tightly blocked than a boundary line with a concrete wall and the mistrust and antagonism between the North and the South have assumed such a grave phase that even the disasters of a fratricide may be caused.

Contrary to the desire of our nation for reunification, the danger of permanent split and the disaster of a new war is impending. This is the stark reality we are faced with.

To prevent the pressing national disaster and open up a new phase of national reunification is the most urgent problem whose solution is desired by the entire fellow countrymen and demanded by the times.

We, deeply concerned about the future of the nation from the first days of the country's division, have all along made every possible effort to realise the reunification of the country. We have sought all possible ways for national reunification and repeatedly advanced reasonable proposals and taken all measures which would be helpful to reunification and alleviate the sufferings of the fellow countrymen.

As far back as in March 1948, respected President Kim Il-song, at a meeting of the Central Committee of the North Korean Democratic United National Front, proposed to elect an all-Korean supreme legislative organ on a democratic principle to endorse a constitution and set up a democratic government. At the celebrations of the 10th anniversary of the August 15 liberation in August 1955, he proposed to realise free travel of personages between the North and the South and interchange between them in economy, culture, science and art, and at the celebrations of the 15th anniversary of the August 15 liberation in August 1960, he advanced a proposal on holding general elections throughout Korea and, at the same time, instituting a North-South confederation as a transitional step to the reunification of the country. Early in the 1970's when the North-South dialogue started, respected President Kim Il-song laid down the historic three principles and five-point policy of national reunification. In particular, at the Sixth Congress of the Workers Party of Korea in October 1980, he put forward the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and its ten-point policy as a most realistic proposal for national reunification.

Besides, respected President Kim Il-song repeatedly advanced reasonable proposals for national reunification on every opportunity, indicating the road to be followed by the nation.

Embodying these nation-saving proposals, the Supreme People's Assembly and the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and political parties and public organisations in the DPRK advanced numerous concrete proposals to accelerate national unity and reunification.

These important proposals advanced by us encompassed all problems of realising collaboration and exchange between the North and the South, along with the ways to realise the reunification of the country.

They contained all problems, big and small, of fully opening the North and the South to each other in all realms of socio-political life and realising all-round collaboration and interchange, from the humanitarian problem of alleviating the sufferings of separated families and relatives to economic, cultural, military and political problems.

We have not only put forward realistic proposals to accelerate the reunification of the country but also repeatedly proposed to hold North-South negotiations and dialogue for their realisation and, proceeding from the sole desire to realise reunification, showed broadmindedness in sitting face to face with the South Korean authorities who put up anti-communism as a "state policy" and doggedly opposed us.

Reflected in all our efforts are our noble desire and unshakable will to overcome the difficulties lying in the way of reunification and open up the door of reunification by all means and build a developing and prospering, reunified country by us Koreans themselves, not to be victimized again by others.

Over the past 37 years the South Korean people and patriotic figures have consistently demanded the independent and peaceful reunification of the country, deploring the national tragedy of division and persistently struggled for reunification and national salvation. When the nation faced the great danger of its division being fixed under the bayonet of the U.S. military government, they decisively rejected the plot to "hold separate elections and establish a separate government" and determinedly turned out to a just struggle for establishing a democratic unified government. They have unyieldingly conducted a valiant movement for peaceful reunification even under the harsh fascist rule which harshly penalized even the discourse on reunification.

The democratic personages who exiled themselves abroad, opposing the fascist rule and the policy of national division have joined the nation-wide movement for democracy and reunification, overcoming the difficult conditions in alien lands.

On this lofty patriotic road noted statesmen such as Paekpom, Mr. Kim Ku; Mongyang, Mr. Yo Un-hyong; Chuksan, Mr. Cho Pong-am and Comrade Kim Chong-tae, and many other patriots, democratic figures and hot-blooded youth shed their precious blood. Even at this moment, numerous personages who called for national reunification are undergoing all sorts of sufferings in prison.

The tragedy of national division is continuing till today despite all these indefatigable efforts to realise the aspiration of the entire fellow countrymen for national reunification. This is due to a handful of South Korean rulers who, indifferent to the destiny of the nation, have plotted to perpetuate the division of the country, following outside forces.

In history the South Korean rulers have sacrificed the national interests for the aggressive aim of outside forces, while keeping the foreign troops, the basic obstacle to reunification, in the country and pursued the purpose of maintaining their political power in return for this. To this end, they refused to accept all our fair and aboveboard proposals for the country's reunification and have constantly incited confrontation and antagonism between the North and South and ruthlessly suppressed the righteous movement of the people for reunification, arresting and murdering those who called for it in South Korea.

Originally, the Syngman Rhee "regime," a product of the "May 10 separate elections," came into being with the aim to fix the division of the nation and the Pak Chong-hui "regime," an offspring of the "May 16 coup d'etat", also made its appearance to block the road of the country's reunification which was entering a new phase.

The Chon Tu-hwan "regime," a bastard of the "December 12 coup d'etat", also came into being in an attempt to stem the powerful tide of democracy and reunification rapidly rising in South Korea and seek to perpetuate the division of the country into "two Koreas."

Recently the South Korean rulers came out with the so-called "proposal," clamouring about "general elections," "example work" and so on. But it is clear that a genuine proposal for reunification can not be made by the rulers who brutally massacred people and students who demanded democracy and reunification and seized power at the point of the bayonet. In fact, the "proposal for general elections" brought forward by them belatedly is an empty theory copied form a textbook on politics and a "provisional agreement on basic relations between the North and South" is a proposal for permanent division of the country into "two states" modelling after others' example.

The 20-point "example work" elaborating on this is not a new thing. Most of its contents are nothing but a very small part of the proposals already advanced by us through a historic period for realising collaboration and interchange between the North and the South. The South Korean rulers proposed to realise only a few limited problems as an "example," turning away from much possibilities of collaboration and interchange. This itself tells that they have no intention to accelerate the reunification with the door between the North and South flung open, but seek to keep the division creating an impression that they opened the door.

Historic facts show that those who seized power under the patronage of outside forces and seek the national split are a very dangerous existence in the solution of the reunification question.

Today when not a step forward has been taken on the road to contact between the North and the South and reunification and huge tasks have been left unfinished since the division of the country, we must find a way to overcome the present difficulties at all costs.

What is a pressing question in this is to properly solve the question of negotiation between the North and the South.

It should be on all accounts a negotiation not for division but for reunification. Negotiation for division aimed at maintaining and fixing the status quo passing away time is of no use for the reunification but is beneficial only to those who plot for division. Negotiation with those who sacrifice the interests of the nation without hesitation for the interests of a small group can bring about no affirmative result. This is the serious historic lesson of the North-South dialogue in the past days.

In view of this lesson, the present South Korean ruler has lost, in fact, his political and moral rights and capacity to turn out to the table of negotiation.

In the negotiation there is no place for the murderer who emerged as a wicked strangler of the movement for democracy and reunification growing fast after the "October 26 incident" in South Korea and slaughtered a large number of fellow countrymen in cold blood.

It is an insult to the sacred national cause of the country's reunification and a betrayal to the South Korean people fighting for democracy and reunification to sit with none other than the murderer whose hands are stained with the blood of fellow countrymen.

But, out of the desire for unity and reunification we showed in our January 26 talk the leniency of giving him an opportunity to atone for his crimes and take the road of patriotism. But to our regret, there has been no affirmative response so far. He is not kicking up the row of anti-communism and confrontation against us and aggravating the situation by staging such large-scale war exercises as "Team Spirit 1982" with the U.S. imperialist aggression troops. This action and "peaceful unification" on his lips are incompatible with each other.

No one in South Korea should be a disgraceful companion of the present authorities in the anti-national policy of split. As long as political parties and organisations of South Korea play a marionette show of the present authorities, they, too, cannot be a party to the sacred negotiation for reunification.

The possible way of genuine negotiation for reunification for us at least under the present political situation of South Korea is to arrange a joint conference participated in by those noted statesmen in the North, South and abroad who have national conscience.

Although politics has been degraded by the present authorities of South Korea and the sham statesman availing themselves of the situation are riding roughshod in the political world, we see the conscience of the nation still alive in South Korea and know well that there are many patriotic figures who are true to the constancy of the nation. Abroad, too, there are patriots who are devoting themselves to democracy and reunification, concerned about the future of the country and the nation. We must now pull together this conscience and will of the nation which is dispersed. Herein lies the way of arranging a real negotiation for reunification, not a false "dialogue" for division.

From this point of view we hold that a joint conference of politicians in the North, South and abroad should be held as a consultative body for national reunification at present.

It will be good that the joint conference will be participated in by individual politicians who are concerned about reunification and national salvation irrespective of their past doings and the number be set at 100, 50 from the North and 50 from the South, including overseas personages.

This 100-men joint conference shall not be a bilateral talk between the North and South but be a multilateral round-table talk at which all personages will discuss the question of reunification transcending the North and South, irrespective of their residence and organizational affiliation.

At this joint conference all possible proposals for reunification including the proposal to found the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo well known to the world should be discussed open-heartedly.

The joint conference should also discuss the problems of realizing collaboration and exchange between the North and South in combination with the proposals for reunification.

From the nature and mission of the joint conference we sincerely propose to those persons noted in the supplement to this statement as well-known political figures in the North and the South and abroad to attend the 100-men joint conference.

The joint conference of 100 politicians in the North and South and abroad will be, under the present condition, a democratic negotiation for reunification which may successfully reflect the nation's desire for reunification and a splendid forum of great national unity which may pull together our strength and resources on the basis of the national idea.

We are convinced that the joint conference of politicians in the North and the South and abroad will undoubtedly make a positive contribution to opening the road of national reunification at the present stage.

It is an inviolable, sacred right and an irrefutable national demand for political personages of South Korea and overseas to participate in the joint conference of politicians in the North and the South and abroad which will discuss the question of the country's reunification. The South Korean rulers should not prevent the politicians from attending the conference but set free Kim Tae-chung and other political figures not in prison, restore freedom of all politicians in their political activity and ensure all the necessary conditions for their participation in the conference. We consider that to do this will be helpful to atoning for their crimes.

We fully understand the present difficult position of South Korean politicians. But, if the South Korean politicians, keenly aware of their mission they assume for the nation, fight on in the self-sacrificing spirit of the pioneer in hewing out the road ahead of the nation, a grand conference for reunification which the nation aspires after will certainly be realised.

The Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland ardently appeals to the 100 politicians to bravely come out to the sacred road of reunification and national salvation for realising the earnest desire of the entire fellow countrymen.

U.S. ACTIONS IN JOINT SECURITY AREA PROTESTED

SK100438 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0428 GMT 10 Feb 82

[Text] Kaesong, February 10 (KCNA) -- A meeting of security officers of the two sides of the Military Armistice Commission was held today at Panmunjom.

At the meeting the security officer of our side called the enemy side to account for the U.S. imperialist aggression troops' acts in aggravating the situation, while more frequently committing grave acts of provocation and violation against us in wanton violation of the armistice agreement and the established order in the Joint Security Area.

According to the statement of the security officer of our side, the U.S. imperialists introduced into the Joint Security Area more armed personnel and automatic weapons than the designated number.

On February 7 they introduced into the Joint Security Area 51 armed personnel in excess of the designated number. Such acts were committed almost every day.

On January 26 and 28 and February 7 they brought machine-guns and "M-16" automatic rifles to the U.S. imperialist aggression forces post on a hill northwest of the Panmunjom conference hall.

Besides, the U.S. imperialist aggression troops ceaselessly committed various provocative acts threatening our security personnel and obstructing them in the performance of their duty, such as making gestures of beating, kicking and shooting with a pistol on their side. Such acts of provocation and violation by the enemy side numbered 32 in the period from January 19 to February 8 this year.

The security officer of our side lodged a strong protest with the enemy side against these acts of provocation and violation and demanded it to take steps for the discontinuation of such criminal acts.

But the enemy side, far from giving assurances of complying with our demand, craftily tried to shift onto us the responsibility for the tension prevailing in the Joint Security Area.

Developments in the Joint Security Area, the security officer of our side said, clearly show that it is the enemy side which is heightening tension and wrecking security in this area entering this year. The enemy side must bear full responsibility for this, the security officer of our side stressed.

He pointed to the fact that these days the enemy is shamelessly taking issue with us and resorting to a cunning deceptive trick with clamourings about "detente" and "proposal" in an attempt to distort facts.

In conclusion the security officer of our side declared: It depends entirely upon the enemy side whether tension is eased or not in the Joint Security Area.

He once again strongly demanded the enemy side to take responsible steps for the discontinuation of criminal acts increasing tension in the Joint Security Area.

SOUTH KOREAN SOLDIER DEFECTS TO NORTH 8 FEB

SK100017 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2300 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Text] On 8 February 1982, a South Korean puppet army soldier, (Han Tong-ku), courageously defected to the northern half of the republic in the central area of the frontline.

Youth (Han Tong-ku), a native of 1 Tong, Sinwol, Kangso-ku, Seoul, had been forced into disgraceful service in the 5th Platoon, Reconnaissance Company, 4th Battalion, 2d Regiment of the 6th puppet Division, after he was forcibly recruited by the South Korean puppet army on 7 April, last year.

He said about his motives for defecting to the North: Through the North's radio and publications, I learned long ago that the great leader President Kim Il-song and the dear leader Mr Kim Chong-il are excellently ruling the people for the workers' welfare. Looking up the northern half of the republic as a beacon of hope, I could not control my anger against the antinational crimes of the Chon Tu-hwan clique waging antirepublic rackets. I did not want to waste my youth under the Chon Tu-hwan fascist military system. I firmly believed that I could bring my ideals and hopes into bloom only in the northern half of the republic.

Youth (Han Tong-ku) exposed that the Chon Tu-hwan clique put forward a so-called reunification formula recently to mislead public opinion while attempting to stage war exercises such as "Team Spirit 1982." He said that the rascals are raving about the self-determination of the nation and democracy while they are retaining the U.S. imperialist aggressors and arresting and massacring democratic figures, including Kim Tae-chung and other innocent people. This is a political fraud.

Youth (Han Tong-ku) courageously decided to defect to the North by taking advantage of his assignment to an outpost on the frontline. He sternly punished the vicious elements hindering his defection and attained his goal by courageously fighting. He expressed thanks to the Korean People's Army and the people of the northern half of the republic for the warm greetings accorded to him. Youth (Han Tong-ku) is happily living amid the warm hospitality of the people in the northern half of the republic.

MINISTER TESTIFIES ON PYONGYANG N-S STAND

SK091144 Seoul YONHAP in English 0938 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Seoul, Feb. 9 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Unification Board Minister Son Chae-sik said Tuesday that Pyongyang has virtually rejected last month's proposal by President Chon Tu-hwan for a democratic unification of the Korean Peninsula and for a national reconciliation of South and North Koreans.

Testifying before the Foreign Affairs Committee of the National Assembly, Seoul's unicameral parliament, Son added that such a response from North Korea meant that Pyongyang has not changed its existing unification policy which calls for the communization of the South.

He said the North Korean authorities are dealing with the issues involving inter-Korean dialogue and unification "only in the context of communist revolution in the South rather than national reconciliation." "North Korea holds on to its adamant stand (against the South), because the planned succession of Kim Chong-il, Kim Il-song's son, would be dangerous if the North Korean society was opened to the South," Son said.

Son said Pyongyang is also concerned that the suggestion of a Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo made by Kim Il-song would lose color and eventually make it weaker in the international diplomatic arena if the North accepted Seoul's latest unification formula.

Further Report

SK091239 Seoul YONHAP in English 1215 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Seoul, Feb. 9 (YONHAP) -- National Unification Minister Son Chae-sik said Tuesday the South Korean Government is awaiting a selective or package response from North Korea to the 20 "pilot projects" which he proposed Feb. 1 for the unification of the peninsula.

Testifying before the Foreign Affairs Committee of the National Assembly, Son said, "It is not our position to seek only a package settlement of the projects." Son said, "We would willingly accept a response from the North -- even if they respond selectively to any of the 20 projects -- to help promote mutual exchanges and the opening of South and North Korean societies to each other."

TIES WITH EUROPEAN SOCIALISTS TO BE STRENGTHENED

[Text] The government will concentrate its diplomatic efforts on strengthening cooperative relations with European socialist parties this year, including those in France and West Germany. Foreign Minister No Sin-yong revealed the government's plan to do so yesterday during a session at Chongwadae in which President Chon Tu-hwan was given a briefing on major foreign policies the ministry is to carry out this year.

The government will also push strongly ahead with its program to advance into other countries by maintaining closer economic ties with such European nations as the United Kingdom, France, and Austria, according to Minister No. He reported that his ministry would continue efforts to improve relations with the Eastern bloc on a gradual basis.

In particular, endeavors will be focused on arranging Seoul visits by as many leading socialist personalities as possible from European nations, taking note of the fact that the power of socialist parties has been on an increase since the French Socialist Party took the helm last May, according to him.

Turning to diplomatic strategy in the United Nations, Minister No said that his ministry would continuously strive to block "unnecessary debate" concerning the Korean problem in international fora such as the United Nations and nonaligned meetings. The ministry will also take diplomatic steps to expand the support base worldwide for President Chon Tu-hwan's new peace formula which is getting wise backing, he revealed.

By doing so, it will positively create an international atmosphere conducive to the early realization of unification visualized by President Chon through fostering peace on the Korean Peninsula, entry into the U.N., and exchange between South and North Korea, Minister No explains.

As to Korea-Japan relations, the ministry will do its best to achieve an early solution of the economic cooperation problem, thereby bringing bilateral relations into a new phase of cooperation, No went on. Measures will also be taken not only to correct the trade imbalance in favor of Japan but also to improve the status of Korean residents in Japan, he revealed.

Minister No reported that his ministry would put emphasis on increasing cooperative relations with the five ASEAN nations based on solid bonds with them through the expansion of bilateral trade and cultural exchanges.

Beefing up the already-consolidated cooperative system with the United States through increased mutual visits by leading figures from both states is also planned, taking advantage of the centennial of the opening of diplomatic relations between the two allies this year, Minister No disclosed. He revealed that his ministry would employ measures to crush any North Korean attempt at a "unilateral approach" to Washington.

The government will provide diplomatic support to the maximum extent to attain successfully this year's export goal of $25,000 million, he said. Minister No revealed that the government would seek the conclusion of agreements on shipping, aviation, and fishery cooperation with a total of 31 foreign countries this year.

MINISTRY NOT TO RAISE PRICES OF OIL, ELECTRICITY

[Text] The government will not increase oil prices or electricity charges this year, cancelling its earlier plan to raise them by an average of 6 percent. The prices of coal and yontan (anthracite briquets) will rise by a slight margin this spring to reflect expected miners' wage hikes. The energy pricing policy was disclosed by the energy-Resources Ministry yesterday.

This year will not face the perennial problem of energy price increases, high-ranking ministry officials stressed, if present trends continue. They said domestic oil prices at present faced a cost-push factor of 1.04 percent only. Against the backdrop of stabilized crude prices on international markets, they said, the value of the Korean currency against the U.S. dollar and international interest rates was expected to remain stable.

Taking into consideration overall cost-push factors, they said, the government planned to increase the prices of oil products by 5.5 percent more than last November when it raised local oil prices and electricity charges. However, things have gone well and are expected to turn for the better, they pointed out. "There will be no worry about oil price hikes this year if the present conditions go on," they said.

IRAN NOTIFIES GOVERNMENT OF OIL PRICE CUT

SK091204 Seoul YONHAP in English 1041 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Text] Seoul, Feb. 9 (YONHAP) -- The state-run National Iranian Oil Co. (NIOC) has notified Korea of a decision to lower its oil prices by one U.S. dollar per barrel, retroactive to Feb. 5, officials at the Energy-Resources Ministry said Tuesday. Under the NIOC move, the Ssangyong Oil Refinery Co., the Iranian company's trading partner in Korea, will import Iranian light oil at 33.2 dollars and Iranian heavy oil at 31.3 dollars per barrel.

The price decrease will make Iranian oil the cheapest of all imported oils in Korea. NIOC also lowered the price of its oil at the beginning of the year. The oil prices for Korean importers will now average 33.44 dollars per barrel due to the NIOC measure, the officials added.

TONG-A ILBO: MORE NORTH KOREANS DEFECTING TO PRC

SK091426 Seoul TONG-A ILBO in Korean 8 Feb 82 p 2

[Article by Tokyo correspondent Chong Ku-chong]

[Excerpts] It has been learned that North Korean residents, groaning under the North Korean puppets' tyranny, have fled to Communist China across the Yalu River and tried to settle in Shenyang and other places where many Koreans live. Reportedly, there are many young persons in their twenties among the North Korean fugitives. It is said that due to their great antipathy to the North Korean social system and the closed political system, they have been escaping in search of a freer world.

The fugitives, in particular, reveal: "In North Korea, even between intimate friends, anyone who has made political remarks will be charged with political crimes and quietly purged. This notwithstanding, an antigovernment underground organization exists and there is a people's resistance. However, such resistance has resulted in miserable death."

This was revealed by a recent letter from Mr Yi Chong-kyu -- a pseudonym -- 21, to his relatives in Japan. Yi fled to Communist China across the Yalu River from a certain place in North Pyongan Province on the night of 5 April last year. That night, Yi safely crossed the Yalu River with two friends. After Yi obtained some money from a local relative of one of the two friends, he safely arrived in Shenyang by train.

According to Yi, North Korean residents have recently suffered from a serious food shortage. Factory workers like Yi are supplied with 17 kg of food (60 percent cornmeal, 40 percent rice) every 15 days. It is said that this quantity of provisions lasts only 10 to 12 days in every household. People are provided with meat four or five times a year on such occasions as the birthdays of Kim Il-song and Kim Chong-il.

Ideological study at the shipyard where Yi worked was conducted from 2000 to 2100 every night. It is said that workers at the shipyard had to undergo such study sessions every night. Their study subjects were party polices, guidelines for daily living, the virtues of Kim Chong-il and chuche ideology.

The North Korean citizen's private life is closely watched, too. Yi says: "When anyone buys a radio set, officials in the Ministry of Public Security modify the tuner so that people can hear only one station."

Many North Korean residents want to go to Pyongyang, Yi said. In the winter of 1977, two teenage girls attempted to go to Pyongyang by sneaking onto a freight train, braving the bitter cold, so that they could buy candies in Pyongyang. However, Yi notes, they froze to death. He continues: "Among the youths in North Korea who are disgruntled with such a miserable life, quite a few people strongly oppose this situation." In his letter, Yi says: "Where there exists exploitation and suppression there is bound to be resistance. Such a move will spread far and wide to all brothers in North Korea."

In a letter recently sent to his relatives in Japan, Mr Kim Chong-po -- a pseudonym -- 48, who also fled to Communist China across the Yalu River and now lives in Shenyang, says: "An increasing number of North Korean residents are defecting to Communist China, leaving their parents, wives and children behind. They are anxiously appealing for the rescue of their families." He reveals that the residents in Communist China who have defected from North Korea help each other spiritually and economically.

Kim writes in his letter: "I have heard that life in Japan and South Korea is better than in any other country. I am living with a dream that my desire to live in South Korea will come true some time in the future."

UNEN HAILS BREZHNEV NUCLEAR ARMS PROPOSAL

OW082048 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1702 GMT 8 Feb 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 8 Feb (MONTSAME) -- The Mongolian daily UNEN evaluates L. Brezhnev's initiatives moved forward during the meeting with the Socialist International representatives in Moscow as a new important step in averting nuclear war threat. Brezhnev, stresses UNEN, proposed a specific plan on turning Europe into a nuclear-free continent. The newspaper points out that the latest political developments in the world once more irrefutably testify to the Soviet Union's determination to fight to the end for averting nuclear threat, for total nuclear weapon production ban.

The Soviet leader, notes UNEN in the article, has moved forward proposals, which will push from the dead [as received] point the strategic arms limitation talks and will provide a solid foundation for consolidating peace and security not only in Europe but in the whole world.

The Mongolian people, writes UNEN, as well as the progressive humanity, fully approve and support the new Soviet initiatives. They represent the real implementation of historic peace program, adopted at the 26th C.P.S.U. Congress.

TRADE UNION LEADER DISCUSSES HAVANA CONGRESS

OW051852 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in English 1706 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 5 Feb (MONTSAME) -- The Mongolian public opinion is confident that the coming 10th World Trade Union Congress to be held in Havana will make an important contribution to strengthening the unity and solidarity of the world trade union movement in the struggle for peace, security, disarmament and detente, said secretary of the Mongolian Trade Unions' Central Council, head of the Mongolian delegation to the congress E. Dashdorj to a MONTSAME correspondent.

The agenda of the congress acquires ever more urgency at the time when imperialist forces, first of all the Reagan administration, accelerate military build-up, whip up the arms race, create and fan flashpoints in different parts of the world and openly interfere in the affairs of sovereign states. With these reactionary forces closely interrelate the Beijing hegemonists.

The Mongolian trade unions together with trade unions of fraternal countries have been actively preparing for the congress. They have taken part in holding an international photo and poster competition, organized by the W.F.T.U. (World Federation of Trade Unions), [and] have carried out a wide range of work on popularizing the tasks and goals of the W.F.T.U. and the coming 10th World Trade Union Congress. The Mongolian trade union press has been publishing articles on the struggle of the working people and trade unions for peace and security, against the arms race under a constant heading dedicated to the 10th trade union congress in Havana.

STUDENTS IN JAPAN SEND LETTER ON COALITION

[Text] The Kampuchean Students' Association in Japan has sent a letter to the State Presidium chairman and prime minister of the Democratic Kampuchean Government and the chairman of the Kampuchean People's Representative Assembly Standing Committee, expressing the opinion of the Kampuchean students in Japan concerning the question of rallying the national forces for resistance against the Vietnamese aggressors. The text of this letter follows:

Respectfully to Mr Khieu Samphan, chairman of the State Presidium and prime minister of the Democratic Kampuchean Government; respectfully to Mr Nuon Chea, chairman of the Kampuchean People's Representative Assembly: After listening to and reading the appeal for opinions on the formation of a Democratic Kampuchean coalition government, our Kampuchean Students' Association in Japan met and held discussions on several occasions on this matter. Like all other Kampuchean people, we want a quick end to the genocidal war that the Vietnamese aggressors are sowing in our beloved fatherland, whether through the total defeat of the aggressors or their withdrawal by any form of pressure. A quick end to this genocidal war of the Vietnamese enemy is a quick end to the destruction suffered by all Kampuchean people in terms of lives and property.

After the discussions, we reached the unanimous view that the only effective way to end the Vietnamese enemy's genocidal war quickly is to rally all the Kampuchean patriotic forces to launch all forms of resistance against the enemy. In this connection, we would like to present our views on the formation of this Democratic Kampuchean coalition government as follows:

1. We fully support the recent signing of the Singapore tripartite statement which constituted the first step toward the formation of a Democratic Kampuchean coalition government as a means to end quickly the Vietnamese aggressors' genocidal war.

2. We oppose the formation of any Democratic Kampuchean coalition government that will impair and shatter the current anti-Vietnamese forces militarily, psychologically or politically.

3. We oppose the formation of any Democratic Kampuchean coalition government that allows any party the opportunity to seize power after the country is completely liberated.

4. The regime to be responsible for the national destiny following liberation from the claws of the Vietnamese aggressors must be elected in accordance with the genuine will of all the Kampuchean people.

5. Now and in the future, all Kampuchean patriotic groups must avoid armed or any other conflicts, which will only impair the current fighting forces, the people's lives and the nation's wealth and heritage.

These above-mentioned views emanated from our pure spirit of patriotism. Please accept our sincere regards.

POST REPORTS KILLING OF 2 VILLAGERS AT BORDER

BK100157 Bangkok POST in English 10 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Excerpts] Aranyaprathet -- Two Thai villagers were killed and three seriously wounded yesterday morning in separate Vietnamese attacks on the border villages of Khok Sabaeng and Wangmon, military sources said.

The source said that a Khok Sabaeng villager was killed and another was wounded in an ambush by Vietnamese forces at Khlong Prommahot near Ban Khok Sabaeng, about 17 kilometres southeast of Aranyaprathet. About three hours later, in nearby Ban Wangmon, a woman was killed and two seriously injured when mortar shells fired from Kampuchea landed in a bunker in which they were sheltering, the source added.

Thai military sources said that since the two incidents occurred in the non-battle zone, Thailand would take both military and diplomatic retaliation against the Vietnamese.

Meanwhile, military source expect that the fighting between Vietnamese-led forces and the Khmer Rouge to intensify, and say this will probably affect Thai villagers living close to the border. Villagers have been ordered to take necessary precautions. Artillery believed fired into Thailand by the Vietnamese forces on Monday [8 February] resulted in troop reinforcements being sent to Aranyaprathet yesterday in case they are needed to beef up units stationed along the border. Field military sources said that government troops are deployed along the border, with special attention being given to Ban Khlong Hat in Watthana Nakhon District, about 50 kilometres south of Aranyaprathet.

Thai villagers from Ban Khao Saraphi were evacuated to Ban Khlong Hat on Monday because of fears of artillery bombardment after fighting flared over the border between Vietnamese-led forces and the Khmer Rouge. The fighting was reportedly continuing yesterday, and several thousand Khmer civilians, believed to be the dependents of Khmer Rouge troops, were reportedly massing near Khlong Prommahat. The source said that these Khmer civilians were ready to cross the canal into Thailand if the fighting intensified.

Military authorities in the area were reported to have rejected a request by relief agencies to distribute food and other aid to the Khmers.

OFFICIALS ON MALAYSIAN 'THREAT' TO KHMER ROUGE

[Excerpts] Though the Thais have publicly described as "tactical" the Malaysian threat to withdraw support for the Khmer Rouge in the United Nations, some Bangkok-based diplomats believed the ASEAN member is seriously reconsidering its Kampuchean strategy.

"We are convinced that this time he meant business," a diplomat said. He was referring to Malaysia's Prime Minister Datuk Sri Mahathir Mohamed, who declared last week that it is high time for a strategic shift over the Kampuchean issue. "The Thais have a sound reason in their attempts to picture an image of different tactics under the same strategy adopted by the Association of Southeast Asian Nations. Understandably, they want to maintain an image of unity among ASEAN members," the diplomat said.

But then, a senior Thai official revealed that the Malaysian threat was made without prior consultation with other ASEAN members, including Thailand, and indicated strong disapproval of the Malaysian "tactic" said to be designed to prompt the Khmer Rouge to join the loose coalition with the other two Khmer resistance factions.

The senior Thai official said: "Even though the Malaysian threat was tactical, they should not have made public the threat. There are still many diplomatic channels to pass on the threat to the Khmer Rouge. I think quiet diplomacy is the best means in this case." However, he said that the threat would have no effect on the Khmer Rouge, which had made it known that they would finally be able to drive the Vietnamese forces out of Kampuchea even without international support.

Another senior Thai official mildly warned the Malaysians that they should bear in mind possible adverse impact on ASEAN and the country itself before making such a threat. "Are Malaysia and ASEAN ready to antagonize China? I don't think we are," he told a NATION reporter.

POST REPORTS SIHANOUK OFFER ON BEIJING SUMMIT

[Excerpt] Prince Norodom Sihanouk hopes to host a summit meeting of the three Kampuchean resistance movements in Beijing later this month, according to a close source to the prince in Bangkok. Although China has declined a proposal to host the talks, the meeting could be held in Beijing privately, with the Kampuchean resistance leaders as guests of Sihanouk.

Sihanouk last week made long-distance call from Beijing to former Kampuchean Prime Minister In Tam, who represented Sihanouk during the ad hoc meeting of the three major Kampuchean factions in Bangkok late last year. The talks were also attended by representatives of the Khmer Rouge and the Khmer Peoples' National Liberation Front (KPNLF). According to the source, Sihanouk asked In to tell the Thai Foreign Ministry that he still supported the ASEAN proposal for a loose coalition government. The proposal was stymied by the Khmer Rouge's refusal to join the coalition, but Sihanouk said talks in Beijing would provide an opportunity to work out an acceptable alternative with the two other resistance groups, the source said.

The source said invitations to attend the talks had already been sent to Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan and KPNLF leader Son Sann. No problem was seen in arranging the talks between the three parties, the source said. [If] the proposed Beijing meeting broke through the deadlock in forming the coalition government, a further meeting could be held in an ASEAN country, the source said. The source said Sihanouk wanted three of his representatives in Bangkok -- In Tam, Bour Hal and Chak Saroeun -- to attend the planned summit, and they are expected to leave for Beijing next week.

SIAM RAT URGES PRESSURING PRC ON COALITION ISSUE

BK090933 Bangkok SIAM RAT in Thai 5 Feb 82 p 3

[Editorial: "Approach All Parties Concerned"]

[Text] "The Khmer Rouge have got a lot to lose if they lose the support of ASEAN." This disclosure, made by British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs Lord Carrington in Manila prior to his departure for Thailand last Wednesday, should serve as a warning to the Khmer Rouge that the legitimacy of Democratic Kampuchea (Khmer Rouge) might come to an end if it obstinately refuses to participate in efforts to form a planned coalition government.

Although Lord Carrington did not intend to threaten the Democratic Kampuchean Government as Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed did when he informed the Malaysian National Assembly that his government might have to withdraw its recognition of the Democratic Kampuchean Government in the United Nations, his statement reflects the fact that Great Britain has been keenly interested in the Kampuchean situation and in security in Southeast Asia because it wants the Kampuchean problem to be settled for the sake of world peace.

However, ASEAN must not be misled by Lord Carrington's visit into believing that he can make the Khmer Rouge willingly join in the coalition with the factions of Son Sann and Prince Sihanouk. ASEAN can only be confident that its policy toward the Kampuchean problem will continue to enjoy the support of Western countries. Therefore, it will not be discouraged by the Khmer Rouge's indifference in pursuing this matter.

The PRC seems to be the only party that can force the Khmer Rouge to join in the coalition government. Unfortunately, Beijing is now demonstrating its indifference toward ASEAN's proposal, although it has declared its support for any resistance against the Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea. China's indifferent attitude is therefore a signal of the impending failure of ASEAN's efforts in seeking a solution to the Kampuchean problem, leaving as another alternative that ASEAN nations should review their relations with China. Things might improve if ASEAN asked the United States to sell more weapons to Taiwan, because this might induce the PRC to become more active and realize its responsibility in dealing with this problem.

The Thai Government has sent a letter to the Beijing government to request its cooperation. This might not be sufficient, so other forms of pressure should be tried.

Regarding an invitation of the DPRK president for the Thai prime minister to visit the DPRK, Sitthi said the Thai prime minister informed his DPRK counterpart that he was quite busy with domestic tasks, but that he would try to find time to visit the DPRK. The deputy foreign minister will be assigned to plan a visit by the prime minister.

Talks With Leaders

BK090309 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 9 Feb 82 pp 1, 10

[Excerpts] Visiting North Korean Prime Minister Yi Chong-ok, who arrived here yesterday for a four-day official visit, "praised" Thailand and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) for their "correct" policy over the Kampuchean conflicts.

Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila quoted the North Korean leader as saying that although North Korea has normal diplomatic ties with Vietnam, it opposed the Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea. "Premier Yi expressed his belief that the superpowers should stop pursuing a policy that dominates and bullies small nations," Sitthi said after the meeting between Yi and Thai senior officials led by Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon. Sitthi also said that he agreed with the North Korean leader that small nonaligned countries should forge closer ties in a common effort to avoid future armed conflicts in different parts of the world.

It has been the view of Pyongyang under President Kim Il-song that a united Nonaligned Movement would be strong enough to counter against the superpowers, which it said was responsible for the turmoil in various parts of the world. Diplomatic sources said that although North Korea was a close ally of China, it has tried to avoid direct confrontation with the Soviet Union, which Beijing claimed to pose a major threat to the peace of the world. "While Pyongyang calls for a withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, it has never posed a similar call against the Soviet Union in case of the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan," a diplomat said.

Sitthi said that North Korea did not renew their request for the setting up of its embassy here "possibly because they might have been convinced that we would turn down the proposal."

Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong, who also attended the meeting yesterday, said that Thailand was still not ready to accept the North Korean proposal for the two countries to set up their respective embassies in each other's country. "We have not enough personnel and budget for the setting up of an embassy in Pyongyang," he said. He said that North Korea had earlier urged Thailand many times to upgrade the offices of trade representatives in the two countries to embassy level, and the Thais had indicated its reluctance to abide by the offer.

Arun said that the talks between the Thai and North Korean leaders at the Government House yesterday centered on the trading relations between the two countries and the promotion of telecommunications and postal services.

The Thais have called on North Korea to remove "obstacles" to the expansion of the trading volume between the two countries. Among other things, Bangkok wants the Bank of Tokyo to vouch for credit for the Thai goods to be imported into the communist country. The National Bank of North Korea has been vouching for the credit, but the Thais are not assured of the financial status of the country, which is in serious shortage of foreign reserves.

Ogarkov, chief of the General Staff of the Soviet Armed Forces, today called on Air Force Division B-71 -- a heroic unit of the Vietnamese people's armed forces. Major General Dao Dinh Luyen, commander of the Vietnam Air Force, and the senior lieutenant-colonel commander of Division B-71 guided the distinguished guests to visit the Red Star Regiment -- a unit with heroic pilots who shot down many U.S. aircraft during the Vietnam war against U.S. aggression.

The Soviet guests presented the Red Star Regiment with the mock-up of a modern Soviet Air Force fighter and wished the Vietnam Air Force more successes in national defence and construction. On behalf of the cadres and soldiers of the Red Cross Regiment [as received], the lieutenant colonel regiment commander expressed his gratitude to the party, government and armed forces of the Soviet Union for their great and effective assistance to the Vietnam Air Force as a whole and the Red Star Regiment specifically. U.S. 'PROPAGANDA' ON TOXIC CHEMICALS SCORED

[From the press review of 9 February]

[Text] QUAN DOI NHAN DAN carries a commentary by (Thuy Chi) entitled "The Truth About Washington's Deceptive Propaganda Concerning Toxic Chemicals," which says: A slanderous campaign against the Soviet Union and Vietnam regarding the use of chemical weapons has been persistently pursued by Washington, Beijing and their accomplices even though world opinion -- including that in the United States -- has strongly rejected and condemned it.

At a recent press conference in Washington, Richard Burt, a representative of the U.S. State Department, reiterated the shopworn allegation that ample evidence existed which owed that the Soviet Union is involved in the use of chemical weapons in Southeast Asia and that many Soviet advisers and chemical weapons have been sent to this region and to Afghanistan.

Acting like a poisonous snake, Burt has tried to incite countries in Western Europe, the Middle East, Asia and the Third World group to oppose the Soviet Union by threatening that they will be victims of the Soviet chemical weapons. Finally Burt has exposed Washington's dark scheme to internationalize this issue by pressuring the so-called UN investigation committee to continue its investigation into the use of chemical weapons in Southeast Asia and Afghanistan despite the fact that this committee has concluded that there is no evidence as such and has turned down all U.S. allegations against the Soviet Union and Vietnam.

The commentary stresses: The truth is being exposed by U.S. public opinion. The cruel strategic scheme of the Reagan administration to turn Western Europe into a battlefield and the people in this region into sacrifices to the gods of chemical warfare has been exposed. In the clear-sighted eyes of progressive mankind, Reagan cannot cover up the crimes committed by the U.S. administrations that killed the Vietnamese people with chemical weapons during their former war of aggression, which had serious and long-lasting consequences.

The Reagan administration has exposed its warmongering nature and is plotting to push mankind toward the tragic catastrophe of a nuclear and bacterialogical war which they are preparing for intensively.

NHAN DAN ANALYZES REAGAN'S 'WAR BUDGET'

[Text] Under the headline "Reagan's War Budget," a commentary in today's NHAN DAN says:

U.S. public opinion has not shown any surprise at all at the whole scale of the estimated budget for fiscal year 1983, which begins on 1 October 1982 and ends on 30 September 1983, was recently made public by President Ronald Reagan. Though not surprised, U.S. public opinion is very confused. Estimated income in the new budget is put at $666.1 billion while estimated spending is $757.6 billion, an increase of nearly $100 billion over fiscal year 1981. In other words, the deficit in the new budget is estimated at $91.5 billion, a record level. The importance of this figure is self-evident.

The new budget estimate shows that the U.S. President continues to stick firmly to his new economic program and to his supply-side economic theory about supply and demand -- the foundation of his economic program. Such a conservative and stubborn attitude will only create further dissension within the ranks of the ruling capitalist circles and will further deepen the economic and financial differences between the United States and its allied countries.

James Jones, Chairman of the U.S. House Budget Committee has observed that congressional reaction to this budgetary estimate is frustration and resistance. Senator Levin has said that Reagan's new budget amounts to a declaration of war against the United States as it compels the poor to sacrifice more for the rich.

Along with the new budget estimate made public on 4 February, Reagan has offered many gambles to the electorate. He is gambling that the economy will be restored and will return to prosperity, that inflation will be brought under control and that the economy will be able to stand an unprecedentedly costly arms race without falling into disaster. Mr Reagan is continuing to pursue his adventurous economic gambit. However, throughout his budget message to the Congress, the U.S. President has deliberately kept mum about the major issue of unemployment in the United States, with more than 10 million people facing unemployment and with the unemployment rate likely to rise to double digits, that is, more than 10 percent.

BANGKOK'S 'HOSTILE POLICY' TOWARD SRV ASSAILED

BK091258 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Text] The Army paper QUAN DOI NHAN DAN on Monday criticized Bangkok's hostile policy against Vietnam. The paper wrote: Having suffered defeat in tailing after Washington and Beijing in the anti-Vietnam campaign, the Bangkok authorities should have learned a good lesson and adopted a judicious foreign policy toward its neighboring countries, thus contributing to preserving peace and stability in Southeast Asia. This also conforms to the interests of the Thai people.

It is a regret that the Bangkok authorities have not yet realized that simple fact and have further colluded with Beijing and Washington. The Bangkok authorities in recent days have increased armed provocations along the Thai-Kampuchean border both on the land and on the sea and have supported the remnants of Pol Pot troops and other Khmer reactionaries in sabotage activities inside Kampuchea. They also slandered Vietnam by saying that Vietnamese troops have encroached on Thai territory and opened fire at the Thai district called Aranyaprathet, causing many civilian casualties and property damage, and that Vietnam is preparing for a major sweeping operation against the Khmer Rouge and that the conflict could spread to Thailand.

Bangkok's trick could deceive nobody. What Bangkok has said is only a repetition of Beijing's slanders against Vietnam. It should be remarked that backed by Beijing and Washington, the Thai Foreign Ministry has set up Radio Free Asia and a press center in Bangkok to step up anti-Vietnam propaganda and that at present opposing Vietnam is almost their daily work. This clearly exposes Thailand's so-called friendly policy and good will toward neighboring countries.

By slandering Vietnam, Bangkok hopes to use it as a pretext for its increasing armed acts against the PRK and to ask for more U.S. military aid, creating conditions for U.S. and Beijing to increase intervention in Southeast Asia against the Indochinese countries. This can be seen in the appeal for U.S. nonrefundable military aid for Thailand by the commander in chief of the Royal Thai Army and for the implementation of the war principles in sending American GI's into Thailand. Naturally, Washington is willing to give $92 million of military aid to Thailand in the fiscal year 1981-82 and send hundreds of American military personnel back to that country.

Bangkok's acts only serve the interests of Beijing and Washington and oppose the Indochinese countries. These acts also sabotage peace and stability in Southeast Asia and run counter to the interests of the regional people, first of all of the Thai people.

Colluding with Beijing and Washington and fostering the Pol Pot remnant troops and other Khmer reactionaries, Bangkok is trying to reverse the situation in Kampuchea. By so doing, Bangkok has proved to be the most active in forcing the Khmer reactionary forces to set up a loose alliance against the Kampuchean people. This erroneous policy of the Bangkok authorities only will worsen their inner disputes and cause more condemnaton from the Thai people and progressive mankind.

HAIPHONG CONGRESS VIEWS PRODUCT-CONTRACT SYSTEM

[Station correspondent Vinh Tra's report entitled "Voices From the Area With Product-Contract System" on discussions at a Haiphong municipal party organization congress -- date not given; read by announcer]

[Summary] "'I have an opinion. May I speak?' Dozens of hands were raised. The comrade presiding over the discussion looked over the conference hall; then his eyes stopped before the kind face of the secretary of the Do Son District Party Committee. 'Comrade Nguyen Dinh Nhien, please speak.'

"'Yes. If no one doubted the significant achievements of all our party, armed forces and people over the past 5 years, I would have sat and listened before speaking. However, I would like to state right now that in order to understand what has been made possible today, we must look backward and at the present. More generally, we must form anoverall view from a historic viewpoint.'

"'Please, comrade, get to the point.'

"'I have touched directly on the subject and would like to add that last year, were it not for the product-contract system, Haiphong would not have had an additional 38,000 tons of paddy or a per capita production of 15 kilograms of food per month. Please look at the top of page 8 of the report by the secretary of the municipal party committee and you will see.'"

While everyone broke into laughter and flipped the pages of the report, I looked at the figures: Haiphong's agriculture was producing food reserve. There was no fear of famine during the lean season, and for 3 years in a row, the municipality fulfilled its food, pork, vegetable export and tobacco obligations to the state at an early date. Whereas in the past, only 1 district and 35 cooperatives in Haiphong attained 5 tons of paddy or more per hectare, 5 out of 6 agricultural districts attain now more than 5 tons per hectare. There are districts like An Hai that has only one cooperative that produces less than 5 tons per hectare. Tien Lang District has solved the problem of weak cooperatives. Last year, the municipality attained an average production of 51.5 quintals per hectare. Its gross food production exceeded the plan by 4.3 percent.

"In a gentle and moving tone, the comrade secretary of the Do Son District party committee spoke as if he were confiding with his friends and comrades: 'As a representative of a district party committee, I can proudly say that Do Son, along with Tien Lang, Vinh Bao, Kien An, An Hai, Thuy Nguyen and the port city, have joined their efforts with the rest of the country to produce more than 15 million tons of food. And the finest thing of all was that, from the revolutionary movement of the masses and in the light of the resolutions of the sixth Central Committee plenum, we have found a way out. We have ushered in the path forward through the product-contract system. You, comrades, probably still remember that in the past we sent thousands and tens of thousands of cadres and workers to the rural areas to strengthen the work force to boost production, and yet the peasants were still not enthusiastic about their fields. The sight of cooperative members breaking the locks of cooperative granaries to divide the contents among themselves has ended. From this forum of the party congress, we affirm that not only has the product-contract system produced more wealth, it has also strengthened production relations, and this is the direction for long-term work.'

"'I would like to add to Comrade Nhien's opinion. I suggest that the party continue to sum up activities and draw experiences and constantly continue to rectify deviations so that the contract system may be correctly carried out. This is to avoid nonspecific contracts or erroneous use of the collective's material base, to achieve a fair and rational distribution of products and to ensure the correct implementation of the rear area policy.' I recognized the voice of Comrade Do Dinh Trinh, chairman of Tien Lang District, a locality known for nonspecific contracts.

"At a press conference, I asked Comrade Le Thanh Duong, deputy secretary of the municipal party committee, how many suggestions there were like the one just mentioned. He said that out of the more than 60,000 suggestions expressed at grassroots congresses and some 900 statements made at the municipal party organization congress, two-thirds of the suggestions focused on assessing achievements and shortcomings, most of which dealt with the product-contract system and most of which were in agreement with the Central Committee documents.

"'Does that mean that there were still some delegates who were puzzled?' Hearing that question from someone, I remembered a discussion at the Hong Bang cell the day before. A delegate from a major and important service of the municipality said: 'For a long time, investments in the municipality's agriculture amounted to 22 million dong. Yet, they are now only 10 million.' A hand shot up from a row of chairs in the back indicating that someone wanted to speak. 'Let me ask, was the loss of the 12 million due to the product contract system or was it due to false investments? Could it be that at the beginning we sometimes impatiently wanted to bring the countryside to large-scale production through mechanized work without thinking about our capability for implementing the work and that we now still want to stubbornly hold on to big projects and blame the contracts for destroying the collective's material base?' Many opinions were expressed back and forth, sometimes becoming rather heated."

Attending the Haiphong municipal party organization congress for 1 whole week, I found out that the new contract system was not confined to agriculture, but was also enthusiastically discussed in industrial, artisan and handicraft, and distribution and circulation sectors.

"A delegate of Le Chan ward said: 'Have we taken the partial remedy of past errors as an achievement? Take Haiphong's regional industry, for instance. During times of stability, it represented 50 percent of the total income of the municipality's budget. Yet now, no sooner had we put up a foundation to stop the downward slide and we were calling it a new factor.' Dozens of suggestions and hundreds of statements at cell meetings and conference halls have wrestled with this issue."

I managed to work with the director of an industrial enterprise, listened to discussions and went to a production installation to try to learn something more about Haiphong industry's changes. In the past, as a port city and with the assistance of our brothers and friends, Haiphong's regional industry included 65 percent of production machines and 85 percent of universal machines. Previously, we would receive aid first before assigning tasks instead of planning production tasks first and then buying and installing equipment. In other words, we were reversing the normal order.

Over the past 5 years, the factories have had to make do with what we have. Energy, gasoline, oil and materials have been reduced to only 30 percent of previous levels. Workers have increasingly experienced more difficulties in their livelihood. If we did not focus on agriculture and consumer and export goods as called for by the Central Committee's resolutions, Haiphong's mechanical industry would not have had a way out. With Resolutions No 25 and No 26-CP, real changes have been achieved by the port city's industry. From the situation where 50 percent of the enterprises did not fulfill their plans, Haiphong now has only a few enterprises in this category. This development has helped us to overfulfill the plan not only in total output value but also inthe three targets concerning agricultural-support, consumer and export goods.

"I remember that in 1976 when I attended the sixth Haiphong municipal party organization congress held in preparation for the fourth national party congress, most of the delegates opened their speeches with the remarks, 'I fully agree with the Central Committee and wish to elaborate as follows.'

"The atmosphere of the congress was different this time. All the opinions grappled with and went deeply into the issues. There was a high degree of criticism and self-criticism so as to finally reach a unanimity of views with the Central Committee. The four important issues that the Haiphong party organization congress voted upon -- assessment of successes in the general and economic lines, the two strategic tasks, economic objectives, and immediate tasks -- found 100-percent agreement with the Central Committee's documents. Nineteen out of 466 delegates suggested that the successes be evaluated a little lower than the documents so as to make greater efforts.

"The path ahead is one full of difficulties requiring still greater efforts for the sake of the fatherland and for the people's happiness."

PEOPLE'S CONTROL CONFERENCE DISCUSSES 1982 TASKS

[Text] The people's control sector recently held a conference to review its 1981 activities and to discuss its 1982 guidelines and tasks.

In 1981 the people's control organs at various levels inspected law enforcement activities in 3,429 units belonging to the economic, cultural, security and national defense sectors. Many control organs were noted for their correct selection of key services and urgent matters for inspection to detect breaches of the law and the responsible organs before suggesting punitive and remedial action. With the help of the people's control sector, many other sectors such as economy, culture and social welfare initiated inspection activities or held self-criticism sessions to criticize severely unlawful acts and to suggest measures to overcome shortcomings and quickly punish violators of the law. The tackling of complaints and charges was linked with the tasks of protecting socialist property and guaranteeing the people's democratic liberties. The people's control organs in Quang Nam-Danang, Tien Giang, Ho Chi Minh City, Hai Hung, Nghe Tinh, An Giang, Cuu Long and Thuan Hai concentrated on stepping up their investigation and prosecution activities and the trials of various important cases, thus meeting the demands of the party committee echelons concerned and the aspirations of the local people. Thanks to these efforts, crime prevention activities were stepped up in a number of localities. However, given the current situation and tasks and the existing capabilities of the cadres, the results obtained were small. Activities of the control organs at various levels lacked sensitivity and initiative. Prosecution by the state was not exercised effectively. Leadership and guidance activities were not uniform and failed to adequately develop the effect of specialized tasks.

In 1982 the people's control sector is determined to carry out its functions and tasks more actively and effectively and to contribute to creating a change in the country's general situation, especially in the field of struggling to prevent and oppose unlawful and criminal acts; to overcome negative phenomena in the economy and the people's livelihood; to maintain discipline in society; and to enhance socialist legislation and the people's collective mastery. The sector has launched an emulation drive to attain high labor output and high work efficiency in order to greet the fifth party congress. It was awarded a third-class labor service order to the Ha Bac Provincial People's Control Organ for its outstanding achievements of the past 5 years (1976-80), a rotating banner of the Council of Ministers to the Quang Nam-Danang Provincial People's Control Organ, and four "outstanding emulation units" banners to the Detention and Reeducation Inspection Department of the Supreme People's Control Organ and to the three People's Control Organs in Hoang Lien Son, Hai Hung and Long An.

The sector has also awarded the titles "Socialist Labor Team," "Emulation Fighters", and many banners, letters of appreciation and certificates of commendation to various units and individuals for their outstanding achievements in 1981.

VCTU CONFERENCE URGES UNION CONSOLIDATION

[Report on the conference of Vietnam Confederation of Trade Unions (VCTU) to discuss ways to perfect trade unions]

[Text] The VCTU recently held a conference of cadres from the northern provinces to study its Executive Committee's Resolution No 7 on measures to perfect the organization of trade unions.

Since the fourth congress of the VCTU, the membership in the trade union has rapidly developed with the widespread organization of the trade union network in all sectors, factories and agencies and at all echelons. The organizational tasks of trade unions have all been directed toward mobilizing the emulation movement for productive labor, thriftily building socialism, rationalizing production, and improving technical work in order to overcome difficulties, exploit all potentials in terms of manpower and other resources, and maintain and develop production. The contingent of trade union cadres has been developing and the structure of trade unions has been changing gradually.

Nevertheless, trade unions are still sluggish in several aspects of their organizational tasks. They have not been able to ensure the implementation of their political duties, especially when they engage in the economic and technical fields. Cadres have not firmly grasped the working method of the trade unions, which is to mobilize and educate the masses and enhance the laboring people's sense of collective mastery. Trade unions at all echelons have not fully realized the importance of the organizational task. Close guidance in the implementation of resolutions on the organizational task has not been provided. There has not been sufficient control and supervision to ensure both a preliminary and final review of the task. The organizational and operational principles have not been implemented scrupulously.

We must immediately consolidate the trade unions at all echelons; perfect the various agencies of the VCTU, the trade unions of the central sectors and the regional federations of trade unions; and create good conditions for the perfection of trade unions at district, precinct, town and provincial levels, especially in those major economic agroindustrial districts and primary production and business installations. Trade unions must become further involved in production and in workers' activities to realistically and effectively influence implementation of economic and technical objectives and to develop socialist workers and civil servants. We must more clearly determine the position, role, function, mission and authority of the trade union organization in the system of proletarian dictatorship, in order to establish the working relationship between trade unions and state agencies at the same levels. We must establish and improve the regulations dealing with cadre organizations, operational methods, work procedures, and so forth, and on the basis of these regulations gradually standardize cadre qualifications, streamline the apparatus, reduce staffing, enhance the effectiveness of guidance, increase the work efficiency of the trade union system, and promote the role of trade-union locals.

Many of the reports presented at the conference specify: Over the past few years, the organization of local trade unions has been established and developed to meet the requirements of expanding production and improving the management of economic sectors. Nearly all the executive committees of trade unions in factories have always fulfilled such key duties as mobilizing workers and civil servants to emulate productive labor, participating in management, holding conferences of workers and civil servants, signing contracts with the factories' directors board to fulfill the state plan, actively promoting production and animal raising, arranging meals for workers between shifts and improving the workers' living conditions. It is necessary to define clearly the scope of work and the areas of responsibility and to issue correct regulations and policies in order to foster a large contingent of food cadres who can perform well the tasks of grassroots-level trade unions, enhance the operational capability of trade unions in factories and build strong bases for trade unions.

PHAM VAN DONG SPEAKS AT ECONOMIC CONFERENCE

OW090344 Hanoi VNA in English 0316 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 8 -- Re-distributing the workforce and population and building new economic zones is an essential task of strategic significance of the 1982 State Plan, as well as of the Five-Year State Plan (1981-1985).

This was pointed out at a recent conference convened by the Council of Ministers with chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong in attendance.

It was reported at the conference that over the past five years, 1,500,000 people (750,000 of them in the working age) have gone to sparsely populated areas to build new economic zones. Thousands of new population centers, 200 villages, seven districts, 300 cooperatives and 200 state farms have been set up in these zones. The new economic zones have reclaimed 650,000 hectares (representing ten per cent of the cultivated land of the whole country), of which more than 500,000 hectares have been put under cultivation including 380,000 hectares of food crops. Those new economic zones which had reaped good harvests have drawn more people from other places. The provinces of Gialai-Kontum and Darlac (in the Central Highlands) alone have received nearly 220,000 settlers from other provinces. More than half of the food production of these two provinces were produced by the new economic zones Gialai-Kontum and Darlac, which formerly suffered chronic food shortages, have become self-sufficient in food. With the re-distribution of the workforce and population, many areas specializing in coffee, cacao, pineapple, tea and rubber planting have been formed.

Apart from building the new economic zones, the authorities in the mountain provinces have helped tens of thousands of people of ethnic minorities who used to lead a nomad life to settle down for sedentary farming. Over the past five years, the new settlements have reclaimed and cultivated nearly 60,000 hectares, afforested 27,000 hectares, built hundreds of small irrigation works, 450 schools and kindergartens, 300 infirmaries and nearly 200 supply-and-marketing cooperatives.

At the conference, Chairman Pham Van Dong said that in this decade, the redistribution of the workforce on a national scale is targetted at full exploitation of 10 million hectares of cultivable land, 15 million hectares of forest land, hundreds of thousands of hectares of fish ponds, and intensifying the exploitation of the sea. By 1985 more than 2 million people throughout the country, more than 1 million of them in the working age, will have settled in new economic zones.

The main orientation is to move more people from the Red River Delta and central Vietnam coastal provinces to build new economic zone in the Mekong River Delta, the Central Highlands and the mountain provinces. At the same time, the work force will also be distributed more rationally in each province, first of all within the agricultural, forestry and fishery sectors.

GHAZALI DISCUSSES KAMPUCHEA WITH DHANABALAN

BK051044 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 5 Feb 82

[Text] Malaysia has told Singapore that it continues to support efforts to form a coalition of three major Kampuchean resistance groups despite its displeasure over the wavering attitude of the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge. Official sources in the republic said the Malaysian position was made when Minister of Foreign Affairs Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie met his Singapore counterpart, Mr Dhanabalan, during an unannounced visit to Singapore yesterday.

A senior Malaysian diplomat has told newsmen the Khmer Rouge should not take ASEAN for granted just because the regional grouping supported tham in the United Nations. He said ASEAN's goal of finding a comprehensive political solution, following a withdrawal of over 200,000 Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea, remained unchanged. The spokesman added, a coalition of the three Kampuchean resistance groups would help this goal.

Officials in Singapore said there were no immediate plans for a joint ASEAN foreign ministers meeting to discuss the latest Kampuchean development.

UK FOREIGN AFFAIRS SECRETARY CARRINGTON VISITS

Meeting With Ghazali

BK070829 Kuala Lumpur International Service in English 0800 GMT 7 Feb 82

[Text] Malaysia and Britain have welcomed China's willingness to host a meeting of Kampuchean anti-Vietnamese factions in Beijing. During their discussions in Kuala Lumpur last night, the minister of foreign affairs, Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie, and his British counterpart, Lord Carrington, agreed that this was an encouraging positive development and was very welcome in the search for a political solution to the Kampuchean problem. Lord Carrington reiterated Britain's support for efforts by ASEAN to find a political solution to the problem. The two foreign ministers agreed that these efforts must center on the formation of a united anti-Vietnamese resistance movement. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Tan Sri Ghazali explained Malaysia's position to Lord Carrington. The British foreign secretary had said on arrival from Bangkok earlier his government recognized that bilateral relations must be based on mutual respect and equality.

Lord Carrington, who has no scheduled talks with Malaysian officials today, is to meet representatives of British businesses in Kuala Lumpur. He is expected to stress the importance of conforming to Malaysia's new economic policy. The British foreign secretary will be received in audience by his majesty the yang dipertuan agung and hold talks with the minister of trade and industry, Tengku Ahman Rithauddeen before leaving for Singapore on the last leg of his ASEAN tour.

Talks With Mahathir

[Text] Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed today asked Britain to show a better understanding of Malaysia's problems. These include efforts at restructuring the country's economy and the building of a united nation through the new economic policy. The prime minister, in his talks with the visiting British foreign secretary, Lord Carrington, said that Britain for a long time had not showed enough understanding of Malaysia's endeavors to fulfill the aspirations of the new economic policy.

Speaking to newsmen after the 1-hour talks, the secretary general of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Tan Sri Zakaria Ali, said Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir told the British leader that many of the problems in the country were in fact a legacy of the British colonial administration. Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir hoped Lord Carrington's visit would contribute toward improving relations. Tan Sri Zakaria said the prime minister also made it clear that Malaysia's acquisition of British companies were not back-door nationalizations. The acquisition was made in the open market and through normal procedures. Britain should not have reacted by amending the takeover code.

Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir also expressed regret over moves by the London Metals Exchange to change its rules to protect certain groups and depress tin prices. He reasoned out that if the exchange could depress prices when they shot up, Malaysia saw no reason why it could not take supportive actions when prices decline. The prime minister pointed out that it was for these reasons Malaysia attached great importance to the international tin agreement so that there would be fair and stable prices.

On his directives to government agencies to stop giving favorable treatment to British companies in their bid for contracts, Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir said the steps he had taken did not mean discrimination against British companies. It was aimed only at treating British firms just like any other. Tan Sri Zakaria explained that the directive was imperative because Malaysia was now pursuing to diversify expertise and technology. This would have helped to reduce its dependency on any one particular source.

On foreign policy, Lord Carrington described ASEAN as one of the few regions in the world enjoying tremendous prosperity and stability. The British leader told the prime minister than he was very impressed with the stability and the cohesion of ASEAN nations. On Kampuchea, both agreed that efforts toward a political solution to the problem should be continued.

Present at the 1-hour talks were Foreign Minister Tan Sri Ghazali Shafie and British High Commissioner William Bentley and three other British officials.

He told an airport news conference he would make proposals to his government on ways to improve relations with Malaysia. High-ranking British officials would be assigned to look into the matter. Lord Carrington said his talks with Malaysian leaders had given him a clear picture of Malaysia's position.

MNLA FOUNDING MESSAGE URGES CONTINUED STRUGGLE

BK061557 (Clandestine) Voice of Malayan Democracy in Malay 1215 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Article by Malayan National Liberation Army Personnel Office: "Salute to the Heroic Malayan National Liberation Army"]

[Summary] "The first of February this year is the 33d founding anniversary of the Malayan National Liberation Army [MNLA], a militant day of the people in our country." On this occasion, "we salute all revolutionary comrades, all patriots, all families of our fallen heroes and those of members of the revolutionary army, all revolutionary people of all nationalities and the heroic MNLA."

On 20 June 1948, the British imperialists proclaimed a state of emergency throughout the country. Under the leadership of the Communist Party of Malaya [CPM] the people of all nationalities took up arms and waged a heroic armed struggle, signaling the outbreak of an anti-British national liberation war. The CPM Central Committee merged all the anti-British guerrilla forces in various parts of the country into the MNLA on 1 February 1949. The birth of the Federation of Malaya on 31 August 1957 was "the result of the obstinate struggle of our party and army" and a victory of "all patriotic and democratic forces."

With British help, the reactionaries in our country managed to "ascend the throne." Subsequently, foreign monopoly capital flowed into and flooded the country, exploiting the people of all nationalities and dragging them into misery. "Under these circumstances, it was absolutely necessary to continue with the war and the revolutionary struggle of our people. We must fight for independence and complete national liberation and in defense of the people's democratic rights, so to improve the lot of the people living in poverty and misery."

Over the past few years, the Kuala Lumpur and Singapore cliques have intensified their reactionary policy for their own sake, robbing the people of their democratic rights, suppressing patriotic and democratic activities, torturing political detainees, plotting with foreign monopoly capitalists, undermining small and medium-size entrepreneurs and exploiting the working class.

"The Kuala Lumpur clique has, moreover, uninterruptedly mobilized its army and police to attack the base areas and guerrilla zones of our army," suppressed the labor movement and "indiscriminately detained those political leaders who disagreed with them and the innocent."

"The extreme rightists, who are represented by Ghazali Shafie," have often undertaken pro-Soviet and pro-Vietnam adventures, "openly becoming conspirators of Soviet-Vietnamese hegemonists."

Following its inauguration, the Mahathir government announced that it wanted to establish an honest government; it set free a number of political prisoners, reduced taxes and did other things only to deceive the public in an attempt to win the forthcoming general election, which is to be held earlier than originally scheduled.

"In a statement issued on 28 April 1980 to commemorate the 50th party founding anniversary, the CPM Central Committee made an in-depth analysis of the changes in the situation in the country and introduced an urgent task and a specific program conforming to the situation.

"The statement pointed out that the present contradiction between the Kuala Lumpur and Singapore cliques on one side, and the people of all nationalities and various strata on the other is the main contradiction in our society. At the same time, the contradiction between Soviet-Vietnamese hegemonism and its running dogs on the one hand and the people of all nationalities and various strata in our country on the other is on the rise and could become the principal contradiction in our society.

"In the face of such a situation, the urgent task of our people is to wage a struggle to defend the democratic rights of the people, improve the living conditions of the people and protect the national security and territorial integrity of the fatherland. "The urgent task and current specific program -- as noted by the Central Committee -- reflect the common aspirations of our people, and we support them with all our might. No matter what, the task of materializing these common aspirations constitutes an arduous struggle. On the one hand, we have to mount a tit-for-tat struggle against the reactionary policies of the Kuala Lumpur and Singapore governments, while on the other, we must carry out a resolute struggle against the infiltration and subversion of our country by Soviet-Vietnamese hegemonism; these two kinds of struggle have to be combined.

"In carrying out the urgent task and the current specific program, our people must (?concentrate their activities) in the rural areas, turning the countryside and the jungle into a base area for the launching a wide-scale guerrilla warfare. This means that we must (?unswervingly) pursue the path of using the countryside to encircle the cities and seize political power by armed force."

We must defend and develop various kinds of struggle, particularly the armed struggle. "Without a people's army, the people have nothing." To develop the armed struggle, we must expand the armed forces and hold firmly to the "strategic guidelines on active defense." We must mobilize the masses so as to "build a powerful people's force."

The policy pursued by the Kuala Lumpur and Singapore cliques only benefits a handful of big comprador bureacrats and landlords and harms the oppressed. With serious problems and contradictions throughout the country and discontent among the masses, the conditions are favorable for the development of mass movements.

We must organize the masses in various fields and encourage the them to launch all types of struggle to defend social justice and the interests of the masses. "To win the struggle, our people must (?foster) the strength of revolutionary organizations and the working class, such as laborers, peasants and the lower level petit bourgeois and win over the middle bourgeois, the upper level petit bourgeois and the parties representing their interests." At the same time, we must fight the reactionaries, "particularly the extreme rightists who are pro-Soviet and pro-Vietnam." Our people must eradicate racial prejudices, encourage people of all nationalities to trust and respect each other and fight the reactionary policies. "We must hold aloft the banner of patriotism and democracy, endeavor to develop patriotic and democratic movements, struggle to establish a democratic coalition [Campuran] government, defend the immediate interests of the people and oppose Soviet-Vietnamese hegemonism."

Let us be strongly united, develop the armed struggle and continue the struggle with full confidence. Our path of struggle is full of twists and turns, but our cause is a just one and is bound to win.

LEE KUAN YEW CALLS FOR U.S. NAVAL, AIR PRESENCE

BK011600 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 1 Feb 82

[Text] Mr Lee Kuan Yew says an American naval and air presence is required in Southeast Asia to forestall Soviet intimidation. The prime minister says the United States must ensure that the Soviet Union, either on its own or through its surrogate, Vietnam, is not allowed to dominate or intimidate Southeast Asia with its military might. While China can be a counterweight to keep Soviet forces tied down on the eastern border, the balance in Southeast Asia should not be complicated by bringing Chinese forces into this region.

In an interview with the U.S. NEWS AND WORLD REPORT, Mr Lee points out that the United States now has only one fleet covering both the western Pacific and the Indian Ocean. At some stage it will need another fleet for the Indian Ocean. He says the Strait of Malacca lends this area great strategic importance. The strait is one of the five strategic choke points of the world, besides Gibraltar, Suez and the Panama Canal and the Cape of Good Hope. He maintains that they must never become chokable by the Soviets.

Beyond the military projection, he says, the United States should increase its trade and investment in Southeast Asia to counter potential threats. Subversion, disaffection and revolution only take place where there is economic stagnation and decline.

As to the danger posed by Hanoi, Mr Lee says that, for the present, with China squatting on Vietnam's northern border and the Khmer Rouge and the Khmer People's National Liberation Front harassing Vietnamese forces in Kampuchea, the danger of Vietnamese expansionism is contained. In his view, Vietnamese expansion can only be through Soviet power. Vietnam has no industrial base to provide it with the weaponry to fulfill its expansionist ambition. Therefore, it is only if conditions become favorable for the Soviets to funnel in more hardware that the threat can become much greater than at present. He (?says) that at the moment the Soviet Union has Vietnam fairly low down on its list of worries.

As to whether Vietnam is moving toward normalization of relations with the United States, Mr Lee says the Vietnamese leaders are master manipulators of the mass media. They believe that they can coerce the U.S. administration into normalization and then into giving aid in place of the reparation they believe they are entitled to. He says they will eventually learn that they must first have to withdraw from Kampuchea before they get normalization, economic aid and investment.

On U.S. attempts to enter into strategic cooperation with Beijing, Mr Lee agrees that China can be a part of the balance in east and northeast Asia without causing concern in Southeast Asia. If, however, America on its own cannot match increasing Soviet influence in Southeast Asia and has to bring China into the balance, that will be cause for concern. He points out that there are several countries in Southeast Asia with endemic guerrilla groups led by Chinese ideologically loyal to China. Malaysia and Indonesia have a long and unfortunate experience in this regard.

Turning to the possibility of a military role for Japan, Mr Lee says a few countries in the region may be apprehensive that Japan may play too active a military role in Southeast Asian waters again. Their memories of the Second World War are still strong. He sees no cause for concern so long as Japan confines itself to a naval role in the western Pacific and the northern part of the China Sea and does not include Southeast Asia in its patrol.

In the longer term, if the United States cannot maintain its world position as anchorman of the noncommunist world and cannot sustain Japan's confidence that America is a totally dependable ally when a great threat appears, he fears Japan will go in for total self-defense which must logically include nuclear weapons. That, says Mr Lee, will not be in the interest of world peace and stability.

UK FOREIGN AFFAIRS SECRETARY ARRIVES ON VISIT

Meeting With Lee Kuan Yew

BK091129 Singapore Domestic Service in English 1100 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Text] The visiting British foreign secretary, Lord Carrington, this afternoon called on Mr Lee Kuan Yew at the Istana [Palace]. He had earlier paid a courtesy call on President Devan Nair and had a working lunch with the minister for trade and industry, Dr Tony Tan.

In his talks with the foreign minister, Mr Dhanabalan this morning, Lord Carrington gave the assurance that Britain will support efforts by ASEAN to achieve a political settlement in Kampuchea. Lord Carrington said Britain would back the ASEAN stand at the UN and other international forums at which Britain was represented.

Remarks on Kampuchea

conference at the British High Commission in Singapore this evening that Britain also supported moves by ASEAN to set up a third force in Kampuchea to a loose coalition between the Khmer Rouge and two major noncommunist resistance forces. In reply to a question, the British minister said he had found no differences of opinion within ASEAN about the moves and policies toward Kampuchea. On his ASEAN tour, Lord Carrington said he had been particularly struck by the strength and the bonds within the ASEAN countries and the cooperation between them. He said the very fact that ASEAN exists in this part of the world has made it the most (?favored) and most prosperous part of the world.

Earlier, the British minister had talks with Mr Lee Kuan Yew and other Singapore leaders.

MAHATHIR'S 'WARNING' TO KHMER ROUGE VIEWED

BK080923 Singapore THE STRAITS TIMES in English 6 Feb 82 p 14

[Editorial: "Get On With It or Else..."]

[Text] One thing that few people will dispute about Malaysian Prime Minister Datuk Sri Dr Mahathir Mohamed: He is one who speaks his mind. Thus, it should come as no surprise that the Malaysian leader has let it be known that his government might consider withdrawing support for the Khmer Rouge at the United Nations.

Dr Mahathir's stern warning is no doubt meant to serve notice on the Khmer Rouge, as well as its patron, China, that they cannot prevaricate and continue their foot-dragging over the ASEAN proposal of a loose coalition among the three main anti-Vietnamese resistance groups. The coalition is, after all, an idea to which it eagerly subscribed last September, though it has since hemmed and hawed and called for further negotiations.

It has been obvious for some time that the Khmer Rouge has been backing away from the coalition idea, an arrangement that would allow each faction to retain its own identity within the loose association. This has occurred at a time when its guerrilla forces have been enjoying some successes against the Vietnamese troops in Cambodia.

Western analysts say that the Pol Pot guerrillas are at their strongest since the Vietnamese ousted them nearly three years ago. This estimate may well be true, but the Khmer Rouge seems to have forgotten that much of the international support it now still retains in the UN is due largely to ASEAN diplomatic efforts since 1979.

Dr Mahathir's warning to the Khmer Rouge could not have come sooner in view of its obduracy. There is little doubt that it is not just Malaysia, but also the other ASEAN members, whose patience is being tried. It is time that someone tells the Khmer Rouge a few blunt truths: that it cannot have the cake and eat it. The same notice is also being served on China. If Beijing is sincere about getting the Cambodian anti-Vietnamese resistance groups together, then it should try and use its influence with the Khmer Rouge.

Dr Mahathir's displeasure with the Khmer Rouge might well gladden the Vietnamese, for whom nothing can be more welcome news than to see ASEAN wash its hands of the Cambodian anti-Vietnamese resistance groups. But Hanoi is mistaken if it thinks that the Malaysian premier's statement is a sign that it is ready to abandon the coalition idea. Far from signaling a loss of interest in the Cambodian issue, Dr Mahathir's warning is, in fact, a get-tough measure to the Khmer Rouge to get on with the business to which it and the other resistance groups have committed themselves -- that of mounting a coordinated anti-Vietnamese struggle with the aim of letting the Cambodian people decide their own future once they are freed of Vietnamese occupation. Otherwise, ASEAN will have to consider other options.

ECONOMIC TALKS WITH ROK TO BE HELD 18-19 FEB

OW101121 Tokyo KYODO in English 1112 GMT 10 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 10 (KYODO) -- Japan and South Korea will hold another round of working-level talks in Tokyo February 18-19 on Seoul's request for a dollar 6 billion loan from Japan, the Japanese Foreign Ministry said Wednesday. The meeting, the second of its kind, follows talks held in the South Korean capital January 14-16. South Korea asked Japan last August to extend the massive loan to finance its 1982-1986 economic development plan.

During the January meeting, South Korean officians explained 11 projects to be carried out under the plan, chiefly infrastructural improvement like housing and schoolhouse construction.

South Korea has been reluctant to hold a second round of talks, urging the Japanese Government to make a political decision and present a specific figure for what it would be prepared to loan. At the upcoming meeting, Japan will study the projects in further depth, ministry officials said.

U.S. OFFICIAL: JAPAN SHOULD AID ROK MILITARILY

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 10 (KYODO) -- U.S. Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Policy Richard G. Stilwell Wednesday called on Japan to consider extending military assistance to South Korea. The retired general is in Japan as part of an official tour of several Asian countries including South Korea and the Philippines.

He suggested that Japan could help South Korea's military effort without contravening the Japanese Constitution. He stressed the importance of collective security, stating that it was now more necessary than ever to meet the growing military threat from the Soviet Union.

Noting that American defense expenditure would rise 17.9 percent in Fiscal 1983 over the previous fiscal year, he cited the Soviet Union's increasing military strength and said America must have the ability to send troops immediately to any threatened region, in order to protect the free world. He said that all the major Western bloc countries should be prepared to share this burden.

OKINAWA GOVERNOR VISITS TOKYO FOR TALKS ON BASES

[Text] Naha, Feb 8 (KYODO) -- Junji Nishime, governor of Okinawa Prefecture, Monday flew to Tokyo to urge the government and the U.S. forces in Japan to reduce the scale of U.S. bases in Okinawa and to guarantee safety measures against accidents caused by U.S. military drills.

Nishime will visit Soichiro Ito, director general of the Defense Agency, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield in Tokyo from 10:30 a.m. Tuesday. He will strongly request early return and reduction in scale of U.S. bases in Okinawa and reexamination of U.S. military drills that have caused many accidents. In his written request, which he will hand to the government and U.S. authorities Tuesday, Nishime stresses that U.S. military bases that take up 11 percent of the prefecture's entire land area have been greatly preventing industrial promotion and urbanization of Okinawa.

STEEL PLATE TALKS WITH USSR TO OPEN IN MARCH

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 10 (KYODO) -- A team of officials from Nippon Steel Corp. and other companies will visit Moscow late this month to open talks on steel plate shipments, industry sources said Wednesday.

The talks on annual shipments are taking place amid concern over a fresh American embargo against the Soviet Union. The Japanese companies are, nevertheless, taking a somewhat optimistic view about actions the Japanese Government will possibly take in concert with Washington. There are indications that Japanese commercial bank credits would be left intact. The companies are optimistically expecting the forthcoming talks to provide them with an opportunity to sound out Soviet officials on their intention on financing arrangement.

Late last month, the Soviets asked Japanese companies to extend periods of payment for their imports of steel and other commodities from Japan. However, the request, which apparently reflected a Soviet shortage of foreign exchange reserves, met a negative response from the Japanese.

For shipments of 400,000 tons of plates between last October and next July, the Japanese provided a five-year supplier's credit at an interest rate of 7.25 percent. The Japanese hope to continue the shipments at a monthly rate of 40,000 tons, unchanged from the present pace.

The preliminary talks, in all likelihood, will continue off-again, on-again through next April at the earliest as in the past years and reach a crucial stage around May. The plates will be processed into tubular steel at Soviet mills.

PRC SEEKS FIRST IMPORT OF SMALL STEEL BARS

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 9 (KYODO) -- China is seeking to import small steel bars from Japan on credit for the first time ever, government officials said Tuesday. The Chinese approach is heartening Japanese steel mills as their efforts have thus far failed to have bars included in a Chinese shopping list to be covered by Japanese commodity loans. Japan has pledged a yen 20 billion (dollar 87 million) commodity loan to China, the second for fiscal 1981, ending next month.

Electric furnace steel mills are expecting the Chinese order to have a favorable psychological impact at least on the still depressed reinforcing steel bar market. Still uncertain, however, is the quantity of steel bars the Chinese are intending to buy with the loan from the Japanese Government-run Overseas Economic Cooperation Fund.

Last December, the Japanese Government granted a yen 40 billion (dollar 174 million) commodity loan to China as part of yen 300 billion (dollar 1.3 billion) in credits for Chinese industrial development projects. With the first loan, China is to import steel products other than bars, along with fertilizer, machinery, textile and other commodities.

PETROCHEMICAL FIRM REJECTS IRAN PLANT INVESTMENT

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 10 (KYODO) -- Iran Chemical Development Co. (ICDC) of Tokyo Wednesday sent a letter to Iran's National Petrochemical Co. (NPC), again rejecting the latter's request for additional investments in the stalled Iran-Japan joint petrochemical project in Southern Iran. In the letter to NPC President Mostafa Taheri from ICDC President Karoku Yamaguchi, ICDC reiterated that it cannot comply with the Iranian request, because the project is no longer profitable in the wake of the Iran-Iraq war. The letter also said that there is no prospect for a stable supply of low-cost petrochemical materials like naphtha, according to ICDC sources.

Iran's NPC has been persistent in demanding additional ICDC investments for the project in Bandar Khomeyni, south of Tehran, although the Japanese investment company rejected the demand in both December and January.

Meanwhile, monetary sources said Iran Wednesday repaid part of the principal and interest -- yen 12.5 billion (dollar 53.2 million) -- on funds borrowed from Japanese banks, including the governmental Export-Import Bank of Japan. This is the first time that Iran has repaid principal on borrowed funds, the sources said. This, they said, indicates that NPC, a subsidiary of National Iranian Oil Co. and the Iranian partner in the project, strongly hopes to resume the project with the cooperation of ICDC, a joint subsidiary of five firms of the Mitsui business group. The project, calling for construction of a giant petro-chemical complex in Bandar Khomeyni, was commenced in 1972, but it has been suspended since Iran's Islamic revolution.

JSP ELECTS NEW SECRETARY GENERAL AT CONGRESS

OKD61145 Tokyo KYODO in English 1136 GMT 6 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo Feb 6 (KYODO) -- The Japan Socialist Party elected Noboru Baba as new party secretary general Saturday, replacing Shinnen Tagaya in the No. 2 post. The 56-year-old member of the House of Representatives was elected on the closing day of the No. 1 opposition party's three-day national convention.

The former high school teacher served as leader of a teacher's union in Kumamoto and vice president of the Japan Teachers' Union before being elected to the lower house in1972. A backer of party leader Ichio Asukata, he has been reelected to the house three times.

The convention also confirmed Asukata as chairman for two more years in his third consecutive term. Asukata, who resigned as mayor of Yokohama in 1977 to take over the chairmanship, won an election for the leadership last December with the support of party leftwingers. The socialists also elected former Secretary General Masashi Ishibashi and Dietwoman Sumiko Tanaka was vice chairmen.

Party rightwingers opposed to Asukata refused to join the Central Executive Committee, the party's top policy-making body, in protest over the party leader's choice of Baba for the secretary general post. They said the No. 2 post should not have gone to an Asukata backer in the interests of party unity. Pro- and anti-Asukata groups held a series of backstage negotiations, but failed to reach an agreement before pro-Asukata forces forced a vote on Baba's nomination.

At the close of the convention, the party declared that it has completed preparations to fight for peace, the abolishment of nuclear weapons, the protection of Japan's war-renouncing constitution and disarmament. The declaration said the socialist party would demand that the government carry out a yen 1 trillion ($4.3 billion) tax reduction.

At the peak of national tragedy, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song rose as the great sun of the nation pioneering the future of the Korean revolution and led our people to victory.

The creation of the chuche idea by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song was a great event which gave birth to a true guidance ideology of our times. The victories which our people have won in accomplishing the sacred tasks of national liberation, class liberation and human liberation are the noble fruition of the great chuche idea.

Backwardness and poverty were eliminated in a brief historic period and a great miracle was brought about in the fatherland, bringing on great national prosperity and growth. This is clear evidence of the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

The path traversed by the Korean revolution was one of arduous struggle, full of trials which defy description. After going through the countless trials of the revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, with extraordinary energy, is still ceaselessly conducting on-the-spot guidance throughout the nation and vigorously awakening our people to the struggle to implement the far-reaching socialist construction plan unfolded by the sixth party congress.

Since the first day of the nation's division, which was caused by the occupation of South Korea by the U.S. imperialists, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has always considered the reunification of the fatherland as the supreme task of the nation, vigorously carried out the struggle to accomplish this task and, with the idea of independence, friendship and peace, wisely led the struggle to consolidate international solidarity with our revolution.

The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has brought the people's centuries-long desires and aspirations into full bloom and is energetically leading socialist construction so as to provide even greater happiness for the people. Thanks to this, our people, who were once deprived of their basic human rights and their human dignity and suffered humiliation and maltreatment, could have a true political life advancing along the road of rewarding revolution. They now enjoy endless happiness under the socialist system in which everything serves the masses of the working people.

For the future of the country and nation, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song considered it a most important task to strengthen and develop our party -- the headquarters of the revolution -- and has made every effort to this end. It is entirely due to the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song that our party has been strengthened as a great party with an organizational and ideological foundation as firm as a rock, one which can guarantee the future of the Korean revolution.

The KWP is the organizer and promoter of victories of our people; it is their guide. At the same time, it is a banner of the fatherland's endless prosperity and of the happiness of the coming generations. With a great plan to accelerate the realization of a communist paradise on this soil, our party is organizing and leading the struggle to complete the chuche revolutionary cause.

Thanks to the leadership of our party, the power organ of the republic -- the revolutionary power organ of the workers and farmers -- has been incomparably strengthened and unprecedented upsurges are being brought about in revolution and construction. Indeed, the shining victories won during the course of the Korean revolution and the epocal changes in the situation of our fatherland and natiion -- all have been brought about by the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song.

TALKS WITH JAPAN TO FOCUS ON AID REQUEST

[Text] Seoul, Feb 10 (YONHAP) -- South Korea and Japan agreed to hold the second preliminary meeting of ranking officials in Tokyo Feb. 18-19 to help pave the way for a foreign ministers' conference of the two neighboring countries, the Foreign Ministry announced Wednesday afternoon. Seoul and Tokyo held the first preliminary meeting in Seoul last month. The Tokyo meeting is expected to focus on the 11 projects the Korean side has earlier mentioned in connection with its six billion dollar loan request as well as on its commodity loan request, a source here said. Both sides eventually expected to discuss the timing of the foreign ministers' conference, the source said.

The members for the delegations have not yet been decided, but a couple of bureau director-level economic officials are expected to attend the Tokyo meeting because the Japanese side wants their ranking economic officials, in addition to their Foreign Ministry officials, to participate in the preliminary meeting.

The Korean side will offer additional details regarding the 11 projects and the commodity loan request if the Japanese side requests, but the additional information will "not go beyond the bounds of necessity to clear the way for a political settlement of the loan request," a diplomatic source said.

The source said "the scope of the economic cooperation is something that should be settled politically at the foreign minsters' conference expected in March and a summit meeting thereafter." He added that the Tokyo meeting will "not touch on the specific details of the economic cooperation," saying the second meeting will be a working-level consultation primarily designed to set the stage for a "political settlement."

U.S. STRATEGY TOWARD NORTHEAST ASIA APPLAUDED

[Editorial: "The Korean Peninsula and U.S. Strategy Toward the Soviet Union -- Meaning of the Annual Reports by Reagan and Weinberger to the Congress"]

[Excerpts] For a long time the Korean Peninsula and the Persian Gulf have been rated among the world's most strained regions. In this connection, the Soviet Union has recently augmented its SS-20 nuclear missiles and Backfire bombers along the Sino-Soviet border area. Consequently, owing to such a Soviet military buildup there and North Korea's capabilities for a surprise attack along the DMZ, there is no sign that the situation in the Northeast Asian area, including that on the Korean Peninsula, will be eased.

North-South relations are entering a more complicated phase because of the North Korean side's rejection of President Chon Tu-hwan's 22 January proposal for enacting a unification constitution and of the 1 February 20-point proposal -- a program for implementing President Chon's proposal. In view of this, the positive U.S. stance for supporting the ROK, which has been expressed in U.S. President Reagan's budget and Defense Secretary Weinberger's annual defense report to the Congress, is much more meaningful.

What particularly draws our attention is that Secretary Weingerger pointed out clearly in his defense report that the North Korean puppets have remarkably strengthened their capability for launching a surprise attack,while laying emphasis on preparations for irregular warfare by hardening army, navy and air force facilities near the DMZ and by digging underground tunnels.

It is very encouraging that President Reagan's State of the Union message revealed that the United States has been mapping out, in a concrete and effective manner, ROK-U.S. joint strategic countermeasures to cope with the North Korean side's schemes for reinforcing its military strength, within the context of the powerful U.S. strategy toward the Soviet Union. It is estimated that there is a crisis in the U.S. Soviet balance of military power in the present international situation. Moreover, the Reagan administration has had bitter experience with discord and dissonance among the Western allies in coping with the Polish situation in spite of its strong desire to exercise leadership. The way to restore U.S. leadership is to build a powerful military power structure and to confirm, in particular, its traditional policy position of effectively holding in check the spread of North-South tension on the Korean Peninsula in the Northeast Asian region.

Since the middle of the 1970's, the U.S. Government has had a strategic concept of deploying rapid deployment forces to troubled areas in the world. To implement this plan, the "Team Spirit" exercises are conducted annually on the Korean Peninsula.

The United States has confirmed its plan to supply the ROK with high-performance F-16 fighters to offset the military balance with the North. This can be interpreted as meaning that the United States has been giving careful consideration to the question of coping with heightened tension resulting from the threatening reinforcement of Soviet military strength in the Far East as well as of deterring a military crisis on the Korean Peninsula. This fact is significant in that, in parallel with the strengthening of the Reagan administration's concrete strategy toward the Soviet Union, the United States has more realistically recognized the role of our country's military position in the context of the situation on the Korean Peninsula in coping with the reinforcement of Soviet Far Eastern forces. Since our government's peace initiative efforts for easing tension on the Korean Peninsula have been frustrated because of the North Korean puppet's insincerity and untruthfulness, it is expected that the internal situation on the Korean Peninsula will be further strained and a crisis of confrontation will deepen owing to the aggravation of the military situation outside and around the Korean Peninsula. It is feared that the more North Korea leans toward military adventurism, the more the potential crisis in the military situation outside the Korean Peninsula will develop into a realistic problem.

What is important is that we should wisely cope with the rapid change of the situation on the Korean Peninsula, at a time when the Reagan administration has further resolved to confront the Soviet Union and has been working out policies for implementing this. Reagan's world strategy and his strategy toward the Korean Peninsula are significant not only in the interest of traditional ROK-U.S. ties but also in light of a new global strategy in connection with our nation's desire for unification after the 1980's. At this juncture, our government and people are urged to be further resolved to have a more positive sense of independence and self-defense.

FURTHER REPORTS ON NATIONAL ASSEMBLY SESSION

Closing of Session

[Summary] An important political event has been taking place in Phnom Penh since 5 February 1982. It is the Second Session of the First National Assembly. This event was welcomed by our people and many friendly countries in the world. Our people know that during the past 5 days, the National Assembly's delegates in 20 electorates worked actively to examine and analyze reports in the economic, cultural, educational, health and social fields in 1981 and (?to adopt directives for) 1982 aimed at defending and constructing the Kampuchean fatherland which is advancing step by step through the transition period toward genuine socialism. Also, by arming itself with the spirit of defending the people's rights and freedom, the National Assembly examined and adopted laws on the organization of the National Assembly and the Council of State, as well as a number of issues. [sentence as heard -- without Council of Ministers mentioned]

With their brilliant successes and the spirit of solidarity and unity around the KPRP, on the morning of 10 February all members of the National Assembly organized the closing ceremony ending their work in a solemn atmosphere. Members of the National Assembly, ambassadors accredited to the PRK and national and foreign reporters and TV cameramen attended.

At 0800 the presidium arrived and were greeted with (?long) applause by those in attendence. "The presidium included Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee and chairman of the Council of State; Comrade Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the National Assembly and chairman of the National Council of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD]; Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers; Comrade Say Phuthang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of State and chairman of the party's Central Organization Commission; Comrade Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the party's Central Propaganda and Education Commission, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, minister of national defense and vice chairman of the National Council of the KUFNCD; Comrade Chea Soth, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning; and six members of the National Assembly."

Later, Comrade Hor Nam Hong, vice minister of foreign affairs, explained the significance of the PRK-MPR treaty of friendship and cooperation in order to submit it for examination and ratification. The comrade vice minister indicated that this treaty was signed during the visit of a high-ranking Kampuchean delegation led by Comrade Heng Samrin to the MPR from 8 to 12 December 1981. The two parties also signed a cultural agreement, but only the treaty of friendship and cooperation required ratification. This treaty deals with cooperation between the PRK and MPR in the diplomatic and political fields. It also deals with the economic, cultural, health, and sports fields, among others. When this treaty is ratified, there will be further agreements to be implemented in each field. After Hor Nam Hong's report, all members of the National Assembly unanimously ratified this treaty.

Afterward, Comrade Vandy Kaon, Legislative Committee chairman, read the draft law on organization of the Council of Ministers and judicial hierarchy. Members of the National Assembly unanimously passed these two bills.

Later, Comrade Khieu Kanharith, representative of the session Secretariat, read a letter of support for the session sent by cadres of the Council of Ministers cabinet. All employees and cadres of the Council of Ministers cabinet highly praised the National Assembly for its work.

Afterward Comrade Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly, announced the results of the voting which elected the Council of Ministers chairman and vice chairman in charge of the National Defense Ministry:

"1. Comrade Chan Si is chairman of the Council of Ministers;
2. Comrade Bou Thang is vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of national defense."

Later Comrade Chea Sim presented the following closing speech at the Second Session of the First National Assembly: [Begin recording] "Today we have satisfactorily achieved our duty during the Second Session of the First National Assembly. During this session, the National Assembly examined reports and various projects submitted by the Council of Ministers on economic and cultural tasks in 1981 and economic and cultural targets in 1982. The National Assembly adopted three bills on the organization and activities of our highest state institutions: The law on the organization of the National Assembly and the Council of State; the law on the organization of the Council of Ministers; and the law on tribunal and public prosecutors. Additionally, the National Assembly elected state leaders." It analyzed and summed up the results in implementing tasks in the economic and cultural fields and agreed with remarks of the Council of Ministers. During the past 3 years following liberation, we have scored many great successes in all fields, which are evidence of the development of our people and Kampuchea's revival. We have established normal conditions for the national economy and production, distribution and transportation of goods, which have initially stabilized the people's lives. There is a new aspect to our entire society which clearly warrants the best efforts of our new regime. (?These include) achievements scored by workers, peasants, cadres, the armed forces, intellectuals and people from all strata during the past years.

"All comrade members of the National Assembly participated in many discussions for the prosperous future of their country and [words indistinct] in the implementing their economic and cultural duties in 1982.

"Beloved comrades and friends, due to the rapid and powerful development of our country's revolution, all the reactionary forces have panicked and, although they have been successively defeated, are exerting further efforts to create tension along the border and are continuing to send commandos into our country. They are continuing their guerrilla activities and their psychological warfare, espionage and sabotage tactics, hoping to oppress the people, undermine the economy and create insecurity. The struggle between us and the enemies is more complex. We have justice, the correct line of the party and the revolution. We have the dynamic people's forces, in addition to the militant solidarity and cooperation with the Vietnamese and Lao revolutions and good will assistance of the Soviet Union, fraternal socialist countries, friendly countries near and far, (?liberation organizations) and progressive nations and countries throughout the world. Therefore, we will always win over the reactionary forces [words indistinct].

"Beloved comrade members, the tasks of building the economy and developing culture must be linked with the tasks of strengthening the national defense forces, building the armed forces in all fields, heightening vigilance, increasing combat strength, ensuring political security and social order and crushing all the slanderous words and subversive activities of the enemies.

"After this National Assembly session, when you return to your localities, would you please report to the people on the important work that we accomplished during this session. You should encourage the people and participate with them (?in implementing the successes of this session), strengthening solidarity and exerting efforts in their production work for the success of the construction of an independent, peaceful, free and prosperous Kampuchea progressively advancing toward socialism.

"I would like to declare the Second Session of the First National Assembly closed." [applause] [end recording]

Afterward, 12 Pioneers presented bouquets of flowers to the presidium to express their joy at the great results of the session and also as evidence of greetings to the presidium, the honorary guests and all members of the National Assembly. Later, the flag ceremony marked the closing of the session.

KAMPUCHEA Editorial

[Text] Phnom Penh, 10 Feb (SPK) -- The Second Session of the National Assembly held in Phnom Penh from 5 to 10 February unanimously adopted resolutions in the interest of the nation and people, thereby showing again that the progressive and revolutionary character of our National Assembly differs from that of the exploiting classes, which serves only their own interests, said the journal KAMPUCHEA in an editorial.

The journal went on: The economic and cultural report presented at the National Assembly showed encouraging successes and formulated projects for development in 1982. These projects are reasonable and scientific. We all are assigned a common task in the implementation of this economic and cultural plan, which is aimed at improving our people's material and cultural lives.

The laws adopted by the National Assembly have confirmed and strengthened the legality of our socialist state. They serve as a guide in the application of the political line of the party and state and of other measures aimed at ensuring a peaceful life and stability for the people and in the struggle against injustice. This new progress of the Kampuchean revolution has been heartily acclaimed by the Kampuchean people throughout the country and by friends throughout the world. From this progress one understands that the Kampuchean revolution is ready not only to fight the enemies firmly, but also to defend and respect civil rights and rebuild a new society in which the workers' rights and democratic freedoms are ensured.

We are now still faced with numerous difficulties left by the old regime. U.S. imperialism, Chinese expansionism and their lackeys are striving to provoke instability vis-a-vis our regime, but we shall overcome them. The Kampuchean revolution is irreversible, the journal concluded.

AFP: HUN SEN DENIES SRV TROOPS THREATEN THAILAND

NC101254 Paris AFP in English 1310 GMT 10 Feb 82

[Text] Paris, 10 Feb (AFP) -- Thai participation in a "regional conference" on Cambodia, sought by Phnom Penh, would not necessarily oblige Bangkok to recognize the Heng Samrin government, Cambodian Foreign Minister Hun Sen said here.

In an interview today in the French Communist Party newspaper L'HUMANITE, Hun Sen, who is also a member of the Secretariat of the Central Committee of the pro-Soviet People's Revolutionary Party, denied that Vietnamese troops in Cambodia posed any threat to Thailand. The foreign minister said that the only threat came from Thailand's supplying with arms and food groups of "reactionary Khmers" in the aim of destroying Cambodia. He added that should Bangkok respond to Cambodian proposals, including a plan for an internationally-guaranteed demilitarized zone, Phnom Penh would discuss with Hanoi the reduction of Vietnamese troops stationed on its territory. Hun Sen said he wanted to emphasize that even "the establishment of relations with Thailand" would not necessarily involve recognition of his government.

Questioned on his government's relations with France, Hun Sen said that "good signs" were coming from Paris, and listed above all France's failure to recognize the ousted Khmer Rouge regime -- which retains the Cambodian seat in the United Nations. France recognizes neither the Khmer Rouge nor the Heng Samrin government. Hun Sen added that if France backed Association of Southeast Asian Nation (ASEAN) plans, involving the setting up of a coalition government in Cambodia, it would be "on the wrong track."

He closed the interview saying that he believed France was considering "a foreign policy towards Southeast Asia independent of ASEAN." He repeated Cambodia's criticism of ASEAN -- made up of Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand -- for "thinking peace involves the overthrow of the Phnom Penh regime."

The delegation was in France to attend the 24th French Communist Party Congress, VNA reports.

Hun Sen reviewed the situation in Kampuchea which, he said, is irreversible. He stressed that the militant solidarity among the three Indochinese peoples is unshakable, and that Kampuchea's policy seeks to establish normal relations with neighboring Thailand so as to turn Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability, friendship and cooperation.

Chairman Heng Samrin expressed deep thanks to the SED and the people of the GDR for their material and moral aid to the Kampuchean party and people. The film "Angkar" that the SED presented to the KPRP, Chairman Heng Samrin said, shows to world opinion the rebirth of Kampuchea and the crimes of the genocidal Pol Pot regime.

The film denounced the leaders of Democratic Kampuchea for having covered up with the hammer and sickle the atrocities of their blood-thirsty regime at the instigation of the Beijing expansionists. The film makes us see what took place in the minds of the unprecedented Democratic Kampuchean leaders who, after joining the Communist Party of Kampuchea, began to eliminate such partisans of the Kampuchean revolution as Acha Mean, Keo Mani and Keo Mean; who, during nearly 4 years of their rule, massacred more than 3 million Kampucheans; and who unleashed a war of aggression against Vietnam with arms and ammunition supplied by China.

The massacre of 3 million Kampucheans and the destruction of all state institutions have been noted by the entire world. The Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique, representatives of a Democratic Kampuchea without territory or population, has managed to occupy Kampuchea's legitimate seat at the United Nations. Is there justice only on paper? During an interview with John Climes, specialist on Indochinese questions of the White House, Ieng Sary stubbornly denied that he had ever committed these barbarous crimes, and blamed them on Vietnam. Then, does the Tuol Sleng school prison belong to Vietnam? Are the documents found in this place of torture not enough to prove the guilt of Democratic Kampuchea's leaders?

SIANG PASASON Editorial

[SIANG PASASON Editorial: "Wholeheartedly Pay Tribute to and Welcome the Soviet Military Delegation for Paying a Friendship Visit to our Country" -- date not given]

[Text] On 10 February, at the invitation of the LPDR National Defense Ministry, the military delegation of the Soviet Union led by Comrade Nikolay Vasilyevich Ogarkov, marshal of the USSR, member of the CPSU Central Committee, chief of General Staff of the Soviet Armed Forces and first deputy minister of national defense, begins an official visit to our country. The delegation brings with it the great joy and encouragement, militant solidarity and friendship of the Soviet people and armed forces to the Lao Army and people at a time when all our people are persevering and striving to fulfill all difficult and complicated tasks in the struggle to defend and build our country. We welcome the Soviet military delegation -- our close comrades in arms -- who are the representatives of the heroic and triumphant armed forces of the land of the great Lenin -- the armed forces which have fought gallantly for more than half a century.

We are especially proud of the Soviet Armed Forces -- the first modern army of the proletariat -- which were educated and trained by the great Lenin and which have grown unprecedentedly strong. They have written glorious pages in the history of the revolution, during the civil war to topple the yoke of repression and exploitation of the czarist regime and in the history of World War II, to defend the country -- the first socialist nation in the world -- and to save mankind from the danger of fascism. We are proud of their resolute, arduous and persistent struggle for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

With the resounding victories and achievements recorded in the patriotic war and the struggle for peace, the Soviet Armed Forces have made noble contributions to the struggle of the Soviet people to defend their revolutionary gains and to build the socialist and communist society. The Soviet Armed Forces are the reliable forces of the Soviet people and the determined vanguard combatants of the epoch, and have opened a path toward socialist and communist society and built the Soviet Union into the most powerful country in the world. The Soviet Armed Forces are battle tested, equipped with modern (?weapons) and technology and have firmly grasped and continuously developed the modern military science of Marxism-Leninism. They are an excellent combat and national construction model for all armies of the proletariat and all oppressed countries in the world. They are the beloved children of the country of the great Lenin, which has possessed powerful economic and military foundations as well as modern technology and science.

The Soviet Armed Forces have now become a strong modern army and are strong enough to safeguard the fruits of the revolution of the Soviet people, to fulfill their esteemed international obligations, to defend the socialist community and world peace and to hold in check the scheme of the imperialists, led by the U.S. imperialists in collusion with the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists, to fervently oppose and sabotage the revolution and to create tension throughout the world.

The Lao and Soviet peoples and armed forces have maintained a lasting tradition of militant solidarity, which has been tested and tempered in the protracted revolutionary struggle to attain the esteemed objective of the epoch: peace, national independence, democracy and socialism. We are very proud of the solidarity and friendship between Laos and the Soviet Union, which are firmly and vigorously developing in all fields. We regard such solidarity and friendship as an important factor in building new strength for the Lao Army and people to score victories in the struggle to defend and build our country.

The Soviet Union rendered wholehearted support and assistance to our people during the period of resistance against the aggression of the U.S. imperialists. Now, at a time when our army and people are striving to defend and build our socialist country and to fight against imperialism, particularly the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists who have colluded with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces in implementing a scheme to weaken and swallow up our country, the Soviet people and armed forces continually render great support and assistance to the Lao revolution.

Greatly appreciating the great achievements and victories scored by the heroic Soviet people and armed forces, the Lao Army and people would once again like to extend our heartfelt welcome and tribute to the military delegation of the Soviet Union, who are our close comrades in arms. We are fully convinced that the friendship visit to our country by the delegation will further strengthen and consolidate the great friendship and close combat solidarity between the peoples and armed forces of our two countries. May the visit to our country by the military delegation of the Soviet Union be crowned with glorious success!

CRASH OF SRV AIRCRAFT NEAR BORDER REPORTED

[Text] According to the Public Relations Department correspondent assigned to the Aranyaprathet information center, at 1000 this morning a Thai radar station detected a violation of Thai airspace by an unidentified aircraft over Phong Nam Ron District, Chanthaburi Province. Thai Air Force planes were dispatched to intercept the intruding aircraft. At 1100 a unit of the 9th Division received reports from Sa Kaeo and Watthana Nakhon Districts that an aircraft had crashed near Ban Saeng Chan, Tambon Ban Kaeng, Sa Kaeo District, Prachin Buri. The aircraft which crashed was a Vietnamese two-engine transport aircraft, AN-26, serial number 26264. It was painted with a five-point red star on the left side of its tail. Its front section was damaged in the crash.

The provincial police of Tambon Ban Kaeng inspected the crash site and captured 13 Vietnamese soldiers — the highest-ranking being an air force captain — and a number of articles. Three of the captured Vietnamese soldiers were wounded, and one later died.

Villagers in the area disclosed that articles were thrown from the aircraft before it crashed. A later report said that an initial investigation revealed that the aircraft which crashed was traveling from Phnom Penh to Saigon. The officials of the 9th Division searched the aircraft and found that most of the articles on board were clothes, Samit 14 Thai cigarettes and seasoning powder. These articles were believed to have been bought from Thailand.

Ten Vietnamese soldiers are now under detention and interrogation by the authorities, and are being well cared for, while two are receiving treatment at the field hospital operated by the Japanese Government in Sa Kaeo District. The soldier who died has thus far not been identified.

Assistant Army Commander Gen Athit Kamlangek reportedly will inspect the crash site this afternoon.

AFP Report

BK111043 Hong Kong AFP in English 1027 GMT 11 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Bangkok, 11 Feb (AFP) -- Three Vietnamese soldiers were wounded and 10 others captured when their Soviet-made Antonov-26 transport plane crash-landed inside Thailand around noon today, apparently after an attack by Khmer Rouge guerrillas close to the Thai-Cambodian border, the Thai Army announced. Army spokesman Col Marudon Detpadiyut corrected initial reports that one person had been killed in the crash, which took place 50 kilometres (31 miles) inside the Thai border district of Sa Kaeo bordering with Cambodia. But he gave no further details on the 13 Vietnamese involved. He said the two-engine plane was believed to have come under fire from guerrillas loyal to ex-Khmer Rouge Premier Pol Pot in an area adjjacent to Thailand's Ta Phraya District, about 300 kilometres (187 miles) east of here.

SUPREME COMMAND RAPS SRV BORDER PROVOCATIONS

[Text] The office of the Supreme Command headquarters has reported that Vietnam has shown a constant violation of Thai sovereignty by firing mortar and artillery shells into Thai territory and revealing their intention of trying to provoke Thailand to take strong retaliatory action.

Thailand has long abided by the UN Charter, which calls on all member nations to refrain from the use of force against the territorial integrity of any state. The UN General Assembly's resolution on Kampuchea clearly indicated the right direction for a peaceful solution to the Kampuchean problem, which Thailand and ASEAN were pursuing. Vietnam, on the other hand, would like to create confusion on the Kampuchean problem. But this she will never succeed in doing. At the same time, Thai forces will be on the alert and ready to protect the sovereignty and independence of Thailand from aggression by the Vietnamese.

SUPREME COMMAND REPORTS ON BORDER FIGHTING

[Excerpt] According to the Supreme Command Information Office, clashes between Vietnamese and Khmer Rouge soldiers continue near the Thai-Kampuchean border. At 1200 on 4 February, a clash between Khieu Samphan and Vietnamese-Heng Samrin soldiers resulted in two rounds of heavy weapons landing near Ban Lang Khao Luang, Aranyaprathet District, Prachin Buri. Damage to the area is not known at present. Six other rounds landed on the Kampuchean side of the border. At 1750 on 4 February four Vietnamese 10-mm rockets landed south of Ban Sangae, Ta Phraya District. There was no damage to Thai property.

At 1430 on 5 February a Vietnamese aircraft violated Thai airspace south of Aranyaprathet District. The aircraft was a propellor-type with two engines. It flew at high speed and at very low altitude over Khlong Nam Sai, heading west to Ban Non Sao-e in Aranyaprathet District before turning back to Kampuchea.

GENERAL NOTES TWO NEW SRV DIVISIONS NEAR BORDER

[Text] Vietnam has committed two divisions of fresh troops to the battle against Khmer Rouge guerrillas entrenched in the rugged southwestern border, Supreme Command spokesman Lt Gen Som Khattaphan said last night. He added that large quantities of military supplies, including 155-mm artillery pieces which are similar to the biggest type in the Thai Army arsenal, and 120-mm mortars had been ferried up the Khlong Khluen river from the sea near Koh Kong Province to beef up Hanoi's firepower in the battle zone on the southwestern border.

Gen Som identified the two new divisions as the 75th and 52nd, and anticipated that fighting between the Vietnamese forces and the Khmer Rouge guerrillas would intensify and would go on for quite a long time.

The general said it was the first time that Hanoi had brought into action such a big gun as the 155-mm artillery piece. He added that 155-mm shells had slammed into the Thai side recently during fierce fighting with the guerrillas. He further disclosed that a Soviet-made Antonov-26 transport plane which was converted for reconnaissance missions had violated Thai airspace over Ban Khlong Nam Sai, south of Aranyaprathet, last Friday. He said he suspected the plane was making a reconnaissance flight over guerrilla camps in the Phnum Malai and Phnum Mak Huen regions. Gen Som maintained that Thai troops would not interfere in the fighting in Kampuchea, but would retaliate if they were shot at first or if shells were intentionally fired across the border.

Field military sources in Aranyaprathet said fighting raged yesterday near the border opposite the southern part of Aranyaprathet and across Ta Phraya District. More than 20 mortar shells and rockets believed fired by Vietnamese troops landed in the deserted village of San Nong Ian, south of Aranyaprathet.

Military sources said two unarmed Vietnamese troops yesterday fled across the border and were arrested by Thai troops.

At least 14 Khmer refugees have been injured in Vietnamese shelling during fighting since Tuesday night with the guerrillas close to Phnum Chhat Hill across Ta Phraya District. The injured were taken to a field hospital in Khao I-Dang holding centre for treatment. An official at Aranyaprathet hospital said a woman who was seriously injured in a shelling Tuesday died in the hospital yesterday, bringing the total death toll to three. Three village schools along the border close to the scene of the fighting were closed down for fear of stray shells. Villagers have built up bunkers close to their houses with help from the army.

Military sources disclosed that the two Vietnamese defectors were identified as Pvt Dong (25) and Pvt Duong (21), both of them natives of Saigon. They said that they were fed up with fighting and wanted to be resettled in a third country.

Meanwhile, in New York yesterday the Thai permanent representative in the United Nations issued a letter to be circulated as an official document of the General Assembly and the Security Council condemning Vietnamese shellings of Thai villages. The letter referred to two incidents on January 31 and February 1 during which many rounds of artillery and mortar shells and rockets fired by Vietnamese forces landed on Thai soil, killing two Thai villagers, seriously injuring four others and destroying four houses.

"These incidents constitute further evidence of blatant and premediated violations of Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity. The Thai Government strongly condemns these unprovoked and deliberate acts of hostility committed by the Vietnamese occupation forces in Kampuchea and reaffirms its legitimate rights to undertake all measures necessary to safeguard Thai sovereignty and territorial integrity," the letter said.

PREM, YI CHONG-OK BANQUET SPEECHES REPORTED

[Text] North Korean Prime Minister Yi Chong-ok last night said he was looking forward to closer cooperation and ties between Thailand and his country.

In a carefully worded speech at a dinner hosted by the Thai Government, the North Korean leader said if the two peoples promote friendship and solidarity and have closer economic cooperation, they can greatly contribute themselves to common prosperity and progress. He said that during sincere discussions between his delegates and the Thai counterparts, the two sides reached identity of views on expansion and development of the friendly and cooperative relations between the two countries. The North Korean leader also renewed his praise for the Thai effort to fulfill the just cause of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to realize peace, stability and neutrality in the region.

Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon said during the same dinner that there were still ample opportunities for the two countries to develop bilateral cooperation in various fields, especially in the economic area.

NATION: DPRK PROPOSAL TO UPGRADE TIES REJECTED

[Text] Thailand yesterday rejected the North Korean proposal to upgrade its trade representative office here to the embassy level, Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong said. The deputy foreign minister said after a meeting with his North Korean counterpart, Cho Kyu-il, that the Thai Government could not accept the proposal "because it is against international principles."

The deputy foreign minister had earlier said the Thai Government would turn down the proposal because it has insufficient budget and personnel for an embassy in the communist country. However, observers believe that "different ideologies" between the two governments was the main reason behind the Thai rejection aimed at keeping a distance from North Korea. The two countries established diplomatic relations in 1975, but they deal with each other on diplomatic matters through their respective embassies in Beijing and Rangoon.

Arun said the North Koreans voiced their support for the ASEAN-engineered call for the withdrawal of the Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and the noncommunist bloc efforts for the three Khmer resistance groups to form a loose coalition government. Apart from China, leader of a Khmer faction Prince Norodom Sihanouk is welcome in North Korea, where he usually spends a long time living in exile in the country pending a solution to the Kampuchean conflict.

The deputy foreign minister also said that Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon might visit North Korea after October at the invitation of his counterpart, Premier Yi Chong-ok.

Thailand and North Korea yesterday concluded an agreement to allow direct communications and postal services between the two countries, Communications Minister Adm Amon Sirikaya said yesterday. The deal, called the "Agreement on Communications and Postal Services Between Thailand the Democratic People's Republic of Korea," was signed by Amon and North Korean External Economic Affairs Minister Chong Song-nam at the Communications Ministry.

Amon said that prior to the conclusion of the agreement, communications and postal services between the two countries had to be made through a third country under the frame-work of the International Communications Union (ICU) and the International Postal Union (IPU). Pyongyang earlier proposed a draft agreement over the issue to Bangkok, but the Thai Government later counter-proposed another draft agreement in its version, which was finally accepted by the North Korean leadership.

PRC SAID TO BE WHIPPING UP ANTI-SRV PROPAGANDA

[Text] A new wave of anti-Vietnam campaign is being whipped up by Beijing. Fabrications have been made about Vietnamese artillery barrage on Chinese soil. On February 7 the official Chinese news agency XINHUA said that Vietnam was preparing a new aggression against Thailand. To make the story sound persuasive and to instigate some naive people, Beijing has pulled the strings for Bangkok to chime in. To this end, a news conference was recently called by the Thai Foreign Ministry which distributed documents on the so-called massive artillery attacks by Vietnamese forces on the Thai district of Aranyaprathet.

Why all this sudden and noisy slander? It should be noted that this new wave of slander campaign came in the wake of Vietnam's unilateral acting upon its proposal on the cessation by both sides of all armed actions during the Lunar New Year festival, and the Vietnamese note dated January 30 proposing a complete end to armed actions along the Sino-Vietnamese border and an early resumption of the Sino-Vietnamese talks unilaterally suspended by the Chinese side 2 years ago.

The fair and reasonable proposal of the Vietnamese side has been welcomed by the Chinese people and progressive public. This proposal conforms with the proposal of the United Nations secretary general on the maintenance of peace in the border region by China and Vietnam even after the Lunar New Year festival, thus contributing to peace and security in the region.

The Chinese leaders, however, have turned a deaf ear to this proposal. Beijing even steps up hostile actions against Vietnam and other countries in Indochina. Proof of these hostile actions is seen in artillery attacks and land grabbings along the border, Chinese military support for the remnants of Pol Pot troops in sabotage activities in Kampuchea, and the arrangement for a coming meeting in Beijing between Pol Pot, Ieng Sary, Sihanouk and Son Sann to accelerate the setting up of the so-called tripartite coalition government. Their aim is to wreck the resurrection of Kampuchea.

Lately the commander in chief of the Royal Thai Army, Gen Saiyut Koetphon, hinted of China's effort in drawing Thailand into a war with her neighbor. This sheds more light on Beijing's sabotage of peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

What Beijing has done betrays its words. By slandering Vietnam, Beijing and its followers have tried to cover their crimes against the three Indochinese peoples and to avoid responding to Vietnam's positive proposal dated January 30. This proposal, as stated above, calls for an end to armed actions along the Sino-Vietnamese border and resumption of the Sino-Vietnamese negotiations. Beijing's slander can deceive nobody, but self-exposes its dirty face.

HA NAM NINH PARTY ORGANIZATION CONGRESS HELD

OW101031 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Station correspondent Tran Ngoc Thu's report: "Through the Party Organization Congress of Ha Nam Ninh Province"]

[Text] The congress of various echelons of the Ha Nam Ninh party organization was held for nearly 2 1/2 months, from early November 1981 to mid-January 1982. The Ha Nam Ninh party organization is a big one, comprising more than 110,000 party members. Consequently, asked about their impressions, many delegates to the congress replied: Never has there been such extensive political activity. If one were to count all party congresses from the grassroots level upward, there would have been hundreds of thousands of suggestions made on the Central Committee's documents, clarifying all the key questions of our revolution to be decided at the forthcoming fifth party congress.

Not only did an enthusiastic atmosphere, reflecting the spirit of responsibility and awareness of being masters, envelope the party organizations; it spread among the people. This is because, a delegate told me, as a matter of fact, throughout last year -- an unusual year -- all the party and the people everywhere discussed economic management. Everybody was concerned about matters relating to policies and mechanisms of economic and social management, contractual work in agriculture and industry, readjustments of prices and wages and improvements in distribution and circulation. From the cadres and party members to the ordinary citizens, everyone read newspapers, listened to the radio, attended meetings or held real, enthusiastic and lively discussions.

Such major issues as the strength, weakness or survival of the country are very closely and realistically linked to each individual's and each family's food, clothing and daily life. Consequently, it can be said that the realities of a year of enthusiastic discussions and work brought to the congresses a very rich substance full of combativeness, and the days of the congress toward the end of the year constituted a grandiose conclusion to a year full of new developments.

All rivers flow into the sea. After tens of thousands of suggestions made in the discussions, the Ha Nam Ninh party organization congress finally reached a high unanimity of views with the Central Committee regarding its evaluation of the situation, the guidelines and tasks and party building activities. The common and economic lines set out by the fourth party congress were entirely correct. Both the strategic tasks set out by our party at that congress have registered new successes.

Regarding the task of national defense, there was no dissension. The great victories of establishing a unified and socialist Vietnam and of the fight against the aggressive Chinese expansionists were obvious. The congress agreed with the affirmation by the documents that these victories added an extremely glorious chapter to our nation's heroic history. Ha Nam Ninh Province, which has great manpower and material potential, has fought very valiantly, has been awarded the independence order and has many of its units cited as heroic ones and which, during the three resistance wars, sent millions of people to the battlefield, now pledges to continue to contribute its efforts to the task of defending the country, making it forever firm and powerful.

The supplementary and illustrative opinions clearly identified the new enemy, the Chinese expansionists right next to us. They are crueler, more perfidious and more barbarous than our previous enemies. Their collusion with international reaction led by U.S. imperialism and their war plots and maneuvers against us at present are much more complicated militarily, economically, culturally and ideologically. Consequently, in the struggle to defeat the new enemy, we must uphold vigilance, look at the issue comprehensively and make still greater efforts.

Regarding the task of national construction, the congress observed that we have just undergone an extremely difficult period. Natural disasters, typhoons, floods, drought, waterlogging and insect infestations took place one after another. Our raw material and supplies were seriously reduced. Under these extremely difficult circumstances, Ha Nam Ninh's noteworthy achievement in economic construction consists in its endeavor to successfully and basically maintain production and surmount tense periods, such as those following the big typhoons and floods during the 1978 and 1980 10th month crops.

The key rice region, comprising the five districts of Xuan Thuy, Hai Hau, Nghia Hung, Nam Ninh and Kim Son, maintained intensive cultivation. The largest low-lying fifth-month crop region in the north, comprising 55,000 hectares, completely got out of 1-crop cultivation and became a region with 2 rice crops.

Fairly good progress was made in the winter crop in a number of districts such as Ly Nhan, Duy Tien, Y Yen, Vu Ban and Nam Ninh. The regions producing important industrial crops such as Hoang Long tobacco and coastal rush, and major items, such as salt and fish, constantly met plan norms. The Ha Nam Ninh regional industry was fairly strong. Artisan industry and handicrafts often reached the output value of some 200 million dong, ranking behind only Hanoi, the capital, and Ho Chi Minh City.

A success of great significance was the initial renovation of the economic managerial mechanism in 1981 which brought about considerable material results. In agriculture, more than 99 percent of cooperatives have adopted the product contract system, leaving only 3 cooperatives which have not applied it, and increasing food production by more than 190,000 tons. Artisan industry and handicrafts overfulfilled their plans and increased production by 18 percent compared to 1980. Many new factors have emerged.

By adopting at an early date the product-contract system, the Thanh Liem, Xuan Thuy, Hoang Long and Duy Tien Districts have created a new mettle in agriculture in which the weak districts such as Duy Tien and Thanh Liem have become fairly strong.

Duy Tien District in particular has fulfilled quite impressive economic and social targets. Duy Tien has the highest per capita food production of the province -- 410 kilograms, the highest per capita export value of the province -- 50 dong, and the lowest population growth rate of the province -- 1.5 percent. Only a few years ago, Duy Tien was a weak province, ranking 16th out of the 19 district and city units. It now ranks third, behind Hai Hau and Xuan Thuy District only.

Duy Tien District has gained good experience in building the district level in a continuously flooded area faced with difficulties. This experience has been popularized in many other districts, which are in the same situation. It is connected with intensively improving ricefields; is achieving intensive cultivation to solve the food problem; is positively developing the growing of subsidiary crops and industrial plants such as sugarcane, jute, soybeans and mulberry; expanding various branches and trades; producing consumer and export goods; strictly implementing the birth control plan; redistributing manpower and the population and developing the party at the grassroots level.

In 1981 Nam Ninh District earned 36 million dong, the greatest value of handicraft production in the province thus overfulfilling its production plan by 5.5 million dong. In the previous 3 years, its value of production has dropped because of bureaucratic-subsidy administrativism. But in 1981, Nam Ninh district granted broader independence to its production installations and provided guidance and assistance to them in overcoming difficulties and exploiting various sources of raw materials. By applying the system of contract-based wages and progressive bonuses, by properly organizing the handicraft workers' life and by developing the movement for creative labor and practicing economy, Nam Ninh District increased its volume of production and will be able to advance even more vigorously.

Many agricultural and handicraft cooperatives have achieved new progress. The Xuan Phong, Xuan Tien, Xuan Kien, Hai Van and Hai Bac cooperatives achieved more than 9 tons of paddy per hectare. The Tan Tien mechanical cooperative achieved a 3.5 million dong value in production. The Quyet Thang cooperative specializing in building boats, made of concrete reinforced with steel netting, achieved a 6 million dong value in production. Xuan Hong and Chau Giang villages exported many specific types of goods worth 1.5 to 2 million dong. In particular, the Xuan Hong cooperative, with its own technical equipment, turned out nearly 23 tons of paper and cardboard in 1981 to satisfy the province's needs. The Thanh Tam cooperative exploited local quarries and produced thousands of tons of semi-chemical pulp, a type of raw material needed by various chemical industries.

In Ha Nam Ninh Province, five mechanical cooperatives have produced insecticide sprayers to satisfy the pressing need of the agricultural sector during the past 10th-month crop season. They include the Dai Dong cooperative in Ha Nam City, the Vinh Long and Tien Tien cooperatives in Nam Ninh District, the Truc Phu cooperative in Hai Hau District and the Hop Thanh cooperative in Kim Son District.

In 1981 the communications and transportation sector in Ha Nam Ninh Province made worthy contributions to the development of production and livelihood. The communications service exerted great efforts to repair and made full use of transport means on communications lines inside and outside the province, thus meeting the requirements for the circulation of materials and goods.

All these new factors prove that Ha Nam Ninh Province possesses great potential in manpower, land, trades and occupations as well as very active and creative production installations. If all the obstacles caused by conservatism and sluggishness are removed, if the district level is strengthened and if the managerial work is improved, Ha Nam Ninh will be able to overcome all actual difficulties and make progress.

At the Ha Nam Ninh party organization congress, many delegates from various grassroots-level installations, districts and economic sectors affirmed these potentials and new factors and strongly denounced the negative phenomena in management, production, distribution and circulation which had impeded production and caused difficulties to the people's life. These phenomena include conservatism, the lack of sensitivity to the new, officialism, which have caused unnecessary trouble to the people, misappropriation of state and collective property and undemocratic practices vis-a-vis the population.

Most of the delegates' suggestions to be submitted to the central level deal with problems concerning improvement of the management system, economic and social policies, decentralization and creation of conditions for the district level to shape its own plan and budget. To this end, the district level must have its own material bases, source of raw materials, capital and revenue and must be given powers to organize its cadres and so forth.

The delegates also made suggestions on the continuous improvement of policies, especially those governing investment, the use of cash, prices, the sale of raw materials and goods, the collection and purchase of farm products, the settlement of contracts between state organs and production installations and the education, training and use of cadres and on the strict and just observance of party discipline and the enforcement of state laws.

With a high unanimity with the central party committee's strategic line, objectives, orientation, tasks and measures, the Ha Nam Ninh party organization congress worked out a revolutionary program of action and voiced determination to satisfactorily implement the 1982 State Plan by motivating all the party members and people in the province to strive to solve the food and clothing problems and produce large quantities of export goods in order to improve the people's living conditions and build the country.

The greatest success achieved by the congress lies in the fact that it created a new faith and a new orientation, based on the province's experiences, and in the light of the party's correct line and policies.

The Ha Nam Ninh party organization presently includes a membership 20 times larger than the party membership in the entire country in 1945 and is endowed with revolutionary traditions and practical experience. This is its very pride and constitutes a factor for developing its strong points and removing its weak ones regarding internal solidarity and the homogeneity of various movements in the province in order to properly implement the resolutions of the forthcoming fifth party congress, build Ha Nam Ninh into a steadfast province, worthy of its position as the number one province endowed with comprehensive great potential in the Red River Delta.

DIRECTIVE ISSUED ON WAGE, BONUS SYSTEMS

[From the review of Hanoi press for 10 February]

The directive says: Implementing Council of Ministers decisions No 16/CP and 26/CP, in 1981 state-operated agricultural, forestry and fishery production installations, including the water conservancy and rubber production installations, broadened the implementation of the contract-based, piecework and bonus payment systems for many categories of laborers in various sectors and trades. In those installations in which the contract and bonus systems were satisfactorily applied, production has been developed, labor productivity increased, production costs reduced, the profits of enterprises and income of workers and civil servants constantly augmented, and socialist production relations consolidated and strengthened.

The contract and bonus systems, however, have not been evenly and widely implemented in the above-mentioned state-operated production installations and have not yet exerted a strong impact on the mass movement as the product contract system did in agricultural cooperatives. The various forms of contract and bonus have not been perfected. The three interests have not been satisfactorily associated, with some localities paying more attention to the interests of laborers while failing to attach due importance to those of enterprises and the state. The guidance of the responsible ministries and provincial and city people's committees in implementing the contract and bonus systems has been lax and inconstant. Experiences in the application of the two systems have not been reviewed and promptly disseminated. The state's general management organs have not paid attention to improving the management system to create proper conditions for production installations to implement the contract and bonus systems forcefully, and so forth.

The directive clearly points out: To promote these strong points and overcome these shortcomings, thus making it possible to promote production, to increase labor productivity, to ensure the profitability of production and business operations, to fulfill completely the 1982 State Plan and to increase the income of laborers, the chairman of the Council of Ministers issues the following instructions:

In 1982 all state-operated agricultural, forestry and fishery production installations, including water conservancy and rubber production installations, must broaden the implementation of the contract-based and piecework wages and bonus systems in all sectors and trades. This is aimed at exerting a strong impact on all laborers directly engaged in production as well as on managerial and production-support cadres and personnel, effecting a radical change in production and business management and in economic accounting, promoting increasingly higher production efficiency, and abolishing the state's compensation for losses.

The Ministries of Agriculture, Forestry, Maritime Products and Water Conservancy and the general rubber department should select good examples and develop them into good models of implementation of the contract-based and piecework wages and bonus systems suitable for the production characteristics of each sector and trade. Such models should serve as the basis for vigorously expanding the contract movement in state-operated installations into larger areas.

All ministries and local people's committees must thoroughly understand and enable all installations to acquire a more thorough and deeper understanding of the various Council of Ministers decisions, especially decisions No 26/CP and No 16/CP, which must be implemented in coordination with decision No 25/CP.

The State Planning Commission and the financial, banking, labor and supply sectors are responsible for coordinating with the responsible sectors and localities to resolve promptly difficulties caused by the restrictive managerial and administrative system based on subsidies, to establish quickly wage funds proportional to the product output value, and to meet expeditiously the demands for capital, supplies and cash of installations, thereby enabling them to step up production.

All sectors and localities should respect and promote the powers of enterprise directors according to established regulations and create all necessary conditions for enterprises to become really independent in production and business operations, including export and import activities and the use of foreign currencies according to state regulations.

The Ministries of Agriculture, Forestry, Maritime Products and Water Conservancy, the general rubber department and all localities must carefully prepare all necessary conditions for broadening the implementation of the contract and bonus systems. For example, they must give advanced professional training to cadres, organize training and study sessions to guide installations in firmly grasping the contents of the contract and bonus systems, regularly control and supervise the implementation of these systems, and promptly correct errors and deviations and introduce good experiences.

10 Feb NHAN DAN Editorial

[NHAN DAN 10 February editorial: "Closely Guide the Implementation of the Piecework Wage System"]

[Text] The payment of contract-based and product-based wages is now being implemented in all state-operated agricultural, forestry and maritime products establishments. About 50 percent of state-operated agricultural establishments, 40 percent of state-operated forestry establishments and most of the maritime products establishments have implemented the payment of contract-based wages and bonuses.

Contractural work is part of the economic management system. To accelerate production, it is necessary to do away with management redtape and subsidization while implementing business accountability. We can apply the payment of contract-based wages and bonuses extensively even while efforts are being made to change the management system gradually.

By applying the payment of contract-based wages, we can combine obligations with interests and enhance the sense of responsibility of production establishments, labor groups and laborers toward their end-products. Obviously better results in production and business transactions have been obtained by all production units implementing the new wage system correctly.

The benefits to the state are manifest, first of all, in the fulfillment or overfulfillment of production plans. Although that success depends on many factors, the payment of product-based wages and bonuses remains an important management measure which creates favorable conditions for all establishments to fulfill their plans for the delivery of products and profits to the state.

All production establishments are allowed to set aside part of their profits for their enter prises' funds and their benefit funds. All workers enjoying product-based wages have been able to increase their incomes due to the increase in labor productivity, better quality of products, and economies in manpower and production expenses.

To expand the implementation of the new wage system to all types of occupations, including cultivation, animal husbandry, afforestation and timber exploitation, all sectors concerned must review the experiences they have acquired and provide specific guidance for subordinate establishments and grassroots units. It is also necessary for them to establish and put into use quickly rational and advanced economic-technical norms and rearrange their production and business organization and management.

In addition, wages and bonuses must be paid in a way commensurate with the actual production results of each unit. Meanwhile, our failure to guide and inspect closely and regularly the implementation of this new contractual system -- such as the application of product contracts among cooperatives and the payment of contract-based wages at various state farms -- will give rise to erroneous phenomena, thus misrepresenting its characteristics.

NHAN DAN DISCUSSES NORMS ON PRODUCTION WASTAGE

[NHAN DAN 9 February editorial: "Economic-Technical Norms"]

[Text] In order to achieve a 5- to 10-percent savings in materials and energy this year, as called for in the resolution of the party Central Committee's 11th Plenum, we must enforce uniform measures in different fields to cut back expenditures on unnecessary projects, lower the wastage norm per product unit, reduce losses in the distribution process and make full use of discarded materials and products, waste and so forth. A fundamental long-term measure is to set economic-technical norms and strictly control their observance. this is a managerial issue that has the characteristics of law and is an important long-term measure for ensuring planning and economic accounting.

In the past, implementing the various state decisions on norms, all sectors and echelons set tens of thousands of economic-technical standards and norms and used them as the basis for the formulation of plans for production, material supply and technical control. Despite many difficulties, in various sectors and localities progressive production units emerged that firmly maintained product criteria and norms, and some of them even saved gasoline, oil, iron, steel, cotton, yarn, construction materials or chemicals.

However, excessive wastage of supplies, raw material and energy in production is still prevalent. Compared with 1964 and 1965, many consumption norms have now soared. For example, the amount of gasoline and oil used to transport 1,000 tons of goods 1 km by trucks has increased about 40 percent, the consumption of coal by the electricity and industrial production sector has increased 20 percent and the consumption of steel by the engineering sector has increased 11 percent. In the southern provinces, the consumption of energy in the various units has exceeded all the previously established norms.

The rate of wastage has increased, on the one hand, because production is not rationally organized, machinery and equipment are out of order and supplies and raw materials are of inferior quality or not provided regularly and, on the other hand, because attention is not being given to technical control and the organization and guiding of norms-related work. To meet advanced economic-technical norms, we must overcome these problems and must place special emphasis on reorganizing production and improving the operation of equipment. This is no easy task, but, in the current situation, it can be done if specific requirements are set and correct measures enforced.

The establishment and control of norms must be further intensified. Every sector, every locality and every establishment must promptly review their economic-technical norms. Norms must be established immediately for products and work operations that do not have them, and it is necessary to promptly revise irrational norms. Efforts must be made to return to those norms that used to be the most advanced and progress toward setting even more advanced ones. Norms of conservation, such as those regarding the retrieval and reuse of raw materials, the acceptable rate of wastage and so forth, must be incorporated step by step into the state plan's system of norms and upgraded into regulations. The formulation of plans for procuring supplies and raw material, as well as those on the preparation of balance sheets and the consideration of commendations and awards, must be based on the norms approved and promulgated by the competent higher echelons.

The amount of material wastage may drop rapidly if we can overcome wasteful distribution practices and provide better protection for supplies and goods at warehouses and ports, in transit and at delivery points. Norms-related work is closely linked with the broad application to production of proven technical innovations, measurement controls, the establishment and control of norms and product quality inspection. Establishing progressive economic-technical norms and ensuring their observance are the direct responsibility of all managerial echelons.

ARMY ACTION TO SOLVE FOOD PROBLEM ADVOCATED

[Text] Producing grain and foodstuffs in order to solve the food problem for all of society and gradually improve the living conditions of the armed forces has now become a pressing demand for our entire people and army. Dealing with the duties of our people's armed forces in this regard, an editorial in today's QUAN DOI NHAN DAN says:

For several years now production has been an official duty of our army. Many units have scored remarkable achievements in production and have accumulated a great deal of experience, especially in grain and food production. The production experiences of various units show that if we know how to organize and coordinate our production and combat-readiness tasks satisfactorily, we will be able to create conditions wherein our units can fulfill these two tasks in an outstanding manner.

Based on a specific political and economic position, 1982 will become the first year in which we implement the various resolutions to be adopted at the fifth party congress. Given the current situation in our country, the guidelines for our 1982 economic task show that we must concentrate on developing agricultural production in order to meet the food requirements for all of society and then use this as a basis to create an impetus for the development of other sectors. Therefore, apart from its combat and combat-readiness tasks, our army must, depending upon its conditions, actively participate in economic construction -- especially in the production of grain and foodstuffs -- in order to contribute to solving our country's food problem and improving the living conditions of our armed forces.

Every unit must make its cadres and combatants fully aware of the importance of grain and foodstuffs to our country, regarding the production of grain as an obstacle to be overcome to create the foundations on which to build and defend the socialist fatherland. Simultaneously, each unit must prove to the people that our army is fully capable of satisfactorily fulfilling its task with regard to the production of grain and foodstuffs. By so doing, each unit will create for itself a duty and a determination to step up grain and food production no matter where it is stationed.

As it has now become a task, the production of grain and food must be defined as a struggle objective to be achieved by our army. Based on the nature of its combat, combat-readiness and noncombat duties and on the soil, weather and climatic conditions in its area, each unit must plant various sorts of grain and food crops and raise various species of livestock and must determine suitable forms and scales of production.

Almost every unit can adopt the "around the kitchen and around the house" form of production in animal husbandry and crop cultivation to improve its food rations. Larger units can organize production activities locally in small areas reserved for crop cultivation and animal husbandry. Military regions, army corps and armed services can organize medium-size economic zones -- where crop cultivation and animal husbandry will be closely linked -- in order to contribute to redistributing manpower.

On the basis of already confirmed programs and plans, we must delineate duties to establish specific norms for grain and food production to be fulfilled by each element, each cadre and each combatant. While establishing production norms and planning the consumption of products -- especially vegetables, which constitute one of the indispensable elements in the daily rations of troops and can be produced year round -- we must work out plans to plant vegetables in every season in order to ensure a steady source of vegetable supply.

In order to create conditions wherein troops can actively participate in the production of grain and foodstuffs, specialized agencies must regularly follow up and provide guidance on the sowing schedules and production techniques for each kind of grain and food crop and must purchase and supply seeds and the materials needed in production.

Every unit, cadre and combatant must be determined to make full use of all kinds of soil, all sources of fertilizer and all existing conditions to develop production. They must learn to practice strict economy in production as well as in the consumption of grain and foodstuffs and must resolutely do away with any tendency to run after the current form of production without scrupulously complying with various economic and financial policies and systems and without taking into account economic results such as carrying out production at all costs, conducting land reclamation indiscriminately, wasting gasoline and the power of machinery, vehicles and so forth and creating phenomena that lead to forest and land destruction.

As solving the grain and food problem is now a pressing demand in the cause of building and defending the socialist fatherland, together with the entire party and people, our armed forces must develop its reputation as a good combat and production army by trying to overcome difficulties by actively participating in economic construction, especially in the production of grain and foodstuffs, thus duly contributing to solving the food problem for all of society and gradually improving the living conditions of the armed forces.

EDUCATION OF SOLDIERS IN LAW EMPHASIZED

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 8 February editorial: "Intensify Soldiers' Education in Law"]

[Text] Socialist law comprises all the state-promulgated rules and regulations everyone must abide by. Law is indispensable for the state to protect the dictatorship of the proletariat, to protect and develop the gains of the revolution, and to safeguard the working people's collective mastery. Our law embodies the will of the working class and working people and reflects the superior character of the socialist system. This is a legal system of the people, by the people and for the people. As such, the people voluntarily comply with it.

Our people's armed forces are one of the key elements of the proletarian dictatorship state. Like any other citizen, each soldier is dutybound to subject himself to the law of the state and is entitled to its protection. Aside from absolutely abiding by army regulations and discipline, each cadre and combatant must scrupulously uphold the Constitution, law, discipline, public order and the rules of social life.

Generally speaking, all our armed forces units consciously respect the state law and the regulations of state organs. Wherever they are stationed, they make contact with the local party organizations and administrative organs to keep abreast of and scrupulously heed state and local regulations. When they need something belonging to the state or the people, our armed forces units always hold discussions and negotiations with the local administration concerned and receive wholehearted assistance from the local cadres and people.

Many units such as the Slong Dao Infantry Group, the M-22 Group, the M-98 Group, the Khanh Khe Group and the B-18 Group, despite their heavy frontline duties, have satisfactorily educated their cadres and combatants in law. Everyone resolves that he must not only comply with the state law in a scrupulous and exemplary manner but also must actively protect and aid state organs, cadres and personnel in enforcing law and promptly detecting and checking acts of opposition and dishonesty, violations of the party's policies and the state's laws, troublemaking and activities harmful to the public interest. These armed forces groups have actively helped the local people restore production and stabilize life. Many of them have sent work teams to villages and hamlets to propagandize the party's line and policies among the people.

Yet, this does not mean that there are no cadres and combatants who often cite combat duties and various situations as an excuse for committing unfortunate acts such as disturbing public order, violating traffic regulations and, at times, even causing disunity with officials of the administration and public security combatants. In some units, a number of soldiers have unwittingly violated the law owing to their ignorance of it. The duty of leaders and commanders at all levels is to educate and manage, constantly and satisfactorily, their cadres and combatants and to ensure that their units scrupulously abide by the party's line and positions and the state's laws and policies as the regulations on the armed forces' internal affairs stipulates.

The experiences of those units that have satisfactorily carried out this task show that it is necessary, through meticulous educational measures, to enable cadres and combatants to acquire a firm knowledge of the basic and concrete problems concerning the state law as well as the concrete contents of all rules and regulations of society. It is necessary to combine education in law closely with education in the character of the system, the character and tradition of the armed forces, the situation and tasks of the revolution and the duties and responsibilities of each cadre and combatant. This is aimed at making every one of them clearly realize that any person who violates the law, whether deliberately or unwittingly, acts contrary to his obligations and interests and harms the common interests of society.

Through their efforts in organizing the performance of their duties, all units must promptly commend good examples, criticize bad phenomena and inculcate in their cadres and combatants the habit of satisfactorily complying with law. Heightening the sense of voluntarily and scrupulously abiding by the state law and army discipline is a way for our cadres and combatants to show their high sense of socialist collective mastery, organization and discipline in light of the new requirments and tasks of the revolution.

He stressed that with there initial achievements the maritime product sector can advance further to fulfill and overfulfill the 1982 State Plan in order to score more achievements than in 1981.

FISH CATCH IN 1981 INCREASES OVER 1980

OW100359 Hanoi VNA in English 0323 GMT 10 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 10 -- The Vietnamese sea fishery last year caught almost 420,000 tonnes of fish, about five percent more than the 1980 figure. The value of products for export was nearly 17 percent more than planned and almost 35 percent over 1980. Particularly output of frozen shrimps and cuttlefish was respectively five and 61 percent above target. Other products such as fish brine, dried fish and fish meal were from 7.6 to 118 percent above the yearly target.

For many years in the past most of the central and local fishing enterprises could not meet their annual programs. But thanks to the application of the fixed quota system, last year the centrally-run state fishing enterprises caught 16,500 tonnes, three percent above target and a 12 percent increase over 1980. The local enterprises caught 37,000 tonnes, 10 percent above target and about 20 percent more than 1980. The central Vietnam province of Thuan Mai alone last year caught an all-time high of 30,000 tonnes of sea food.

Last year Vietnam also stepped up its fishing cooperation with the Soviet Union and other member countries in the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance (C.M.E.A.). Vietnam also helped Kampuchea in fish breeding. It met its quota under cooperation programmes signed with Norway, Denmark and various international organizations such as the U.N.H.C.R., P.N.U.D. and F.A.O., including the building of refrigerating factories in Kien Giang, Nghe Tinh and Quang Ngai Provinces, an ice factory in Diem Dien (Thai Binh Province), a fish-meal factory in Kien Giang Province, and two 600-horsepower trawlers.

Besides 1981 also saw major efforts of many localities in mountain, border and suburban areas in rearing fresh-water fish. They expanded the fish rearing areas in the lakes, ponds and fields to 134,000 hectares, eight percent larger than the previous year, and as a result, increased fresh-water fish catch to 180,000 tonnes, about 33 percent over 1980.

USSR'S PATOLICHEV BLAMES JAPAN FOR 'COOLED' TIES

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 12 (KYODO) -- Soviet Foreign Trade Minister Nikolay Patolichev has accused Japan of following the United States in imposing sanctions against his nation, cooling Russo-Japanese relations. In an interview in Moscow with an ASAHI SHIMBUN (newspaper) delegation Wednesday, Patolichev said Japan was thus losing opportunities for expanding trade and economic relations with the Soviet Union.

"Japan should be solely held responsible for this," he was quoted as saying in the interview published in Tokyo Friday. ASAHI quoted Patolichev as saying the two neighboring nations should mutually be benefited by developing their trade and economic relations but the bilateral ties have been cooled as Japan took sanctions against the Soviets after their intervention in Afghanistan in 1979. He said Finland, which did not join Western sanctions against Moscow, had dollar 7 billion worth of trade with the Soviets in 1981 while Russo-Japanese trade totaled only dollar 4.2 billion.

Patolichev said the Soviet Union proposed holding a joint economic committee meeting twice last year to discuss expansion of trade and economic relations between the two countries. But the Japanese side of the committee, headed by Shigeo Nagano, president of the Japan Chamber of Commerce and Industry, rejected the proposal, saying it was not the time for a meeting, he said.

ASAHI said it is quite unusual for a leading Soviet minister to cite the name of an individual in making an accusation against Japan. The Soviet minister said if Nagano takes a "minimum" initiative, bilateral relations will turn favorable.

He said Japan is reluctant to help develop Siberian resources under pressure from the United States. Patolichev said the Reagan administration is pressing Japan to stop joint projects with the Soviet Union to develop oil and natural gas resources on the continental shelf off Sakhalin, north of Japan.

'WHITE PAPER ON ECONOMIC COOPERATION' RELEASED

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 12 (KYODO) -- Japan must step up economic aid to developing countries from the standpoint of helping their self-supporting efforts to raise productivity, expand employment and increase national income, a government document said Friday.

An annual "White Paper on Economic Cooperation" released by the Ministry of International Trade and Industry also underlined the need for the private sector of the Japanese economy to make a fuller use of its vitality in this regard. It specifically urged Japanese businesses to try to transfer a wide range of technology, know-how and their unique development experiences to newly industrializing countries.

The fundamental role of Japan's economic cooperation, the paper said, ought to be to assist recipient countries in their self-supporting efforts to overcome their economic difficulties and promote a sustained medium and long range expansion of their economy. It said that direct assistance such as food aid might be a good remedy to cure a disease, but is far from adequate as a prescription for countries aspiring for an overall economic development.

The white paper, the 23rd in an annual series, described developing countries as Japan's "indispensable partners" and called their sustained development "something indispensable" for Japan, which lacks in natural resources and solely depends on international trade. It called for renewed efforts to make Japan's economic cooperation an "integrated" one by coordinating and combining Official Development Assistance [ODA] and private-level cooperation such as trade and investment.

The primary consideration in promoting economic cooperation must be to assist recipient countries in their overall development rather than simply responding to their individual aid requests, the paper said. Increasingly, developing countries are being classified into a group, mainly oil producing countries, which has rich surplus funds and another suffering a "trilemma of slow economic growth, inflation and balance of payments deficits."

In order to respond to their "diversifying" development requirements, Japan must push its economic aid from the long-term range by giving due consideration to regional factors and progress of development in individual recipient countries, the document said. The paper said that Japan's trade with developing countries accounted for a larger share of its overall trade than other developed nations. In 1980, Japan imported from developing countries 60.3 percent of its overall imports, with exports to them accounting for 45.8 percent of total exports. Japan depended for 88 percent of its energy imports on developing nations, it said.

The "1979 Interfutures" report by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) said that a deepening rift between the North and South could check the economic growth of Japan the most among advanced nations, according to the white paper. In 1980. Japan's economic aid totaled dollar 6.8 billion, down 10.5 percent from a year ago. Of the total, Official Development Assistance rose 25 percent to dollar 3.3 billion, while other official and private flows fell 30 percent to dollar 3.4 billion. Of the ODA, technological assistance amounted to dollar 27.8 billion, up 15 percent.

The white paper also urged promotion of technological assistance on government level and also stepped-up efforts in technological assistance by private enterprises rich in technology, know-how and experiences.

PROTEST LODGED ON 12 FEB SR-71 'INFILTRATION'

SK120534 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 0500 GMT 12 Feb 82

[TExt] The U.S. imperialist aggressors have committed acts of espionage by again flying the SR-71, high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane into the territorial airspace east and west of our country.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors, who are running wild with their commotions to provoke a new war, committed acts of espionage against the northern half of the republic by twice flying the SR-71 reconnaissance plane into the airspace over the Kangyong Peninsula, South Hwanghae Province and deep into the territorial airspace east of Kosong, Kangwon Province, of our country, from 1138 till 1315 on 12 February.

Prior to this, the U.S. imperialist aggressors committed grave military provocations by infiltrating this spyplane deep into the territorial airspace of the east and west of our country on 8 and 10 February.

Recently, under the pretext of a war exercise named Team Spirit 1982, the U.S. imperialist aggressors have brought a vast number of aggressive forces into South Korea from the continental United States and overseas and, simultaneously, they are further intensifying espionage acts against our country. This clearly shows that the U.S. imperialist aggressors' schemes to provoke a new war in Korea have entered an extremely dangerous stage.

Our people are watching with high vigilance the U.S. imperialist aggressors' maneuvers to provoke a new war. The U.S. imperialist aggressors should deliberate on the consequences arising from the acts they are committing and immediately stop all the hostile acts against our country.

KCNA REVEALS 'CHON'S BRIBERY OF U.S. OFFICIALS'

SK120543 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0431 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 12 (KCNA) — It has been exposed by a document published in papers here today that traitor Chon Tu-hwan presented 7.5 million dollar to U.S. President Reagan in two instalments.

According to an open letter published on February 5 by the Organisational and Propaganda Department of the Central Committee of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in South Korea, the major objectives of traitor Chon Tu-hwan's bribing operation were the active promotion of the establishment of a new military "regime," maximization of "support to South Korea," realisation of his American visit and revocation of the plan for U.S. troops pullout and its main targets were top-class U.S. figures in South K[illegible] and the influential hawks of the U.S. Republican Party.

To this end, traitor Chon Tu-hwan distributed a huge amount of bribes worth far more than 10 million dollars in nearly two years till last year. He presented 3.5 million dollars to Reagan as campaign funds in September 1980. When Chong Chu-yong [of the] Hyondae group visited the United States, he conveyed Chon Tu-hwan's contribution of 4 million dollars to Reagan through Walker, now U.S. ambassador to South Korea, on condition that, if elected, Reagan would meet Chon Tu-hwan before anyone else.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan did not stint bribes to aides and counsellors of the White House. He sent 80,000 dollars and valuables worth 500,000 dollars to former U.S. presidential adviser for security Allen, and thrust 500,000 dollars into the pocket of a Reagan special envoy when he visited South Korea in August 1980. And in August 1981, he gave 800,000 dollars and beautiful women to former chief of staff of the U.S. forces in South Korea Singlaub who had hired him as an agent of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency long ago.

He himself presented a lot of jewels and precious metals on several occasions and over 200,000 dollars in cash to commander of the U.S. forces in South Korea Wickham. Such bribery of traitor Chon Tu-hwan vis-a-vis the United States is but a part of what has been disclosed.

The great leader put forward the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo as the most realistic one for the reunification of the country at the sixth party congress.

It is necessary to correctly solve the problem of negotiation between the North and the South for tiding over the present difficulties in the way of reunification as early as possible. The true path of negotiation for reunification under the present political situation of South Korea lies in convening a joint conference participated in by well-known politicians of national conscience in the North and South and abroad.

The meeting discussed the subject: "On the Adoption of Calls of the Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland to the Entire Korean People Upon the Elections of Deputies to the Supreme People's Assembly." The meeting adopted the calls with unanimous approval.

SECURITY AGENCY ARRESTS NORTH KOREAN SPY RING

[Text] Seoul, Feb. 12 (YONHAP) — South Korea's Agency for National Security Planning Friday announced the arrest of a seven-member North Korean spy ring that had been operating on a northwestern islet adjacent to the truce line for the last 20 years.

An agency announcement said that the ring, including a three-member fishing family, served as a liason for North Korean spies infiltrating into the South and sneaking back into the North, providing these agents with escort and shelter.

The group, led by Hwang-yun, 65, a fisherman based in Mibop Islet four kilometers from the Demilitarized Zone which divides the Korean Peninsula, also reported to Pyongyang the security situation around Kanghwa Island and its vicinity, while recruiting potential spies, the announcement said.

It further disclosed that Hwang, his wife and his daughter have been put under arrest on charges of violating the national security law and other laws, and that two other women have been referred to the Seoul District Prosecution Office on similar charges. Two other members of the ring, who were accused of not reporting to authorities the espionage activity, have been freed as they have fully repented for their mistake.

The agency also asked the people, especially those living in the coastal areas, to be more alert regarding communist infiltration, saying that North Korea has been bent on securing footholds in the coastal areas since the 1960's in an attempt to set up subversive underground cells in the South.

It said that a total of 453 South Korean fishing vessels, with a combined crew of 3,554, were abducted to North Korea for this purpose since the truce in 1953 which halted the Korean War. Of this total, 422 ships and 3,147 fishermen have been returned to the South, but 31 vessels and 407 fishermen remain in North Korean hands.

ROK, JAPAN TO DISCUSS DATE FOR MINISTERS' TALK

[Text] Seoul, Feb 12 (YONHAP) — The South Korean Government plans to renew its call for the holding of a Korea-Japan foreign ministers' conference in March, during the second bilateral preparatory working level meeting to be held in Tokyo Feb. 18-19, the Korean language daily HANGUK ILBO reported Friday.

Quoting a diplomatic source here, the paper said that the success or failure of the upcoming preparatory talks would not affect the Korean Government's desire to hold the foreign ministers' meeting. It also quoted the source as saying the Japanese (?side) maintains that foreign ministers' meeting be held after April due to Japan's internal situation, including the upcoming parliamentary sessions.

TONG-A ILBO INTERVIEWS JAPAN'S SAKURAUCHI

[Text] Yoshio Sakarauchi, Japan's foreign minister, said it would be profitable to hold ROK-Japan foreign ministers' talks even if a comprehensive agreement is not reached at the preliminary working-level talks to deal with ROK-Japan economic cooperation. He also said Japan will decide on the scale of economic aid based on mutual trust and discuss it openly and candidly at the talks.

Sakurauchi made these remarks in an exclusive interview with Kwon O-ki, chief editor of TONG-A ILBO, at his office in Japan's Foreign Ministry on 9 February.

Sakurauchi said Japan would try to satisfy the desire of the Republic of Korea because the $6 billion loan requested by the ROK is a key factor in the ROK's 5th 5-Year Economic and Social Development Plan. However, he added, something other than a government loan could be considered, depending on Japan's situation and the nature of the 5-year plan. He hinted that efforts are being made to resolve the question of ROK-Japan economic cooperation by saying that all efforts are being made to reflect the "unique relations" between Korea and Japan. At the interview, which lasted 45 minutes, Sakurauchi discussed many things, ranging from his personal relations with Korea to the future of ROK-Japan relations. He emphasized long-range cooperative relations between the two countries by saying "our work must bear fruit for our descendants." The following is the interview with Foreign Minister Sakurauchi:

Question: How do you assess ROK-Japan relations? Is Korea a special friend of Japan? What are your personal relations with Korea?

Answer: I have had a 20-year relationship with the Hanguk College of Social Work, which will become a university on 4 March. As chairman of the Association of Japan for the Welfare and Education of the Speech Impaired, I became acquainted with the college. I received an honorary doctorate of literature from the college. Her Royal Highness Yi Pang-cha also received an honorary doctorate from the college. As I was dined by her Royal Highness Yi Pang-cha, we said "We were doctorate classmates." We joked and laughed.

Before the war, I had no relations with Korea. I have some Korean classmates at Geyo College. Before I became foreign minister, I had ties with the Korean Boy Scouts and sports matters. Economics has been a key issue in ROK-Japan relations. However, I had nothing to do with that.

Question: Don't you think there are more controversial issues than the ones Korea and Japan can agree on?

Answer: There is a pending issue. It must be settled through sincere mutual consultations. To this end, various exchanges must be made. Exchanges should be aimed at achieving mutual understanding. This is very important. There has been a gap between Korea and Japan since the end of the war. Because of this, misunderstandings have arisen. This must end. The government in Japan, represented by Premier Suzuki, and the government in Korea, represented by President Chon Tu-hwan, are communicating with each other. I think all matters must be resolved because they are matters between neighbors. When I ponder the future, I have a sense of great responsibility.

Question: On many occasions, you have supported dialogue. However, no substantial achievement has been made in discussing issues pending between the two countries. When do you think the foreign ministers' talks will be held?

Answer: The foreign ministers of the two countries can meet and exchange views at any time. However, since there is an issue pending, it would be embarrassing if the foreign ministers' talks should fail. Since the talks are important, they will be held soon.

Question: Is it likely that the talks will be held during the first half of this year?

Answer: The unique situations of the two sides first must be considered. Of course, it is important to talk with each other. It is important to settle the pending issue. I hope the pending issue will be settled at the foreign ministers talks and that a step-by-step agreement is made at the preliminary working-level talks. I personally think that it would be profitable to meet each other because dialogue is important. We can meet because the pending issue is not the only issue.

Democracy, introduced following the war, involves a parliament and a bureaucracy and is difficult to deal with. This postwar system has advantages and disadvantages. We are preparing documents to convince not only Korea but also the people of Japan.

If progress is made and an agreement is reached, premier-level political talks may be held. However, some work remains to be done. Therefore, as far as I see, it is not possible yet. This is a time-consuming job. In the initial stage, it may take time. However, when it is put on track, everything will be fine.

Question: Do you think Korea is demanding too much?

Answer: We don't want to say this and that about the development plan of a neighbor. We realize that Japan must render some cooperation. It cannot always be what is desired because of the system, the government structure and parliament. We will do our utmost. "A maximum scale" will be decided. According to the nature of the projects, some may be taken over by the private sector. Our opinion is that we must work to understand and cooperate since negotiations have resulted from great efforts.

Question: There is no sign of agreement on the venue of the talks, not to mention the money involved. What do you think about this?

Answer: I think some progress has been made since I assumed office. The preliminary working-level talks are progressing. Your country has tried to understand Japan's situation. The purpose of the second round of working-level talks is to decide "this will be handled at government-level" but "that will be handled separately" and so forth. Together with the Ministry of Finance, the Ministry of International Trade and Industry and the Economic Planning Agency, we are studying material supplied by Korea. We are trying to achieve something. The second round of the working-level talks will be held to this end.

Question: Are you optimistic?

Answer: I have done my best. I will decide on the scale based on mutual trust and will discuss it at the foreign ministers' talks. Showing as much understanding and respect as I can, I will do "whatever is possible."

Question: Many Japanese say "Korea is different." However, our opinion is that no special treatment is afforded Korea. The "special relations" are cited by Korea in requesting a $6 billion loan. This is why Korea has made such a request to Japan, not to West Germany or other advanced countries. But Japan tries to deal with Korea as it would with "foreign countries" in Africa and South America. A difference of opinion seems to be inevitable between Korea, which stresses "special relations," and Japan, which stresses "universality." What is your opinion?

Answer: I consider it very unfortunate. It is difficult to win understanding when something is to be implemented. Economic aid has doubled during the past 5 years. Japan's economic cooperation must be rendered with this in mind. The nation's GNP is considered in dealing with economic aid. Korea has almost reached the level of a developing country. Japan is offering aid in accordance with international rules. Korea has reached a certain level. As you say, Korea stresses "special relations" and Japan stresses universality. But we should overcome this, and we can. However, Japan has its own yardstick and its own experience. It would be embarassing if it failed. I know the Korean economy slowed down in 1980.

Question: News reports, rather than helping increase understanding, sometimes promote misunderstandings. They say that this is because of poor communication between authorities and the media. I think swift communication is necessary.

Answer: Erroneous information can arouse criticism. Writing without consideration of state affairs seems to have become popular. I wonder sometimes how they can raise such questions. However, I try to properly manage such things. We must respond with correct opinions and ideas. Mutual consultation must be made.

Question: An immediate agreement and a gain by one of the two sides is important. I think to achieve something which will be profitable to both sides and will contribute to the future of the two countries is more important.

Answer: You are right, of course. We must think in terms of the future.

CHON URGES REORGANIZATION OF MILITARY STRUCTURE

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan instructed Defense Minister Chu Yong-pok yesterday to reorganize and develop the military structure in such a way as to give primacy to projects for increased combat capabilities. "Measures must be taken perfectly for the consolidation of the nation's defense system by increasing combat strength in terms of spirit," he said.

The chief executive called for thorough management and training of the Homeland Reserve Forces and productive use of the defense budget. He handed down these directives after Minister Chu made a report to him on the policy to beef up the defense position during a briefing session at Chongwadae in the morning.

He called upon the military to transfer a large part of responsibility and authority to lower-echelon military units to enable them to display their creativeness and abilities.

During the meeting, Minister Chu reported on such matters as the conditions of the North Korean military maneuvers conducted last year and measures to strengthen the country's defense to cope with the North Korean military buildup.

In the afternoon, the president heard a similar report from Health-Social Affairs Minister Chon Myong-ki and called on the minister to control illegal food and medicine manufacturers strongly by supplementing system necessary to do it. "The ministry should concentrate its efforts on the prevention of acute epidemics," he said emphatically.

He demanded implementation of steps to enable all people to obtain medical benefits fairly by stationing doctors in areas throughout the country on an annual basis where inhabitants were unable to get medical treatment. As to the preservation of the environment, President Chon ordered Minister Chon to put high emphasis on pursuing the cultivation of highly skilled specialists.

"Efforts must be exerted to preserve the environment steadily by preventing the water, air, and sea from being polluted," he stressed. He also said that education and publicity activities must be promoted across the country to enable the people to keep sanitation in mind in their daily lives always.

46-50 AGE GROUP TO REJOIN CIVIL DEFENSE CORPS

[Text] The Home Ministry has decided to include again men aged 46 to 50 on the list of the Civil Defense Corps while increasing the yearly drill of the CDC from the current four to eight hours to 10 hours this year. The ministry will establish pan-national committees aimed at effectively promoting preparatory steps for the coming Olympics slated for 1988 in Seoul.

These decisions were revealed in a report made by Home Minister So Chong-hwa to President Chon Tu-hwan at Chongwadae yesterday. Explaining the major projects and policies of his ministry, So said that the increase in ages of those subject to civil defense exercises and the increase in their drilling hours were designed to strengthen the security consciousness of the people following the lifting of curfew.

The government excluded those aged 46 to 50 from being mobilized for civil defense training last year. The number of persons who will be newly included in civil defense exercises is estimated at around 77,000 throughout the nation.

Minister So reported to the chief executive that emergency call-ups of the Civil Defense Corps would be increased from the present once to twice a year and that their joint exercises with the Homeland Reserve Force would be conducted at least four times a year.

The Civil Defense Corps was organized in 1976. Under the civil defense law, all men aged between 17 and 50 excluding soldiers, students and HRF members are obliged to be listed as members of the CDC.

The Home Ministry is authorized under the law to readjust the civil defense drill up to 50 hours or 10 days a year. At present, the drilling time ranges from four to eight hours depending on regional situations.

Minister So disclosed that Olympics promotion committees would be set up in 13 major cities and provinces by the end of this month and subcommittees in other urban and counties early next month. The committees will be under the control of the Central Committee to be set up shortly in the Prime Minister's Office, he said, adding that the committees would be formed and operated on the premise that Korean residents abroad and northern brethren would be welcome as members.

Major programs to be carried out by committees would be beautification projects, sports promotion projects and other measures aimed at successfully staging the forthcoming Asian Games in 1986 and the Olympics in 1988, he said.

CARDINAL KIM SU-HWAN VIEWS HUMAN RIGHTS ISSUE

SK120635 Seoul HANGUK ILBO in Korean 11 Feb 82 p 7

[Article by reporter Yi Chung-u on the lecture "Where Art Thou?" given for youths and students by Stephen Cardinal Kim Su-hwan at Myongdong Cultural Hall in Seoul on the afternoon of 9 February under the sponsorship of the Federation of the Youth Organizations of the Catholic Myongdong Cathedral]

[Excerpts] People in our society have a sense of values, and they think the development of society depends merely on whether or not material and economic development -- such as money, power and happiness -- is achieved. That is a problem.

When economic growth was the country's supreme goal, a politician once said that we, whose per capita national income was estimated at $500 then, should not expect to enjoy the same freedom as those whose per capita national income exceeded $5,000. Nevertheless, it is fundamentally wrong to think human rights and freedom can be guaranteed if the Gross National Product [GNP] increases but reduced if the GNP falls short of a certain goal.

Of course, economic development is absolutely necessary. The national income should be increased. Only when it increases can we build a welfare society, become the people of a first-class power in the ranks of advanced countries and achieve North-South unification through fostered national strength.

If a materialistic sense of values and economic development becomes the supreme goal of society, only competition and pursuit of profits will ensue. People will soon be possessed by the thought that anyone who makes money by stopping at nothing to attain his own goal will become the most respected. This is indeed a problem.

Former U.S. President Carter once said: "The United States could become a rich and powerful nation because it achieved democracy on the basis of human dignity, not because it was a rich and powerful nation from the beginning." Genuine economic development can be achieved only when human dignity is respected and people cooperate with each other.

KAMPUCHEA SAYS PRK'S PRESTIGE 'SOARING'

BK111046 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 9 Feb 82

[KAMPUCHEA commentary: "The PRK's Prestige Is Soaring in the International Arena"]

[Text] In 1982 the Kampuchean revolution is clearly displaying its great and irresistible strength. Progressive mankind is extending its welcome to the victories scored in the past 3 years by our people under the clear-sighted leadership of our party, front and government, thus more clearly attesting to the irreversible nature of the realities in Kampuchea.

In the face of the sharp fighting forces of our people who have consolidated solidarity and cooperation with the fraternal socialist countries, progressive countries and various international organizations, our foes have been unable to block the advance of our revolution. On the contrary, despite the fact that the Beijing expansionists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionaries, have tried to reactivate them, the three groups of Khmer traitors are facing shameful defeat and their reactionary faces are being clearly exposed by international public opinion.

On the occasion of the third anniversary of the historic 7 January victory, the leaders of parties, governments and international organizations in the five continents had sent warm congratulatory messages to our Kampuchean leaders and people. They have affirmed their close friendship and solidarity and full support for the just struggle of our people, strongly condemned the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and demanded the return of the Kampuchean seat at the United Nations -- illegally occupied by the genocidal clique -- to the PRK representative.

It is irrefutably clear that following the country's liberation from the abyss of hell, the only sacred aspiration of our people has been to live in peace in order to rehabilitate and rebuild the country. Our PRK's policy of peace, friendship and cooperation and its desire to coexist peacefully with all countries regardless of political system have enjoyed the active support and praise of all progressive and peace-loving mankind. In particular, the good-will proposal of the three countries -- Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos -- advanced at the UN forum by the LPDR prime minister and minister of foreign affairs has been actively welcomed. Firmly abiding by the spirit of proletarian internationalism, our people have friends near and far throughout the five continents. In particular, over 30 countries and international organizations have officially recognized the PRK, thus enabling our people to enjoy all-round good relations with the people throughout the world. This has influenced other countries, which have been wavering and have refused to recognize the realities in Kampuchea, to reconsider their policies toward the PRK. The visits to all corners of the world by our Kampuchean delegations and the participation in the 24th French Communist Party Congress at the beginning of February by Comrade Hun Sen, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, attest more clearly to the rapid advance of the Kampuchean revolution, which has enjoyed more support and recognition from progressive public opinion throughout the world. Our people have welcomed many delegations from friendly countries and foreign guests who have come to Kampuchea on official and factfinding visits. It was with great pride that our Kampuchean people recently warmly welcomed a high-ranking GDR military delegation, a high-ranking Indian technical delegation and a high-ranking USSR military delegation.

In sum, realities prove that the Kampuchean revolution has advanced rapidly and enjoys closer cooperation in all aspects with Vietnam and Laos and greater support from the fraternal countries, friends near and far on the five continents and all progressive mankind. The prestige of the PRK has soared higher in the international arena.

Chea Soth Opening Speech

BK120851 Phnom Penh SPK in French 0404 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 12 Feb (SPK) — The summit conference of the banks of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos began its work in Phnom Penh today under the chairmanship of Chea Soth, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers and minister of planning.

The Kampuchean delegation is led by Cha Rieng, minister and director general of the state bank of Kampuchea, the Lao delegation by Sot Phetlasi, minister and director general of the state bank of Laos and the Vietnamese delegation by Nguyen Duy Gia, minister and director general of the Vietnam state bank. Present at the opening session of the conference were Vietnamese Ambassador to Kampuchea Ngo Dien and the Lao charge d'affaires ad interim in Kampuchea, Khampasong Duangsithi.

In his opening speech, Council of Ministers Vice Chairman Chea Soth expressed his joy at the development of banking in the socialist countries, particularly the banking activities of the three Indochinese countries and the consolidation of the relations of friendship and cooperation -- which unite the three banks of Kampuchea, Laos and Vietnam -- and the holding of the first conference of the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao banks in Phnom Penh.

Vice Chairman Chea Soth stressed: Faced with the maneuvers of the Beijing expansionist hegemonists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces, the consolidation and strengthening of Kampuchean-Vietnamese-Lao relations is necessary for the cause of the national construction and defense of each country and for the maintenance of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world.

I am convinced that this summit conference will consolidate the bonds of friendship and cooperation between the banks of the three countries and contribute to strengthening the special relations of friendship between Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

VODK VIEWS REASONS FOR OGARKOV INDOCHINA VISITS

[Unattributed commentary: "Heighten Vigilance Against the Cold and Hot, Covert and Overt Maneuvers of the Soviets and the Vietnamese"]

[Summary] "During his visit to Phnom Penh, Nikolay Ogarkov, chief of the Soviet Armed Forces General Staff and first deputy minister of defense, threatened and frightened everybody regarding the possibility of war because of the Chinese and U.S. collusion, and the fact that the Soviets will make every effort to avoid this."

This statement is ridiculous, and it angered many people. "How can the Soviets declare they are opposed to war and appoint themselves as the defenders of peace? More than 100,000 of their troops are waging an aggressive war throughout Afghanistan and their hands and mouths are soaked with the fresh blood of millions of Afghans. This does not take into account the Le Duan Vietnamese enemies' aggressive war in Kampuchea."

The Soviets are warmongers: They are ambitious, aggressive and expansionist. They want to control Southeast Asia and southwest Asia in order to achieve their global strategy. That is why they will not put an end to their agressive war in Afghanistan and, equally, why they will not cease assisting, supporting and participating with the Vietnamese in their aggressive war in Kampuchea, although they have been condemned by the world.

"The Soviets sent their armed forces General Staff chief to Hanoi, Phnom Penh and Vientiane at a time when the Hanoi Vietnamese enemies — Soviet agents and pawns — are completely bogged down on the Kampuchean battlefield, when the flames of the Vietnamese war are raging close to Thailand and when Vietnamese troops are more frequently staging incursions into Thailand as they increase their propaganda accusing and threatening Thailand. This is not a tourist's visit or a courtesy call on petty puppets such as Heng Samrin. It is aimed at preparing their agressive and expansionst strategy in Southeast Asia and in the Asia-Pacific area."

The Soviets are exerting every effort to assist and support the Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea and to move their military bases close to the Thai border. They are also strengthening their military bases in Vietnam and increasing their naval forces in Southeast Asia and in the Asia-Pacific area.

Everybody knows that the Soviets are not openly preparing their military forces. They are more interested in the ASEAN countries, which are the most important target of their aggressive and expansionist strategy in the region. Recently, Malaysia, Indonesia and Thailand have had incidents with KGB spies. All Soviet activities show very clearly their true nature as expansionists and warmongers who only want to aggress against and interfere in the affairs of other countries without respecting international law.

"The fact that the Soviet Armed Forces General Staff chief assured Pham Van Dong, prime minister of the Hanoi Vietnamese, on 4 February that the Soviets will always stand by the Vietnamese and give them all kinds of aid clearly indicates that they will never abandon the Vietnamese. They need the Vietnamese as their agents and pawns in Southeast Asia. They will continue to cooperate with them in implementing their aggressive and expansionist strategy in this region. Therefore, all regional countries as well as all peace- and justice-loving countries in the world should realize even more the necessity of heightening permanent vigilance against the cold and hot, over and covert, military, political diplomatic maneuvers of the Soviets and the Vietnamese, and of uniting with each other to check the danger of their aggressive and expansionist strategy in the region."

The most important measure to be taken is to bring pressure to bear on the Vietnamese until they withdraw all their troops from Kampuchea and to implement the resolutions of the UN General Assemblies and the international conference on Kampuchea.

He thanked the party, the government, the armed forces and the people of the Soviet Union for their great, effective assistance to the Lao people's anti-imperialist struggle in the past and their national construction and defence at present.

Marshal N.V. Ogarkov reiterated the unswerving support of the party, the government, the armed forces and the people of the Soviet Union for the revolutionary cause of Laos, as well as of Vietnam and Kampuchea. He wished for the constant consolidation and development of the solidarity and cooperation between the armed forces and people of the Soviet Union and the peoples and armed forces of Laos, Vietnam, Kampuchea and other socialist countries in the interests of the socialist community and world peace.

Also today, representatives of the Lao People's Armed Forces held a meeting in Vientiane to welcome Marshal N.V. Ogarkov and his party. Earlier, the Soviet guests had called on an air force unit of the Lao People's Armed Forces and a tank unit in Vientiane. N.V. Ogarkov and his party left Vientiane today, concluding a two-day visit to the Lao People's Democratic Republic.

CRASH OF VIETNAMESE PLANE IN PRACHIN BURI VIEWED

Athit Interview

BK120340 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Interview with Gen Athit Kamlangek, assistant army commander in chief and acting commander of the 1st Army Region, to a correspondent of the Public Relations Department, on intrusion by a Vietnamese plane in Prachin Buri Province -- given 11 February; recorded]

[Text] [Athit] The Vietnamese plane which intruded into Thailand and crash-landed in Ban Pong Saeng, Tambon Ban Kaeng, Sa Kaeo District, is an Antonov AN-24 [number as heard] transport plane with a red star on its tail. The plane made an emergency landing on a manioc plantation. The right-hand side of the engine was damaged and three of the passengers were wounded. Altogether, there were two captains, two mechanics, one pilot and eight passengers, consisting of five ranking military officers and three noncommissioned officers, in the plane. Of the three wounded in the crash-landing, one has already died. He was a mechanic and held the rank of a sergeant. Two others are still receiving treatment at the Yuppharat hospital in Sa Kaeo.

Interrogation of those who received no injuries, particularly the captains, revealed that the plane flew from Tan Son Nhut in Saigon to Pochentong Airport in Phnom Penh in order to pick up passengers who are both teaching officers and logistics support officers to fly back to Saigon. According to what they told us, when the plane reached an altitude of about 6,500 feet, it encountered poor visibility and its compass began malfunctioning. They lost their way and strayed into Thailand through Pailin District into Pong Nam Rong District. The plane was intercepted by our radar station in the Khao Sangok area. We then dispatched F-5's in order to force the Vietnamese plane to land at Watthana Nakhon airfield. The Vietnamese told us that they decided to make an emergency landing when they sited a well-graded terrain in Ban Pong Saeng because the plane was already short of fuel. The plane was damaged due to the emergency landing.

Our interrogation revealed there were no weapons, no parachutes and no other materials in the plane. They only had one pistol with them. The pilots themselves had no parachutes. The plane had a very limited amount of fuel. Anyway, that is what we have learned from preliminary interrogations. We still have to translate and investigate the various documents, correspondences, maps and a roll of film that we captured from them. According to them, it is a patriotic film, but we must still view it. That is all we can do for today.

Tambon Pong Saeng, where the plane made the crash-landing, is about 70 km from Aranyaprathet District. The plane managed to fly 100 km into Thailand, however, since it entered our country by Pong Nam Rong District. We sent our planes to intercept it and we accompanied it through its landing.

[Question] Is it true that the plane dropped articles before it landed?

[Answer] I believe that they were rather parts of the plane itself. I have radioed our officials to check if there were articles dropped by the plane, and nothing has been found.

[Question] Will the dead man be returned to Vietnam?

[Answer] The Foreign Ministry will be responsible for that matter If Vietnam wants the dead body back, we may have to give it back if it is true that the plane entered Thailand because it lost its direction. The Foreign Ministry will take care of it.

[Question] What action will be taken concerning the others now under detention and interrogation?

[Answer] They are under our detention and we will continue with the interrogations. If we obtain nothing interesting or useful as information from them, we will then pursue the matter through diplomatic channels, since Vietnam has an embassy here.

Officials' Comments

[Text] Prime Minister Gen Prem Tinsulanon this morning answered questions asked by newsmen at Government House about the landing of a Vietnamese transport plane in Prachin Buri Province. The prime minister said that many causes might account for the landing. As a result of the preliminary investigation, however, authorities did not find any weapons or equipment that could be used for terrorism except one pistol and some belongings.

Commenting on the same issue, Army Commander Gen Prayut Charumani said: The Vietnamese plane probably lost its way due to navigational equipment failure, and entered Thai territory. The Vietnamese Embassy in Bangkok also announced that the incident was their own fault. The landing of the plane has proved, however, that Vietnam is really getting involved in Kampuchea.

Meanwhile, Assistant Army Commander Gen Athit Kamlangek disclosed that during the interrogation, the pilot and passengers had identified themselves, their units and the airbase of the plane.

Interior Minister Gen Sitthi Chirarot said that the plane probably lost its way due to bad visibility and fuel shortage, not with the intention of violating Thailand's territorial sovereignty. Thailand should return the plane and its crewmen to Vietnam. This matter will be handled by the Foreign Ministry through negotiations.

Regarding the situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border, the interior minister voiced his concern over the outbreak of clashes between the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin and Khmer Rouge soldiers along the border with Aranyaprathet District, which forced about 20,000 Khmer Rouge to come near the Thai border. At the same time, the military, border patrol police and officials concerned are working hard to prevent them from entering into Thai territoroy.

Asked about the report that a communist terrorist leader and some 40 men under his command want to surrender to the government without being tried for their involvement in the burning of the Nakhon Si Thammarat governor's residence, which was masterminded by Surachai Sae-dan, General Sitthi said they can surrender, but their condition is unacceptable because it is a criminal case. He added: Law must be law.

Spokesman's Statement

[Text] Bangkok, 12 Feb (AFP) — Thailand will take appropriate diplomatic action on the crash-landing inside Thai territory yesterday of a Soviet transport plane carrying 13 Vietnamese soldiers from Cambodia, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said today. Foreign Ministry spokesman Chet Sucharitkun said it was yet to be established whether the crash was a case of technical malfunction, a deliberate violation of airspace or a hijacking. One Vietnamese mechanic died and two others were wounded when the two-engine Antonov-26 came down in a tapioca field 50 kilometres (31 miles) west of the volatile Thai-Cambodian border.

He said action would be taken "when we find out the truth" of the matter. Thailand was as yet skeptical of the explanations that have emerged so far from preliminary interrogation of the survivors, he said.

The ten crew [members] held for questioning were paraded before journalists at a border press conference earlier today. The pilot, who was blindfolded, and the co-pilot appeared to be in their thirties. The others were in their 20's. No questions were allowed. The pilot is being detained separately from the others at the Thai Army's Ninth Division headquarters in Watthana Nakhon District, about 250 kilometres (156 miles) east of Bangkok.

Journalists at the scene said the Soviet transport plane had belly-flopped, leaving long skid marks after its interception by two Thai F5-E aircraft. The Antonov was equipped to carry 40 paratroopers, they added. Items found on the plane included cigarettes, food seasoning, sarongs and navigation charts.

OFFICIAL SAYS PRC TO HOST KHMER 'SUMMIT'

BK120941 Hong Kong AFP in English 0909 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Text] Bangkok, 12 Feb (AFP) -- China has agreed to host a proposed summit of three Cambodian resistance groups trying to form an anti-Vietnamese coalition, the Thai Foreign Ministry announced today.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Chet Sucharitkun said Chinese Ambassador Shen Ping conveyed the positive reply yesterday to Thailand's suggestion that a tri-partite meeting be held in Beijing. The spokesman quoted unconfirmed reports that the meeting might take place by the end of this month. The summit would bring together Khmer Rouge Premier Khieu Samphan, former head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk and his one-time Premier Son Sann, who agreed, during a meeting in Singapore last September, on a "desire" to form an anti-Vietnamese coalition.

Mr Chet welcomed China's willingness to play host as "a step forward" in efforts to form a tri-partite coalition, the success of which is seen as crucial to a political solution to the Cambodian problem.

Prince Sihanouk is already in the Chinese capital and Son Sann, leading the non-communist Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), is due to arrive there within the next few days as guest of the Chinese Government, sources close to the KPNLF said. Khieu Samphan is yet to respond formally to the summit proposal initiated by Prince Sihanouk. But Mr Chet expressed confidence that the response would be positive now that China had agreed to play host.

China was earlier reported to have expressed reluctance, preferring that the summit be held in a capital of the non-communist Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), grouping Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand. Thailand's suggestion that Beijing be the venue was seen as a bid to prod China into a more prominent role in the coalition effort.

Meanwhile, Mr Chet stressed that recent statements from Indonesia and Malaysia that they might withdraw recognition of the Khmer Rouge leadership ousted by Vietnamese-led forces in January 1979 did not constitute ASEAN positions. ASEAN "continues to support the view that the three anti-Vietnamese groups should unite to form a coalition government," he said.

In a related development, the spokesman said Thailand would "not take any action" on reports of trade between Singapore and Vietnam, as it concerned Singapore's private sector, and not its government.

ASEAN states have an understanding that governments should not trade with Vietnam, he pointed out. In Thailand's case, there were no regulations against private traders selling goods to Vietnam except those that are considered strategic, he added.

FISHING BOAT SEIZED BY USSR TRAWLER OFF VIETNAM

[Text] A Thai fishing boat with about 20 crew [members] has been seized by what was believed to be an armed Russian trawler while fishing in international waters off Vietnam, an informed fishing source in Samut Sakhon Province told the Bangkok POST yesterday. According to a radio message sent by a trawler operating off Phu Quoc Island, the Sin Sirichai 2 was seized by an armed Russian trawler at about 11 am on February 3. Phu Quoc Island is off Vietnam's south coast.

The message was picked up by a Samut Sakhon radio station which monitors messages from Thai fishing boats operating in the Gulf of Thailand. The report said an armed Russian trawler fired warning shots at the Sin Sirichai 2 and later approached it and towed it towards Phu Quoc Island.

POST OPPOSES REAGAN PROPOSAL ON CHEMICAL WEAPONS

[Editorial: "Gas Weapons Must Be Outlawed"]

[Text] Cynics have it that there are two President Reagans. They maintain that lurking inside the amiable, well-spoken and thoroughly reasonable figure occupying the Oval Office in the White House is a quite different Reagan just waiting to be let out. And this Reagan, they say, is of a far more aggressive and conservative ilk. He, they claim, is the Reagan responsible for the hysteria over Libya, the shrill and continuing threats against the Soviet Union and the increased spending on defence at the expense of social services and welfare programmes.

We have no evidence to support such a Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde theory. Most of the attitudes and actions taken by the U.S. President have been very much in line with the election promises which the American public endorsed when they voted him into office. But, now and again, 'Mr Hyde' does appear to be peeping out. The latest manifestation of this phenomenon occurred last Monday when President Reagan formally proposed to Congress that the United States resume the manufacture of chemical weapons, something we all thought had been banned nearly 13 years ago.

The timing could hardly have been worse. U.S. officials are in the middle of a diplomatic offensive against the Soviet Union over their involvement in the use of toxic weapons, or the so-called 'yellow rain,' in Afghanistan, Laos and Kampuchea. A United Nations investigating team is supposedly examining its findings in an attempt to determine just why so many Mong have died so horribly. And world reaction to the use of such morally repugnant and vile methods of waging war against a civilian population has been almost universal in its condemnation. Now, in the middle of all this controversy, along comes the American President with a proposal to build new stockpiles of horrifying nerve agents called GB and VX.

The Pentagon appears to feel that the United States has to keep up with the Russians in the biological as well as the arms race. They do not. Their responsibility goes only so far as to provide protection against such weapons for their own troops on the battlefront.

With all the other sophisticated methods of modern-day warfare at our disposal, chemical weapons can give neither a military nor a negotiating advantage. They have been described by one leading British newspaper as "an immoral and wicked use of our resources." Of this there can be no doubt.

NATO may not be able to agree on a common foreign policy, but it should be able to show some vestige of unity on a matter as important as this. The alliance must avoid such weapons like the plague they are, whatever the Soviet Union might do. The very existence of such weapons is an offence against humanity.

POST REPORTS ESTABLISHMENT OF CPT-BCP LINK

[Excerpts] The Communist Party of Thailand (CPT) has established a new link with the Burmese Communist Party [BCP] of Burma following the "difficulties" with Laos and Vietnam as a result of the Sino-Vietnamese conflicts, Thai intelligence sources have reported. "CPT members trekking from their northern bases in Thailand to southern China have been provided with protection by members of the Burmese Communist [Party] through the jungled areas under the influence of the pro-China BCP, since the routes through Laos have been declared off-limits to the CPT," according to a senior Thai official monitoring the CPT's activities.

The linkup between the CPT and BCP has raised concern among some senior Thai military strategists who have charged that the Chinese Communist Party had at the same time opened up a new supply line to the CPT through the northwestern parts of Thailand via the jungled areas under the influence of the Burmese communists after the previous Lao routes had been cut off since late 1979. It has been well known at the same time that the BCP has been involved to a considerable degree in the opium trade in the notorious "Golden Triangle." Several years ago, when the opium cultivation was low, according to Thai intelligence sources, Khun Sa, the self-styled leader of the Shan United Army (SUA), approached the BCP for the first time to arrive at an agreement on the purchase of a transaction of opium to fill the gap for that particular year. "That link between Khun Sa and the Burmese communists has remained until today," said the officials, who explained that the drug kingpin's contacts with the Burmese communists might have played an important part in convincing Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon to launch an all-out military drive against Khun Sa late last month, particularly in view of the linkup, on the other hand, between the CPT and the BCP.

Thai intelligence officers said that they have had no reports so far of the CPT's political linkup with the BCP related to the opium connection. "What we have discovered for certain is that the Burmese communists have come to an agreement with the Thai communists that they would escort them through their areas from the Thai-Burmese border to the Burmese-Chinese border everytime a group of Thai communists want to cross over from Thailand to southern China," said the intelligence official.

DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER ADDRESSES PACIFIC FORUM

[6 February "keynote address" by Thai Deputy Prime Minister Thanat Khoman, entitled "National Threat Perceptions in East Asia and the Pacific," delivered at the Pacific Forum held in Kona, Hawaii]

[Text] The question of how nations perceive a threat or threats to their security, their well-being, indeed their very existence, is a universal one that faces governments and peoples the world over. Its principal characteristic is that it is neither static nor permanent. Rather, it is fluid and varies with developments occurring at certain places and times in the world at large. The diverse national outlooks and surrounding circumstances also greatly influence the perception of the threat confronting each of the countries belonging to the same group or the same organisation. All this is, I believe, well known and well accepted, and represents the most worrisome and even agonising preoccupation of many chancelleries of the world.

Concerning our part of the world in particular, the threat has evolved from the expansion or extension of imperial power to an ideological one, then back to more or less the old form, although under a new banner, of colonial expansion. The new terminology uses the so-called liberation movement as a camouflage for political or military conquest, but the result is hardly different, as it implies the loss of freedom or independence for he liberated and dominance and control for the liberators.

In the past, Thailand has shown a particular acuteness in perceiving threats which in those days, came from one major source, namely, colonial expansion from Western countries, especially the West Europeans, who sought to conquer territories for markets to absorb their manufactured products, for sources of raw materials supply and also for fuel and provisions facilities for their ships which plied between Europe and this part of the world.

In fact, the colonial expansion was so widespread that all the territories surrounding Thailand, or Siam then, fell under the domination of West European countries. Only Thailand survived and enjoyed its independence and sovereignty with another country, Japan, further to the east.

In our case, the important problem was not so much to perceive the threat as how to cope with it. Not having adequate military means to match those nations of the West, Thailand thought it best to avoid head-on collisions which were fatal to some other Asian countries. Instead, it resorted to diplomacy, and particularly to the strategem of balancing one European country against another. Even this diplomatic expediency cost Thailand large tracts of territories but, at least, it saved the country from colonial subjection.

After the colonial era, the threat shifted to the ideological expansion which combines the old-style imperialistic designs of dominance with ideological allegiance and subservience. The victims of such ideological conquests may have an appearance of independence; in reality, it is only a nominal one. In most cases, they are bound, hands and feet, by more or less visible chains to political, economic and, of course, ideological obligations imposed by the leader, with no possibility of rejection. Once a member is taken into the "brotherhood," and not unlike the well-known Mafia Cosa Nostra, it cannot leave alive. Czechoslovakia, Hungary and now Poland are flagrant illustrations.

Nowadays, the threats have taken an even more complex form. On the one hand, predators, endowed with powerful military means, behave like old-time imperialistic powers seeking aggrandisement of their physical domain by annexing adjacent territories, or after de facto annexation after a war or limited conflict. On the other, they seek to establish an ideological overlordship by setting up satellite regimes with nominal or fictitious independence while, in fact, such regimes are completely subservient to the central imperial power. This is the pattern created in Eastern Europe which is being emulated in other parts of the world, in Africa, Southeast Asia and Latin America.

In our Asia-Pacific region, the threat has developed and become aggravated by miscalculations, misreading and mishandling of a number of situations.

First, it may be recalled that for years governments and people in this region have been brainwashed into believing that the main source of threat lies with the People's Republic of China, from where derive all evils menacing the Free World. That shallow and easy deduction flowed from certain facts such as the eviction of the Chinese nationalist regime from the mainland, the Korean war, which saw the intervention of the Chinese PLA, and lastly the Vietnam war, when large amounts of war weapons and other materials were supplied to North Vietnam to sustain its struggle against the South and its American allies.

These facts and events blinded many people to the reality that a victorious North Vietnam supported by a powerful modern protector and sponsor could combine to become a more menacing threat than a populous but underdeveloped colossus.

Then, it must be observed and noted that for decades that potential rival of the United States, the USSR, has been receiving enormous involuntary assistance in the realm of high technology, precision equipment and private financial support, which launched them into the rank of a top producer of missiles and other sophisticated weapons.

Also, during the past decade or so, while one superpower, the U.S., is lagging in its armament development, the other, the USSR, after its humiliation in Cuba, vouched to become an equal to the former on land, sea and in the air so that it will not have to back down in any future confrontation. That explains why, in the Asia-Pacific region, we have now a latent challenge to the naval and air power of the U.S. stemming from the Asian provinces of the USSR as well as from the northern islands seized from the Japanese at the end of the Second World War. Likewise, the strong Soviet position casts a long shadow over Japan.

That powerful display of military might serves many purposes, like the assertion of Soviet presence in the area stretching from northeast Asia down the China Sea to Southeast Asia and possibly beyond to the Indian Ocean and the Middle East. It can also be used to apply pressure on the PRC both along the coastline as well as on land in Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam when increased activities are taking place. It undoubtedly holds a strategic command over the sealane from the Indian Ocean to the Pacific by the use of the military facilities and installations at Cam Ranh Bay and Danang. Could anyone fail to perceive this as a threat to the security of many nations, as well as a threat to the stability of the entire region?

In regard to the USSR, there is no divergence of perception among ASEAN members. They all recognise that the said power represents a potential threat by itself as well as by its rivalry with other competing powers such as the PRC or the U.S.

They also adduce from that conclusion that the root cause stems from the inconsistency of the U.S. policy which, at one time, threw in its full weight in Vietnam; then, as abruptly as it went into the fray, it veered 180 degrees off, and decided at Guam to proclaim another opposite policy known as the Nixon doctrine of disengagement. That encouraged its rival, the USSR, to step into Southeast Asia to fill the power vacuum, and build its position in Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea ever since.

The concern of Southeast Asian Governments lies, rather, in the rivalry between the USSR and the PRC because of the possible destabilising effect on the entire region.

Once the Soviets stepped into the area known as Indochina, they hastened to consolidate their position, and promptly saw the advantage of using it as points of pressure on China's southern flank. Local forces of those countries have been strengthened with the Soviet's modern equipment and trained by Soviet cadres and instructors. An electronic monitoring station has been set up to eavesdrop on neighbours to the east and west. Other activities are also conducted from the main naval and air bases in Vietnam which relate to the operations of its main rival, the U.S. Such rivalries, actual or potential, can constitute threats to the peace and tranquility of the region which no one can neglect.

In addition, while assertions that "we will not export our revolution" have been often heard, they cannot lull anybody into complacency because it does not exclude the readiness and willingness to support by various means the transformation of present-day societies into socialist or Marxist ones.

However, where consensus cannot yet be reached is the differing outlooks on who represents the most urgent threat -- Vietnam or the PRC. To some countries which had had in the past a bitter experience, the latter appears as a more ominous threat, possibly because of its size and its proclivity in by-gone days to get involved in the internal affairs of others, especially in political and ideological matters. However, the fact that Vietnam had sent its troops outside of its borders and installed by force of arms a government of its choice in place of another one obviously removes any doubt that if it can intervene militarily in Kampuchea, it can also try to get mixed up elsewhere. This kind of threat is not imagined nor perceived; it jumps into the eyes of people willing to look.

That is why a comparison can be established between tigers which are in or already out of the woods. Vietnam is obviously a tiger which is squatting at our doorsteps, backed by another larger one not far behind, while the other potential tiger still lies hidden in the woods.

So far, the countries of the region, and ASEAN in particular, have faced the threat with equanimity and steadfastness. While they are not willing to yield to the threat, and remain firm in their legitimate and reasonable position, they have kept the door open for dialogue and discussion. If up till now no compromise nor solution has yet been reached, it is probably because certain larger powers have no immediate interest to help in reaching an agreement. They may even have advantage to prolong these uncertainties.

The question may then arise whether the continuation of problems like that of Kampuchea constitutes or not a threat to the peace and stability of the region. The answer can only be in the affirmative. The lack of solution or agreement on questions as the one mentioned above is undoubtedly a destabilising factor which should be removed by reasonable considerations, not by yielding to force or surrender.

In this respect, a close look at the situation will reveal a few important elements which we can ill-afford to neglect. First, the Kampuchean problem, with its threat and explosive danger to Southeast Asia, will persist as long as Vietnamese troops are camping in that country.

Second, those alien troops will occupy Kampuchea, fighting there and threatening to spill over into neighbouring lands, as long as they are sustained financially and militarily by a major power -- in the present case, the USSR. That particular power is conducting a two-pronged policy. On the one hand, it seeks to foster socialist or Marxist societies everywhere by various means, open or concealed, economic, political or military; on the other, it wants to gain recognition, good will and respect as a superpower from non-communist nations.

So far this double-barreled policy has succeeded with certain Asian nations eager to receive aid and sustenance in their development. It has not made much inroad in Southeast Asia, where the USSR has been told in no uncertain terms that it will have to choose between the two. If it continues to support Marxist states which undermine our societies and persistently destabilise our region, it will not win our good will and approval. On the contrary, it will be looked upon with diffidence and suspicion.

Our efforts should, therefore, be concentrated on that latter objective, and make it realise that the good relations with non-communist ASEAN represents a greater value than the military facilities it is obtaining from Vietnam, notably in terms of trade, economic and political benefits. This, undoubtedly, represents an up-hill task as long as long as the U.S.-USSR rivalry and the pro-USSR feuding remain intense. However difficult that task may be, the stake for our security and the welfare of our nations in this region is too high to be left untackled.

THAI EMBASSY CONTACTED ON 'LOST' AN-26 PLANE

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 12 -- The acting chief of the Foreign Ministry's Department for Consular Affairs, Dang San, has informed Bhadung Dhanyangkun, counsellor at the Thai Embassy here, of the following:

A Vietnamese military transport plane with 13 persons on board was flying from Pochentong airport, Phnom Penh, to Vietnam in the morning of February 11 when contact with it was lost and the plane failed to show up in Vietnam. Meanwhile it has been reported by Western agencies that an AN-26 with Vietnamese markings has been forced to land in Thailand and is being detained by the Thai authorities.

Dang San asked Bhadung Dhanyangkun to contact his country about this and if a Vietnamese aircraft has indeed been forced to land in Thailand, to ask his government to arrange for the prompt return of the plane and the people on board.

NHAN DAN HITS U.S. CHEMICAL WARFARE EFFORTS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 11 -- NHAN DAN today comes out strongly against the United States for its effort in many years to prepare for chemical warfare. Commenting on the "Factsheet on Chemical Weapons Policy" approved by the U.S. National Security Council, the paper notes that the objective of this programme is very dangerous. To add to its growing stock of mass destruction weapons, it points out, the United States has tried to make many other kinds of weapons, more dangerous still, to use against the civilian population -- weapons which are banned by international law. To justify this, NHAN DAN says, the United States has charged the Soviet Union and other socialist countries with using chemical weapons in various parts of the world.

"Vietnam, the Soviet Union and genuine public opinion in the world have flatly rejected these slanderous allegations", the paper recalls. "Many honest American scientists have affirmed there is no evidence that the Soviet Union has used toxic chemicals at all. Even so the United States has launched a slander campaign against the Soviet Union, Vietnam and other socialist countries".

NHAN DAN says: "It was the United States that used chemical weapons in Southeast Asia, in its aggression against Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries. The so-called 'herbicides spraying program' has had disastrous effects on the Vietnamese people and many American GI's. The United States also used germ weapons against the Korean people in the past and the Cuban people recently. New York TIMES recently published detailed reports on U.S. herbicides sprays in Laos and southern Vietnam."

"By stepping up the arms race and pursuing a hostile policy towards the Soviet Union and other socialist countries", the paper goes on, "the Reagan administration is undermining world peace and detente and normal East-West relations, and further obstructing the S.A.L.T. talks".

"By accelerating the production of new chemical weapons the Reagan administration is exacerbating the international situation", NHAN DAN concludes.

REPORT ON U.S. COVERT SPRAYING IN LAOS CITED

OW120738 Hanoi VNA in English 0711 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 12 — An unpublished history of the U.S. Air Force reports that the United States secretly sprayed herbicides on Laos during the Vietnam war and openly sprayed them on southern Vietnam. According to Richard Severo, writing in the New York TIMES on Jan. 25, 1982, the history, which contains details about how the United States started and conducted its herbicide spraying program, also provides insights into how government policy was made during the war.

R. Severo wrote: The account says that in the early 1960s, thousands of gallons of military defoliants were secretly brought into South Vietnam by the United States in violation of the inspection provisions of the Geneva Accords of 1954, designed to end hostilities in Indochina. The United States participated in the creation of the accords and although it disassociated itself from the "final declaration", it pledged not to disturb the agreement by force. The history was obtained by the National Veterans Task Force on Agent Orange, a coalition of veterans and religious and environmental groups, in a lawsuit under the Freedom of Information Act.

Thomas W. Ainsworth, director of a unit of the State Department that decides when material should be declassified, sought to block release of the document, of which 20 pages remain with held by the government, on the ground that it "would cause identifiable damage to the national security". Litigation continues over the withheld material. Releasing it, Mr. Ainsworth said, would damage relations with foreign countries.

Mr. Ainsworth said in an affidavit that certain sentences in the 20 pages "would, if disclosed, confirm officially that the U.S. some years ago gave consideration to the possibility of military use of herbicides in certain specific countries, concretely, the use of herbicides to destroy war-making potential".

Mr. Ainsworth noted that the United States is a party to international accords prohibiting use of chemical and biological weapons and possession or manufacture of biological weapons. "The applicability of the agreements to herbicides is a matter of disagreement between the parties", he said.

The history represents what is believed to be the first formal government acknowledgment that the United States conducted covert spraying in Laos. The document says that the defoliation was carried out with the agreement of the Laotian Government, which was not a party to the war.

Among disclosures in the history are the following:

— In the South Vietnam spraying program, the U.S. Government seriously considered asking air force pilots to wear civilian clothes, fly in mismarked planes and agree to a government disavowal of any knowledge if they were captured.

— The defoliation in South Vietnam, which in recent years has brought charges from South Vietnamese and U.S. veterans that the herbicides caused long-term health problems, was started at the request of President Ngo Dinh Diem of South Vietnam.

— U.S. officials took pains to mislead the press about the covert spraying in Laos.

The report says the spraying in Laos began in December 1965 at the urging of Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. military forces in Vietnam, who wanted jungles in southern Laos defoliated to deny hiding places to enemy troops. He also wanted crops destroyed to deny food to the enemy, according to the report.

The report does not elaborate on the meaning of its reference to "earlier uses". Nor is it clear how long the covert spraying continued. Several pages are missing. However, the report says that by June 1966, seven months after the program began, 200 sorties were flown in which a total of 200,000 gallons (760,000 liters) of herbicide were dumped on roads and trails, to a distance of about 275 yards on each side, north of the 17th Parallel in Laos.

The report does not say which herbicide was used in Laos, but it does say that generally in Southeast Asia the air force used combinations of the herbicides 2,4,5-T and 2,4-D, including Agent Orange.

The report tells of plans to mislead the press, especially about the secret spraying missions in Laos. According to the report, Secretary of State Rusk and Secretary of Defense McNamara "directed that any press queries about the use of herbicides in Laos would be dealt with according to the standing guidance, which was to not report, acknowledge, or otherwise comment on U.S. air operations in Laos except to state that since May 1964 the United States had flown air reconnaissance over Laos at the request of Laotian authorities."

"International repercussions against the United States could be most serious", said a memorandum issued by the Joint Chiefs of Staff of U.S. Armed Forces. "In this connection, it is recommended that the operations be covered concurrently with a publicity campaign by task force Vietnam in Saigon".

SOUTHEAST ASIA SEEN AS WORLD 'HOTSPOT'

[Unattributed article: "Southeast Asia, a World Hotspot"]

[Text] The balance of power in Southeast Asia has changed profoundly following the defeat of the United States in Indochina. U.S. imperialism was forced to pull out of Indochina, and the trend toward peace, neutrality and national independence has developed steadily in Southeast Asian countries, including those countries which sided with the United States during the war of aggression against Vietnam.

The warmongers in the United States, who have refused to learn from their defeat, have stubbornly tried to interfere in order to resume military involvement in the region. However, since Vietnam interference in Indochina is no longer the monopoly of the United States. The decay of U.S. imperialism has touched off a contest for influence in this region among imperialist countries themselves and among various ambitious expansionist reactionary influences.

For the reactionary Beijing expansionists, Southeast Asia has long been a place to expand their influence. Southeast Asia was the Chinese sphere of influence taken away by the West and thus China must try to regain it. Their claws strengthened by U.S. imperialism, the Beijing expansionists have volunteered to act as the vanguard to hysterically oppose revolution in Southeast Asia. Their emphasis is on Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. The hegemonism of the Beijing expansionists has become the direct and dangerous enemy of peace, and stability in Southeast Asia. Chinese-U.S. collusion is the factor now threatening peace creating tension which could easily bring war to this region. This collusion, however, has also shown signs of conflict right from the beginning. Although the common targets of Beijing and Washington are the Soviet Union, Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries, the socialist bloc and the world revolutionary movements, neither of them wants the other to have a monopoly in this region. For this reason, Southeast Asia, being a strategic economic, political and military zone in the world, has become a world hotspot. It has become a zone where impeialism and Beijing expansionism are trying to consolidate their influence and are fighting to maintain their interests.

It is correct to join forces to oppose the enemies of national independence. The enemies of peace and the creators of tension are U.S. imperialism and Chinese expansionism. However, some ASEAN countries have allowed themselves to be towed along by Beijing and Washington and have colluded with them to slander Vietnam and create tension in this region.

History has shown that the Indochinese countries have always been victims of the policy of aggression and interference of imperialism and Beijing expansionists. History has also shown that the Indochinese countries have never launched aggression against the ASEAN countries. Just the opposite, the ASEAN countries sided with and helped the United States in various capacities in its aggression against the Indochinese countries. Not only did Thailand and the Philippines allow the United States to set up bases in their territory to fly missions against the Indochinese countries, but their soldiers participated in the U.S. aggression against Vietnam.

Public opinion in Southeast Asia and elsewhere in the world knows that it understands the situation very well in believing that the cause of tension and possibly a major war in Southeast Asia does not originate with Vietnam and definitely not the Soviet Union, but that the cause will be the U.S. imperialist and Beijing reactionary policy of expansionism and interference.

The urgent issue, which is the decisive factor in preserving peace in Southeast Asia, is eliminating the cause of tension in this region. In particular, the claw of U.S. interference and the ambition of the Beijing expansionist hegemonists must be contained. The United States must immediately discontinue expanding its military strategy in this region. The Beijing ruling clique must stop its hostility toward Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. It must immediately stop interfering in, applying pressure on or persuading the ASEAN countries to oppose the Indochinese countries. In addition, the ASEAN countries should act constructively by joining the Indochinese countries in the search for a correct method to resolve existing conflicts.

The correct path to eliminate the cause of tension in Southeast Asia is to oppose the policy of interference and aggression of Western imperialism, headed by the United States, and Chinese big-nation hegemonism. The problem of this region must be solved by the people of the countries in this region. To discard independence in order to tail after the United States and China in opposing the people of Indochina is definitely not the way to bring peace and stability to Southeast Asia.

Certain ASEAN countries claim that they are not opposed to a dialogue with the Indochinese countries, but they demand resolution of the so-called Kampuchean problem as a condition for the solution of problems in relations between the two groups and in the region. This is not the way toward peace and reconciliation. In fact, it is nothing but a trick of the Beijing reactionary clique, supported by Washington, aimed at opposing and destroying the revolution in Indochina. There will be no peace nor stability in the Indochinese or the ASEAN countries as long as any country continues to follow this Beijing strategy.

The Lao, Kampuchean and Vietnamese people have witnessed a state of war for decades and thus desire nothing more than to be able to live in peace and friendship with other nations. But they will fight to the last to protect the fruits of the revolution they have gained. There are many obstacles to overcome in the revolution of the three Indochinese countries, but the part which demanded the greatest test has been hurdled. No dark influence can reverse the current situation in Indochina.

Southeast Asia is no longer the backyard of Western imperialism or Beijing expansionism. Problems in Southeast Asia must be solved by the people there. This corresponds completely with the desire of the people in the region and corresponds with the general desire of the people of the world who oppose war and favor peace, relaxation of tension, national independence, democracy and social progress.

It will also be a way to eliminate the cause of the heated situation in Southeast Asia. It is certain that those who are trying to create a hotspot in Southeast Asia and push the people there into the flames of war will be engulfed by the flames of revolution.

CARRINGTON STANCE ON SRV AID, KAMPUCHEA ASSAILED

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] The British foreign minister, Lord Carrington, has concluded his tour of ASEAN member countries. The tour is allegedly conducted to help peace and stability in Southeast Asia, but during his stay in Thailand, on 3 February, Lord Carrington called on the Western countries to cut aid to Vietnam and demanded the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. He also declared his support for the so-called coalition Government of Kampuchea.

Carrington's declaration proves the British authorities are tailing after Beijing and Washington in opposing the three Indochinese countries. They want to prevent international aid to Vietnam to weaken it. They demand the withdrawal of all Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and support the Khmer reactionary forces, hoping to reverse the situation in Kampuchea.

It is obvious that the British administration is lending a hand to Beijing and Washington in sabotaging peace and stability in Southeast Asia, running counter to the interests of the local peoples. Moreover, the British administration also chimes in with Washington in its anti-Soviet campaign over Poland. Great Britain was the first NATO country to apply economic sanctions against the Soviet Union and Poland after the Reagan administration declared punitive measures against these two nations.

AP remarked that there is no evidence that other Western European nations will approve of the British stance. The London administration's act only exposes Britain as an arrogant ally of the United States inside the NATO camp. The current policy of the British Government only do harm to the country's diplomacy and proves the conservative government is aligned with other international reactionary forces causing tension in the world. In this respect, the British Government must be condemned by progressives throughout the world.

QUANG NAM-DA NANG PROVINCE HOLDS PARTY CONGRESS

[Station correspondent Hong Hanh report on 1st round of 13th congress of Quang Nam-Da Nang provincial party congress -- recorded]

[Text] Dear friends: We have just come back from the closing session of the 1st round of the 13th congress of the Quang Nam-Da Nang provincial party organization. It may be said that as we entered the Nham Tuat [Year of the Dog] Lunar New Year, the success of the congress has gladdened the province's people and cadres of various echelons.

During the congress, the delegates correctly studied, discussed and made many suggestions on improving the documents of the central level, including the draft political report, the draft party building plans and the suggested additional specific admendments to the party statutes that the party Central Committee will present at the fifth party congress. Generally speaking, despite their different positions and situations and the realities in their respective localities during the past 5 years or more since the complete liberation of the south, the delegates, after many days of discussion, manifested a high unanimity of views with the party Central Committee's assessment of the situation. The delegates affirmed that despite the many difficulties facing our country during the postwar period, despite the many mistakes and shortcomings of our body of mature economic management cadres who have strived hard to make great efforts, despite the many privations in the lives of the local cadres and people during the past 5 years or more and in light of the resolution of the 4th national party congress and the resolutions of the 11th and 12th congresses of the provincial party organization, the entire country in general and Quang Dam-Da Nang in particular have scored very great achievements. Six years ago, when we took over the province, Quang Nam-Da Nang was a seriously ravaged locality with three-fourths of the hamlets and villages destroyed and four-fifths of the cultivated area left fallow and strewn with bombs and mines. It had an impoverished economy, and 500,000 people needed food supplies to avoid starvation. Meanwhile, in the urban areas, 60,000 people were out of work. Yet in the short span of 6 years, the local people have successfully rebuilt their native land, returning all the fallow land to cultivation and opening up new lands. This increased the cultivated area of 130,000 hectares in 1976 to 220,000 hectares in 1981 and the 220,000 tons of paddy equivalent in 1976 to 500,000 tons in 1981. Not only has Quang Nam-Da Nang been self-sufficient in food, it has food surpluses to assist some sister provinces and has properly discharged its grain obligations to the state.

What is more encouraging is that with the new production relations, the 240 lowland cooperatives and 34 mountain production groups formed during the years following liberation are developing their advantages, improving the irrigation system, applying scientific and technological advances in agriculture, carrying out intensive cultivation and multi-cropping, stepping up livestock breeding and repeatedly increasing rice yields. The province has four districts with an average annual paddy production of 8 to 10 tons per cultivated hectare. Among them, the Dien Ban District, the leading paddy production district, has achieved 10 tons per hectare. The hog population has also increased from 245,000 head in 1976 to 538,000 head in 1981. In addition, mulberry cultivation and sericulture in the province have improved rapidly: 2,000 hectares of mulberry and 1,000 tons of cocoons per year. The delegates estimated that if the provinces' mulberry area is 5,000 hectares by 1985, as planned in the current 5-year plan, and if sericulture is properly expanded, each person in the province will be supplied with 8 to 10 meters of cloth per year.

Dealing with the province's small and handicraft industries, many delegates affirmed that when the Americans and their puppets fled from the province, its small and handicraft industries, mainly designed to serve the U.S.-puppet war effort, were insignificant. Yet during the past 5 years or more, the province has built up a total of 77 diversified small and handicraft industries with a total annual gross output valued at around 1 billion [tir] dong. Particularly in the most recent years, the province has been able to produce various types of rare commodities such as cement of all types, 12-horsepower diesel engines and bicycles and towels for export. It has also been able to build fishing boats and boats in concrete reinforced with steel netting and to produce carbonic gas, liquid nitrogen and acetylene. Furthermore, it has successfully manufactured lightweight weaving machines with discarded materials. These commodities have been produced in greater quantities since the issuance of the resolution of the Sixth VCP Central Committee Plenum. This proves that Quang Nam-Da Nang's potential in producing consumer and export goods is great, not insignificant as evaluated by many people under the U.S.-puppet regime.

Along with forest exploitation, afforestation has become a large-scale mass movement across the province over the past 5 years. Since liberation Quang Nam-Da Nang has cultivated 15,000 hectares of forest, planted 57 million saplings in dispersed areas and exploited 160,000 cubic meters of lumber and 500,000 cubic meters of firewood. As for fishing, the province, thanks to improved management, proper activities of its motorized fishing boats and especially to the development of manual fish catching, has noticeably improved its fish deliveries to the state despite limited fuel supplies. Its production of fish sauce increased from 2 million liters in 1976 to 4.5 million in 1981, its annual production of shrimp sauce and salted fish is 1,200 tons and its frozen marine products for export increased from 209 tons in 1976 to 1,000 in 1981. Moreover, the province has bred fish in 3,000 hectares of fresh waters. The province's 1981 import-export figure was 300 million dong.

In the cultural and social fields, the province can take pride in successfully changing, basically, the man under the old regime into the new man under the new regime. Almost everyone has led a stable life, discarded the lavish lifestyle and engaged in productive labor in order to contribute to producing material wealth for society for the sake of the whole country and his own family.

The mass cultural movement has developed wholesomely everywhere and involved all people, especially youths. One in every three people in the province now goes to school. Popular education [words indistinct]. On the average, each person has a chance to attend cultural entertainment and film shows eight times a year. Meanwhile, party building tasks in the political, ideological and organizational aspects have been, on the whole, increasingly consolidated and developed.

The delegates observed that the province's achievements in such a short period were very great indeed given the grave, seemingly unsurmountable consequences of decades of war left behind by the old regime. They also observed that the achievements were due to the outstanding efforts of the local people and party organizations and the VCP's correct policies.

Although they were enthusiastic about the achievements, the delegates eagerly studied and discussed the mistakes and shortcomings mentioned in the central Party Committee's draft political report regarding the assessment of the situation and the grasping of the rules governing economic and social management, organizational structure, procedures and policies and so forth. Basically, the delegates fully agreed with the party Central Committee's assessment on every issue relating to the situation in the localities and their respective organizations. All of them agreed that the negative aspects must be eliminated and that everyone must make his own contributions to the common undertaking and not adopt the attitude of outsiders and put the blame on higher levels and other people.

On the lingering deficiencies and shortcomings, the delegates pointed out a number of pressing, current issues of concern for the Quang Nam-Da Nang party organizations and people. These included manifestations of ineffective and lax economic and social management. The delegates agreed on a number of objective causes that the central level specified in the draft political report. Some of these causes are that our entire people are restoring and building the national economy under extremely difficult conditions. Also, during the postwar period, cadres have undergone many behavorial changes, and some have been degenerate and deviant and expelled from the party. Others shun assignments to distant localities and grassroots-level units and have thus become bureaucratic, subjective, conservative, irresponsible, divorced from reality and have lost the masses' confidence. The administrative subsidy system has for many years been a burden for Quang Nam-Da Nang and for other parts of the country. This inefficient type of management has failed to promote production and, rather, has given rise to reliance on others, corruption, dishonest dealings and cadres' depravity. It has also caused serious violations of socialist and collective property and the people's rights. The delegates agreed that the administrative subsidy system must be done away with and supplanted by a work method using the uniform profit-and-loss accounting system in line with large-scale socialist production. Other shortcomings include exaggerated reporting about work achievements, the love of enjoyment of many cadres who shun assignments to grassroots-level units and the burdensome organizational structure which yields little economic efficiency.

Recognizing the existence of such shortcomings, the delegates affirmed that it is necessary to face the realities boldly and responsibly and not to complain or blame failure on objective causes. Party members demand that party committee echelons fully manifest their responsibilities, but they themselves also have the responsibility to make contributions so the current 5-year plan will end in great success.

The delegates suggested that the party Central Committee amend a number of specific policies and devise new policies to suit the new situation. They made suggestions on the following points:

It is necessary to adopt proper policies concerning the treatment and use of young cadres, of scientific and technical cadres and of teachers for the sake of future generations. On mistakes in cadre management, it is necessary to conduct stricter reviews so as to learn from experience and devise a rational economic structure, strengthen legality in economic management and clearly specify policies and functions in order to systematize economic management. They also suggested that measures be taken to protect honest struggling people, to distinguish truth from falsehood and to strengthen controls. Leading echelons should visit grassroots-level units more frequently to gather the people's opinions. Measures should be taken to avoid exaggerated reporting about work achievements, to combat attempts to delude higher-level cadres and conceal difficulties and shortcomings, to oppose opportunism and sycophancy and so forth.

After assessing the overall situation over the past 6 years, the delegates to the first round of the 13th congress of the Quang Nam-Da Nang provincial party organization fully agreed on the four economic objectives set forth by the central level. They also agreed on the 1981-82 production plan guidelines and on the necessity to renovate the managerial system in order to meet the requirements of the new management mechanism, considering this mechanism to be a determinant for set economic and social objectives and tasks.

FURTHER REPORTS ON CHARGES OF SOVIET ESPIONANGE

Admiral Sudomo's Comments

[Text] Admiral Sudomo, deputy commander of the Indonesian Armed Forces and commander of the Security and Order Restoration Command, said that the case involving an armed forces officer in a Soviet spy network in Indonesia is now being handled by his security command, since the case is clearly an act of subversion.

According to Admiral Sudomo, the officer carried out a subversive act by revealing state secrets. Sudomo stated this after attending the signing of the roster of the 1982 general elections permanent candidates at the Home Affairs Department today. He said that the armed forces leadership is constantly watching the activities of its officers, and trains them to be good officers.

AFP Report

BK110632 Hong Kong AFP in English 0140 GMT 11 Feb 82

[Text] Jakarta, 11 Feb (AF) -- An Indonesian military officer arrested here following a crackdown on a Soviet spy network has told his interrogators that he had been working with the Soviets for the past five years, it was reported here today.

Lieutenant Colonel Sudaryanto admitted that he had been assigned by the Soviets to obtain secret government documents, leading Jakarta newspaper SERITA BUANA (WORLD NEWS) reported. Col Sudaryanto said he had been in close contact with the head of the Jakarta branch of the Aeroflot airline, Aleksandr Finenko, who had helped him in carrying out his activities, the paper said.

The paper gave no details. This was the first disclosure of the interrogation of the Indonesian officer, who was captured on Saturday night after an airport scuffle as Soviet Assistant Military Attache Lt Col Sergey Igorov was being expelled on spying charges. Mr Finenko was also arrested at Halim Airport when he was seeing Colonel Igorov off. A fist fight broke out at the airport when Soviet officials tried to prevent Indonesian intelligence officers arresting the Aeroflot chief. Mr. Finenko had been followed for days after information that he had been active in espionange activities, the paper said.

The paper quoted prominent Indonesian lawyer Adnan Buyung Nasution as saying that Colonel Sudaryanto could be sentended to death if found guilty of subversion. Nasution said Mr Finenko should be assisted by a defence counsel, Indonesian or Russian, during his coming trial. Jakarta military commander Major General Norman Sasono has said that both Finenko and Col Sudaryanto will stand trial on charges of subversion against Indonesia. Meanwhile, Attorney General Major General Ismael Saleh said last night that the case would be handled by the prosecution office before being handed to the court.

Reports from Medan in North Sumatra said today some 20 Indonesian youths staged a demonstration outside the Russian Consulate there waving anti-Soviet slogans. There was a similar demonstration in Jakarta yesterday.

Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja today conferred with President Suharto on the current relations between Indonesia and the Soviet Union over the spying affair, which soured ties between the two countries. Mr. Mokhtar told parliament on Tuesday that should undesirable condequences happen in Jakarta's relations with Moscow, it would the responsibility of the Soviet Union.

Jakarta newspapers today strongly attacked the Soviet Union for its spying activities here and called on Moscow to stop them.

Denial on Further Expulsions

BK110638 Hong Kong AFP in English 0419 GMT 11 Feb 82

[Text] Jakarta, 11 Feb (AFP) — Foreign Ministry officials today refused to comment on reports here that another Soviet Embassy attache, Gregor Odariyouk, had also been expelled on spy charges. If, however, there was a new expulsion, military sources said it would be officially announced. Mr Odariyouk had been involved in a fist fight at Halim Airport on Saturday night, where several Soviet officials were seeing off an assistant military attache who had been deported on spying charges. Mr Odariyouk was detained together with Aleksandr Finenko, the Jakarta Aeroflot chief, after the airport scuffle. He was released after Soviet ambassador, Ivan Shpedko, assured the authorities that he had diplomatic status.

The Foreign Ministry later today denied that Mr Odariyouk had been ordered to leave the country. "Reports on Odariyouk's expulsion are not correct. He is not declared persona non grata," Foreign Ministry chief spokesman S.A.M. Alaydrus told newsmen.

Vice President Adam Malik today held talks with President Suharto believed to have centered on relations with the Soviet Union following the unmasking of Soviet spying activities in Indonesia.

Malik Warning on Spying

BK110851 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0810 GMT 11 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Jakarta, 11 Feb (ANTARA) -- Vice President Adam Malik has warned foreign nations with diplomatic missions in this country to refrain from interfering in the internal affairs of Indonesia and less to commit themselves in espionage activities. "We are a friendly country and like to be friends," the vice president declared when asked to comment on the expulsion of Soviet Assistant Military Attache Lt Col Sergey Igorov of the Soviet Embassy here after being declared persona non grata on charges of espionage in this country.

The vice president issued the comment following questions by newman after a meeting with President Suharto at Bina Graha here today. During the meeting with the president the vice president reported about his projected visit to Thailand to attend the conference of the Pacific Area Travel Association (PATA) in that country starting February 14.

There could be no tolerance against whoever or whatever country committing espionage activities in this country, he declared. "Do not interfere in our internal affairs and don't steal our documents," he declared, in obvious reference to secret documents to be transferred to the Soviets, resulting in the expulsion of the Soviet diplomat.

The manager of the Soviet Aeroflot airline in Jakarta, Aleksandr Finenko, was arrested together with Lt Col Sudaryanto, an Indonesian officer, by Indonesian security authorities for interrogation and future trial in connection with the spy case of the Soviet Embassy official.

Asked whether the spy activities would influence Soviet-Indonesian relations, the vice president said: "We just see later." Asked whether only the Soviet Union was engaged in espionage in this country, Vice President Adam Malik said: "I cannot say that. But this is a warning to all friendly countries and those with missions here to refrain from espionage activities here because we will take action in line with the integrity of a country," the vice president declared.

Replying to another question that an Indonesian senior military officer was involved in the spy case, the vice president said: "This should serve as a warning to us that we have our responsibilities and loyalties to the country and people and to practise pancasila."

"The loyalty of a citizen is the love for the country itself; this should never be forgotten, and this national mission should never be ignored," he declared.

The vice president was also asked to comment about the public demonstration against the Soviet Embassy in the center of the city Wednesday in protest against the espionage activities by Soviet officials in this country.

The vice president said the demonstration was "a spontaneous and logical reaction" of the people against the spy activities. "It is not happening in our country only," he pointed out. Vice President Adam Malik said one should not generalize matters when asked whether the demonstration would bear a bad influence on the ties between Indonesia and the Soviet Union. He said if one made a mistake this did not mean that all were in error. One should keep to his own affairs, like for example in matters of trade one should keep to matters of business and not interfere in the internal affairs of a country.

MOKHTAR SPEAKS TO PRESS ON KHMER COALITION

Statement on Khmer Rouge

BK060941 Hong Kong AFP in English 0923 GMT 6 Feb 82

[Text] Jakarta, 6 Feb (AFP) -- Indonesia today warned the deposed Khmer Rouge Government that it may lose that support of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) at the United Nations if it continues to reject the ASEAN-proposed loose coalition of anti-Vietnamese forces in Cambodia.

Speaking to newsmen after a meeting with President Suharto, Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said he quite appreciated Malaysian Prime Minister Dr Mahathir Mohamed's recent statement that Malaysia might withdraw its backing of the Khmer Rouge at the United Nations should the latter turn down the ASEAN proposal.

Without saying whether or not he had discussed the matter with Dr Mahathir Mohamed, Mr Mokhtar indicated that making Dr Mahathir's suggestion a common ASEAN stand would require all-round consultations first, and preferably soon. He also deplored the fact that Khmer Rouge had not come out with any other alternative to settle the Cambodia problem. The Khmer Rouge government, booted out of Phnom Penh by Vietnamese troops 3 years ago, still holds the Cambodian seat at the UN with ASEAN support.

View on Role of PRC

[Text] In reply to press questions in Bogor today, Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja said that Chinese participation in solving the Kampuchean problem politically was very important. China, having a great influence on the Khmer Rouge, should be able to convince the Khieu Samphan-led group to take part in the creation of a coalition government in Kampuchea with the other groups in an attempt to solve the Kampuchean problem, Mokhtar said.

According to latest reports, the Khmer Rouge is suggesting the creation of a Khmer Rouge-led military force to fight the Vietnamese.

SUZUKI NOT TO MEET REAGAN PRIOR TO JUNE SUMMIT

OW121043 Tokyo KYODO in English 1026 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Feb 12, (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki will not meet with U.S. President Ronald Reagan prior to the economic summit of seven industrial nations scheduled to be held in Versailles, near Paris, in early June, a government source said Friday.

This is the first reaction to U.S. Ambassador to Japan Mike Mansfield's statement in Nashville, Tenn., Thursday that he personally thought it would be useful if the two leaders met every year to discuss matters of mutual interest and concern. Mansfield voiced this opinion when he was asked if Suzuki should meet with Reagan in an effort to iron out their differences and to avoid protectionist legislation being approved by Congress. The ambassador, who is on home leave, was in Nashville to attend a seminar on Japan-U.S. relations. He is scheduled to return to Tokyo on Feburary 27.

Mansfield's statement was believed to be an indirect appeal to Japan to present concrete measures to open up its market to foreign countries at the June summit. Japan is expected to be hard pressed to avoid summit talks with the U.S. before the Versailles conference should the U.S. propose such a summit.

SAKURAUCHI PLANS TO VISIT U.S. IN LATE MARCH

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 12, (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi is planning to visit the United States between March 20 and 25 in his efforts to resolve strain in the bilateral relations over defense and trade imbalance issues, ministry sources said Monday. The sources said that the ministry has already obtained U.S. consent to the Sakurauchi's visit.

The foreign minister intends to discuss the trade and defense issues with U.S. officials, including President Ronald Reagan, Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Trade Representative William E. Brock, they added.

DIETMEN TO VISIT U.S. FOR TRADE TALKS 20-27 FEB

OW121237 Tokyo KYODO in English 1226 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 12, (KYODO) -- Masumi Esaki, chairman of a special committee on international trade problems, told Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Friday that he would lead a delegation of Dietmen to the United States later this month to discuss Japan-U.S. trade issues. Esaki, a former [?head of the] International Trade and Industry Ministry, said the delegation would depart February 20 and visit Washington and New York before leaving for home February 27.

The group plans to meet with President Ronald Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander Haig. It will also exchange views with John Danforth, chairman of the Senate Finance Subcommittee on International Trade; Robert Dole, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee; and Charles Percy, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

In the meeting at the Prime Minister's official residence, Suzuki handed Esaki a letter to deliver to Reagan and urged that the delegation explain Japan's efforts to resolve trade frictions to U.S. congressional leaders. Suzuki told Esaki that while talks with the U.S. administration have gone relatively smoothly, there was a major difference in views with the U.S. Congress. He urged the delegation to listen carefully to U.S. demands.

The Senate is now considering a bill that calls for greater reciprocity in international trade. Esaki told the prime minister he would attempt to ascertain the true intentions of Congress concerning the bill and deepen mutual understanding. Following the trip to the United States, Esaki will lead a similar delegation to Europe in mid-March.

FOREIGN MINISTRY STATEMENT CONDEMNS 'TEAM SPIRIT'

SK142246 Pyongyang KCNA in English 2228 GMT 14 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 15 (KCNA) -- The spokesman of the Foreign Ministry of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea issued a statement on February 14 denouncing the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets for staging again a large-scale "South Korea-U.S. joint military exercise" with the northern half of the republic as a target of attack from February 13. Follows the full text of the statement:

Frantic with their manoeuvres for the provocation of a new war in Korea, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets are again staging a large-scale "South Korea-U.S. joint military exercise" with the northern half of the republic as a target of attack from the 13th of February, despite the strong opposition of the entire Korean people and the world peace-loving people.

According to an official announcement of the U.S. imperialists, in this "South Korea-U.S. joint military exercise" codenamed "Team Spirit 1982" are mobilized huge forces 157,500 strong in all including the U.S. imperialist aggression troops occupying South Korea, South Korean puppet army and U.S. ground, naval and air forces and marines stationed in the U.S. mainland and the military bases in Okinawa of Japan and the Pacific and various up-to-date military equipment and new-type mass destruction weapons including fighter bombers "F-16." As a result, a great number of warships including those of the U.S. Seventh Fleet and tactical weapons are now being moved and concentrated into the Korean Peninsula from the U.S. military bases in the seas surrounding Japan and the Pacific and the U.S. mainland, and a horrible wartime posture is established throughout South Korea.

The U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets are clamouring that the "Team Spirit 1982" exercise not only combines the overall "landing operation" and "attacking operation" on the sea and ground and in the air but also far surpasses the previous "Team Spirit" military exercises in the scale of forces and equipment mobilized in it, therefore, being a military exercise "largest in history in scale" unprecedented in any region of the world.

Such aggressive and provocative military exercise as "Team Spirit 1982" staged by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets at a time when the government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea is making every effort to remove the tension in Korea and achieve the reunification of the country by a peaceful means clearly shows how feverish they are to lead the situation to the brink of war, going against the unanimous desire of the entire Korean people and the world peace-loving people for peace in Korea and her peaceful reunification and the demand of the times.

The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the entire Korean people regard the reckless "Team Spirit 1982" war exercise of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppet clique as a wanton violation of the Korean armistice agreement and a grave challenge to the entire Korean people and the world peace-loving people desirous of peace in Korea and her peaceful reunification, and resolutely denounce it.

It was known to the world from long ago what purpose the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets pursue in staging the "Team Spirit" military exercises annually. The "Team Spirit 1982" military exercise is a "test war" and a "preliminary war" fully disclosing the aggressive design of the U.S. imperialists to complete the preparations for the provocation of a new war and keep hold on the whole of the Korean Peninsula by force.

The U.S. imperialists drew up a new "combat power buildup program" from the outset of the new year and have stepped it up on a full-scale, while sending to South Korea a number of war servants to inspect the military demarcation line and hold war confabs with the South Korean puppets.

The aggressive nature and danger of the current exercise are more saliently revealed in the fact that they mobilized in it new-type destructive weapons and most of the U.S. armed forces in South Korea and the U.S. mainland, Japan and the Pacific region and have taken the northern half of the republic as a target of attack in all exercises, such as "landing operation" and "attacking operation."

While announcing to the public the "Team Spirit 1982" military exercise, the U.S. imperialists attempted to veil the aggressive purpose of this exercise with such poppycock as a "war deterrent" to someone and "defence" of South Korea and in the follow-up "Defence White Paper" they put up the stereotyped pretext of what is called "the North's supremacy in the military force."

This is the habitual tactics employed by the U.S. imperialists to justify their manoeuvres to provoke a new war in Korea and mislead world public opinion.

What is all the more ridiculous is that the U.S. imperialists even talked nonsense about "inviting" the members of our side to the Military Armistice Commission and the members of the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission to watch the "Team Spirit 1982" exercise in an attempt to justify the exercise.

The fun of the aggressor "inviting" the other who is made a target of his aggressive exercise is a ridiculous act which can be committed only by the most brazen-faced provocateur and an intolerable insult to the Korean people and the world peace-loving people. All these facts patently show that the U.S. imperialists are the most infamous aggressors and disturbers of peace in Asia and the world.

The "Team Spirit 1982" exercise also shows that the so-called "unification proposal" brought forward by the traitor Chon Tu-hwan some time ago was an ostentatious deceptive one aimed to conceal the "two Koreas" plot and war policy of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets and shirk their responsibility for the aggravation of the situation in Korea.

Now the peoples of many countries of the world strongly denounce the U.S. imperialists' criminal moves to ignite a war in Korea by staging another aggressive military exercise. The U.S. imperialists must give up the anachronistic day-dream, stop their reckless war exercise at once, take off the "U.N. Forces" helmets and withdraw all the aggressive forces from South Korea at the earliest possible date in accordance with the U.N. resolution.

The traitor Chon Tu-hwan must discontinue his indiscreet treacherous act in running wild in the new war provocation manoeuvres, and the Japanese reactionaries must stop at once their criminal act in availing themselves of the U.S. imperialists' scheme to start a new war in Korea, running counter to the interests of their own people.

The present developments in Korea demand all the justice- and peace-loving people of the world to pay more serious attention to the new war provocation manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets.

The Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea and the Korean people call upon the governments and peoples of the socialist, non-aligned and all the peace-loving countries of the world, international organizations, democratic organizations and peace champions to strongly denounce the aggressive "Team Spirit 1982" exercise being staged by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets.

We call upon the U.S. people to oppose resolutely the criminal moves of the U.S. imperialists to drive out again their dear sons and daughters into a war of aggression in Korea and make them worthless victims, and upon the Japanese people to oppose decisively the crimes of the Japanese people to oppose decisively the crimes of the Japanese reactionaries and the U.S. imperialists who are defiling their sacred territory by converting it into a launching base and supply base for the U.S. imperialists in their war of aggression in Korea.

We are convinced that the governments and peoples of all the peace-loving countries of the world who desire peace in Korea and her peaceful reunification will actively respond to this call of ours this time, too, as in the past.

NODONG SINMUN SCORES 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982' EXCERCISE

[NODONG SINMUN 16 February commentary: "A Grave Provocation Disturbing Peace and Straining the Situation"]

[Text] From 13 February, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets are staging in South Korea a large-scale military exercise codenamed "Team Spirit 1982." Mobilized in this war exercise, which is to last until 26 April, are over 157,000 troops, including 57,000 U.S. troops in South Korea, several army divisions and infantry brigades stationed around the Korean Peninsula and from the continental United States, battalion-size infantry strike forces, landing strike forces, a carrier combat group, naval and marine corps forces belonging to U.S. Seventh Fleet and strategic and tactical combat wings and modern equipment including AWACS and F-16 fighter-bombers. This war exercise, which is based on landing and offensive operations, will be conducted in three different stages. It is noted, in particular, that field mobilization training participated in by six divisions will be held for 8 days from late March to early April.

A spokesman of the South Korea-U.S. Combined Forces Command babbled this military exercise is the largest ever held. The military exercise is being held when the situation on the Korean Peninsula is being strained more than ever before by the war maneuvers of the U.S. imperialists and the puppets, and the U.S.-Japan military collusion is being strengthened to drag Japan into an aggressive war against Korea. The "Team Spirit 1982" military exercise is a naked maneuver to step up and perfect war preparations and an extremely dangerous war racket disturbing peace, straining the situation on the Korean Peninsula and leading the situation to the brink of war by waging a provocative military exercise at a time when they should relax tension for peace in and the peaceful reunification of Korea. This shows the vicious intent of the U.S. imperialists.

The incumbent U.S. rulers, attempting to hold on to South Korea as a colonial military base and to push ahead with the policy of war against the northern half of the republic, have stressed the strategic importance of the Korean Peninsula and vital U.S. interests in South Korea. They have raved that they would not hesitate to wage war to safeguard them.

Revising the U.S. troop withdrawal plan into one for troop reinforcement to implement their aggressive design, they are constantly strengthening U.S. troops in South Korea. They even recently dragged in numerous offensive weapons, including modern F-16 fighter-bombers, in accord with their new troop reinforcement plan. They are attempting to turn South Korea more thoroughly into a dangerous nuclear battlefield by bringing in new nuclear weapons and even neutron bombs.

Working out a short-term operational plan and nuclear war plan against our republic, the U.S. imperialists are staging war exercise rackets in order to perfect such plans. They are attempting to drag in military forces stationed in Okinawa and around the Korean Peninsula and even from the continental United States in the event they provoke a war in Korea, and they are stepping up their combat capability.

The leaders of the U.S. imperialists have unhesitatingly raved that when a war breaks out on the Korean Peninsula, the United States will dispatch military forces from the army, navy and air force and part of the mobile strike forces to Korea. It has been learned that they are going to evaluate their strategic mobility capability in an emergency by having the troops which will be deployed on the Korean Peninsula at the initial stage of an emergency participate in this exercise.

The U.S. imperialists are accelerating the study of an emergency in the Far East and the establishment of a tripartite military alliance among the United States, Japan and South Korea, while maneuvering to drag the Japanese reactionaries into aggression on Korea.

The U.S. imperialists are actively inciting the South Korean puppets to new war provocations. As the faithful executor of the U.S. imperialists' policy of war, the South Korean puppets are mobilizing all material and manpower resources for the new war preparations and repeatedly committing provocations against us while inspiring anticommunist confrontation.

The "Team Spirit 1982" military exercise is a naked expression of the wicked schemes to trigger a new war against the northern half of the republic and a trial and preparatory war for realizing the ambition of invading all of Korea by force.

All the Korean people condemn and denounce the U.S. imperialists' desperate new war provocation maneuvers as grave crimes threatening our people and obstructing the cause of national reunification. Because of the U.S. imperialists' new war provocation maneuvers, the dangerous situation in which a war may break out at any moment is being prolonged. If a war breaks out again in our country because of their adventurous war maneuvers, it will easily spread outside of the boundaries of Korea. This arouses great concern on the part of the peace-loving people of the world.

It is no accident that many world nations are strongly protesting and denouncing the "Team Sprit 1982" military training [hunryong] by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets. The U.S. imperialists are war maniacs and disturbers of peace who aggravate tension in Korea and who are attempting to trigger a War.

As clearly shown by the "Team Spirit 1982" military exercises staged by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets, the danger of war in Korea comes from the South. The U.S. imperialists' utterances about peace on the Korean Peninsula are deceitful propaganda aimed at concealing their true nature as aggressors and war maniacs.

The military exercise waged by the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets has again demonstrated the deceitful nature of traitor Chon Tu-Hwan's 22 January proposal. His remarks on reunification -- while retaining the U.S. imperialist aggressors, who are desperately attempting to trigger a war, and while staging the dangerous war exercise with them -- are preposterous. His utterances did not stem from a true intention for reunification. Peaceful reunification and war maneuvers cannot be consistent. Traitor Chon Tu-Hwan's proposal is the result of the U.S. imperialists' double-dealing policy and is aimed at perpetuating division under the signboard of reunification.

The U.S. imperialists' new war provocation maneuvers are the basic factor obstructing the peaceful reunification of Korea and heightening tension. Unless an end is put to the U.S. imperialists' occupation of South Korea and to their new war provocation maneuvers, we can neither think of peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea nor can peace and security in Asia be guaranteed. The U.S. imperialists should ponder the consequences arising from their adventurous military policy and should act with discretion. They should stop war exercise rackets and should immediately withdraw from South Korea in accord with the UN resolution, hauling down the signboard of the UN forces.

Traitor Chon Tu-hwan should stop the treacherous act of running amok with reckless new war provocation maneuvers and should immediately step down from power. If the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets continue adhering to the line of war, they will be held entirely responsible for the consequences arising therefrom and be more strongly denounced and rejected as aggressors and war maniacs.

KWP SUPPORTS PROPOSAL FOR 100-MAN CONFERENCE

[Statement by KWP spokesman on 14 February supporting CPRF proposal for convocation of 100-man joint conference -- read by announcer]

[Text] Today, as the history of national division is continuing indefinitely, the Korean people's burning desire for the fatherland's reunification is growing stronger with each passing day. Reflecting this desire of our people for reunification, the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF], in its statement issued on 10 February, advanced a new proposal calling for convocation of a joint conference of politicians from North and South and of Korean communities abroad, for consultating on and settlement of the country's reunification question and the question of North-South relations.

The proposal for convening a 100-man joint conference advanced by the CPRF is now being widely supported and welcomed by the entire Korean people at home and abroad and by personages of broad social circles in the world. The KWP fully supports the proposal for convening a 100-man joint conference, considering that it fully accords with our fundamental stand for the acceleration of the reunification of the fatherland.

In the past, the KWP has made every possible effort to realize the policies and proposals for reunification advanced by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. Our party has continued to take concrete steps to put into practice the basic policy of the fatherland's reunification which the great leader has declared to achieve the cause of reunification, independently and democratically and in a peaceful way, as well as to achieve the three principles of independence, peaceful reunification and grand national unity for the fatherland's reunification, and other reunification policies and proposals for general elections, establishment of a confederal system, withdrawal of foreign forces, conclusion of a peace agreement, arms reduction and easing the tense situation, convocation of a political consultative conference and a grand national congress, realization of multi-sided collaboration and exchanges, visits by personages of the two sides and exchanges of letters. In particular, we have taken all possible steps to put into effect the well-known proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] put forward by the great leader at the sixth party congress.

Our party has not only advanced fair, just and rational proposals for the fatherland's reunification but has also consecutively taken significant steps to solve the basic questions which constitute prerequisites for independent and peaceful reunification by taking the initiative in withdrawing foreign troops from the area of the northern half of the republic and reducing arms. In addition, we have done whatever we could if it was for national harmony and reunification.

All of these rational proposals and sincere efforts have aroused unanimous support and sympathy at home and abroad. But all of them have failed to produce the desired result. This is entirely due to the obstructionist maneuvers of the South Korean authorities encouraged by outside forces. The South Korean authorities have rejected the just reunification proposals every time our party has put them forward, and they have only sought splittist schemes running counter to the nation. In particular, the present rulers of South Korea are resorting to every despicable trick to block the great influence of the proposal for founding the DCRK, our most realistic and reasonable proposal for reunification, and to stifle the daily growing desire for peaceful reunification in South Korea.

Clear evidence of this is the rackets they made recently by coming forth with a so-called proposal and proposals for pilot projects. Now, even a greater obstacle has been created on the road to fatherland's reunification.

The proposal for convening a 100-man joint conference advanced by the CPRF constitutes a timely step in overcoming the prevailing difficulties and opening up a new phase for reunification and a splendid means of bringing about fine results on the road to the peaceful reunification of the country. The proposal for convening a joint conference to be participated in by politicians from the North and South and the Korean communities abroad is a just one when the historic experience of North-South dialogue and the prevailing situation of our country are considered.

The history of the North-South dialogue teaches that negotiations for reunification should be conducted only among those who desire reunification and that nothing can be expected from negotiations with those seeking split. Moreover, the present ruler of South Korea, as the notorious executioner in the Kwangju massacre and murderer, has even disqualified himself from turning up at a sacred dialogue for discussing important matters of the nation related to the reunification of the country.

Today he started a large-scale war exercise codenamed "Team Spirit 1982" with the U.S. imperialist aggression forces, kicking up a racket against us and viciously challenging the country's peace and peaceful reunification. It cannot be but an insult to the sacred cause of reunification to have a dialogue with such a fellow. The present political parties and organizations in South Korea, trumped up in the womb of the present fascist military system which made its appearance in the bloodbath of fellow countrymen, cannot be a party to negotiations for reunification as long as they act as a handmaiden of the ruler.

Therefore, the only possible way to solve the reunification question through a dialogue under the present situation is to convene a joint conference of politicians from the North and South and abroad. If the politicians at home and abroad who have national conscience and the desire for reunification and national salvation get together and have sincere consultations giving priority to the concept of the nation, the national difficulties facing the people will be overcome without problems and a correct way will be found to make a breakthrough for the reunification cause.

We believe that the 100 politicians to participate in the joint conference will certainly play a due role in the achievement of the country's reunification cause. The 100-man joint conference eagerly desired by the whole nation must be convened at an early date. Under the prevailing circumstances, the convocation of a joint conference will make a specific contribution to the acceleration of the fatherland's reunification.

All politicians of the North and South and Korean communities abroad must actively struggle for an early convocation of the 100-man joint conference. By so doing, they must fulfill their obligation before history and the nation. To be in the forefront in achieving the national cause of the fatherland's reunification is a noble duty of the politicians of Korea. At the same time, this is a true mission for patriotic politicians. In order to accomplish the honorable national mission entrusted to them, all conscientious politicians must devote themselves to the work to convene the 100-man joint conference -- a true forum for dialogue for reunification.

The South Korean rulers must provide the conditions for politicians to participate in the joint conference and must not prevent them from taking part in it. First of all, they must release Kim Tae-chung and all other detained politicians and give them freedom of political activities.

The attitude taken toward the 100-man joint conference is a touchstone that will tell whether one indeed desires reunification or seeks permanent division. The rulers of South Korea must look straight at the trend of the times and act with discretion if they do not want to be stigmatized as splittists in history.

Our party will spare no effort for the early convocation of the joint conference of politicians of the North and South and abroad.

14 February 1982, Pyongyang

NODONG SINMUN SUPPORTS CPRF CONFERENCE PROPOSAL

SK150428 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2228 GMT 12 Feb 82

[NODONG SINMUN 14 February editorial: "100-Man Joint Meeting Should Be Convened at an Early Date"]

[Text] On 11 February, the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] issued a statement in connection with the grave barrier created on the road to reunification by the more naked national splittist maneuvers by the splittists at home and abroad.

Expressing deep concern over the fact that the tragedy of national division which began in the 1940'2 is still being prolonged today in the 1980's and is being continued every day, the statement noted that we have sought all possible measures for national reunification in every step of the situation from the first day of the national division. We have repeatedly put forward reasonable proposals and actively made all efforts to achieve such measures.

Stressing the importance of negotiations between the North and the South for achieving the nation's independent and peaceful reunification, the statement referred to the purpose and the essence of negotiations and proposed convening a joint meeting of 100 politicians from the North, the South and abroad as an organ for reunification negotiations.

The statement clarified the mission, the nature and composition of the 100-man joint meeting, as well as the agenda items to be discussed. It announced the list of the members to participate in the meeting, as an appendix to the statement.

Our proposal for convening a 100-man joint meeting by politicians from the North, the South and overseas is a new initiative to provide a way for genuine negotiations on reunification by removing difficulties placed on the road to reunification.

Warmly welcoming the CPRF proposal for convening the 100-man joint meetings, a new measure for negotiation, we fully support this statement. Our proposal reflects the desire of the entire Korean people to live in a unified fatherland happily and peacefully by removing the barriers of division. This proposal has aroused great sympathy among compatriots at home and abroad. The world's progressive people calling for the independent and peaceful reunification of Korea have welcomed our new proposal. All of this clearly proves that our patriotic proposal for holding the 100-man joint meeting is totally just and is the most correct way for opening the road for negotiations on reunification under the current situation.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-Song has taught: If the division continues, and national reunification is not achieved at an early date, our nation will be permanently divided into two and the South Korean people cannot escape the condition of colonial slavery.

The national division, which is being deepened every day in our country, is causing great misfortune and sufferings and, in particular, immeasurable calamities to the South Korean people, who are under the U.S. imperialists' military occupation and the fascist rule. Continuation of division is increasing antagonism and confrontation between the North and the South and leading to a grave phase of tragic struggle within the same race. We have put forward various concrete proposals for realizing collaboration and interchange between the North and the South -- including conducting a general election -- and for promoting unity and reunification. We have made all sincere efforts to achieve the proposals. Nevertheless, a grave situation such as that existing today has been created. This is because the South Korean puppets have persistently pursued the criminal policy of division under the patronage of the U.S. imperialists.

The current situation urgently demands that we seek methods to overcome the crisis by taking measures for national salvation. It is important in so doing to correctly solve the question of negotiations between the North and the South. As we have repeatedly clarified, our nation's reunification should be achieved peacefully, based on democratic principles by the Korean people themselves without outside interference.

In doing so, dialogue and negotiations are the indispensable methods. Therefore, negotiations, in all cases, should be negotiations for reunification, not for division. Negotiations for the division are fraudulent. Such negotiations will only cover up the criminal acts of the splittists. Only negotiations for reunification will enable us to tide over the difficulties and to seek measures for reunification. The 100-man joint meeting proposed by the CPRF is aimed at seeking such national salvation measures.

The proposal to convene the 100-man joint meeting of noted politicians from the North, South and overseas who have a national conscience clearly demonstrates our consistent stand and firm will to eliminate grave barriers and obstacles to reunification and consolidate the foundation for reunification. Our proposal is a well-timed and realistic one corresponding to the requirements of the current situation. The 100-man joint meeting is a most reasonable organ which can be formed under the present political situation in South Korea.

The incumbent South Korean ruler is pursuing the line for division and repeatedly committing treacherous national crimes running counter to reunification. The formation of a negotiation organ composed of noted politicians is a measure corresponding to the purpose and mission of negotiations. Our experience shows that when we associate with those who pursue division, we cannot take any affirmative measure to improve and develop the relations between the North and South or expedite the reunification cause.

The murderer, who is being cursed and denounced for massacring a number of the fellow countrymen after emerging as the cruel strangler of the movement for democracy and reunification, is intensifying the policy for division and fascism. Negotiating with such a man would be mockery against the sacred national cause for reunification and a treacherous act against the South Korean people. The incumbent ruler in South Korea pretends he is interested in reunification by raving about a general election, pilot projects and so forth. This is a trick to perpetuate division by misleading people with empty and absurd political theories.

The provisional agreement on basic relations between the North and South and the 20-point pilot projects put forward by him are not new. Most of the contents are parts of the historic proposals we made for collaboration and interchanges between the North and South. His plans are aimed at maintaining division under the signboard of reunification. It is clear that he who violates national sovereignty by begging for the U.S. imperialist aggressors' permanent occupation to South Korea, who incites antagonism among the people by waging anticommunist confrontation rackets, who arrested and imprisoned patriots and democratic figures including Kim Tae-chung by implementing the barbarous terrorist rule and who is repressing the people's aspiration for reunification at gunpoint, cannot advance a genuine plan for reunification.

Proceeding from the aspiration for unity and reunification, we recently accorded an opportunity to him to apologize for his crimes and to traverse the road of patriotism. However, he intensified anticommunist confrontation rackets against us, rather than making an apology for his crimes and accepting our leniency. He is straining the situation by staging war exercise rackets, such as "Team Spirit 1982," together with the U.S. imperialists.

Political parties and public organizations in South Korea, as long as they act as puppets of the incumbent ruler, cannot be a partner to the sacred negotiations for reunification. It is a lesson we drew from the experience in the North-South dialogue that the splittists should be excluded. Many contacts and negotiations were held between the North and South from the early part of the 1970's. However, none of them was successful despite our patient efforts.

The meetings were ruptured not because of a difference of opinion about procedural and technical problems but because of the erroneous attitude and position of the South Korean authorities who persistently pursued the splittist line eve in the dialogue discussing the reunification question and hindered the dialogue's progress.

The organ of negotiations for reunification, composed only of figures opposing division and aspiring for reunification, will contribute to achieving reunification by attaining national unity and eliminating barriers to reunification. The convocation of the 100-man joint meeting is just. With prolonged division, misunderstanding and mistrust are created between the North and the South, new obstacles are placed on the road to reunification, tension is aggravated and peace is gravely threatened. This situation demands that we relax tension by forming a realistic organ for negotiations and improve and develop relations between the North and South.

The 100-man joint meeting must be convened at an early date. The 100-man joint meeting, at which all the personages in the North, South and abroad, regardless of their residences and belongings in the North or South, will discuss reunification, serves as a multilateral framework to discuss the question of reunification and provide solutions.

The joint meeting will serve as a democratic venue for negotiations reflecting the national aspiration for reunification by discussing all possible proposals for reunification, including the well-known proposal for the establishment of the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo. By discussing issues to realize collaboration and exchanges between the North and South, the meeting will serve as a venue of national unity and conciliation capable of meshing the strength and wisdom of the whole nation in a single national ideology.

The convocation of the 100-man joint meeting will be an important event contributing positively to tearing down the wall of division and opening a future for national reunification. For the politicians in the North, South and aborad, participating in the 100-man joint meeting to discuss the questions of the national reunification is a sacred national right. It is an undeniable demand of national history.

It is the inevitable duty of the politicians to alleviate the pains and misery endured by the nation and to realize the national aspiration and demands. At a time when the fate of the nation and the people is in question, the politicians' responsibility and duty are heavier than ever. For the politicians living in the North, South and abroad no cause is greater than to reunify the divided fatherland and rejoin the severed national ties. Now is the time for the politicians in the North, South and abroad to follow the road leading to reunification.

Even though the politicians living in the North, South and abroad have differences in their ideas, religions and political views, they cannot possibly have differences in their concern over the fate of the nation and people and the value of national reunification. If all the politicians assume a genuinely patriotic attitude to resolve the question of reunification on the basis of the common national ideology and national conscience, there is no reason whatsoever why they should not sit together in a historic meeting.

We express our firm conviction and expectation that the South Korean politicians who are concerned over the fate of the nation will, fully realizing their mission, act in accordance with the proposal of the CPRF which called for a grand meeting for reunification.

To make the politicians in the North, South and abroad, who are living in different places under different conditions, sit together, we must provide an atmosphere suitable for such an occasion and provide necessary conditions. The South Korean ruling circle should not prevent the politicians from attending the meeting. Releasing political prisoners, including Kim Tae-chung, and reinstating freedom for political activities for all the politicians, would facilitate the convening of such a meeting.

Doing this will help the South Korean ruling circle escape punishment for crimes they have committed before the fatherland and people and will serve as an opportunity to test whether they are genuinely interested in promoting trust between the North and South and alleviating the pain of division suffered by the people.

If they try to block the convocation of the 100-man joint meeting, they will be committing another indelible crime before the nation. It is a single unanimous aspiration of the Korean people to end the tragedy of national division, which has been in force for 37 years, and reunify the nation at an early date.

We should achieve national reunification at an early date and hand over a unified fatherland to future generations. If we fail to carry out this important cause, no politician can say they have fulfilled their noble duty. We will try everything possible to promote the cause of national reunification on the basis of great national unity. If all the people unite, the historic cause of national reunification will be achieved.

TONG-A ILBO CRITICIZES NORTH UNIFICATION POLICY

[Editorial: "The Disorder of North Korea's Unification Policy -- It Has Failed To Find an Alternative in Reacting to Our Practical Proposal"]

[Excerpts] The North Korean Kim Il-song group has revealed signs of perplexity in reacting to the Seoul side's proposal for unification. Using Kim Il, North Korea has groundlessly rejected President Chon Tu-hwan's 22 January proposal for adopting a unification constitution, for convening a consultative meeting for national unification, for signing an interim agreement on basic relations between the North and South and for banning the arms race.

While proposing to conduct political negotiations between the North and South, the Kim Il-song group offered terms which the South Korean side could not accept. This shows that North Korea has no intention of discussing the unification question and that its unification policy has bogged down in disarray. While advancing infeasible proposals on a grand people's conference, a Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo system and a political consultative meeting, Kim Il-song pretended that he was taking the initiative in the unification question.

By advancing proposals for holding summit talks between the North and South, for adopting a unification constitution and for paving the way toward opening up North and South Korean societies, the South Korean side has recently assumed a positive stand, hinting that, to achieve national harmony, it will willingly discuss the proposals Kim Il-song has advanced so far, thus perplexing Kim. Thus, the fictitious nature of Kim's disguised unification propaganda campaign is doomed to be exposed. He refuses to accept South Korea's comprehensive and practical unification proposal only because he is afraid of this just and fair proposal and that his unification policy is in a mess.

Without finding any alternative, Kim Il-song has advanced a 30-year old proposal for convening a North-South political consultative conference, which South Korea cannot accept, in an attempt to deceive the North Korean people and to blur the key points of South Korea's proposal for adopting a unification constitution and for opening access to North and South Korean societies.

There is only one approach to unification -- that is, an approach in which the homogeneous people under two different systems can seek harmony and strive to find common ground in their endeavors for unification. Firmly believing that North Korea will eventually join us in this cause, we urge the 18 million North Korean people to denounce Kim Il-song for refusing to discuss the unification question and to join the ranks for the fatherland's unification. We should be vigilant against North Korea's cunning maneuvers for communization as proven by the spy incident involving a fisherman's family and rounded up by the Agency for National Security Planning on 12 February so that we can consolidate our foundation for unification.

KOREA TIMES SCORES NORTH'S SUPPRESSION OF PEOPLE

[Editorial: "Skipper-Defector"]

[Text] The Pyongyang rulers, despite their oppressive and high-handed domination of our North Korean brethren, should be aware of a hard fact that there must be a limit to their frantic and desperate control of people under their yoke someday in the future.

The communist masterminds there were once again reminded of this when a North Korean skipper of an ocean-going freighter dramatically defected to the South and presented the world with a vivid account of what is going on in the closed-door society in the North.

In a press conference in Seoul yesterday, Kang Tok-hun, 46, skipper of the 14,000-ton Chungsan-ho of North Korea, revealed that he was particularly impressed by things about South Korea during his visits to more than 30 free world countries abroad his ship since 1973. Unlike what he had been told about South Korea in the North, the North Korean defector confided that he found great differences from the North, being convinced by the free and fast-advancing image of South Korea.

His ship ran on the rocks in waters off Sri Lanka early last year, according to the North Korean sailor, and his vessel had to be towed to a shipyard in Singapore for repair work thereafter. Taking advantage of this accident, he was able to escape to freedom in South Korea through a third country. He admitted that he had no other choice but to defect to free Korea, since horrible forced labor awaited him in North Korean society, blaming him for the marine disaster.

We can reconfirm the stiffened and ruthless climate of the North Korean society, where our brethren have to face extreme, inhuman discipline, as was revealed by the defector, for their possible mistakes while conducting their duties in their respective professions.

At the same time, more and more North Korean brethren have to realize that what they are told by their superiors and rulers about South Korean society is nothing but falsehood. This is because the Pyongyang hierarchy cannot avoid sending a limited number of its people to foreign countries, depending upon their professions, as part of its efforts to survive the changing developments in the world community to which it has to adapt itself in one form or another. Of course, those permitted by the Pyongyang authorities to go abroad must have been strictly screened from among the "elite society" at their level.

As in the case of the latest defection of a North Korean skipper to the South, however, the Pyongyang regime is hardly able to control even its model citizens completely under the overwhelming force of the wind of freedom from the South and elsewhere in the free world community.

Simply because of its reluctance to open its society even partially, the Pyongyang regime is in fear of accepting the peace-oriented proposals for unification which have been repeatedly presented by the South.

It has been learned that North Korea has rejected Seoul's 20-point pilot program announced earlier this month by Unification Minister Son Chae-sik, and turned down President Chon Tu-hwan's new peace formula for democratic unification through national reconciliation.

In the dramatic pilot project, the South Korean Government went to such a forward-moving extent as to propose the construction of a new highway between Seoul and Pyongyang and the opening of ports on both sides of the Korean border for trading purposes, as we recall. Instead of showing any sincere response to such a peace-oriented call from the South, however, Pyongyang was said to have unilaterally made public lists of 50 politicians each from the South and the North to participate in political negotiations.

It is an extreme absurdity that the list for the Southern side was proposed by the North to include those now in jail and others engaged in anti-Korean activities abroad, with such a onesided offer from the North indicating no real intention to talk about peaceful unification.

NUCLEAR PLANT ACCORD SIGNED WITH FRENCH COMPANY

[Text] The Korea Electric Power Corp. (KEPCO) yesterday concluded a formal contract with Alsthom Atlantique of France to purchase $486 million worth of turbine generators and auxiliary parts for the nation's Nos. 9 and 10 nuclear plants. The French nuclear equipment maker was selected last December as the supplier of the so-called secondary system outbidding five atomic equipment makers from four other foreign countries, including Westinghouse and GE of the United States, GEC of Britain, BBC of Switzerland and Mitsubishi of Japan.

The contract was signed between Song Nak-chung, acting president of the KEPCO, and Jacques Casteran, project manager of Alsthom Atlantique, at a brief signing ceremony yesterday at the KEPCO conference room.

Supplier of the primary system for Nos. 9 and 10 units was another French nuclear equipment maker, Framatome. The primary system refers to the atomic reactors and its auxiliary parts.

Under the terms of the contract, the Alsthom Atlantique will provide export credit to finance the KEPCO's purchase of its equipment. The KEPCO officials yesterday said that the French credit will carry 7.85 percent of annual interest rate and will be repayable over 15 years after seven years of grace period.

The nation's Nos. 9 and 10 atomic power plants, under construction in Ulchin, the eastern coast, was 6.83 percent completed as of the end of last month, with completion due in March 1988 and March 1989, respectively. Total construction cost of the two nuclear power plants is estimated to be $3,360 million.

These are the first Korean nuclear power projects which were awarded to French firms. The KEPCO officials said that strong point favoring Alsthom Atlantique in winning the contract for supply of the secondary system for the two Korean nuclear plants were its flexible export credit terms as was the case with Framatome for the primary system contract one year ago.

CHON SAYS EDUCATION POLICIES NEED CONSISTENCY

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan yesterday said that the nation's educational policy programs, including the school entrance examination system, should be conducted consistently without frequent changes. Any defect to be found in the execution of the programs, however, should be remedied, he said.

The president called for the termination of chronic campus unrest and the faithful attendance of school during the legally required number of school days. Receiving the government's educational policy briefings from Minister of Education Yi Kyu-ho at Chongwadae, the chief executive called on the authorities concerned to exert efforts to establish a campus atmosphere in which students can study harder. Chon directed Yi to work out measures to develop the present junior colleges as job training schools in cooperation with industries.

Touching on the government's move to eliminate from society the three major negative psychological elements — corruption, inflation and disorder — he said that the drive should be reflected also in school education. "It is necessary to have students confident in the national reunification. At the same time, they should be well aware of the nation's unification policy," Chon said.

On the preschool-age education, the president said that emphasis should be placed on securing able nurses rather than on the mere expansion of facilities. Noting that this year has been declared as the one to enhance the authority of the nation's educators, he said teachers should strive to develop character and scholarship worthy of respect.

Proper administrative efforts should be exerted to that end, he said. Chon then called for giving "realistic" training to teachers and emphasized that school education should be carried out to meet the trends of a "new era." Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun and Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of the Economic Planning Board Kim Chun-song also attended the briefing session.

[Report from Tokyo by KBS correspondent Chong Yong-su]

[Text] The celebration ceremony for the birthday of puppet North Korea's Kim Chong-il, which was planned to be observed on 16 February on a large-scale by Chongnyon, reportedly has been canceled.

The Japanese weekly ASAHI reported that via a message delivered by the North Korean vessel Mangyongbong, Kim Chong-il directly ordered the cancellation of Chongnyon's birthday celebration ceremony. ASAHI said Kim Chong-il ordered the cancellation because Chongnyon sent fewer gifts to him than to Kim Il-song and because its leaders have not supported him.

PRC CALLED INSTIGATOR IN PRK, SRV 'AGGRESSION'

[Text] Phnom Penh, 13 Feb (SPK) -- In an interview with LIBERATION DE FRANCE, Vice Chairman of the Council of Ministers and Minister of Foreign Affairs Hun Sen said: Shortly after 7 January 1979, fragments of the Pol Pot army gathered on Thai soil. To wipe them out we must cross the border, which is a violation of Thai sovereignty... We do not want conflicts with Thailand; on the contrary, we want dialogue and peaceful coexistence.

Everything is clear. Vice Chairman Hun Sen made a supposition and not an assertion. He stressed that to penetrate into Thai territory would be an encroachment upon the sovereignty of Thailand. However, the Western press falsified the words of Foreign Minister Hun Sen by talking about a penetration by Kampuchea into Thailand (AFP -- 3 February) to wipe out the Pol Pot forces. And China's press agency XINHUA jumped on the much-awaited opportunity which presented itself to it in order to make public opinion believe in aggression by Vietnamese and Kampuchean troops against the Kingdom of Thailand. Pushing its cynicism a little further Beijing shouted at the top of its voice that that is Hanoi's and Phnom Penh's cynical threat toward a member of ASEAN.

By echoing the reactionary press in its anti-Kampuchean propaganda, Beijing has revealed itself as an instigator in the service of the imperialists and reactionaries -- an out-and-out instigator. Does Beijing seek to fish in troubled waters by directing the attention of public opinion toward a Vietnamese aggression in Thailand that it has invented of its own free will? By resorting to slanderous remarks Beijing hopes to cover up its expansionist ambitions regarding the countries of Indochina and ASEAN. Does Beijing succeed in convincing other people with arguments of a slanderer of its caliber? No, Beijing can only reveal its slanderous and misleading nature already known to the public.

The slanders of the imperialists and expansionists cannot fool progressive opinion. The Kampuchean people's aspiration is to maintain good-neighbor relations and to live on good terms with their neighbors in the region and the other peoples in the world. They respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of other countries and are determined to defend the sovereignty, territorial integrity and independence of their own country.

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY APPROVES ECONOMIC-CULTURE PLAN

Phnom Penh Radio Commentary

BK121056 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 11 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Warmest Welcome to the Brilliant Success of the Second Session of Our First National Assembly"]

[Text] The Second Session of our first National Assembly closed on 10 February with most brilliant success after working for 1 week. This important event once again attests to the ceaseless advance of our Kampuchean revolution and country.

At this session our PRK National Assembly approved the Council of Ministers' report on the economic and cultural situation in 1981 following 3 years of liberation and on the 1982 economic and cultural plans and tasks. Speaking at the opening of the session, Comrade Chea Sim, chairman of the National Assembly, hailed the successful outcome of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] Congress and voiced full agreement with the front's activities goal, that is, to defend and build the fatherland for the independence, peace, freedom and happiness of the Kampuchean people who have pledged to struggle against the Beijing expansionists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and international reactionaries, and their lackeys -- the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and other reactionary traitors.

The National Assembly also examined and unanimously endorsed draft laws on the organization and activities of the National Assembly, the Council of State and Council of Ministers and the organization of the judicial hierarchy. Moreover, the National Assembly decided to ratify the PRK-MPR treaty of friendship and cooperation in order to further strengthen and expand the relations between the parties, governments and peoples of the two countries. In particular, the National Assembly elected Comrade Chan Si as chairman of the Council of Ministers and Comrade Bou Thang as vice chairman of the Council of Ministers in charge of the National Defense Ministry.

All of this clearly attests to the scientific progress of our revolution which can firmly ensure the defense and construction of the country. The establishment of the laws and the organization of the state institutions and judicial hierarchy further ensure the stability of our people's lives, and their equal rights and freedoms.

Our people throughout the country were elated and attentively followed the daily activities of the National Assembly session from its opening to closing. Through the economic and cultural report the establishment of law and the reports made by delegates from all electoral districts throughout the country, our people are very happy and firmly confident in their glorious future. Our people throughout the country are well aware that at present defense and construction are the major tasks and the 1982 economic and cultural targets approved by the National Assembly must be successfully implemented. At the same time, our people are very proud of the establishment of laws on the organization and activities of the National Assembly, Council of State, Council of Ministers and the judicial hierarchy, which are the most important factors in the strengthening of the state apparatus for educating and guiding the people to fulfill their tasks of defending and building the fatherland. Our country is gaining a better face and our people's living conditions are improving.

The brilliant victories that we scored in the past 3 years are immense; thus our people are very happy and satisfied with our new regime. However, no matter how immense these achievements are, we still have many difficulties. The bad consequences left behind in our land by the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique are immense. This requires us to struggle on for a long time to come in order to surmount them. Moreover, the enemy of our people, that is, the Beijing expansionists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and international reactionaries, and their lackeys -- the three groups of reactionary and traitorous Khmers, that is, Sihanouk, Son Sann and Pol Pot -- have continued to implement their insane policy aimed at destroying our people's livelihood and our country's peace and stability. However, our people will definitely be able to surmount all these difficulties and all the perfidious maneuvers of the enemy will certainly be defeated. At present the Kampuchean boat is moving rapidly toward the bank of happiness. No power can prevent this valiant advance.

With the light of the correct and wise leadership of the KPRP, our people pledge to strengthen solidarity more firmly with the Vietnamese and Laos people and all other fraternal socialist countries in order to fulfill successfully the tasks of defending and building our glorious Angkor fatherland. Particularly, they are determined to fulfill completely the 1982 economic targets approved by the National Assembly.

[KAMPUCHEA editorial: "Absolutely Determined To Most Correctly Implement All Resolutions of the National Assembly's Second Session" -- date not given]

[Text] The work of our National Assembly from 5 to 10 February displayed a sense of enthusiasm and authority as well as a will to understand all issues and problems in the search for an objectively correct solution to serve the interests of the nation and people. This once again has brought into full play the progressive and revolutionary character of our national assembly -- so different from the assembly of the oppressor classes which was a place for them to tear at each other's throats or to seek personal benefit.

The economic and cultural report which the Council of Ministers submitted to the National Assembly was excellent, for it examined problems from all angles. Concurrently, the 1982 economic-cultural development plan is appropriate, unbiased, undogmatic and scientific, reflecting the care and attention of the revolutionary power in linking the economy with politics, first of all by providing a definition for production and labor and specifying their economic importance. All of us, therefore, must contribute to implementing this economic-cultural plan in order to help raise the material and cultural standards of our people.

Various bills adopted by the National Assembly have further strengthened the socialist legality of our state. A state without specific legal codes can drift to anarchy and dictatorship and can bring pose serious dangers, for it would encourage the people to maintain a distance from the revolution, thus depriving the latter of the people's support.

Laws in general, and legal codes in particular, invite unanimity throughout the country in implementing party and state policies and in deciding on various measures which ensure a peaceful and stable existence for the people and prevent the occurrence of social injustice.

Legal codes which represent the will and supreme interests of the nation and are adopted by the state's supreme institution guarantee the democratic nature of the administration's supreme organs and ensure the people's rights, freedom and equality before the law. For this reason every citizen in the country must respect and abide by these legal codes, first of all the party members and leading cadres who, by definition, are the models for the other people and, concurrently, must be active in impressing upon the people obedience to the state's law.

This new development has brought great joy, enthusiasm, satisfaction and pride to the Kampuchean people throughout the country and their friends near and far in the world, for they see that the Kampuchean revolution is not only resolute in dealing blows on the heads of the imperialists, expansionists and their lackeys, but also in preserving and respecting the people's right to mastery and in building a new society on the basis of the law guaranteeing the rights and freedom of the masses. In fact, at present we still experience difficulties because there are yet many consequences and vestiges of the old regime and the U.S. imperialists, Beijing expansionists and their lackeys and cat's paws continue to make efforts to create instability against our regime. However, we are determined to win and they are bound to meet a shameful defeat, for law and justice are on our side.

The Kampuchean revolution is absolutely irreversible.

INDOCHINESE FOREIGN MINISTERS CONFERENCE ANALYZED

BK160913 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 16 Feb 82

[Unattributed editorial: "Our Noble Stand and Good Will"]

[Text] Until now the peoples and governments of the three fraternal countries -- Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos -- have constantly adhered to their correct stand, that is, to coexist in peace and cooperation with all countries throughout the world, first of all with neighboring countries. This is the most correct foreign policy pursued by the three countries in search of common interests -- peace, happiness and social progress. The brilliant achievements scored in all fields in the past by the peoples of the three Indochinese countries are clear proof further attesting to the most correct foreign policy of these countries.

At the fifth foreign ministerial conference in Vientiane, the three Indochinese countries -- Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos -- will further reaffirm their good-willed intention to seek solutions to strengthen peace and stability in the region.

The initiative made by the three countries — Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos — at the conferences of their foreign ministers in Phnom Penh in January 1980 and in Vientiane in July 1980 was aimed at improving relations between the Indochinese and ASEAN groups of countries and at strengthening peace, stability and cooperation in the Southeast Asian region. All the tireless perseverance and the good intentions of the three countries, particularly the 4-point proposal of the PRK Government aimed at restoring peace and stability along the Kampuchean-Thai border, have enjoyed the active support and praise of peace-and justice-loving public opinion throughout the world. Later, at their third conference held in Ho Chi Minh City in January 1981 and the fourth conference held in Phnom Penh in June 1981, the foreign ministers of the three countries — Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos -- exchanged views on the situation in the three Indochinese countries and on various international issues of interest to all sides, discussed measures to increase the bonds of solidarity and cooperation between the three fraternal countries and reiterated the three countries' unanimity on the assessment of the general situation in Indochina, Southeast Asia and the world.

However, despite all these efforts, the situation in Southeast Asia remains tense. The independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of the three Indochinese countries are threatened further and the peace and security of the other countries in this region are not ensured. The cause of this tension is the policy of the Beijing big-nation expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other international reactionaries.

This fifth conference of the three Indochinese foreign ministers is being held at a time when the three countries have achieved and are achieving brilliant victories in all fields — political, military, economic and cultural. In particular, this conference is being held at a time when the PRK has scored and is scoring brilliant victories. In the past more than 3 years, after scoring a historic victory in toppling the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique — lackey of the Beijing expansionists -- we made great achievements in production, thus wiping out the danger of famine and daily improving the people's living conditions. Furthermore, we have established the revolutionary power from the center down to localities and important state institutions of all levels. The enemy of all stripes can not harm us. All of these factors have enabled the PRK's prestige to become renowned throughout the world. These brilliant victories were made possible thanks to our nation's great unity and international solidarity, particularly the close solidarity of the three Indochinese countries -- Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos.

In their former as well as their present foreign policy, the three countries desire to live in peace so as to build good relations with the neighboring countries and to solve, once and for all, all problems with various countries, particularly with China and Thailand. It should be noted that in their four conferences, the three countries issued joint statements which affirmed their unswerving stand and correct policy by initiating most appropriate proposals to China, Thailand and the ASEAN countries. Until now all those proposals remain valid and the Beijing and Thai powerholders are well aware of these proposals. Those proposals affirm our good will: We want to coexist peacefully and build good relations with the neighboring countries; we do not want to oppose anybody and neither do we want anybody to oppose us.

The fifth foreign ministerial conference of the three countries in Vientiane is held in order to reassess the situation in the region and the world and to strengthen relations and cooperation between the three countries in their common struggle to defend and build each country in the Indochinese peninsula toward peace, national independence and socialism to contribute to the defense of peace and stability in the Southeast Asian region. Moreover, this fifth foreign ministerial conference in Vientiane will discuss various important problems in order to further attest to the correct foreign policy of the governments of the three countries.

The Kampuchean people throughout the country as well as the fraternal Vietnamese and Lao peoples are elated and extend most sincere welcome to the fifth foreign ministerial conference of the three countries in Vientiane. We wish this conference brilliant success.

AFP REPORTS KHIEU SAMPHAN TO MEET SIHANOUK IN PRC

OW150317 Hong Kong AFP in English 0310 GMT 15 Feb 82

[Text] Beijing, 15 Feb (AFP) -- Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan will travel to Beijing soon for talks with former Cambodian chief of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk on formation of an anti-Vietnamese coalition, it was learned here today. Khieu Samphan informed Prince Sihanouk of his plans in a telegram, the text of which was given to AFP in Beijing.

The Khmer Rouge leader said he would head a delegation to confer with Prince Sihanouk "on formation of a coalition of patriotic forces to combat the Vietnamese aggressors." He did not specify his expected arrival date.

Last month the Khmer Rouge rejected a proposal by ASEAN -- the Association of South East Asian Nations -- that anti-Vietnamese Cambodian forces form a "loose coalition." After initial hesitation, China agreed to host a summit of the three opposition movements -- the Beijing-backed Khmer Rouge and the two anti-communist groups of Sihanouk forces and those supporting former Premier Son Sann -- in a bid to iron out their differences.

The question of Son Sann's participation remained to be clarified, as the Khieu Samphan telegram made no mention of a meeting with Son Sann.

Reliable sources said that Son Sann planned a visit to Beijing in the near future, but the exact date was not known.

VIENTIANE RALLY HELD FOR USSR MILITARY DELEGATION

BK121335 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 11 Feb 82

[Text] Our National Defense Ministry held a rally at 0830 on 11 February in Vientiane to welcome the visit to Laos by a Soviet military delegation headed by Comrade Marshal Nikolay Vasilyevich Ogarkov, member of the CPSU Central Committee, chief of the General Staff of the USSR Armed Forces and first deputy minister of national defense of the Soviet Union.

On the Presidium rostrum on the Lao side were Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, deputy prime minister, minister of national defense and LPLA commander in chief; Comrade Gen Sisavat Keobounphan, member of the LPRP Central Committee Secretariat, minister attached to the Premier's Office, interior minister and chief of the LPLA General Staff; Comrade Maj Gen Siphon Phalikhan, alternate member of the party Central Committee, deputy minister of national defense and deputy chief of the LPLA General Staff; Comrade Maj Gen Somsak Saisongkham, alternate member of the party Central Committee, deputy minister of national defense and deputy chief of the LPLA General Staff.

On the Soviet side were members of the military delegation; Comrade Vladimir Sobchenko, USSR ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to Laos; and Comrade Colonel Anisimov, Soviet military attache to Laos. The rally was also attended by officers and men under the National Defense Ministry.

The opening of the rally was marked by a song played by the LPLA band. Then Comrade Gen Sisavat Keobounphan took the floor to deliver a speech.

[Begin recording] Respected and beloved comrade marshal Nikolay Ogarkov, member of the CPSU Central Committee, deputy minister of national defense, chief of the General Staff of the USSR Armed Forces and head of the Soviet military delegation currently visiting the LPDR; members of the Presidium; friends and comrades:

Today our army and people are happy to welcome Comrade Marshal Nilolay Ogarkov, member of the CPSU Central Committee, deputy minister of national defense, chief of the General Staff of the USSR Armed Forces; and other comrades in the Soviet military delegation -- our close comrades and brothers who are paying a friendly visit to the LPDR.

On behalf of the Lao party, state, army and people, I would like to welcome wholeheartedly Comrade Marshal Nikolay Ogarkov and party, who are -- representing the heroic revolutionary armed forces of the USSR, the birthplace of the great Lenin and first socialist country in the world -- paying a friendly visit to the LPDR. [applause]

In coming to pay this visit, the delegation has brought with it the great militant solidarity of the people and various armed forces of the invincible USSR to the Lao army and people. This is a great encouragement for our army and people.

Sixty years ago the Soviet Army and Navy wrote a page in the history of the great and valiant struggle waged by their country and by the world proletariat, thus enhancing the prestige of the Soviet armed forces -- a new army of the working class founded and trained by the great Lenin. It was born in the currents of the Great October Revolution. It overthrew the ruling yoke of the Russian Czarist regime, defeated imperialist intervention and wiped out their lackeys in a fierce and difficult civil war. In the test of the revolutionary war, the Red army rapidly grew and developed and became the strong army and navy of the Soviet Union. In their great war of national salvation, the Soviet people and armed forces, fighting with sacrifices and valor, annihilated and attacked the enemy in his very nests and defeated the German and Japanese fascists, thereby firmly safeguarding their socialist fatherland, contributing to world liberation movements and saving mankind from disasters caused by fascism. [applause]

All the Soviet Armed Forces have made great contributions to the cause of defending the country and building socialism under the wise leadership of the CPSU -- a resolute and staunch party of the era, which has discovered the path of advancement toward socialism and communism. The USSR of today has become the most powerful big power in the world serving as a diamond-hard fortress for the socialist community and for the defense of peace and as a reliable prop for the current revolutionary movements in the world.

Based on a strong economic system and a powerful national defense, the Armed Forces of the USSR, being full of and rich in combat experience, have been armed with modern weapons, equipment and techniques, have firmly grasped military science and are resolved to fight and conquer in battle in accordance with the Marxist-Leninist line. These armed forces have now become an invincible revolutionary army and have sufficient strength to carry out their national tasks and internationalobligations. They are prepared to smash all maneuvers of all warmongering imperialist forces headed by the U.S. imperialists who are colluding with the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists to counter the revolution and unleash a new world war.

Being a close comrade [of the Soviet Army] our Lao Army and people rejoice at the great and glorious successes recorded by the national army of the great Lenin and of the heroic Armed Forces of the USSR over the past 50 years. Particularly, cadres and combatants in our army are proud of and are attentively following the glorious achievements and victories recorded by you, comrades. These achievements are a model for the forces of the proletariat and the various oppressed and exploited nations in displaying their patriotism, proletarian internationalism and revolutionary heroism.

Respect and beloved Comrade Marshal, the path the Lao people have chosen is one of struggle to win independence and build socialism in their country. In the process of their hard and protracted struggle, since the start of their revolution, our army and people have always enjoyed wholehearted support and assistance from the armed forces and fraternal people of the Soviet Union.

In our present cause of defending and building the country and opposing the Beijing expansionists, who are colluding with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces to sabotage and weaken our revolution and swallow up our beloved country and fraternal Vietnam and Kampuchea in order to pave the way for their expansion into Southeast Asia, the Soviet Armed Forces and people care for and have rendered tremendous and effective assistance to the Lao Army and people in consolidating our national defense and national construction. Our army and people will always remember this valuable assistance and the Soviet people's spirit of international solidarity, socialist proletarian internationalism and [word indistinct].

On this occasion, I ask for your permission to express deep thanks and gratitude on behalf of the party, government, army and people of Laos to the CPSU headed by beloved Leonid Brezhnev, the government and the fraternal people of the Soviet Union. The Lao Army and people regard the close and permanent solidarity and alliance with the Soviet Union and the special militant alliance and solidarity among Laos, Vietnam, Kampuchea and other fraternal socialist countries as a tradition and a strategic line. We regard this solidarity as one of the factors deciding the victories of the Lao revolution in the past, at present and in the future. All of us are doing and will continue to do our best to consolidate and strengthen this militant solidarity and friendship so that it will blossom more and more beautifully with each passing day. [applause]

I wish the Soviet people, under the leadership of the CPSU led by respected and beloved Leonid Brezhnev as its general secretary — a resolute, staunch, tireless revolutionary activist of the Soviet party and state and fighter of the international communist and workers movement -- glorious success in carrying out their historic cause and their great (?tasks) formulated by the 26th CPSU Congress, thus contributing to the success of the cause of defending peace and the revolutionary struggles of the various nations throughout the world.

I wish the Soviet Armed Forces strength and every greater victories. I hope that the militant solidarity and friendship between the two countries and armies will last forever.

I wish the friendly visit to the LPDR of the delegation glorious success. In conclusion, to commemorate the comrade marshal's visit, on behalf of the LPDR National Defense Ministry, I would like to present [word indistinct] to our beloved and respected comrade marshal. [applause] [end recording]

Then Comrade Marshal Nikolay Vasilyevich Ogarkov took the floor to deliver a speech. [Begin recording in Russian fading into translation] Respected Comrade Gen Khamtai Siphandon, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and minister of national defense; Comrade General Sisavat, member of the LPRP Central Committee and chief of the LPLA General Staff; dear friends:

First, I would like to thank you comrades for warmly welcoming us. I thank you for your high appraisal of Soviet assistance. We also would like to thank you for your best wishes to our delegation as well as the armed forces, Communist Party and people of the Soviet Union. [applause]

We are happy to have a chance to meet and chat with the officers and men in the LPLA and to familiarize ourselves with the daily life, implementation of duties and safeguarding of the revolutionary gains by the LPLA combatants. I thank you for the warm welcome accorded us wherever we visited. On this occasion, we would like to extend fraternal and militant regards from the Soviet Army and Navy to the officers and men in the LPLA. [applause]

The establishment of the LPDR in 1975 marked the start of a large-scale offensive in the history of your country and also marked the building of a new society for reconstruction and development of Laos and for thorough social and economic transformation of your country.

Under the leadership of the LPRP, the Lao people and the LPLA combatants are determined to surmount various difficulties left over by the old regime in order to build the foundations for socialism. Today we are living in an era in which we must take historic responsibility for the world's destiny. Recently, after new changes took place in the U.S. administration, the United States stepped up a campaign in its foreign and administrative policies. It has resorted to every means to sabotage detente in the world and has positively pursued a line of arms race and attentively improved (?weapons) to serve a new world war.

To carry out its intention to dominate the whole world, the United States has made public its areas of vital interest, covering almost all regions in the world. It has brazenly violated the sovereignty and national independence of various nations in the world; for example, in Poland, Afghanistan, Latin America, southern Africa, the Middle East, the Near East and Southeast Asia.

The collusion between the expansionists in the Chinese ruling circles and the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces against the revolution in the various Indochinese countries poses a serious threat to peace and stability in this part of Asia and constitutes an open interference in the internal affairs of the Indochinese countries. Regarding this matter, the comrades may have a clear understanding of it.

During our visit to Kampuchea, we saw prisons built by the Pol Pot clique and witnessed intervention and aggression committed by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists against the SRV in 1979. Today they continue to carry out armed provocations against Vietnam and encourage Lao reactionary forces and the Pol Pot clique to oppose the revolution in Laos and the young Kampuchean state.

The officers and men in the Soviet Armed Forces have always maintained their solidarity with the Lao people and the heroic LPLA, who are close companions in arms of the Vietnamese and Kampuchean peoples and have enjoyed the support and assistance of the various countries in the socialist community in safeguarding the gains of their revolution.

The Soviet Union stood, is standing and will continued to stand by the side of the progressive forces in Asia, Africa and Latin America. It regards these forces as its true friends and allies in the struggle against the imperialist and reactionary forces and for peace and justice in the world.

The Soviet Union's foreign policy is always in the interests of international security and of safeguarding peace and checking a new war which will be a great danger to all mankind. The Soviet Union's foreign policy of promoting and safeguarding peace is, for example, contained in the various peace proposals recently put forth by Comrade Leonid Brezhnev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and chairman of the Presidium of the USSR. However, it should be known that to smash the imperialists and reactionary forces opposing peace, violence must be used. Therefore, in the struggle for peace, we must not relax our vigilance and [word indistinct] in heightening defense potentials in your country, our country and other socialist countries.

To achieve this aim, we must have strong armed forces, be loyal to the country and the people, and must always (?smash) all schemes designed the imperialists and the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists to sabotage and disturb our peoples' peaceful labor.

Comrades; the LPLA is a young army. It is growing and developing under a situation in which the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists, who are enjoying the assistance of the United States and its allies, are brazenly stepping up counterrevolutionary activities. Their main objective is to prevent nations from achieving political tranquility and to sow discord in the various socialist countries.

Today we are proud of the LPLA cadres and combatants and the VPA cadres and combatants who have scored great victories in safeguarding the gains of their revolution and in defending the working people's peaceful labor, and who are dealing a heavy blow to the reactionaries and interventionists.

Loyal to the principle of proletarian internationalism, the Soviet Union is striving to give all-round assistance to the young LPDR in the cause of consolidating the administration and improving the people's living conditions and in providing technical (?knowledge) as well as in educating and training military units in all respects.

Even though our military cooperation began not long ago, it has been strong and developed. Certainly, our militant solidarity effectively proves that the LPLA has sufficient combat capability and [word indistinct] coordination with the Vietnamese army in defending the country from external enemies and carrying out the task of maintaining public security in the country. With the military assistance given by the Soviet Union, the SRV and other socialist countries, the LPLA has heightened its quality and combat skills.

On the occasion of our visit to the LPDR, we have seen more clearly that the LPLA is firmly confident in its correct path.

Long live the LPDR which is under the leadership of the LPRP and is following the path of socialist construction! [applause] Long live the friendship and cooperation between the LPDR and the Soviet Union! Long live the friendship and cooperation among socialist countries! [applause] [end recording]

The rally hailing the Soviet military delegation ended amid an atmosphere of profound friendship.

LAO-SOVIET SATELLITE STATION BASICALLY COMPLETED

BK140600 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 14 Feb 82

[S. Khamvanvongsa article: "An Excellent New Gift From the Soviet Union"]

[Summary] Simultaneously fulfilling its international proletarian obligations and rendering great and effective assistance to the Lao people's revolutionary struggle, in early 1978 the Soviet Union decided to build a satellite relay station for Laos in order to meet the ever-increasing demands for communications links between Moscow and Vientiane. An agreement to this effect was signed on 4 October 1978. Shortly afterward, many Soviet experts in geology, hydrology and other fields left for Laos while Lao technicians and workers enthusiastically made preparations for the construction of the project.

"With close coordination between the Soviet experts and Lao technicians, the collection of data and the survey of the construction site were completed in late 1979 together with the drafting of the blueprint of the project. Soon afterward, delicate construction equipment and materials were flown by Soviet (?IL-76) aircraft from Moscow to Vientiane. Other pieces of heavy construction equipment and materials were transported by Soviet ships from Vladivostok to Vietnam for inland transportation to Laos."

Soviet engineers and technicians led by Chief Engineer (Vopadotov) and Lao technicians and workers worked side by side at the construction site despite certain prevailing difficulties and inconveniences caused by the fact that the site is located many kilometers north of Vientiane.

In early 1981 the construction crew concentrated on building the main components of the station. In spite of the intense summer heat, Soviet engineers and technicians pushed on with their work to the great admiration of their Lao counterparts and the local villagers of Ban (Saka) and Phon Soung, where the station is located. Thanks to the wholehearted assistance of the Soviet Union and the close cooperation of the construction crews from both sides, all obstacles were overcome.

By late 1981 the construction of the satellite relay station, with an 80-meter antenna in Vientiane City, was basically completed. On the sixth founding anniversary of the LPDR, 2 December 1981, a test run of postal and television signals beamed from Moscow to Vientiane was successfully conducted via this station. Once construction is fully completed, the station will serve as important instrument for telecommunications, telephone, teletype, telephotographic and television links between Laos and the Soviet Union, which are some 12,000 km apart, thus contributing to the strengthening of the great solidarity and friendship between the Lao and Soviet peoples.

SRV PLANE CRASH CONTINUES TO DRAW ATTENTION

Command Spokesman's Comments

BK131211 Bangkok MATICHON in Thai 13 Feb 82 p 12

[Text] Commenting on the crash of a Vietnamese plane in Thailand, director of the Supreme Command Information Center Lt Gen Som Khattaphan told MATICHON that he did not believe the plane lost its way into Thailand.

The plane was detected by air force radar when it left Battambang heading for Thailand, and not for Saigon. When the Thai F-5E planes tried to intercept it, the Vietnamese plane dropped in altitude and tried to escape radar detection. Another point of suspicion was its refusal to land on our airfields. We have airfields both in Watthana Nakhon and Aranyaprathet Districts. The director wondered why it had to land in a field.

Lieutenant General Som said a plane of this Antonov type has already dropped six bombs on the mountainous areas of Pong Nam Ron District, Chanthaburi Province, in early January of this year. Thai soldiers found deep craters, spaced about 10 meters apart, and believe they were caused by bombs. A plane of this type flew into Ban Non Saoe on 5 February and left in the direction of Ban Khlong Nam Sai. It was spotted flying at a very low altitude and high speed. The incident on 11 February was the third violation of Thai airspace. He said a transport plane can also carry out a reconnaissance mission under cover. Lieutenant General Som said Thailand would certainly make a claim for compensation over the incident.

[Text] Under-secretary of State for Foreign Affairs M.R. Kasem Samoson Kasemsi yesterday summoned Vietnamese Ambassador Hoang Bao Son to inform him that Thailand would return the plane which crash-landed on Thai soil last Thursday if it was established that it had not intentionally intruded into Thai territory. However, investigations were not yet complete, the Vietnamese envoy was told.

The Foreign Affairs Ministry yesterday held a meeting to consider Hanoi's request for the return of the Antonov-26 transport plane, but reached no decision. On orders from Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila, ministry officials discussed the provisions of international law in the case, but postponed a decision until a full report has been received from the army.

The plane, carrying 13 Vietnamese, crash-landed in Sa Keao District of Prachin Buri Province on Thursday after entering Thai airspace from Kampuchea. Three Vietnamese were injured, one fatally, in the crash. The survivors have said they strayed off course as a result of bad weather. The ministry is expected to call another meeting this week after receiving evidence from military investigators.

[Editorial: "Vietnam: A Case of Trespassing or Straying"]

[Text] At about 1100 on 11 February, a Vietnamese plane intruded into Thai territory and crash-landed in a tapioca plantation in the vicinity of Prong Saeng village, Tambon Ban Kaeng of Sa Kaeo District, Prachin Buri Province. One Vietnamese soldier was killed, 2 were injured and 10 others were captured by the Thai authorities.

This is another violation of Thai territory by Vietnamese soldiers who regularly fire all kinds of ammunition into Thailand and launch small attacks on Thai authorities, killing and wounding Thai officials and civilians. Moreover, Vietnam has sent more soldiers and heavy weapons into areas along the Thai border, behaving like a regional hooligan.

The Vietnamese plane reportedly intruded into Thai territory as deep as 50 kilometers before being detected by radar and intercepted by air force F-5 aircraft which forced it to crash-land there.

Capt (Chuong), the captured pilot, told Thai authorities that his plane took off from Battambang airport on its way to Pailin. He claimed that his plane lost its way and strayed into Thai territory. However, Thai authorities are suspicious of his testimony because the incident occurred during the daytime, the pilot had a map, and the plane's compass was functioning normally. They suspect an espionage mission.

Assistant Army Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek said in an interview that he believed that the Vietnamese plane really strayed into Thai territory because of bad weather, despite the fact that the destination of the plane was in the completely opposite direction from Thai territory.

It should be noted that Thailand and Vietnam have been like two warring countries. In particular, Vietnam has always shown its aggressive nature as in firing heavy weapons into Thailand, violating Thai territory and killing Thai people in the border areas, and robbing Thai fishing trawlers and killing dozens of Thai fishermen. Moreover, Vietnam also wants to be a big power in Indochina by using force against countries in this region like Democratic Kampuchea.

Therefore, it is necessary for the Thai Government to assess Vietnam's attitude correctly. The incident should not be viewed only through optimistic eyes like those of General Athit. If we fail to investigate the incident thoroughly, improve the efficiency of our country's air warning system and prepare outselves for any form of external threat, our country will be the target of superior military forces and the Thai people will suffer adverse consequences. Vietnam has now at least learned about the sensitivity and effectiveness of our defense system.

NATION REVIEW NOTES SRV SOFTENING ON KHMER ROUGE

[Text] Aranyaprathet -- The Vietnamese-backed forces have apparently softened the military offensive against the Khmer Rouge guerrillas following the crash-landing of a Vietnamese transport plane inside Thailand last Thursday, military sources here said yesterday.

The sources said the Vietnamese had adopted a "wait and see" attitude over the incident.

"They want to know how Thailand will react and deal with the crew," one of the sources said.

They said the Vietnamese forces appeared to have had an upper-hand over the Khmer Rouge during weeks of heavy fighting.

The fighting centered around Phnom Malai and Khao Ta-ngok which have been the strongholds of the Khmer Rouge. The areas were heavily attacked by Vietnamese helicopters and airplanes, they said.

The Khmer Rouge guerrillas were routed in most of the skirmishes, they said.

Artillery shells landed in a Thai village in a pre-dawn attack by the Vietnamese against the Khmer Rouge yesterday.

Villagers of Baan Khok Sabaeng here had to take cover in bunkers as the shells dropped around the areas.

But no casualties or damage were reported.

VOFA CRITICIZES SRV POLICY TOWARD THAILAND

BK121205 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] During the past few months the VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY has been conducting a slanderous propaganda campaign against Thailand. It has charged that Thailand has violated Kampuchea's territory and territorial waters. Worse still, the Vietnamese media have unscrupulously distorted the facts regarding Thailand while Vietnamese troops regularly violate Thai territory, waters and airspace, threatening the Thai people's security and constituting a grave danger to the Southeast Asian region. As a matter of fact, Vietnam is known for its lies.

However, Vietnam's brutalities against its neighbors should be exposed to the world because they are inhumane acts which are greatly detrimental to the whole of mankind. The following are a few examples:

From 1000 to 1700 on 8 February, Vietnamese troops fired artillery shells into the vicinity of Saraphi mountain inside Thai territory, wounding a Thai villager and damaging a temple.

At about 0845 on 9 February, Vietnamese troops fired at two Thai villagers who were fishing along the Phrom Hot stream on the Thai-Kampuchean border. One villager was killed and the other wounded. On the same day Vietnamese troops fired mortar shells into the vicinity of Wang Mon village in Aranyaprathet District, killing one Thai villager and seriously wounding two others.

The latest incident took place on 10 February when Vietnamese troops continued their barbarous and brutal activities by firing 155mm artillery shells into Thai territory for the first time. In addition, over 20 mortar sheels and rockets also landed on Thai territory in the south of Aranyaprathet District on the same day.

In addition, a high performance Russian-made Antonov-26 transport plane violated Thai airspace over Khlong Namsai village in the south of the Said District.

Vietnam's attempts to violate Thailand's sovereignty clearly reveals its dirty intention to provoke military retaliation, an action that is detested by the peace-loving Thai people. The resolution adopted during the previous UN General Assembly session provides a suitable and peaceful solution to the Kampuchean problem. The resolution on the Kampuchean issue has been firmly adhered to by Thailand and the other ASEAN member countries and overwhelmingly supported by all peace-loving countries all over the world while Vietnam continues to violate Kampuchea's sovereignty and barbarously and brutally oppress the ill-fated Kampuchean people with the support of the Russian big power. Worse still is that Vietnam attempts to use military force with Russian support to launch aggression against and violate Thailand's sovereignty while fabricating slanderous propaganda against Thailand. This behavior by Vietnam exposes its dirty trick of using accusations against Thailand as a pretext for military aggression against Thailand and violation of Thai sovereignty.

Vietnam, worrying about security in its northern region, appealed to the UN secretary general to find ways to end tension along its border with China. However, it neglects and refuses to comply with the UN resolution the Kampuchean problem. This is evidence that Vietnam only wants to use the United Nations for its own purposes. The real truth is that Vietnam is not sincere in seeking peace as its media always claim. All the vicious deeds of Vietnam which have been condemned by the world people will never bear any fruit. What is certain is that the Thai armed forces of his majesty the king are always ready to fully defend the nation's independence and sovereignty from any external threat.

INDIAN EXTERNAL AFFAIRS MINISTER RAO VISITS

Arrival, 12 Feb Reception

OW121557 Hanoi VNA in English 1525 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 12 — P.V. Narasimha Rao, minister of external affairs of the Republic of India and his party arrived here this afternoon on an official friendship visit to Vietnam at the invitation of Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach.

The Indian guests were greeted on their arrival by Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach and other high Vietnamese officials. Also present on the occasion was Indian Ambassador Kuldip Shadap.

Nguyen Co Thach gave a reception here this evening in honour of Narasimha Rao and his party. The reception was attended by, among others, Le Khac, minister of foreign trade, and Nguyen Dinh Tu, minister of secondary, vocational and higher education. The foreign guests included Indian Ambassador Kuldip Shadap; the charge d'affaires a.i. of Laos, Siphan Malivarn; and Kampuchean Charge d'Affaires a.i. Koe Chamroeun.

In his welcome speech, Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said that cultural ties and the common aspirations for equality, fraternity and peace have long bound the two peoples of Vietnam and India. He said: "Our two countries have a long history of close relationship which has never been stained by disputes or violence. That's a thing rarely seen anywhere: Our two countries also share the same experience of being under long and heavy colonial domination. The lofty ideals of peace, independence and freedom have brought our two peoples together in the struggle for national independence as well as for national construction. We are deeply grateful to our two great leaders, the late President Ho Chi Minh and the late Prime Minister J. Nehru who so painstakingly cultivated the India-Vietnam relationship and made it blossom each day more splendidly".

Praising India's achievements in industry, agriculture, national defence, science and technology, Nguyen Co Thach said: "India has set a bright example of building an independent economy and applying science and technology to get a backward agricultural country onto the path of industrialization...with its contribution of great importance to peace, security in Asia and the world, to the birth and growth of the Non-Aligned Movement, to detente and cooperation among countries of different social systems, the role and prestige of the Republic of India have increasingly grown in the international arena".

Nguyen Co Thach went on: "I would like to stress here the profound sentiments, resolute support the people and Government of India have extended to the just cause of the Vietnamese people and the other peoples in Indochina. The contribution made by India toward the nation in Indochina and Southeast Asia is of long standing and very great. It has largely contributed to civilization and to the cause of national independence and peace of the Southeast Asian countries".

"The Vietnamese people", he said, "highly value the generous assistance, the multiform cooperation the Indian Government has extended to Vietnam and the special sentiments of the late Prime Minister J. Nehru and Prime Minister Indira Gandhi for our president Ho Chi Minh and the Vietnamese leaders. We are gratified to note that the friendly relations and close cooperation between our two countries and two ministries have become ever closer and more effective in the interest of our two peoples".

Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach expressed his belief that External Affairs Minister Narasimha Rao's trip this time would be crowned with success, thus contributing to further strengthening the fraternal friendship and allround cooperation between the two countries, and to the cause of peace in Southeast Asia, Asia and the rest of the world.

In his speech of reply, the Indian minister said he was very happy to make this visit to Vietnam. He said: "...Vietnam has been a symbol of man's struggle for independence and a metaphor for the inevitable triumph in that struggle. Over the last half a century the people of Vietnam have proved to the world time and again that the spirit of nationalism and national liberation provides the courage and heroism, as well as the political and moral cohesion that are more powerful than military and economic power. Similarly, I have no doubt that the inherent resources of Vietnam and the devotion of her people will enable Vietnam to emerge victorious in the quest for economic development, for as the hero of Dien Bien Phu, General Giap, has said: 'Heroism occurs both at fighting and productive labour'."

After reviewing the events of paramount importance that have helped cement the Indo-Vietnamese friendship over the past more than 40 years, the Indian minister stressed: "Our ties have deepened and strengthened with the passing years. The complete freedom and unification of Vietnam have also made it possible for us to extend and expand our cooperation to the mutual advantage of our peoples. We have already made some significant beginnings. In our talks during my present visit to Vietnam, I hope that we shall be able to intensify our cooperation in the future.

Nguyen Co Thach and Narasimha Rao proposed toasts to the further consolidation and development of friendship and allround cooperation between Vietnam and India, and for new successes of the peoples of Vietnam and India in national construction and defence.

Flanked by his Vietnamese colleague, Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach, the chief of the Indian diplomacy appeared relaxed in spite of a crowded two-day schedule that underscored India's unrelenting efforts for peace, tranquility and cooperation in Southeast Asia and elsewhere in the world.

Introducing the Indian foreign minister to the press, Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach said that the Vietnamese Government and people "highly value this visit of the Indian external affairs minister, which lays another milestone in the development of the Indo-Vietnamese relations." "On the bilateral front," he said, "at the end of the discussions we are both satisfied that a new chapter of cooperation on a sustained and long-term basis is going to start between our two countries. Both countries believe in planned development, therefore we must have a planned pattern of cooperation on a long-term basis."

He added that Indo-Vietnamese cooperation has so far concentrated on food loans and a system of agriculture, textile and transport. The two countries are studying further extension of two-way cooperation in certain other fields. Shortly, he said, there will be exchange of experts, and cooperation will also extend to trade and exchanges of science and technology.

India will also send more agricultural experts and provide facilities for training to Vietnamese students. India will also assist in geological survey and mineral exploration and study cooperation with Vietnam in the industrial field. The Indian foreign minister said he hoped that in the near future the area of cooperation will be further explored and both sides are working out plan to this effect.

In conclusion, the Indian foreign minister said: "I am confident that the efforts made by both our countries and other countries in the region of Southeast Asia and South Asia will lead to lasting peace and a tranquil environment which we need so badly so that we could embark on our programmes of development without being subjected to any tension and threat from any quarter."

The Indian foreign minister then answered questions concerning Indo-Vietnamese relations and international as well as regional affairs.

PRC SEEN TRYING TO RALLY KHMER 'REACTIONARIES'

BK121412 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] Over the past several months the Chinese authorities have manipulated reactionary circles in the ASEAN countries to rally all kinds of Khmer reactionaries against the Kampuchean people. Their meetings in both Singapore and Thailand were unsuccessful.

Of late China has arranged for a meeting of Khmer reactionary forces to be held in Beijing to set up a loose coalition government. This further exposes Beijing role. For a long time now, people knew that Beijing wanted Khmer reactionary groups to set up a coalition government in which the Khmer Rouge would continue to maintain the Democratic Kampuchea label and illegally occupy Kampuchea's seat at the United Nations. Beijing relies on this as an instrument to legalize its support and assistance to Khmer reactionaries to oppose the people of the PRK and other Indochinese countries.

China's plan is to reimpose the genocidal Pol Pot regime on Kampuchea as the springboard for its expansion southward to Southeast Asian countries. To support and take part in this plan is to lend a hand to the Chinese expansionists and harm the national independence, peace and stability of the countries in this region.

Beijing's policies conform with Washington's. The FAR EASTERN ECONOMIC REVIEW, published in Hong Kong, said in its latest issue that during his tour of Southeast Asian countries in December 1981, Deputy Assistant to the U.S. Secretary of State Daniel O'Donohue told ASEAN officials that the United States has decided to give initial aid from $3-4 million to noncommunist forces to oppose the PRK.

China and the United States not only force the Khmer reactionary forces to oppose Kampuchea's revival, but also try to encourage the Thai authorities to encroach upon the territory of the PRK.

Within 1 week ending 31 January, Thai aircraft intruded into Kampuchean airspace on 10 occasions. Thai artillery conducted 130 shellings into Kampuchea to cover infiltration by Pol Pot forces into Kampuchean territory. Fifty Thai armed boats intruded into Kampuchean territorial waters near Koh Kong and Kaoh Tang Islands.

However, Beijing's and Washington's efforts will be in vain. Their actions only expose them as a culprit in opposing the Kampuchean people, sabotaging peace and stability in Southeast Asia. No plot can prevent and reverse the process of reviving Kampuchea. The success of the general election held in Kampuchea last year and the result of the second session of the Kampuchean National Assembly are eloquent proofs of the stability of the new Kampuchea.

CHINESE VISIT TO PARACEL ISLAND CONDEMNED

NHAN DAN Comment

BK141351 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 14 Feb 82

[From review of Hanoi press for 14 February]

[Text] About Beijing's new trick, NHAN DAN says: Faced with ever-increasing and convincing evidence pointing to the fact that the Paracel Archipelago is the sacred territory of the Vietnamese people, the Beijing reactionaries are greatly embarrassed, and they have pulled a cheap trick in the hope of covering up their aggression.

Recently Yang Dezhi and Yang Yong, chief and deputy chief of the Chinese armed forces General Staff, went to an island belonging to the Paracel Archipelago, bringing with them a few handfuls of dirt taken from Zhongnanhai, Beijing, to plant trees on that island. This is a provocative act toward our people. Just like the previous occasions when they cooked up stories about discovering ancient coins and ancient human bones, this time the Beijing reactionaries, by bringing some handfuls of reeking dirt from Zhongnanhai to that island, still cannot overwhelm the obvious truth that the Paracel Archipelago belongs to the Vietnamese people.

CULTURE MINISTER MARKS USSR PACT ANNIVERSARY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 15 -- Vietnamese Minister of Culture Nguyen Van Hieu praised the great assistance given by the Soviet Union to Vietnam in the cultural field in an article published by NHAN DAN today on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the signing of the Vietnam-USSR cultural and scientific cooperation agreement.

He wrote: "Although the agreement for cultural and scientific cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union was signed in 1957, the first 21 Vietnamese students were sent to Moscow to study at various universities and vocational secondary schools as early as in 1951, shortly after the Soviet Union recognized the Democratic Republic of Vietnam (now the Socialist Republic of Vietnam). The enrollment of Vietnamese students in the Soviet Union has gone into the thousands each year in accordance with the cultural cooperation plan.

"In 1954, when the resistance war against French colonialism triumphed, many Soviet art troupes were sent to Vietnam for performances, introducing the folk arts of various Soviet socialist republics. The film "Vietnam on the way to Victory" made by Carmen, a wellknown Soviet film maker, left a deep impression on Vietnamese people, especially artists.

"Since 1957," the minister continues, "the cultural cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union has found expression in the agreements signed between the two governments. After the U.S. imperialists waged a war of destruction against Northern Vietnam, and the South Vietnamese people's struggle against U.S. aggression for national salvation entered into a new stage, many Soviet cultural workers toured Vietnam to introduce the Vietnamese people's struggle to the world public and to denounce the U.S. imperialists and their henchmen's war crimes.

"This cooperation reached a higher level following the complete liberation of Southern Vietnam and the founding of an independent and unified Socialist Republic of Vietnam. Groups of social science researchers have been formed, direct cooperation between educational institutions and pedagogic magazines of the two countries has been expanded, Soviet cultural days have been held in Vietnam and Vietnamese cultural days in the Soviet Union, and Vietnamese and Soviet art troupes and other cultural activities have been widely exchanged".

"Over the past decades", Nguyen Van Hieu concluded, "Each progress made by the Vietnamese cultural service has been closely associated with the great assistance of the Soviet Union. Vietnamese cultural workers are deeply grateful to the C.P.S.U. and the Soviet state and people for their noble, hearfelt assistance.

"By promoting the cultural and scientific cooperation between our two countries and our cooperation with other countries in these fields, we will together contribute to easing world tension, consolidating world peace and security, and facilitating further development of cultural and scientific relations among countries with different social systems on the basis of equality and mutual benefits".

AEROFLOT CHIEF FINENKO DEPORTED; OFFICE CLOSED

BK150901 Jakarta ANTARA in English 0838 GMT 15 Feb 82

[Text] Jakarta, 15 Feb (ANTARA) -- The Indonesian Government as of Monday closed the Jakarta office of the Soviet airline company Aeroflot and stopped Aeroflot flight operations in Indonesia, an official announcement said here Monday.

Admiral Sudomo, national security chief, told a press conference here that the government measures were taken in connection with the recent unmasked Soviet espionage. The government decision will be sent to the Soviet ambassador in Jakarta by the Ministry of Communications through the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, Sudomo said. He said the government also asked the Soviet Embassy to put Aeroflot office chief Aleksandr Finenko out of the country on Saturday for his poor health after going on a hunger strike during his detention.

The national security chief said that the government decision -- the closure of the Aeroflot office, the stoppage of Aeroflot flights in Indonesia and the deportation of Finenko -- is no indication that the government has a weak position or is placed under Soviet pressure. "We should view the case cool-headedly, not emotionally, by putting it on a wider perspective focusing on the efforts to protect national interest in the form of security for the nation and state and the continuation of national development," Sudomo said.

On February 6, the Soviet Military Attache Lieutenant Colonel Sergey Igorov was caught red-handed in a secret document transaction with an Indonesian Army senior officer identified as Lieutenant Colonel Susdaryanto.

For such an action, the Indonesian Government lodged a strong protest with the Soviet Union Government through its embassy in Jakarta and ordered Lieutenant Colonel Sergey Igorov, who enjoys diplomatic immunity, to leave Indonesia as a persona non grata. Igorov left Indonesia on February 6, 1982.

The Jakarta office chief of Aeroflot Aleksandr Finenko was also arrested for his complicity in the Soviet espionage ring. Aleksandr Finenko since February 6, 1982 has been on a hunger strike causing his health condition to deteriorate, and he is losing much of his consciousness. Indonesian authorities have unearthed much from Finenko during asked the Soviet Union Government not to do espionage against Indonesia again, otherwise "the government is resolved to take a series of severe actions to prevent the Soviet espionage from re-occuring." [sentence as received]

He called on the general public to give their full support to and understanding of the government measures to close the Aeroflot office in Jakarta and to expel Finenko from Indonesia. Sudomo also asked the public to refrain from issuing statements which would prejudice the government's decision.

Questioned on the fate of Lieutenant Colonel Susdaryanto, Sudomo said that the Indonesian Army officer will soon be brought to the subversive court of justice. During the press conference Admiral Sudomo was flanked by the 5th Yaya Military Area Commanding Officer Norman Sasono and the 8th Jakarta Police Area Commander Anton Sijarwo.

SECURITY FORCES PROTECT USSR CONSULATE IN MEDAN

[Text] Medan, 15 Feb (OANA/ANTARA) -- Security forces are taking strong measures to protect the Soviet Consulate office in Medan from its possible occupation by Indonesian demonstrators. Until Saturday, security personnel both wearing uniforms and plain clothes were seen on guard in a dispersed position along the Kayim Street in town where the Soviet Consulate office is located.

A big demonstration was to be launched in front of the Soviet Consulate office by members of the pancasila youth organization Friday but the security forces prevented them from proceeding with their plan shortly before leaving the office compound of the youth organization.

Meanwhile, Haji Muh Yusuf Effendi, leader of the north Sumatra pancasila youth organization, said that the Soviet espionage unmasked in Jakarta recently is threatening the state ideology of pancasila. Pancasila youth, he said, originally planned to occupy the Soviet Consulate office as a retaliatory measure against the unfriendly attitude of the Soviet Union toward Indonesia. But the plan was postponed, he said, adding that pancasila youth hoped the government would deal with the Soviet espionage conclusively.

In a statement which was originally to be submitted to the Soviet consul general in Medan expressed a strong protest of pancasila youth against the Moscow radio broadcast which beamed a congratulatory message to the anniversary commemoration of the outlawed Indonesian Communist Party (PKI). The radio broadcast is nothing but a political infiltration to instigate communist subversive activities in Indonesia, the youth leader said.

Given the unfriendly Soviet position toward Indonesia, pancasila youth indirectly called for the closure of the Soviet Consulate office in Medan by saying that the office is of no use any longer.

[Text] Jakarta, 12 Feb (OANA/ANTARA) -- Defence Minister/Armed Forces Commander General M. Yusuf has said that the 1982/83 budget of the armed forces (ABRI) totaling RP 568 billion -- about U.S. $900 million -- will be allocated for promoting the ABRI consolidation.

General Yusuf stated this in a hearing with the House Commission I (dealing with defence, foreign affairs and information) at the Parliament building here Thursday [11 February].

Yusuf pointed out that the ABRI consolidation projects included establishment of 100 deterrent combat battalions of reider [as received] quality which he said had been handled properly. He said procurement of selective sophisticated weapons had also been made for the battalions concerned.

A total of R 130 billion -- U.S. $200 million -- according to General Yusuf, has also been earmarked for the construction of military barracks and other such facilities.

The ABRI leader pointed out that before March this year all the country's territorial military zones would be equipped with sufficient communications means and vehicles for speedy mobilization.

More combat training centres have also been established in south Sumatra, west Java and other areas.

General Yusuf also said that sea patrols would be intensified throughout the country's territorial waters involving either naval fleets or police authorities.

Naval nomad aircraft will be operated in the sea patrol activities, Yusuf said.

TRAVEL RESTRICTIONS ENFORCED ON POLISH DIPLOMATS

OW171031 Tokyo KYODO in English 1024 GMT 17 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 17 (KYODO) -- The Japanese Government Wednesday placed restrictions on travel by Polish diplomats in response to similar restrictions on Japanese diplomats in Poland.

Under the new measure, members of the Polish Embassy in Tokyo who wish to travel more than 40 kilometers from the center of Tokyo have to notify the Foreign Ministry of their destination and the period of travel at least 24 hours in advance of departure.

Foreign diplomats in Warsaw had been requested by Polish authorities to make application for permission to travel after martial law was declared in Poland on December 10 last year. The military government lightened travel restrictions earlier this month so that now foreign diplomats need only notify the authorities of their travel plans, according to Japanese Foreign Ministry officials.

Meanwhile, the Japanese Government has decided to provide Poland with dollar 500,000 in emergency humanitarian aid under an assistance program of the Geneva-based International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), the officials said. The money will be used to purchase food, clothing and medical supplies for newly-born babies, infants and aged persons, they said.

FOUR POLISH FREIGHTER CREWMEN SEEK ASYLUM

[Excerpt] Fukuoka, Feb 14, KYODO -- Four Polish seamen have deserted their vessel berthed at Hakata port and asked for Japanese police assistance in seeking asylum in the free world, police announced Monday. Police said the four have been placed under protection in Fukuoka and that contacts are being made with the Foreign Ministry and the National Police Agency in Tokyo to find countries which will grant them resettlement.

The Polish vessel was identified as the 7,817-ton freighter Lelewel, manned by a 42-member crew, including skipper Stanislaw Chrzanowski. It was not known whether the captain of the ship was among the four who sought asylum. But the announcement said that three of the four came to a police station in Fukuoka city late Sunday night and the other one to a different police station Monday afternoon.

The Lelewel was understood to have left Poland on December 12, one day before martial law was imposed in the country. The ship has since called at 10 ports, including West Germany and Indonesia, before arriving at Hakata port last Friday night. It was berthed at the port early Saturday morning. The vessel is scheduled to leave here for North Korea after loading 4,000 tons of rice to be provided by Japan to Poland as relief goods.

The four were quoted as telling police that they are members of the Polish free labor union Solidarity and that they felt they could not go back to their home country when they learned at sea of the imposition of martial law. Police said the four would be transferred to Tokyo "in a day or two."

Foreign Ministry officials said in Tokyo, meanwhile, that the asylum request from the Poles would be "handled from a humanitarian point of view."

SAKURAUCHI ON U.S. CHEMICAL WEAPONS PRODUCTION

OW160831 Tokyo KYODO in English 0825 GMT 16 Feb

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 16 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Tuesday told a Diet committee meeting the government has no intention of asking the U.S. Government to drop a plan to produce chemical weapons. Sakurauchi made this remark in response to a question by an opposition Dietman at the upper house Budget Committee meeting.

He said it was not fair to unilaterally ask the U.S. to drop its plan to resume chemical weapon production, which, he said, would run counter to efforts to maintain a balance between the two great powers.

The Soviet Union is believed to have been producing chemical products continuously, and it was important to seek effective ways to fill the gap caused by Soviet superiority in this field, Sakurauchi said. He said a 1925 protocol signed in Geneva, prohibited only the use of such chemical weapons as poison gas, but not their production.

JAPAN TO OFFER ROK FINANCIAL AID FOR DEVELOPMENT

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Feb 13, KYODO -- The Japanese Government is expected to tell South Korea it will offer dollar 4 billion in assisting South Korea's five-year development program between 1982 and 1986, it was reported Saturday. Ranking officials of both governments are scheduled to meet next Thursday and Friday in Tokyo for a second round of working-level talks to discuss Japanese aid to South Korea.

The amount will be dollar 2 billion less than South Korea requested. Japan had earlier declined to extend dollar 6 billion saying the amount was too large and that some of the money could be regarded as being tied to the military purposes. The Seoul Government has given Japan a list of 11 projects it planned to carry out during the five-year program, including waterworks and sewerage and construction of schools and hospitals.

Japanese Government officials said they wanted the number of (?the Korean) projects narrowed down to six. They also indicated that Japan might give "political consideration" to the Korean request for so-called commodity assistance.

COAL PROJECTS AGREEMENT SIGNED WITH PRC BANK

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 16 (KYODO) -- The Export-Import Bank of Japan Tuesday signed a contract with the Bank of China to provide yen 42 billion (dollar 175 million) in loans this year for seven coal mining projects in Shandong Province and other parts of China.

The Japanese bank said the contract is based on a memorandum signed by the two banks in May 1979, which set a framework of yen 420 billion (dollar 1,750 million) for inter-bank loans to be apportioned by the Chinese bank to coal development projects.

In line with the memorandum, the two banks concluded annual contracts in 1980 and 1981 totaling about yen 194 billion and 100 billion, respectively.

NODONG SINMUN SCORES WEINBERGER'S DEFENSE REPORT

SK130806 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2320 GMT 12 Feb 82

[NODONG SINMUN 13 February commentary: "War Plot Exposed"]

[Text] Today the reactionary U.S. ruling class is accelerating preparations for aggression and war while strengthening its armed forces. This was evinced in the defense report issued by U.S. Defense Secretary Weinberger. The recent defense report submitted to the U.S. Congress by the defense secretary was replete with the U.S. imperialists' aggression and war lines to maintain and expand their domination by ensuring military superiority.

As reported, in fiscal year 1983, which begins 1 October, the U.S. imperialists will step up defense spending -- some $45 billion more than in the current fiscal year. As exposed in the report submitted by Weinberger, the U.S. imperialists will squander a large portion of next year's military expenditures on development and production of strategic nuclear weapons, weapons of mass destruction and chemical weapons. The U.S. imperialists' adventurous maneuvers to provoke a new war have entered a reckless stage. The dark clouds of war grow more ominous.

What attracts our attention in the defense report is that the U.S. imperialists have revealed their intention to ignite a new war in Korea. They are furthermore trying to drag the Japanese reactionaries into it.

The report demands Japan strengthen the armed forces of its navy and air force, increase its defense capability to counter threats on the Korean Peninsula and increase aid to allies and friendly nations to preserve stability in the region. The report notes that Japan should supplement the U.S. role in the west Pacific, contribute to preservation of stability on the Korean Peninsula both economically and in terms of defense and bolster its self-defense forces to counter all threats. The Japanese reactionaries should enhance their military strength so that, in case the U.S. imperialists ignite a war in Korea, they can participate in it.

In his defense report, Weinberger exposed the dark plot of the U.S. imperialists to involve the Japanese reactionaries in an invasion of Korea. It is no secret that the U.S. imperialists are dragging the Japanese reactionaries into their strategy in Korea and the Far East. Regarding it as significant to drag the Japanese reactionaries into a war plot against the Korean people, the U.S. imperialists have been working on military collusion and a conspiracy. It is no longer a secret that the U.S. imperialists have formed a joint operational command system between the U.S. armed forces and the Japanese Self-Defense Forces under the pretext of defense, aided the Japanese Self-Defense Forces and have been completing preparations for a joint operation by staging U.S.-Japanese joint exercises.

In recent days, removing even the mask of defense, they have enacted a plan for aggression against the Korean people. This is evident in that the recent U.S.-Japan security consultative meeting agreed to begin a study of an emergency in the Far East and that they are clinging to it. The study of an emergency in the Far East is a naked war plot designed by the U.S. imperialists to utilize the territory of Japan as operation, logistics and supply bases in case a new war breaks out in Korea.

The Japanese reactionaries are trying to achieve their ambition to invade Korea by availing themselves of the U.S. imperialists' policy of aggression toward Korea. Under U.S. imperialist instigation, they are establishing a martial law system, stockpiling war supplies and militarizing the economy and increasing military expenditures. At the same time, they will adopt a constitution for an emergency by revising laws to legalize deployment of military forces abroad and for a joint operation with the United States. This shows that the Japanese reactionaries are a dangerous force actively participating in the U.S. war policy toward Korea.

Such maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists and the Japanese reactionaries are serious criminal acts blocking the reunification of Korea, exacerbating the situation and endangering peace. They also constitute a wicked challenge to the Korean people and the peace-loving people of the world who hope for peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea. The danger of war comes from the maneuvers for aggression by the U.S. imperialists and the Japanese reactionaries. The U.S. imperialists and the Japanese reactionaries should learn from their bitter defeats and stop the vicious maneuvers to provoke war against the Korean people. For the Japanese reactionaries to actively follow the U.S. imperialists' aggressive policy runs counter to the Japanese people's interest. It is not by chance that the Japanese parties and social circles acrimoniously denounced the Japanese reactionaries for being dragged into the U.S. imperialists' strategy against Korea.

If the United States continues to follow the reckless military adventurous road against the aspiration of our people, the Asian people and the world's people for peace, they will pay dearly. The United States should act judiciously and recognize the trend of the times.

COMMUNIST MEDIA CITED ON 'TEAM SPIRIT' EXERCISE

[Text] Pyongyang, February 17 (KCNA) -- Mass media of socialist countries are bitterly condemning the "Team Spirit 1982" war games started by the U.S. imperialist aggression forces and the South Korean puppet army on February 13, according to reports.

The Soviet papers IZVESTIYA, KRASNAYA ZVEZDA, TRUD, MOSKOVSKAYA PRAVDA and LENINSKOYE ZNAMYA on February 14 reported about the scope and aggressive nature of the war exercises. On February 13 TASS pointed out that Washington and Seoul were trying to use the exercises in heightening the tension in the western region of the Pacific and demonstrate the support of the United States to the Seoul military "regime." It noted that the composition of armed forces participating in the war rehearsals and the nature of their task showed the aggressive aim pursued by the United States and its Far Eastern "allies."

CETEKA of Czechoslovakia and ADN of the GDR also reported about the military exercises on the same day.

NODONG SINMUN DENOUNCES SOUTH'S NAVAL EXERCISES

SK130836 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2249 GMT 12 Feb 82

[NODONG SINMUN 13 February commentary: "Ugliness of War Maniacs Under the Guise of Reunification"]

[Text] On 11 February, the Chon Tu-hwan ring staged a naval exercise in the sea near Taechon port on the west coast. It will reportedly resume this naval firing exercise on 18 and 25 February. These naval exercises are part of the provocative maneuvers the puppets continue against us under the pretext of southward invasion by the North. The puppets are heightening confrontation, more frequently babbling about expecting someone's provocation, taking punitive measures at the earliest date and enhancing combat posture. Their powder-reeking rackets show the provocative nature of this naval firing exercise.

Clamoring about a nonexistent southward invasion by the North, the Chon Tu-hwan ring has repeatedly kicked up rackets of military exercises, seeking a military buildup, introducing lethal weapons and military hardware in South Korea and reinforcing the puppet army. In spite of strong protests and denunciation from people at home and abroad, the fascist Chon Tu-hwan military clique is scheming to wage a large war exercise called "Team Spirit 1982" with the U.S. troops for 70 days beginning 13 February. The "Team Spirit 1982" military exercise, involving military personnel of the U.S. forces and the puppet South Korean army and using the northern half of the republic as the enemy, is another test war simulating an attack on us in the sky, on the ground and at sea. Such a war maneuver is a grave crime aggravating tension on the Korean Peninsula and threatening peace.

It is no secret that the Chon Tu-hwan ring, which has proclaimed the 1980's as a decade for a fierce struggle against us, is inciting confrontation between the North and South and war hysteria, raving about victory over communism and annihilation of communism. The war maneuvers of the puppets -- stooges carrying out the U.S. imperialists' war policy -- are a reckless, bellicose act to incite enmity and antagonism in the nation, destroy peace and block the countrymen's aspirations for reunification. This shows that the puppets' 22 January proposal is a hypocritical fraud.

The peaceful resolution of the reunification question is in removing tension between the North and South, eliminating misunderstanding and mistrust and achieving national unity. Confrontation and enmity will never be helpful in opening a new phase for peaceful reunification.

The puppets have babbled about proposals for peaceful reunification while strengthening anticommunist confrontation and worsening tension by kicking up rackets of a large-scale war exercise against fellow countrymen with the aggressive troops who have trampled underfoot the nation's sovereignty. This is a deception and brazen sophistry. War rackets are not compatible with peaceful reunification.

Splittists, who are seeking confrontation between the North and South and division and leaving South Korea to the U.S. imperialists as their permanent colonial military base, following the two Koreas intrigue and the policy of aggression of the U.S. imperialists, are talking about proposals for peaceful reunification while disturbing peace and aggravation tension by waging war rackets.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring has pretended to be interested in peaceful reunification while inciting anticommunist confrontation. This is a brazen act only the truculent Chon Tu-hwan ring would do. By espousing a false proposal for reunification, threatening people at the point of bayonets, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is maneuvering to realize a wild desire for long-term power by maintaining and justifying the military fascist regime and perpetuating division. The puppets should abandon a dangerous war gamble and act with caution. If the Chon Tu-hwan ring persists in war rackets, running counter to the trend of the world, it will pay dearly.

RPR SENDS GREETINGS TO KIM CHONG-IL ON BIRTHDAY

[Congratulatory letter sent by RPR Central Committee to Kim Chong-il on his birthday]

[Text] To the wise leader [chidoja] of the nation Comrade Kim Chong-il -- the hero of the revolution and the magnificent sun of communism: Amid the endless glory that the skies and lands are overflowing with infinite admiration and the hymn of loyalty of the people upholding and following the radiant chuche sun and the chuche star, the revolutionaries and patriotic people of all strata are most respectfully observing the 40th birthday of the wise leader Comrade Kim Chong-il.

On this joyful occasion, as we celebrate, with endless delight and happiness, the date of 16 February on which the great guiding star of the nation rose on high, our burning admiration is rushing toward the skies of the North where the sun and the star shine and everlasting loyalty is ringing throughout the nation as a song wishing good health and long life to the dear comrade leader.

On this great jubilee of February, reflecting the earnest and heartfelt wish of the revolutionaries and people of all strata in the South, the RPR Central Committee respectfully extends the greatest honor and warmest congratulations to the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il -- the genius of the revolution inheriting and completing the chuche revolutionary cause under the banner of Kimilsongism.

The birth of the dear comrade leader who, inheriting the spirit of the Mangyongdae revolutionary family admired by the world, magnificently rose as the chuche guiding star on the auspicious Mt Paektu in that significant historic February when the spring of the fatherland's liberation was dawning, was a historic event which foretold the victories and prosperity of the fatherland and the revolution and a great jubilee on which the people received the brilliant future sun of communism.

The dear comrade leader, who grew up in the most turbulent period of history filled with storms of the revolution, twists and turns, changes of the century and other revolutionary events, already in his childhood became fully acquainted with the profound truth of the chuche idea, established a firm chuche world outlook and, in the furious flames of the revolution and through practice in the stirring reality, possessed all the talents and characteristics attainable only by an outstanding leader [yongdoja] of the revolution.

The wise leader Comrade Kim Chong-il, a model of loyalty to the great leader, has brilliantly embodied the respected and beloved leader's ideas and theories and his leadership and traits to the noblest degree. By so doing, he has won a great immortal achievement on the road of inheriting and completing the chuche cause pioneered in the forests of Mt Paektu. The wise comrade leader -- the genius of ideology -- formulated the great leader's revolutionary idea as Kimilsongism, most brilliantly achieved the historic cause of advancing the program of Kimilsongization of society -- the supreme goal of the Workers Party -- illuminated the revolutionary world outlook of the chuche era, further developed the chuche philosophy which has brought human dignity and value to the highest stage, and drastically enriched Kimilsongism by ceaselessly putting forward encyclopedic ideas and concepts.

The wise comrade leader -- the genius of guidance -- has, to the awe of the world, turned the KWP founded by the great leader into a pure ideological organ in which only chuche-type blood flows, into a mighty political staff office which is invincible, and into a party of Kimilsongism which is full of vitality by effecting the remodeling of the party on Kimilsongism and establishing the monolithic ideological system and the sole guidance system of the party and has provided a basis for the triumphant advance of the chuche revolution by consolidating the political and ideological unity of society based on the chuche idea.

The dear comrade leader -- the genius of creation and construction who upholds the great leader's program of socialist construction -- has brought the prime of prosperity to the chuche fatherland by effecting, in all fields, epochal miracles and innovations as a consequence of the fact that he has led the party, the country and the people along the grand march of the three revolutions fanned up the flames of the speed campaign.

In the chuche fatherland pulsating with loyalty to the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the economy is rapidly developing on a new, scientific and technical foundation, monumental creations have been erected, national culture and arts are in full bloom in a cultural renaissance of the 20th century and the people are leading independent and creative lives, enjoying dignity and happiness. This is the brilliant fruition of the extraordinary wisdom, the outstanding guidance and the noble virtues of the respected comrade leader who carries into actions the respected and beloved leader's grand designs and lofty will.

Thanks to such a wise comrade leader, a grand march toward the 10 major prospective goals of socialist economic construction is being vigorously unfurled in the northern half of the fatherland and the chuche fatherland, which is blossoming into a wealthy and civilized paradise, shedding rays upon the world as a utopia found nowhere else in the world.

The wise comrade leader, who brightens the world as the ray of the sun of the great chuche, is advancing the world revolution in the era of independence by vigorously leading the struggle for the victory of the cause of Kimilsongism.

With Comrade Kim Chong-il -- the genius of the revolution with iron-clad will and courage -- holding in his hands the compass of the era and providing the strategies, raising high the banner of Kimilsongism, the ranks of believers in Kimilsongism are growing daily from continent to continent throughout the world, the forces against imperialism and for independence are becoming triumphant and the accomplishment of the cause of human liberation is being accelerated.

The brilliant embodiment and shining victory of the great Kimilsongism in our country and throughout the world is an exceptional achievement of immortality which can be achieved only by the wise comrade leader who advances the revolution and leads the era in conformity with the will of the respected and beloved leader, a man of creative wisdom, outstanding guidance, noble virtues and profound humanity.

With such a great and wise dear comrade leader of the era coming at the fore of history, upholding the revolutionary cause of the respected and beloved leader, the question of inheriting the leader's cause -- a question which had caused much pain within the international communist movement -- has been perfectly [wanjon mugyolhage] realized finally in the chuche fatherland, and a wide path ensuring the ultimate victory of the cause of Kimilsongism has been opened.

Accordingly, today our people and the world's progressive people are greatly stirred and pleased at holding in high esteem the dear comrade leader as another leader [ttohanbunui suryong] of the chuche era, are entrusting their destinies to the respected comrade leader and are showing boundless respect to the chuche star of guidance.

Truly, the dear comrade leader is the holy chuche star of guidance which shines on high in the blue sky of the era, the permanent light of the universe which illuminates the future of mankind, and a brilliant symbol of victory and glory, of joy and happiness. Revolutionaries and people in the South, who are looking up for a fresh morning of national reunification and a new flower garden of communism, are confidently advancing the victory of the revolution for reunification, cherishing national pride in that they, in this glorious century in which they hold the great sun of chuche in high esteem, are living and fighting, placing in high esteem the great chuche star of guidance.

Under the brilliant banner of guidance, the RPR, undaunted by the angry storms of the ugly fascist dictatorship, has been strengthened into an orderly vanguard force and a chuche-type militant party, the ranks of the revolution for reunification have been expanded and the anti-U.S., antifascist resistance of our people and the patriotic people, a struggle for establishment of a new, people-centered society, is being strenuously unfurled on a new dimension.

At this juncture of greeting the February holiday as a great event, looking up to the sun of chuche and the chuche star of guidance illuminating the dark and suffocating land of the South, our revolutionaries and patriotic people remain so loyal as to struggle more strenuously for advancement of the revolution for reunification. This is a meaningful year in which we greet the 70th birthday of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the sun of chuche. To make it shine as a historic year during which we effect new innovations in implementing the revolution for reunification, we will accelerate the remodeling of the party and revolutionary ranks on Kimilsongism so as to strengthen them into invincible combat forces which advance, undaunted by storms and trials, and will organize and lead the people in the sacred struggle for democracy and reunification with a view to fanning the flames of the anti-U.S., antifascist struggle for national salvation elsewhere in this land.

In line with the demand of the situation developing in our favor, we will formulate accurate slogans, correctly choose types and means of struggle and wisely utilize all possibilities to substantially advance the revolution for reunification. By so doing, we will surely advance the victorious day when we will realize democratization of society and establish the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo.

So long as the invincible Kimilsongism illuminates the path ahead of us and there is the guidance of the wise comrade leader, the victory of the revolution for reunification is a certainty.

To advance the day of glory when we will cheer with the great leader and the dear comrade leader at the plaza of national reunification, we will, under any difficult circumstances, remain loyal to the respected and beloved leader and the respected comrade leader and vigorously march under the banner of Kimilsongism.

The good health and long life of the dear comrade leader -- the brilliant ray of the sun of chuche -- is what our people and the world's progressive people so ardently desire. It is a basic guarantee for the victory of the Korean revolution and the world revolution.

Reflecting the unanimous desire and warm loyalty of the revolutionaries and people in the north, the RPR Central Committee wishes Comrade Kim Chong-il -- the paragon of Kimilsongists, the brilliant sun of communism and the wise leader [yongmyonghan chidoja] of the nation -- good health and a long life for the reunification of the fatherland, for the everlasting happiness of the nation, for the ultimate victory of the cause of Kimilsongism and for the everlasting prosperity of the glorious Kim Il-song-Kim Chong-il era.

HENG SAMRIN, PEN NAVOUTH ADDRESS EDUCATION FORUM

[Text] On the morning of 12 February a meeting was held at the National Assembly house by the national committee for illiteracy eradication and refresher course education in a grand atmosphere under the chairmanship of Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee, chairman of the Council of State and chairman of the national committee for illiteracy eradication and refresher course education. Attending this ceremony were, among others. Comrade Chea Sim, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council and chairman of the National Assembly; Comrade Chan Si, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers; Comrade Say Phuthang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Central Organization Commission; Comrade Bou Thang, member of the KPRP Central Committee Political Bureau, chairman of the Central Propaganda and Education Commission, vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, miniser of national defense, vice chairman of the KUFNCD National Council and vice chairman of the national committee for illiteracy eradication and refresher course education, and several cadres of the national and provincial committees for illiteracy eradication and refresher course education.

Following the playing of the national anthem and 1-minute of meditation in tribute to fallen heroes, Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of KPRP Central Committee, chairman of the Council of State and chairman of the national committee for illiteracy eradication and refresher course education, took the floor to open the meeting by stressing the following:

[Begin recording] We meet today to discuss a duty that all of us must face directly and solve in order to score a big victory for the nation. The question of eradicating the danger of illiteracy and promoting education for party members, cadres, employees, workers, youths, combatants and people in genral.

As all of you know very well, since national liberation on 7 January 1979, when we got rid of the race-exterminating, culture-destroying and economy-sapping Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique, we have started fighting without delay to overcome and check three enemies: the aggressors, famine and ignorance.

We fought persistently against the first two enemies until we won resounding successes which have been applauded all over the world. We started combating the third enemy at about the same time, but we have not yet achieved complete success, for the colonialists, the feudalist society and the genocidal regime have left behind very serious consequences for us.

In the authentic, correct socialist regime following Marxism-Leninism, national construction and defense efforts call for logical thought and advanced technical and scientific knowledge. For example, leading cadres must clearly grasp the revolutionary line; the armed forces must know how to operate war equipment; the workers must know how to handle machinery; and the peasants must know about modern productive techniques.

In order to attain this objective it is imperative to promote education, for without education there can be no revolution; making a revolution calls for the eradication of illiteracy; illiteracy is the obstacle blocking the progress of the national society.

With all of this clearly in mind the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Council then founded this national committee for illiteracy eradication and refresher course education and set up a 3-year plan for combatting illiteracy in the PRK.

I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate leading comrades, comrades of the party affairs control committee and comrades of the people's revolutionary committee of every province and city as well as the teachers and fraternal volunteers in this work from the central to the grassroots levels for contributing to the most encouraging results achieved in the adults' educational efforts throughout the country. Let me stress that literacy schools are not only useful in the campaign against illiteracy alone. They are a most important political school for the teaching of ideology and for the dissemination of the party's political line among our people at present.

Our meeting today is most significant. It is an opportunity for us to discuss and find solutions for all difficulties, shortages and experiences encountered in the past and to seek means and measures for with them in future. I wish the national committee for illiteracy eradication and refresher course education complete success. [applause] [end recording]

Afterward, Comrade Pen Navouth, minister of national education and secretary general of the national committee for illiteracy eradication and refresher course education, presented a report on the outcome of the literacy and refresher course movement and on the objectives of the illiteracy eradication and refresher course education efforts for 1981-1982. In this report he expressed great appreciation for the efforts displayed by the national committee for illiteracy eradication and refresher course education in close cooperation with the revolutionary authorities at all levels to encourage and exhort our illiterate people to go to school to eliminate ignorance. He went on to say that despite a host of difficulties and obstacles, up to the present more than 600,000 or 15 percent of the illiterate throughout the country, have been liberated from illiteracy. Along with the literacy campaign the refresher course movement has also made great progress. Regarding the goal and task of combating illiteracy in 1982, he said:

[Begin recording] In accordance with the Council of Ministers' circular No 41-CM, dated 20 October 1981, dealing with the goal and task of education in the 1981-1982 school year, the national committee sets the following goal and task of the illiteracy eradication and refresher course campaign for 1981-1982:

1. More efforts must be exerted to vigorously accelerate the illiteracy eradicating movement, that is, the biggest campaign ever must be launched in order to bring the plan to a successful end. This campaign is aimed in the first place at party members, cadres, employees, workers, combatants, youths, chairmen and vice chairmen of production solidarity groups.

2. The emulation movement must be continued to help a number of provinces, districts and communes overcome the danger of illiteracy.

3. As for central refresher course schools, they must be upgraded to the tertiary education level. In the provinces where there are refresher course schools, if possible, the level must be upgraded to secondary education. As for provinces where there are not yet refresher course schools, efforts must be made to open them. At the same time refresher courses must be opened for units, localities, districts, communes and wards so as to enable party members, cadres, employees, workers, chairman and vice chairmen of production solidarity groups, combatants and youths to attend.

The national committee would like to take this rare opportunity to congratulate the National Defense Ministry for paying close attention to this matter, for establishing a network of combat courses to eradicate illiteracy and opening refresher courses within the ranks of our combatants from the central to grassroots levels throughout the country, and for closely cooperating in this field with the National Education Ministry. [applause] [end recording]

In addition, the report noted the duties and measures of the national committee for illiteracy eradication and refresher course education [words indistinct]. After Minister Pen Navouth had read his report, several meeting participants took the floor to discuss and exchange opinions in an enthusiastic atmosphere with the aim of bringing complete success to the illiteracy combating movements in accordance with the party's 3-year plan.

This ceremony proceeded in a joyous atmosphere of militant determination and with a high sense of patriotism.

KAMPUCHEA REVIEWS FAILURE OF OPPOSITION COALITION

BK160656 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 0400 GMT 14 Feb 82

[KAMPUCHEA commentary: "Tight or Loose, It Still Fails"]

[Text] In a letter to Singapore Deputy Prime Minister Rajaratnam, murderer Ieng Sary officially rejected the ASEAN proposal aimed at forming a so-called loose coalition for rallying the three traitorous Khmer groups -- Pol Pot, Son Sann and Sihanouk. Everyone knows that this rejection was made on Beijing's orders, because the Chinese expansionists do not want their lackeys to be at a disadvantage in this loose alliance farce. This reflects the differences between Beijing and the ASEAN countries, who followed the orders of the U.S. imperialists in trying to solve the so-called Kampuchea problem.

The masters are in dispute and their puppets are tearing at each other's throats. Both the tight and loose alliances have failed. This is a bitter defeat for the Chinese expansionists in their collusion with the U.S. imperialists and the Singapore and Thai ruling circles -- which painstakingly initiated the formation of this abortive reactionary company.

In an angry reaction, Malaysian Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamed threatened to withdraw recognition from the defunct Democratic Kampuchean regime at the United Nations. Indonesian Foreign Minister Mokhtar Kusumaatmaja subsequently voiced support for the Malaysian prime minister's statement and warned that the Khmer Rouge would lose ASEAN's support. Singapore Foreign Minister Dhanabalan then hurriedly made a trip to the ASEAN capitals, beginning with Jakarta, in order to persuade the Indonesian leaders, who disagreed with the idea of establishing a loose coalition government among the reactionary Khmers, to search for new dark maneuvers.

As for the Thai leaders -- who shoulder the heaviest burden among all the ASEAN countries since they have to provide Thai territory as a refuge for the reactionary Khmers, supply weapons, food and mount military operations in support for the Pol Pot remnants and provide a meeting place for the three reactionary Khmer groups [passage indistinct] have all failed.

In September 1981 the Beijing reactionary circles, in collusion with Washington, persuaded the ASEAN countries to bring the three traitorous Khmer groups together in Singapore to discuss the formation of a coalition government in an attempt to find a way to change the coffin of the Democratic Kampuchean corpse and to enable the international reactionaries to look presentable in their scramble to preserve the seat [words indistinct]. Even with eight other meetings in Bangkok, they still could not reach any agreement.

Faced with this impasse, in November 1981 Rajaratnam proposed the formation of a loose government. Sihanouk and Son Sann willingly accepted this plan since they hoped to get some benefits, but the Pol Pot group asked for 2 months in which to study the proposal. Now the Pol Pot group has rejected the proposal at the order of his masters in Beijing.

What is the next farce that the expansionists, imperialists and ASEAN countries will prepare for the three traitorous Khmer groups? Obviously these teachers will face even greater difficulties in their attempt to induce the three reactionary Khmer groups to compromise with one another. These three groups can never be on good terms with each other because they agree with one another only on the problem of opposing the Kampuchean revolution. They will never think about the interests of the Kampuchean people. Their unbridled personal ambitions are the cause of their fundamental dispute. Each group wants only to return to power in Kampuchea in order to oppress the people and crush other groups. While the dogs are barking, the Kampuchean revolution advances ceaselessly and firmly.

The only fervent aspiration of our Kampuchean people is to have independence, freedom and peace. We are working to build a harmonious, peaceful and happy life and struggling valiantly and resolutely to defend our beloved fatherland.

INDOCHINESE FOREIGN MINISTERS CONFERENCE OPENS

BK161233 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 16 Feb 82

[Text] In accordance with the agreement of the foreign affairs ministers of the LPDR, the PRK and the SRV, the fifth plenary conference of the Indochinese foreign affairs ministers was majestically opened in Vientiane capital on the afternoon of 16 February.

Attending the conference were the delegation of the LPDR Foreign Affairs Ministry led by Comrade Khamphai Boupha, acting foreign affairs minister; the delegation of the PRK Foreign Affairs Ministry led by Comrade Hun Sen, vice premier and foreign affairs minister; and the SRV Foreign Affairs Ministry led by Comrade Nguyen Co Thach, foreign affairs minister. Comrade Khampheuan Tounalom, LPDR ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the SRV; Comrade Khamphan Vilachit, LPDR ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the PRK; Comrade Neou Samom, PRK ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the LPDR; and Comrade Nguyen Xuan, SRV ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary to the LPDR, also attended the conference.

On this occasion, Comrade Khamphai Boupha, representing the Lao Government and people, delivered a speech to open the conference officially. After extending his warm welcome and respect to Comrade Hun Sen and Comrade Nguyen Co Thach and their delegations, Comrade Khamphai Boupha said: This conference is held at a time when the three Indochinese peoples are together scoring great successes and victories in the struggle to build and safeguard independence and peace in their respective countries and are making significant contributions to the maintenance of peace in the world and peace and stability in Southeast Asia. At the same time, with the assistance and support of the Soviet Union, fraternal socialist countries, nonaligned countries and all progressive mankind throughout the world, the Lao, Vietnamese and Kampuchean peoples are striving to overcome all difficulties and to smash all sabotage schemes of the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists who have colluded with the imperialists and other reactionary forces, thereby raising higher the status and positions of the three Indochinese countries in the international arena. We are very pleased to see that the militant solidarity, special relations and mutual cooperation and assistance in all fields among Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea have been developed and strengthened unprecedentedly. History has reaffirmed that no reactionary force can destroy the solidarity of our three countries, which has now become the overall strength guaranteeing victories in all fields of our peoples.

Though suffering heavy defeats, the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists, colluding with the imperialists and other reactionary forces, have not yet abandoned their scheme to sabotage the three Indochinese countries, create a situation of insecurity in this region, implement a policy of dividing the three Indochinese countries, instigate the ASEAN countries to turn against the Indochinese countries, and carry out psychological warfare, set up an economic blockade and launch attacks in the political, military and other fields against these countries with a view to weakening them.

In the wake of these developments, the conference of the three Indochinese foreign affairs ministers this time is even more significant. We will review together our political stand toward the world and this region. We will discuss and exchange views on numerous measures to strengthen the militant solidarity, further, coordinate, cooperate with and support one another in international affairs, and exert efforts to the fullest extent to smash all schemes and acts of the enemies, thus contributing to safeguarding world peace, and peace, stability and cooperation in Southeast Asia.

The conference subsequently went on with its routine work session.

WORLDWIDE SUPPORT FOR FOREIGN POLICY CLAIMED

BK151416 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 1200 GMT 15 Feb 82

[Unattributed editorial: "Our Correct and Just Foreign Policy Has Been Wholeheartedly Supported by the World's People"]

[Text] Each of our people's victories can be attributed to the wholehearted support and assistance of the fraternal socialist countries and friends across the five continents. In implementing of the foreign policy of peace, independence, self-mastery and socialism over the past 5 years, the LPDR's role and status have been continuously heightened in the international arena, thereby creating favorable conditions for defending and building our beloved country.

What we are particularly proud of is that we have become a member of the socialist community with the support of the great Soviet Union. The militant alliance and special solidarity among Laos, Vietnam and Kampuchea have developed a step further and improved in all respects during the past year. The solidarity and all-round cooperation between Laos and the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries have been consolidated and further strengthened. The glorious success of the conference of the vice foreign ministers of Laos, Vietnam, Kampuchea, the Soviet Union and some socialist countries held in the capital of Vientiane in December 1981 testifies to the unanimity and vigorous support of the fraternal socialist countries for the just struggle of our people and other Indochinese countries.

The strengthening of the militant solidarity and the special relationship which exists between our country and Vietnam and Kampuchea and of the solidarity and all-round cooperation between our country and the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries will always serve as a sparkling gem in the foreign policy of our party and state.

Implementing our unswerving policy of peace, friendship and good-neighbor relations in coordination with the two fraternal Indochinese countries, our foreign minister has visited various Southeast Asian countries such as Malaysia, Indonesia, the Philippines, Burma and Thailand. These visits have not only strengthened good neighhbor relations and friendship, but have also contributed to strengthening mutual understanding and the promotion of meetings and talks between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries, which are aimed at turning Southeast Asia into a region of peace, friendship, stability and cooperation.

As a member of the coordinating committee of the nonaligned countries, we have positively contributed to the Nonaligned Movement's anti-imperialist solidarity and promoted the cause of the struggle to build a new international economic order on the basis of equality and respect for each other's national sovereignty. At the United Nations we have resolutely exposed schemes of the U.S. imperialists and the international reactionaries, opposed the arms race and demanded the reduction of forces in the interest of peace, the easing of tension among nations and for the security of various nations.

Our successes on the diplomatic front in the past are, first of all, the successes of the foreign policy of our party, which has clearly distinguished friends from enemies, closely coordinated our country's strength with that of the militant alliance among the three Indochinese countries, and closely united and cooperated in all respects with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries in order to turn our current strength into an overall force serving our people's revolutionary cause and effectively carrying out the international obligations of our party and state.

It is more necessary in this new period for our party, state and people to strive to win international conditions which will contribute to swiftly fulfilling the cause of socialist transformation and construction in our country, gradually building material and technical bases of socialism and consolidating our national defense. It is also necessary for us to stand side by side with the various fraternal socialist countries and nations in the world struggling for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism, and against imperialism, Beijing expansionism and hegemonism and all reactionaries. Appropriate contributions must be made to the overall victory of the country and to the ceaseless growth and development of the world's revolutionary forces and to creating new and favorable conditions for our party, state and people in order to effectively fulfill their international obligations.

ARMY, PEOPLE URGED TO SMASH ENEMY SCHEMES

[Unattributed article: "Resolutely Counter and Smash All Enemy Schemes To Sabotage Our New System"]

[Text] The situation prevailing in our country over the past 6 years clearly shows to our army and people that the U.S. imperialists, the Chinese reactionaries and other reactionary forces have carried out serious sabotage activities against the Lao revolution in the political, economic and military spheres. In particular, the U.S. imperialists and the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists have colluded with the reactionaries to carry out schemes to sabotage our revolution by feeding, training and arming the former routed mercenaries of the CIA, including those of Kongle, Vang Pao and other exiled Lao reactionaries, and sending them to brazenly spy on, plunder and disturb the happiness and tranquillity of the people in remote areas, regions and provinces, in the mountainous areas and along the Mekong River border areas.

The above-mentioned activities of the U.S. imperialists and the Chinese reactionaries run counter to our revolution. These are characteristically cunning and gravely dangerous acts, aimed at sabotaging and overthrowing the new system and swallowing up our country and checking the success of our national construction and development work as well as of the modernization of our army. Nevertheless, all their despicable schemes have been exposed and punished by our army and people.

The army's and people's cause for building and defending the country has achieved successes and is advancing continuously. Our army is daily growing. It is capable of countering the enemy's schemes and firmly safeguarding the country. All this is a resolute act of loyalty to the party and country conducted by our armed forces and public security forces.

Those successes are the gains won by the entire Lao people at the cost of their lives, blood, flesh and sweat. The above concerte achievements have made friendly countries, particularly those in the socialist camp, and various peace- and justice-loving countries in the world heartily rejoice.

That is why the U.S. imperialists, the Chinese reactionaries, the international reactionaries and their faithful lackeys are bitter and indignant at this event. Once they fail in one tactic, they will try other methods in various forms. They have had both immediate and long-term sabotage plans. After failing in their military schemes, they turn to political maneuvers. They are resorting to every method possible such as threats, encirclement and creation of the so-called united front for the liberation of Laos and so forth.

They once assigned five Thai terrorists to sneak into Laos to cause disturbances in Ban Khok Sai, Sithantai Canton, Vientiane Province. However, our guerrillas and public security forces promptly stopped them and instantly killed two of them. The remainder fled in panic. This blatant act is part of their overall scheme to sabotage our new system and the people's happiness and tranquility. Such an adventurous and hopeless act only exposes their own nature to the people in general.

As a result, our army and people are more determined to counter and punish them and have become more closely united. Let us heighten our vigilance and stand ready to smash to bits all enemy's schemes. No matter how brutal or cunning his scheme is, the enemy surely cannot check Laos' advancement to socialism. However, the Lao army and people cannot relax their attention. They must maintain vigilance toward all enemy's schemes. Our army must carry out the slogan: Everything for defending the country and building socialism. Every citizen must participate in the national defense and public security work and must not allow any enemy come in to destroy us. All military corps and people in all localities must closely cooperate to conduct their normal patrols in the areas under their responsibility, closely follow activities of the reactionaries, spies, agents, bandits and opportunists and duly punish them. This is particularly applied to the various districts, cantons and villages located along the Mekong River. This is to protetct the lives and property of our people, defend the country and maintain tranquility and public order.

At 1930 the Thai foreign minister will host a dinner reception for his Indian counterpart at the Foreign Ministry. The Indian foreign minister will pay a courtesy call on Deputy Prime Minister Col Thanat Khoman at Government House and leave Bangkok for home at 1745 hours.

Meeting With Sawetsila

BK160427 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 16 Feb 82

[Statement by Thai Foreign Ministry Information Department Director General Chet Sutcharitkun on 15 February -- recorded]

[Text] The talks between the Thai and Indian foreign ministers today proceeded well and were very successful. The foreign ministers agreed to continue to conduct dialogues on the solution of regional problems. The Thai foreign minister accepted an invitation to visit India at a time to be decided later.

The Indian foreign minister gave a briefing on India-China relations, noting that the dialogues between the two countries are proceeding in the right direction. He also noted that India-Pakistan relations are also heading in the right direction as a result of the dialogue between the two countries. The Thai side expressed support for the concept of establishing a south Asian forum in the Indian subcontinent.

The talks on Thai-Indian relations proceeded satisfactorily. Thailand thanked India for planning to release the 5 Thai fishing boats and some 100 crewmen who strayed into Indian waters during a storm late last year. Thailand suffered a 530-million-baht trade deficit with India in 1980 and thus it sought to promote further exports to India in order to redress the situation. The Indian side pledged that its Commerce Ministry will seek ways to remedy the problem, possibly by sending a trade delegation to Thailand, or vice versa, to iron out this matter.

Meeting With Thanat

[Text] Indian Foreign Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao and his party paid a courtesy call on Deputy Prime Minister Col Thanat Khoman at Government House at 1100 today.

The deputy prime minister and Indian foreign minister discussed relations between their two countries. The Indian foreign minister expressed his desire to promote further the existing relations between Thailand and India. Thailand and India have cooperated with each other in the economic field to a very good degree. However, it is possible to expand this cooperation. The deputy prime minister said Thailand is willing to cooperate with India because the two countries have never had any conflicts over their interests. Besides, in the past Thailand and India closely associated with each other, particularly in the area of culture. The deputy prime minister further said that Thailand is interested in cooperating with India in such economic areas as joint fishing ventures which, he believed, can benefit both countries.

They also discussed the Kampuchean problem. The deputy prime minister explained Thailand's attitude of noninvolvement toward the Kampuchean problem. However, Thailand cannot avoid the repercussions of the problem. In particular, the influx of refugees into Thailand has created a heavy burden for the Thai Government and people. Thailand wants the problem to be solved through political means and has never closed the door to contacts with Vietnam if there was hope for success.

Thailand and the other ASEAN countries are closely cooperating with each other now to end the Kampuchean problem.

The Indian foreign minister said his visit has enabled him to understand Thailand's attitude and opinion better and expressed thanks to the Thai Government and high-level officials for the friendly reception accorded to him and his party.

News Conference

[Text] Vietnam and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) still have to seek an agreeable "peace formula" to solve the Kampuchean problem, Indian Foreign Minister Narasimha Rao said yesterday.

Speaking at a news conference at the Indian Embassy here, Rao said, however, it was his impression that both Hanoi and Bangkok shared the desire to ease tension in the region.

The Indian foreign minister who left for India yesterday had visited Hanoi and discussed regional issues with the Thai leaders in Bangkok, including Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila, and Deputy Prime Minister Thanat Khoman.

He said that although both Vietnam and Thailand, the frontline states of ASEAN, desired to see peace in the Southeast Asian region, there still existed differences in their respective perceptions of the Kampuchean issue.

He said he did not bring any specific message from the Vietnamese leaders to the Thai counterparts. "What I brought to the Thai leaders if the general impression that Hanoi also wants peace," he said.

The foreign minister confirmed that the Thai leaders did not exclude the possibility solving the Kampuchean conflict through "talks at all levels, including regional talks."

However, he added: "It is my own impression that the Thais did not say in clearcut terms under what circumstances such a regional dialogue would be held."

Thailand had earlier rejected the proposal of Hanoi for a regional conference between ASEAN members and the Indochinese states, including the Heng Samrin regime which ASEAN does not recognize as the legitimate government of Kampuchea.

Rao said that among the "differences" between New Delhi and Bangkok was the problem over the legitimatacy of Kampuchea government. While ASEAN supported the Khmer Rouge which is fighting a guerrilla welfare against the Vietnamese in Kampuchea, New Delhi recognizes the Heng Samrin administration backed by the Vietnamese.

However, he said that India, like ASEAN, opposed all forms of military occupation of one country by another -- be it the Russian occupation of Afghanistan or the Vietnamese military presence in Kampuchea.

Touching on the possibility of regional talks between Hanoi and Bangkok, Rao said that no further progress has been made since the meeting of Vietnamese Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach and Foreign Minister Sitthi in New York.

"But once the talks get going, there could be 10 more rounds of talks," he said.

He added that given the present favourable atmosphere in the region, he saw no bars to another round of regional talks between the conflicting parties.

Delhi Report on Conference

[Text] External Affairs Minister Narasimha Rao has expressed India's willingness to help find a political solution to the Kampuchean problem, addressing a crowded press conference in Bangkok today at the end of his 2-day talks with Thai leaders, he said India would be willing to make its contribution to resolve the issue. Rao, however, made it clear that India is not assigning to itself any specific role.

He told the press conference that during his discussions in Hanoi and Bangkok he gathered the impression that both Vietnam and Thailand are now in favor of regional approach to Kampuchean problem. He expressed the hope that a congenial atmosphere would prevail to bring about peace and harmony in the Southeast Asian region.

Asked about China's role in the region, Rao said India's relations with Beijing are in the process of normalization.

In reply to another question, Rao said the foreign-secretary-level meeting in Islamabad between India and Pakistan early next month would be followed by a meeting of top officials in South Asian countries for greater cooperation among themselves in the economic and technical fields. He said this will help build trust and confidence among countries of the region on the basis of equality.

Earlier, Rao called on Thai Deputy Prime Minister Dr Thanat Khoman and discussed all aspects of the Southeast Asian situation. Dr Khoman recalled India's role in the past in bringing about peace and stability in the region.

Rao has since left Bangkok for New Delhi at the end of his visit to Vietnam and Thailand.

[Editorial: "India Cannot Be a Real Honest Broker"]

[Text] The visit of Indian Foreign Minister Narasimha Rao to Bangkok, even though it might have little effect on the tensions afflicting this region, is helpful in that several misunderstandings could have been sorted out -- misunderstandings that perhaps need not have arisen in the first place. Possibly there were in-depth discussions about the situation in Southeast Asia between him and our Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila which, naturally, would not be made public. However, it is significant that there was no joint communique issued, considering that one was made public when Rao visited Hanoi.

The main message that Rao seems to have brought here from his government and from Hanoi is that India is willing to play the part of an honest broker in reducing the tensions in this area. There is no question that neither Thailand nor fellow-members of ASEAN will reject such an offer. But at the same time it must be questioned whether India has the credentials to play that role. India was one of the first non-aligned countries to recognize the Heng Samrin regime in Phnom Penh along with such 'non-aligned' countries like Cuba, Laos and other Soviet client states.

Naturally such recognition was a slap in the face of ASEAN but ASEAN leaders did not do a song and dance about it because they realized that New Delhi was possibly forced to make such a decision and put her imprimateur, for what it is worth, on the legitimacy of the Heng Samrin regime which was installed in Phnom Penh as a puppet government by the Vietnamese forces. Such recognition, whether anybody agrees or not, indirectly legitimizes the invasion and occupation of Kampuchea by Vietnam.

ASEAN leaders do recognize India's problem which is far worse in west Asia where the Soviet troops are in occupation of Afghanistan and that occupation is challenged more effectively by the Afghan mujahadin than the Vietnamese occupation of Kampuchea by the Khmer Rouge. That is not all. India, in open statements, has condemned the United States for supplying arms to Pakistan but what she is actually worried about is that Pakistan is in the final stages of developing a nuclear device. Under such circumstances, it is only natural that India is more preoccupied by west Asia than by the tensions in Southeast Asia.

But whatever the circumstances, ASEAN will welcome the efforts of all countries, especially a large Asian country like India, to reduce tensions in this part of the world. We do not know, nor can we hazard a guess, as to how India plans to implement her offer. Naturally, the first step to take would be to negotiate the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea but this is a herculean task and we believe that only the Soviet Union can issue such an order.

FOREIGN MINISTRY REBUTS BBC ON PHANUPHONG VIEWS

[Text] A BBC Thai-language broadcast at 1915 on 16 February said that Thailand agrees with the convening of a regional meeting to resolve the Kampuchean problem. In this context, a statement by Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong following his meeting with the Indian foreign minister was cited. The broadcast commented that the statement corresponded with Vietnam's proposal.

Regarding this matter the Foreign Ministry has pointed out that the BBC report is totally untrue. Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong has never made a statement to that effect or expressed such views to anyone on any occasion.

TROOPS WITHDRAWN FROM KHUN SA'S FORMER STRONGHOLD

[Text] The authorities have withdrawn all troopers and Rangers assigned to opium warlord Khun Sa's former stronghold of Ban Hin Taek, Chiang Rai Governor Sakda Ophong said yesterday.

Police and village defence volunteers, headed by Mae Chan District officer Chamlong Siriphan, were yesterday given responsibility for maintaining peace and order in the village, recently renamed Ban Thoetthai.

Mr Sakda said that at least 70 percent of the village's 1,382 residents had returned home and more were expected to follow as the situation returned to normal.

It was understood that none of the Shan rebels formerly based in Ban Hin Taek are in Thai territory, Mr Sakda said.

He said that if they were still in Thailand they would be found by Ranger and government troops patrols combing Chiang Rai Province.

TEXT OF FOREIGN MINISTRY NOTE REJECTING PRC NOTE

BK161600 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 16 Feb 82

[Text] On 16 February our Foreign Ministry sent a note to reply to the 11 February 1982 Chinese Foreign Ministry note. The following is the text of the note:

To the PRC Foreign Ministry, Beijing:

Despite the fact that the Chinese side turned down the 28 December 1981 Vietnamese Foreign Ministry proposal that both sides refrain from carrying out hostile armed activities along the border between the two countries for 10 days during the Year of the Dog Tet, the Vietnamese side declared it would unilaterally carry out this proposal. The Vietnamese armed forces stationed along the border scrupulously observed instructions, thus creating favorable conditions for the peoples and soldiers along the border between the two countries to celebrate the spring festival peacefully and joyfully. World public opinion hailed the Vietnamese side's good will and the UN secretary general himself also confirmed that the situation was calm along the border between the two countries during the occasion of Tet. Nevertheless, on 11 February 1982 the Chinese Foreign Ministry sent a note to the Vietnamese Embassy in Beijing fabricating what it called Vietnam's intensive preparations for armed provocations at the border with China. This is a familiar trick of the Chinese authorities aimed at distorting Vietnam's good will, diverting public opinion's attention from demanding that the Chinese side respond positively to the recent proposal of the Vietnamese side and covering up their schemes and actions of continuing to accelerate armed provocations, war preparations and treats of war to create tension along the border and to wage an all-round war of destruction to pursue big-country expansionism and hegemonism, thus posing a threat to the independence, peace and stability of the Indochinese countries and the Southeast Asian countries as a whole.

The SRV Foreign Ministry totally rejects the slanderous charge cited in the 11 February 1982 Chinese Foreign Ministry note. The Vietnamese people, with the determination to defend their independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, demand that the Chinese side withdraw from illegally occupied Vietnamese territories.

Out of friendship for the Chinese people and a desire to achieve peace and stability along the border between the two countries in order to contribute to peace and stability in the region for the benefit of the Vietnamese people, the Chinese people and the peoples of other countries in Southeast Asia, the SRV Government persists in its policy of solving all problems arising from relations between the two countries through negotiations and will strive to do its utmost along this line.

The 30 January 1982 Vietnamese Foreign Ministry note -- in which Vietnam proposed to the Chinese side that the two sides end all armed hostile activities along the border between the two countries and quickly resume the third round of the Vietnam-China talks in order to tackle the problem of ensuring peace and stability along the border between the two countries and to discuss all matters of mutual interests -- has once again testified to the good will of the Vietnamese side.

Public opinion is waiting for the Chinese side's positive response to this proposal and is expecting to receive a prompt reply from the Chinese side.

PRC POLICY REVIEWED ON ANNIVERSARY OF CONFLICT

17 Feb NHAN DAN Comment

OW170741 Hanoi VNA in English 0707 GMT 17 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 17 -- NHAN DAN today says that the rectionary Beijing authorities have over the past three years committed mounting crimes against the Vietnamese people in a type of war of sabotage in many fields, including violations of the border line and usurpation of northern Vietnamese border territory.

The paper says: "The multi-formed occupation of Vietnamese territory, especially inland border areas, is part of the traditional expansionist and hegemonist strategy of the successive reactionary Chinese ruling cliques for thousands of years. Nowadays the Beijing authorities under the signboard of 'revolution, socialism', far from avoiding the old ruts of the former Chinese kings, have stepped up their aggression against Vietnam in a way even more blatant and perfidious than that of the former feudalist and bourgeois rulers in China. This has found clear expression in Beijing's attacks on Hoang Sa Archipelago in 1956 and 1974 and innumerable events along the Sino-Vietnamese border since 1949".

The paper recalls that almost a century ago, the Qing Dynasty, and more recently the Chiang Kai-shek regime, carried out schemes to usurp Vietnamese territory.

The paper continues: "Following the victories of the revolution in Vietnam and China and desirous of promoting the friendship between the two peoples and turning the Sino-Vietnamese border into a friendship line, Vietnam proposed in 1957 that the two countries strictly respect the historical border line as provided for in the 1887-1895 French-Qing accords. The Chinese side accepted the proposal a year later. But it is regrettable that China did not match its words with its deeds.

"Despite the agreement reached between the two countries in 1957-1958, China argued for 'maintaining the present situation' of the border in order to legitimize its usurpation of more than 60 places in Vietnamese territory after the border delineation and, at the same time, to legitimize its occupation of 90 other places on Vietnamese territory between 1949 when they came to power and February 17, 1979, as was pointed out in the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry's memorandum on March 15, 1979.

"After the failure of China's large-scale aggressive war against the six border provinces of Vietnam in February 1979, Chinese troops have still been stationed at dozens of peaks along the border and deep inside Vietnamese territory.

"Since then they have occupied more peaks and groups of peaks on the Vietnamese side of the common border and built more observation posts and blockhouses there to create a system of defence line on the peaks along the border of the provinces of Lang Son, Cao Bang, Ha Tuyen and Hoang Lien Son. They have step by step broadened the areas under their occupation and encroached upon other places on Vietnamese territory.

"What is particularly serious is that they have re-drawn the frontier on the maps (which were captured during their war of aggression against Vietnam), conducted intrusions into Xin Man village, Ha Tuyen Province, on October 15, 1980, and attacked and occupied Height 400 in Cao Loc District, Lang Son Province, as well as several heights in Vi Xuyen District, Ha Tuyen Province, in May 1981. They were firmly resisted and suffered heavy losses".

The paper concludes: "The serious intrusions into Vietnam's territory during the past three years have revealed Beijing's present scheme, i.e., while continually preparing for a war to annex Vietnam, they have resorted to every perfidious move to exert military pressure and foment troubles along the common border, keep Vietnam's northern border area under control, nibble at Vietnamese territory, and alter the frontier in accordance with the 'present situation' of their occupation, and then further expand their occupation area. This explains why Beijing has rejected every proposal by Vietnam to cease fire and armed provocations along the common border and to resume the third round of the Vietnam-China talks."

Hanoi Radio Comment

[Unattributed commentary: "China's Hostile Policy Against Vietnam"]

[Text] Peace-loving people in the world will never forget the crimes committed by Chinese troops during their war of aggression against Vietnam on 17 February 1979. On that day, when Vietnamese children were sleeping soundly, 60,000 Chinese troops attacked Vietnam's northern border areas, destroying many projects newly restored by the Vietnamese people and almost everything left after the two U.S. air wars of destruction. They devastated three provincial capitals and 300 villages, killed many old people, women and children and threw their bodies into wells or fires. They even poisoned the water resources and polluted the environment. The crimes on 17 February 1979 bear the stamp of Beijing's expansionism, betrayal of revolution and sabotage of the longstanding friendship binding the peoples of Vietnam and China.

These crimes also marked a turning point in Deng Xiaoping's policy of collusion with the United States. Deng himself informed the United States of the aggression beforehand and asked for military support. He shamelessly declared: "To attack Vietnam is for others to watch." So, losses during the attack against Vietnam do not mean anything for China. It is okay even if 50,000 or 1 million Chinese should die.

It is true that they were heavily defeated during their aggressive war against Vietnam. Until now, however, they have not given up their malicious designs of expansion and hegemony. In the past 3 years, the Beijing authorities, openly colluding with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces, have stepped up war preparations and kept threatening to teach Vietnam another lesson. In fact, they have been conducting an all-round war of destruction against Vietnam. The aim is to weaken Vietnam and break the unity of the three Indochinese countries for their annexation. But whether they will succeed or not remains to be seen. It is not up to Beijing to decide. Now Vietnam is stronger than ever and the unity of the three Indochinese countries is being strengthened by the great and all-sided assistance and cooperation with the Soviet Union and other socialist countries.

We have inflicted a heavy setback on the aggressors. Yet, with a desire to live in peace and friendship with the Chinese people and other neighbors, we have proposed the signing with China of a bilateral agreement on peaceful coexistence and a nonaggression treaty and persistently called for an end to all armed actions along the Sino-Vietnamese border and an early resumption of the Vietnam-China talks. This gesture of good will was still rejected. To aggravate the situation, the Chinese side has in the past 3 years carried out 6,000 armed provocations against Vietnam. Most recently, it brazenly turned down our peace initiative put forth in the 30 January 1982 note of the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry.

Our desire for peace and friendship should not be taken for a sign of weakness. In the face of Beijing's challenge, the Vietnamese are always prepared to counter vigorously in defense of their independence and territorial integrity. Pursuing the hostile policy against Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea, seeking to undermine peace and stability in Southeast Asia, continuing the collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces in the arms race and war preparations, selling the fundamental interests of the Chinese people and trampling upon the traditional friendship with Vietnam, the Beijing authorities will certainly invite more ignominious setbacks.

NHAN DAN HITS PRC OFFICIALS' VISIT TO PARACELS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 16 -- NHAN DAN today exposes Beijing's attempts to justify its illegal occupation of the Vietnamese archipelago of Hoang Sa by carrying soil from China to earth up trees there. Commenting on the trip by Yang Dezhi and Yang Yong, respectively chief and deputy chief of the General Staff of the Chinese army, to the Hoang Sa (Paracels) Archipelago, bringing along soil from Zhongnanhai to earth up coconut-trees there, the paper writes:

"In January 1974 the Beijing ruling circle, colluding with the United States, brazenly attacked and occupied the Hoang Sa Archipelago then garrisoned by the Saigon army. Since then Beijing's generals have frequently come to the archipelago to stir up psycho-warfare feelings and sent more troops and weapons there and fortified this archipelago into a military base overlooking Southeast Asian countries. It is noteworthy that their tour was timed to coincide with an announcement by the Taipei authorities to place the archipelagoes in the Eastern Sea, including Vietnam's archipelagoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa (Spratly), under their control. These two events occurred after the Foreign Ministry of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam had published a white book providing undeniable proofs that the archipelogoes of Hoang Sa and Truong Sa belong to Vietnam".

"Assigning two generals to bring a bit of soil from Zhong Nanhai to Hoang Sa, Beijing hopes to prove that this archipelago is Chinese territory", the paper says in conclusion.

U.S. ACCUSED OF DECEIT ON TOXIC CHEMICALS

BK160420 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 15 Feb 82

[Article by station editor: "It Is the United States Who Is the Culprit"]

[Text] Since mid-1981, Uncle Sam has once again been raising a hue and cry about the alleged use of chemical weapons by Vietnam and the Soviet Union in Kampuchea, Laos and Afghanistan. His allies in Beijing, London and a number of Southeast Asian capitals have promptly added their voices to the chorus.

Making a big fuss about the whole affair, Uncle Sam first dispatched doctors and specialists to the region, then pressed the United Nations to send a mission up to the Kampuchean-Thai border to collect proof of the chemical warfare allegedly waged by Vietnam in Kampuchea. Uncle Sam has also smuggled scouts and some of his Lao henchmen into Laos in the hope of finding incriminating evidence against Vietnam and the Soviet Union.

Progressive mankind, however, has had the opportunity to witness yet another failure by Uncle Sam in his attempt to sling mud at the SRV. A few leaves which he brought to Washington for tests could not stand up as proof that Vietnam had used toxic chemicals, because such samples can be easily collected in many parts of the world. Upon its return, the UN team also had to conclude that there had been no evidence to prove the U.S. charges.

In a conference of the Association of American Scientists and Technologists held late last year, the association's scientists concluded that the evidence presented by the United States against Vietnam was unconvincing and vague, and therefore unbelievable. A member of the association pointed out this was nothing more than a maneuver employed by the United States to cover up the fact that it has continued to stockpile chemical weapons and to produce new ones.

Yet, according to a BBC report on 15 February, U.S. Secretary of State Haig, defying public opinion, has baselessly claimed in a televised statement that Vietnam and the Soviet Union are using toxic chemicals in Kampuchea and Afghanistan and that these chemicals have killed thousands of Kampuchean and Afghan civilians.

While Uncle Sam was cooking up such stories about the use of toxic chemicals by Vietnam and the Soviet Union in Kampuchea and Afghanistan to conceal his spending of millions of dollars for the production of new toxic chemicals, the U.S. paper New York TIMES published a 500-page report providing a fairly concrete account of how the United States had used toxic chemicals to kill the peoples of Indochina in earlier years.

In the past, progressive mankind was already somewhat aware of this cruel chemical warfare waged by Uncle Sam in Indochina. The 500-page report by USAF Maj William Buckingham, however, has revealed that the U.S. chemical war against the Indochinese peoples did not begin only in 1964. On the contrary, the United States had already formulated plans for such a war well before that year. The documents presented by William Buckingham pointed out that as early as 1961 U.S. Secretary of Defense McNamara himself had sought to deceive public opinion at home and abroad about that chemical war.

At the time, the United States described the chemicals it used as "defoliants." In fact, they were substances which could have serious immediate and long-term effects on man and the environment. Thousands of gallons of these toxic chemicals were sprayed by aircraft bearing the puppet Vietnamese Air Force's insignia and flown by mufti-clad puppet pilots. This was aimed at leading people into believing that the chemicals were not harmful to man.

Former U.S. Ambassador to South Vietnam Nolting was an avid supporter of this secret plan to spray chemical poisons. He told everyone that they were civil goods in order to get around the stipulations of the 1954 Geneva Conference on Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea and international conventions. The U.S. Departments of State and Defense also kept a stock of prepared statements and falsified documents to present to the press when the latter inquired about or questioned the U.S. use of chemical poisons against the Indochinese peoples.

The missions flown by U.S. aircraft to spray chemical poisons on Laos in 1964 were described as reconnaissance flights conducted in support of the Lao Government -- namely, the Lao reactionaries who were overthrown by the Lao people in 1975.

The U.S. Government also issued an order authorizing U.S. officials to disavow U.S. pilots and servicemen engaged in the spraying of toxic chemicals in Indochina if they were captured by their adversaries, in an attempt to cut off all leads on this internationally forbidden crime.

It can be said that Uncle Sam made fairly careful and comprehensive preparations to deceive public opinion at home and abroad with regard to the use of chemical poisons against the peoples of the Indochinese countries -- a war condemned by progressive mankind in the later years of this century as the most barbarous and cruel in the world's history. The detrimental consequences of Uncle Sam's chemical war have been and continue to be felt in large areas and they are affecting the three Indochinese countries in many respects.

Even American soldiers who were forced by Uncle Sam into this chemical war are themselves now suffering from its harmful effects. The U.S. veterans association has voiced its accusations before the American public and demanded that the U.S. Government pay compensation. An organization to investigate the use of chemical poisons by the United States in Indochina was founded recently to reach a conclusion on the crime perpetrated by Uncle Sam.

The new 500-page document about the U.S. chemical war in Indochina made public by William Buckingham has made righteous Americans feel more indignant and stands as yet another undeniable proof of Uncle Sam's true face with regard to the killing of the Indochinese peoples in the past as well as the present.

Fearing public reaction, the U.S. Department of State has deleted 20 important pages from this 500-page document for the reason, as expressed by the White House, that their publication would adversely affect the current relations between the United States and foreign countries. This, however, is an understatement. A responsible U.S. foreign service official firmly stated that full publication of these 20 pages would endanger the interests of the United States in the field of foreign relations and seriously affect its relations with other countries.

U.S. imperialism and no one else is guilty of using toxic chemicals to kill the Indochinese peoples. But now the U.S. powerholders themselves are loudly making slanderous charges against Vietnam and the socialist countries in order to cover up their crime and lend a hand to the Beijing expansionists and other reactionary forces in opposing and undermining the independence and freedom of the Indochinese countries and causing instability in Southeast Asia.

Mankind must remain vigilant and take timely actions to halt this dark scheme of U.S. imperialism and its followers.

AIMS OF CARRINGTON'S ASEAN TOUR QUESTIONED

BK131638 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 12 Feb 82

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN commentary by (Thuy Chi) on British foreign minister's tour of five ASEAN countries -- date not given]

[Text] On 9 February, British Foreign Minister Carrington concluded his long tour early in the year of five ASEAN member countries -- Indonesia, the Philippines, Thailand, Malaysia and Singapore -- to carry out his mission as a London political decoy.

According to observers, London seems to have shown a great deal of concern for remote Asia since the beginning of the year. No sooner had the new year begun, then the top London leaders were rushing to Asia. On 4 January, British Deputy Foreign Minister Atkins went to Beijing for 5 days to strengthen relations with Beijing. On 28 January, the British foreign minister also left London to begin his tour of five ASEAN countries.

What did the British foreign minister have in mind in coming to this region? Obviously this was not a friendship visit as advertised by the British ruling circles. The British press has also expounded on the purpose of Carrington's trip -- that is, to demonstrate that Britain has always supported ASEAN countries and is doing so now on the Kampuchean issue. Moreover, it is of no less importance that Britain wants to strengthen its trade relations with those countries where it has been suffering losses in its competition with the United States, Japan and other Western European countries.

One can clearly see what London hopes to gain through Carrington's trip. On the one hand, it has sought to heighten British presence in Southeast Asia; on the other hand, it wants to carry out the role of an acolyte what is colluding with the United States and the Chinese expansionists to oppose and sabotage Vietnam and Kampuchea, causing tension in the region.

Since the end of World War II, the prestige of this old imperialist country has declined and its area of operations has also shrunk. Britain is now thinking of increasing its influence and enlarging its area of operations, mainly to seek markets for the British capitalists. It was primarily for this reason that eight major businessmen accompanied the British foreign minister during his ASEAN tour.

To woo future customers, the British foreign minister racked his brain for common views and loudly and eagerly voiced support for the ASEAN countries opposition to Vietnam and Kampuchea. Wherever he went -- from Jakarta to Bangkok, and from Kuala Lumpur to Manila -- Carrington made accusations and distorted statements slandering Vietnam and Kampuchea and pledging support for the establishment of a loose coalition of the three reactionary Khmer factions.

No sooner had he left Jakarta, Indonesia, for Manila, the Philippines, than Carrington had to assert: We -- that is, Britain -- have supported you in every way. As if it was still not sufficient to give the host a good impression, in Bangkok, Thailand, the British envoy thought that he no longer needed to be cautious and bluntly said: Britain will follow ASEAN policy.

During this tour, Carrington wholeheartedly fulfilled the role of a loyal ally and a number one faithful acolyte of the United States. Everyone knows that Beijing, assisted by Washington, has long concocted several plots to oppose Vietnam and sabotage the independence of Kampuchea. It has mustered the genocidal Pol Pot clique and other Kampucheans in exile to set up the so-called loose 3-faction coalition government.

However, the Beijing expansionists who fathered this deformed fetus could not achieve any results after having made several efforts, even with ASEAN's assistance. After several meetings in Kuala Lumpur and then in Thailand, they still cannot tie the three lame horses together. This devilish alliance threatens to disintegrate, which is all the more serious at a time when some of the ASEAN countries have threatened to withdraw their support for the genocidal Pol Pot clique.

Faced with the danger of a total collapse of the Kampuchean reactionaries' loose alliance, the London leaders once again sided with Washington and Beijing, striving to resurrect the corpse.

Carrington took further advantage of ASEAN forums to oppose Vietnam. He called on the Western European countries to oppose the EEC decision to give aid to Vietnam. Finally, from behind these wooing attitudes and statements, Carrington poked out his economic cards by giving the eight leading British businessmen free rein to pursue customers.

Prior to Carrington's arrival in some of the ASEAN countries, there were movements to protest the British capitalist companies' overbearing attitudes which are comparable to a big fish eating small fries.

Recently, Malaysia announced its reduction in trade with Britain, and relations between Malaysia and Britain are poor. Carrington had to painstakingly enhance the value of British economists, saying that they are very knowledgable and thoroughly understand the development of ASEAN countries and their policies.

Carrington pledged to help Indonesia develop agriculture and industry. In this connection, he even made plans to sent British youths to this country. In Thailand, Foreign Minister Carrington asserted London's concern for Bangkok's economy by saying: The presence of the leaders of eight major British companies in my delegation is obvious proof of Britain's concern for development in Thailand.

Although his plot is large and it reflects many ambitions, the British foreign minister's tour could not achieve the results expected by London. With regard to the so-called Kampuchean issue, despite Carrington's vows to support ASEAN and to constantly encourage the loose coalition of the three reactionary Khmer factions, he had to admit that both the host and guest expressed confusion about the Kampuchean issue. To put it bluntly, Carrington cannot perform a miracle and give his host any advice to extricate himself from this stalemate.

From the economic standpoint, the situation is even worse, because Britain's hope for maintaining the increasing role of its investments in Southeast Asia has also vanished. The daily STAR in Malaysia noted: Carrington has returned home without any expected breakthrough concerning the relationship. His worst setback was his inability to improve the relationship between Britain and Malaysia.

AFP clearly pointed out: British Foreign Minister Carrington has failed to allay the already tense economic relations between Britain and Malaysia. The Malaysian press outspokenly said: The British foreign minister cannot make Malaysia change its policy. He should not expect British goods to get the same privileged status now as they received when Malaysia was a British colony.

Carrington's most noteworthy achievement during his ASEAN tour was that once again he exposed the true face of the old British colonialist who has always colluded with the U.S. imperialists and international reactionaries in opposing and sabotaging the revolution.

However, history evolves according to its own law. No reactionary force can check it.

ANNIVERSARY OF CULTURAL PACT WITH USSR MARKED

Ministry Hosts Meeting

OW161834 Hanoi VNA in English 1533 GMT 16 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 16 — The Ministry of Culture held a meeting at the Hanoi Conservatoire on Feb. 15 in honour of the 25th anniversary of the Vietnamese-Soviet cultural cooperation agreement. On the presidium of the meeting were Ha Xuan Truong, vice-minister of culture; Tran Dang Khoa, vice president of the Vietnam-U.S.S.R. Friendship Association; Vo Dong Giang, deputy foreign minister; and Nguyen Van Trong, deputy head of the Commission for External Relations of the Communist Party of Vietnam Central Committee. Soviet Ambassador B.N. Chaplin was also present.

Addressing the meeting, Vice Minister Ha Xuan Truong highlighted the important results of the cultural and scientific cooperation between Vietnam and the Soviet Union over the past 25 years. This cooperation, he noted, has increased in depth and scale. The publication of Lenin's complete works in Vietnamese was a very significant milestone in this cooperation, he added.

Speaking on the occasion, Soviet Ambassador Chaplin said that the unshakable fraternal friendship and all-sided cooperation between the two countries have further consolidated and developed in every field in the life of the two peoples since the signing of the Soviet-Vietnamese treaty of friendship and cooperation. He reaffirmed that the Communist Party, the government and the people of the Soviet Union, including the scientific and cultural workers, would continue to extend their support and assistance to Vietnam.

On behalf of the Hanoi Conservatoire, Deputy Director Vinh Cat expressed sincere thanks to the Soviet music schools and circles for their effective and substantial assistance to the Hanoi Conservatoire, an assistance which has found a most happy expression in the world-known successes of pianists Dang Thai Son and Ton Nu Nguyet Minh.

Together with the People's Security Forces and Army, they have detected and rounded up many groups of Chinese scouts, seized large quantities of leaflets and exposed all sources of false rumors and distortions by the reactionaries.

The conference set forth the guidelines and tasks for movement to maintain national security in the days ahead aimed at implementing party Central Committee Resolution No 11 and the resolution on the province's tasks for 1982.

HAI HUNG HOLDS PARTY ORGANIZATION CONGRESS

OW151431 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1100 GMT 13 Feb 82

[Part I of station correspondent Van Xuyen's report: "Through the Party Organization Congress of Hai Hung Province"]

[Text] The party organization congress of Hai Hung Province was held for 9 days in an animated and intensive spirit. [no dates given]

Sessions for group discussions, reports and speeches were held even in the evening and on Sunday in the conference hall. More than 500 delegates representing more than 90,000 party members and some 2 million people in the province contributed thousands of valuable suggestions regarding the documents to be presented at the forthcoming party congress.

After holding democratic discussions and debates, the delegates, despite their differing views, reached a high unanimity of views with those contained in the basic points of the party Central Committee's draft political report. They affirmed the remarkable achievements recorded in our country's revolution over the past 5 years and came to more clearly realize the ways and means to overcome all obstacles and weaknesses in order to continue advancing the revolution.

Exchanging views on the reasons for the past successes of the revolution, all delegates stressed that not only the general revolutionary line but also the specific policies mapped out by the fourth party congress were all correct and creative and constituted a primary factor for these successes. This observation was reflected in the views expressed by the delegates at the group discussions or in their speeches.

At a group discussion session, Comrade Le Van Vi, secretary of the Nam Thanh District Party Committee, stressed that it was a one-sided and ungrounded view that the party's general line is correct but its specific policies are unclear or erroneous. Referring to the local situation, he proved the infallible correctness of our party's specific policies and economic development line.

As a province with a small area and a dense population, Hai Hung was never able to solve its food problem before the revolution. As observed by a French colonialist scholar at that time, it was a scene of men and pigs fighting each other for food, an endless tragedy. However, over the past years, by developing agriculture in the direction of intensive and specialized cultivation and by gradually advancing to socialist large-scale production, Hai Hung has produced enough food for a population twice as large as under French domination, kept part of its grain in reserve and delivered 100,000 to 120,000 tons of paddy annually to the state granaries as an obligation while supplying other farm produce, including jute, rush, soybean, garlic and peanut, as raw materials for various industries and for exports.

Comrade Nguyen Phung, agricultural service chief and delegate from Cam Binh District, noted that due to practicing intensive cultivation over the past years, Hai Hung Province has eliminated the tendency of decreased cultivated areas. Before 1975 the province's cultivated area gradually dropped because of problems concerning irrigation, capital construction and so forth. But since 1976, implementing the "An inch of land, an inch of gold" motto, Hai Hung has maintained its cultivated area through great efforts in reclaiming idle and fallow land and filling ponds and ditches to turn them into cultivated land. Firmly grasping the intensive cultivation line and considering irrigation work as the primary task, Hai Hung, after building the Bac Hung Hai irrigation project, has continued to invest capital boldly and mobilize tens of millions of workdays to build hundreds of electric pumping stations in order to insure irrigation and drainage of most of its cultivated area. With a relatively perfect irrigation network capable of combating drought during the 5th-month spring crop season and waterlogging during the 10th-month crop season, Hai Hung has stabilized the 10th-month crop while replacing the old rice varieties with new, high-yield varieties of rice. These are the basic reasons for Hai Hung Province's success in maintaining an average paddy output of 5 tons per hectare over the previous 5 years and achieving 6 tons in 1981 despite many unfavorable conditions.

At the group discussion sessions, Comrades Quach Thi Vien, chief of Thanh Xa village in Nam Thanh District and Nguyen Van Man, Party Committee secretary of Gia Tan village in Tu Loc District, also affirmed that developing agriculture in the direction of intensive and specialized cultivation and turning the winter crop into the main one are quite correct and responsive to our peasants' wishes.

In fact, Gia Tan cooperative, which achieved an average paddy output of 9 to 10 tons per hectare several years in a row, has planted the winter crop on 80 percent of its cultivated land. As a result, the cooperative's annual income is equal to that obtained from two rice crops. According to Comrade Man, Hai Hung Province has scored the most outstanding achievements in the past years in practicing intensive cultivation, expanding its winter crop area and rapidly increasing its grain output.

Comrade Pham Van Viet, chairman of Tu Loc District, agreed with Comrade Man but stressed the following unique features of Hai Hung Province: Hai Hung has gradually expanded its winter crop area over the past 5 years. This area was only more than 10,000 hectares in 1976 but reached nearly 60,000 hectares in 1980. Hai Hung Province's winter crop output has increased from 20,000 to nearly 140,000 tons. Due to the winter crop, the local people's livelihood has been stabilized, although the province's paddy output in a certain year decreased. Hai Hung has successfully maintained the size of its herd of pigs and fulfilled its grain obligation to the state. It can be said that practicing intensive cultivation while expanding the winter crop area and gradually turning the winter crop into the main one constitute the outstanding achievements and unique features of Hai Hung Province, which has learned a valuable experience and lesson in creatively implementing the party's agricultural development line.

Many other delegates also acclaimed the building of areas specializing in jute, rush, peanut and soybean in Hai Hung Province over the past years, noting that this was a creative implementation of the party's agricultural development line. These specialized cultivated areas, though endowed with different natural, economic and social conditions, have helped Hai Hung initially to free itself from the state of fragmentary production to exploit its potential inland and manpower more rationally, to turn out a considerable annual volume of farm produce for export and to meet the needs for industrial development and local consumption.

Regarding the role and impact of the area specializing in rush, Comrade Nguyen Ngoc Mot, chairman of the Thanh Hong cooperative in Nam Thanh district, expressed the following views: [begin Nguyen Ngoc Mot recording] Our Thanh Hong cooperative was assigned an area of 670 mau bac bo, specializing in rush in 1975, and we sold 1,150 tons of rush to the state with the set quota being 1,300 tons. In exchange, the state sold us some grain. But, apart from our rush obligation, we still have to fulfill our grain obligation. Last year, our cooperative produced more than 1,300 tons of rush and sold 1,200 tons to the state. We also work under a contract with the state. According to the contract, our cooperative had to supply 5,000 to 100,000 rush mats in a certain year. We have also engaged in making blinds and carpets. [end recording]

When discussing the issue of organizing the implementation of the party's correct line, all delegates unanimously agreed with the central level that many shortcomings have remained. Many of them wondered why the implementation of this line or policy has yielded good results in one locality but bad results in another; why without any particularly different natural conditions, many cooperatives such as the Gia Tan, Nhu Quynh, Trung Hung and Thanh Long cooperatives have achieved an annual paddy output of 8 or 9 tons per hectare, whereas others have failed to surpass the 5-ton output mark; and why many cooperatives have planted the winter crop on only 15 to 20 percent of their cultivated area while others, such as the An Dinh, Thanh Hai, Pham Kha and Gia Tan cooperatives, have covered 60 to 70 percent. According to these delegates, the main cause of the shortcomings was related to organization and guidance. Many of them criticized a number of party committee echelons and cadres for failing to implement the party Central Committee's directives and resolutions scrupulously, for exaggerating their localities' characteristics and objective difficulties, for altering the party's line and policies, and for arbitrarily applying scientific and technical accomplishments and management systems in their own ways.

A district party committee secretary admitted that he failed to vividly and creatively organize and guide the implementation of the party's line and policies, maintained administrative bureaucracy in his work, failed to stay close to grassroots organizations and failed to find out and overcome obstacles. A delegate wondered why Hai Hung Province, with its experience in planting the winter crop and its prompt application of the system of product contracts with individual laborers and laboring groups during that crop, delayed the application and expansion of this system in rice production. He noted that this was a manifestation of conservatism and inertia on the part of a number of leading cadres and party committee echelons. He also remarked that the use of machines in agricultural production in Hai Hung Province has been basically good but has revealed impatience on the part of some cooperatives by failing to make careful calculations when using tractors and hastily selling part of their herds of buffaloes and oxen, thus affecting the speed and quality of soil preparation.

Regarding organizational and guidance work, all delegates stressed the position, role and task of the district level as being responsible for managing grassroots organizations. Many comrade district party committee chairmen and secretaries admitted that they had an inadequate view of the position of the district level and did not take the initiative in leading and guiding the exploitation of their districts' potentials inland and labor. Meanwhile, they suggested that the upper echelons should rapidly and boldly share some assignments and provide a number of material and technical bases to the districts so they would have conditions for guiding and assisting the grassroots organizations.

The delegates from Minh Thanh, Chi Linh and My Van Districts told about irrational practices such as using trucks instead of improved carts and bicycles to transport goods, farm products and foodstuffs from a village to a district only 6 or 7 kilometers away, thus disregarding the fuel problem now confronting the country. Another instance involved My Van District which, despite its great potentials and its capability to achieve an annual handicraft gross output value worth 6 or 7 million dong, made no attempt to make harrows and plows for its own use but requested the provincial level to supply these farm tools or asked its cooperatives to purchase them far away in Ha Bac Province during every crop season.

Dealing with this issue, Comrade Nguyen Thi Bang, party committee secretary of Thanh Long Village in My Van District, stated: [begin Nguyen Thi Bang recording] We fully endorse the central-level documents. Over the past years, our locality has achieved some good points in grain and foodstuffs production, thus insuring its contributions of grain to the state and stabilizing the people's livelihood. To solve the food problem, we will strive for intensive cultivation to increase grain output and will expand the cultivated area. Basically, various sectors in the province and district properly served agricultural production in the past year. But last December our locality [indistinct words] and our cooperatives had to make up for the losses. [end recording]

The congress noted that in his speech, the comrade delegate from the Hai Hung Planning Committee presented concrete proofs regarding the weaknesses which the province is striving to overcome. Hai Hung has a small land area and a dense population. Its per capita land allotment dropped from 740 square meters in 1975 to 685 in 1980. Over the past 5 years, along with implementing the birth control plan, Hai Hung has sent a number of its people to build new economic zones, but the results have been poor.

Recapitulating the tens of thousands of suggestions from cadres and party members of grassroots organizations and from 22 delegations to the congress, Comrade Ngo Quang Dao, Hai Hung Party Committee secretary, noted that a large number of suggestions related to the central-level documents and to the leadership work of the province's party committee echelons were rational and that the majority of cadres and party members had accurately appraised the past achievements and realized shortcomings and had seriously advanced practical plans and measures to continue achieving progress.

HA SON BINH HOLDS PARTY ORGANIZATION CONGRESS

[Station correspondent Vinh Loc's report: "Observations on the Party Organization Congress of Ha Son Binh Province"]

[Text] Ha Son Binh is one of the provinces that held an early party organization congress. Some 436 delegates, representing more than 50,000 party members and some 1.5 million people of various nationalities, studied and discussed the party Central Committee's draft documents to be presented at the fifth national party congress.

Although these documents were studied previously at the grassroots, district and city levels on several occasions, some delegates still maintained a one-sided view of the actual national situation. However, sessions of democratic, liberal and serious discussion helped remove worries from their minds. After the congress, all delegates unanimously affirmed the successes achieved under the party Central Committee's steady and clear-sighted leadership. They became aware of the causes of past difficulties and shortcomings and agreed on the strategic tasks, objectives and main tasks in the coming years. In particular, the delegates, being party members, now have a clear view of their responsibilities in the face of difficulties confronting the country. In the present situation in their localities, they have contributed specific and practical suggestions relating to the draft documents.

First of all, they tackled the food problem. Many districts in Ha Son Binh Province still depend on natural conditions in grain production. In My Duc and Ung Hoa Districts, the winter crop has so far been affected by drought and the 10th-month crop by flood and waterlogging.

The delegate from Phuc Trach District and the My Duc District Party Committee secretary affirmed that, due to the expansion of the new product-contract system, which has brought good results, and to the implementation of the plan to eliminate bureaucratic subsidy administrativism and with the masses' determination, My Duc has been able to achieve self-sufficiency in food, fulfill its grain obligation to the state and keep part of its grain in reserve during normal years. At the end of 1981 the entire district adopted a resolution that the winter and spring crops should yield enough grain for the whole year's consumption and for delivery to the state. As for the 10th-month crop output, it should be reserved for a lean year so that the local people would not go hungry and ask for help from the upper level. To this end, the cooperatives in the district have zoned areas which can't insure a good harvest even in times of flood and waterlogging. My Duc has shifted to planting subsidiary crops such as corn, sweet potatoes, vegetables and beans on 30 percent of its rice area which cannot be properly irrigated. Every year, apart from delivering some 5,500 tons of grain to the state, the district's people have been able to keep about 8,000 tons in reserve.

The delegates from Ung Hoa District, which has the same riceland features, said that their locality was able to achieve the same thing. However, they stressed that to satisfactorily solve the food problem, the local people should strongly develop a self-reliant spirit, whereas the state should make substantial investment in some key projects to practically support agricultural production.

Comrade Nguyen Kien Trung, delegate from Ung Hoa District, reported that construction of the Van Dinh and Ngoai Do pumping stations was started in early 1978. After 3 years of work, 4 million dong was spent, but the main part of the two projects has been left unfinished. As a result, more than 30,000 hectares of land in Ung Hoa, Thanh Oai, Phy Xuyen and Thuong Tin Districts still remain under the threat of a bad harvest, while the new rice varieties have not been used and the winter crop area has not been expanded. Moreover, the districts with low-level ricefields have lost some 30,000 to 40,000 tons of paddy every year. However, our peasants have not remained inactive. They have launched a mass movement for building minor irrigation projects, consolidated embankments and readied water pumps, bailers and norias to combat waterlogging when necessary.

The delegates from Lac Son District stressed the need for each province or district to solve the food and clothing problems for its own local people. Comrade Bui Nen, Lac Son District Party Committee secretary, revealed that over the past 3 years, although it has not made big capital or technical investments, Lac Son has successfully restored cotton cultivation, weaving, mulberry planting and sericulture. As a result, 2.5 meters of cotton cloth has been added to the per capita cloth share. He noted the mountain district's great capability of producing cotton cloth, pointing out that weaving has been a long-standing traditional occupation of the local people and that land and weather conditions have been favorable. He stressed that if this potential is properly exploited, the district will be able to achieve self-sufficiency in clothing and produce cotton cloth for export and for exchange with the lowlands.

Learning from Lac Son's fine experience, the lowland districts in Ha Son Binh Province have also engaged in mulberry planting and sericulture. During a break, the Quoc Oai District Party Committee secretary contacted the Ung Hda District Party Committee secretary to ask him for a few mulberry roots to plant during the Tet holidays. And many districts planned to grow mulberry during that period.

Discussing the food and clothing issue, the delegates paid special attention to sending local people to build new economic zones. Ha Son Binh has two options: Either to send people to the mountains in their own province or to send them to reclaim land in Song Be Province. Some 86 percent of people in the new economic zones have built their own homes and wells. This is very encouraging.

The delegates were moved by the fact that during their meeting in these pre-Tet days, compatriots from Quoc Oai District, who would be going to Song Be Province to build new economic zones, sent their representatives to greet the party organization congress and explain the reason for their departure during, and not after, the tradition Tet holiday. To the delegates' surprise, their simple explanation contained high revolutionary spirit: They wanted to be on schedule for crop cultivation, and their native village could be anywhere. [as heard]

One of Ha Son Binh Province's great potentials is its artisan production and traditional occupations and trades. Its 242 artisan cooperatives, with nearly 30,000 artisans, have produced rattan, bamboo, knitwear, embroidery and lace goods for export, representing nearly 80 percent of the province's total volume of export goods. These cooperatives advocate using only local raw materials to avoid purchasing and trasporting thousands of tons from friendly provinces, reduce the manufacturing costs of products and increase production quickly.

However, the producers of export goods have to face a great problem caused by an unstable goods purchase plan and an irrational grain policy toward artisans, which has failed to encourage people to take up handicrafts.

The delegates expressed their confidence in the policies mentioned in the draft documents, which are aimed at exploiting the advantages of various occupations and trades. They also expressed the hope that there would be a correct policy regarding handicraft production to create conditions for developing the traditional occupations and trades in various localities, producing more export goods and contributing to making the country prosperous.

The delegates contributed hundreds of suggestions related to the issues mentioned in the draft documents to be presented to the fifth national party congress.

The Communists in Ha Son Binh Province are putting their trust in their 25 delegates to the national party congress. With firm confidence in the country's development and with an absolute trust in the party Central Committee's leadership and in the masses' steady collective mastery, they have returned to their localities in honor of the forthcoming party congress.

PHAM VAN DONG SPEAKS AT INFORMATION CONFERENCE

[From the review of the Hanoi press for 13 February]

[Text] All papers today front-page a report on the conference held by the information and cultural sector to review its activities in 1981 and to discuss its guidelines and tasks for 1982.

The conference set forth nine tasks for the sector, which involve effectively carrying out propaganda work on the fifth party congress resolution in order to ensure that the study of this resolution is conducted satisfactorily; implementing the 1982 plan successfully; creating favorable conditions for the implementation of the 5-year plan on information and cultural work from the grassroots level upward; concentrating efforts on directing artistic activities in order to create many better works, stepping up theoretical research work; drawing experience on work related to developing districts and precincts and organizing cultural life at the grassroots level in order to carry out this work in a more extensive manner; intensifying guidance over cultural work among ethnic minority groups; formulating plans for the basic and long-term training of cadres, with the emphasis on managerial cadres; stabilizing the organization of the sector from the central to grassroots levels; and expanding economic work, especially exports, more vigorously.

Addressing the conference, Chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong praised the information and cultural sector for its achievements over the past years and urged that information and cultural work be conducted in line with the specific situation in the country and the initial stage of socialist industrialization.

The chairman said: We must closely combine cultural work with the ideological and cultural revolution -- a profoundly important part of the socialist revolutionary struggle -- and, on that basis, make a comprehensive and profound study of the Vietnamese socialist culture and of the new type of Vietnamese man. As Uncle Ho said: To build socialism we must, first of all, have socialist men.

He added: It is necessary to step up information and cultural activities in order to help develop the economy, overcome difficulties and repel and eliminate all negative phenomena in society. To carry out these tasks, we must create ideological and mental changes among those engaged in cultural work -- those who are struggling for a new culture and a new type of socialist man and life.

PHAM HUNG ATTENDS PEOPLE'S COURT CONFERENCE

[Text] From 8 to 11 February the people's court sector held a conference in Hanoi to review its work in 1981 and to set forth its orientations and tasks for 1982. Comrade Pham Hung, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, attended and addressed the conference.

Last year the people's court sector made extensive efforts and achieved new progress in holding trials, handing down sentences, developing and consolidating its organization, and studying legislation and contributing to its development. Along with the success in adjudicating criminal cases, good results were achieved in settling litigations concerning marriage and family matters and other civil cases, thus actively contributing to promptly resolving complaints among the people. The courts paid much attention to the aspects of education and reconciliation; took the initiative in consulting the opinions of the masses, sought coordination from mass organizations, especially the women's union; and devoted much time and effort to explaining the law and policies to the persons concerned. Thanks to this, the sector last year reconciled and reunited 946 couples filing for divorce and reconciled 1,690 cases of civil litigation.

[Text] The president today received Singapore's foreign minister, Suppiah Dhanabalan, who paid a courtesy call at Malacanang. During the 30-minute call the president and the visiting foreign minister discussed the need for continuing consultations among ASEAN member nations on various matters, including the Kampuchean issue. The president asked the foreign minister to convey his greetings to Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew.

Further on Talks

HK120022 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 11 Feb 82

[Text] President Marcos says there is a need for ASEAN nations to continue talks on various problems, including the Kampuchean issue. The president declared his position during a half-hour meeting with Singaporean Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan. The Sinaporean foreign minister arrived the other day for a periodic meeting with his ASEAN counterparts. He was scheduled to leave last night after completing 2 days of talks with Philippine officials. The president asked Dhanabalan to convey his greetings to Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew. The president said he intends to exchange assessments on ASEAN development with the Singaporean prime minister.

Foreign Minister Dhanabalan held intensive talks with Foreign Minister Carlos P. Romulo after calling on the president. The talks centered on Kampuchea, where a Vietnamese-backed regime reigns. The Singaporean foreign minister said he hopes a breakthrough will soon be made to settle the problem, perhaps by some kind of a coalition government.

[Begin Dhanabalan recording] After consulting all my colleagues, we will formulate an ASEAN reply. We are prepared to help them, we are prepared to assist them if they request such help and assistance, but we cannot force our views on them. [end Dhanabalan recording]

RULING ISSUED ON OPPOSITION TRIALS IN ABSENTIA

HK050117 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 4 Feb 82

[Excerpts] U.S.-based opposition leaders and others accused of rebellion and subversion who are still at large cannot be tried in absentia. This was clarified by Quezon City fiscal (Seri Apostol) to correct reports that former Senators Benigno Aquino, Jovito Salonga and Raul Manglapus will be arraigned on Monday. (Apostol) said the Constitution and judiciary rules prohibit trial in absentia.

(Apostol) said that as these accused and some other persons named to him in information remain at large, they cannot be tried as yet, and the araignment scheduled for next Monday will be only for those who are already in custody. The Quezon City fiscal said it is the policy of the government and in consonance with the constitutional position that after arraignment, trial may proceed despite the absence of the accused provided that he has been duly notified and his failure to attend is unjustified. The [words indistinct] provision, he said, goes no further than to enable the judge to continue with the trial even if the accused is not present. However, in this specific case, the court has not yet acquired jurisdiction over some of the accused. He said a warrant of arrest has been issued for the apprehension of ex-Senataors Beinigno Aquino jr., Jovito Salonga, Raul Manglapus, and Steve Psinakis, and all other accused who are still at large.

FORMER OFFICIALS ARRESTED FOR SUBVERSION

They are now detained at constabulary headquarters at Camp Crame. The arrest warrant included former Senator Raul Manglapus, who is in the United States, and 23 others. Manglapus and several other military personnel are still at large. They have been charged with subversion, rebellion and illegal possession of firearms.

LOCAL COMMUNITIES TO BENEFIT FROM RESOURCES

HK170252 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 16 Feb 82

[Text] The Cabinet has decided to give local communities more share from the development of local natural resources. As it is now, they are getting only marginal benefits. Most of the earnings from natural resources projects like mining goes to the national government. The Cabinet, chaired by Prime Minister Cesar Virata, felt it was about time that communities blessed with natural resources got their proper share.

And the details now from (Bert Asuke): [Begin Asuke recording]: It is a case of giving provinces, cities or municipalities a more visible share of all benefits derived from the development of its own natural resources. To amplify the problem, Labor Minister Bals Ople said Bulacan, his home province, has no sufficient water supply despite the fact that Manila's primary source of water is in Angat. In solving this problem, the Cabinet focused its attention to the law stating that all natural resources belong to the state, and therefore the national government shall regulate and control its development. By virtue of this law the bulk of the taxes paid by those who develop these resources also goes to the national government. Recognizing the situation, the Cabinet then proposed that a larger portion of the revenue derived from the development of natural resources in a specific area be allocated to the development of that area. Minister Ople cited the case of Sabah, wherein a certain percentage of the revenue from oil is earmarked by the Malaysian Government for the development of that oil-rich state. [end Asuke recording].

MAYORS REQUEST ARMS FOR SELF-DEFENSE

HK100049 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 9 Feb 82

[Text] More mayors have asked for arms to defend themselves and their constituents against communist terrorists. The letters were received at the Ministry of Local Government, which referred them to the Ministry of Defense. This development followed the order by Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile for the arming of mayors and other town officials in Cagayan, Isabela, Quirino, Nueva Vizcaya, Ifugao, Kalinga-Apayao and mountain. Similar moves were already made in the Bicol region.

PLANS MADE TO COMBAT GUN, BOMB SMUGGLING

HK130047 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Text] The Defense Ministry and military authorities took action yesterday to tighten measures against the smuggling of guns, bullets and bombs into the country. President Marcos ordered Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile to take all necessary action to prevent the traffic of those prohibited items through sea and air ports and even the mail. Defense Minister Enrile called a conference of top military and customs authorities to map out measures to stop the smuggling of guns, explosives and bullets. He noted an increase in the sale of guns in the past few months. Reports said many of the smuggled guns were sold to politicians and terrorist groups. The Defense Ministry said the smuggling of guns and explosives appeared to be part of a plot to create a revolutionary atmosphere in the country.

SECOND ROUND OF ECONOMIC TALKS WITH ROK OPEN

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 18 (KYODO) -- Japanese and South Korean Government officials opened their second round of negotiations here Thursday to discuss Seoul's request for dollar 6 billion in loans for its 1982-86 economic development plan. The two-day talks at the Foreign Ministry were held at the request of the Japanese Government for more detailed explanation of 11 major projects of the five-year plan which the South Koreans want to be financed by Japan.

The first round of the working-level negotiations was held in Seoul last month to brief Japanese officials on the industrial projects. South Korea officially requested dollar 6 billion in economic cooperation last summer.

Foreign Ministry officials said it will take about a month to work out what and how much Japan can do for the economic development plan. The current negotiations are held with Akitane Kiuchi, director general of the ministry's Asian Affairs Bureau, and Kong No-myong, assistant foreign minister of the Seoul Government, as chief negotiators.

Sakurauchi on Aid Request

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Feb 16 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Tuesday he thinks that the time is nearing for Japan to make a final political decision on South Korea's (?request) for dollar 6 billion in aid from Japan. Speaking to newsmen, he said he thinks that the second round of Japan-South Korea working-level talks, scheduled to be held here from Thursday, may be the last working-level meeting to tackle the Korean aid request.

Sakurauchi said that Japan's tentative reply to the Korean request may be brought up in a general way through the working-level discussions. But such a response should not be necessarily regarded as Japan's final decision. The minister said it is still uncertain whether Japan's final decision on the aid problem will be clarified at a foreign ministers' meeting or a summit conference.

SAKURAUCHI TO ATTEND ASEAN MEETING IN SINGAPORE

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 18 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi will attend an expanded meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) to be held in Singapore June 17-18, the Foreign Ministry announced Thursday. The ministry said the meeting will take place after a meeting June 14-16 of the foreign ministers of the ASEAN states: the Philippines, Singapore, Malaysia, Indonesia and Thailand.

Besides Sakurauchi, the foreign ministers of the United States, Canada and Australia, as well as officials of the European Community (EC) are to attend the expanded session. Japanese officials said the meeting will discuss the Kampuchean problem and economic cooperation among the ASEAN nations.

SUZUKI URGES STUDY ON REVITALIZING WORLD ECONOMY

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 17 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki has instructed the Foreign Ministry to explore ways to revitalize the world economy prior to the Paris economic summit in June, government officials said Wednesday. Suzuki issued the instruction in a meeting Tuesday with Deputy Vice Minister for Foreign Affairs Nobuo Matsunaga, they said.

Matsunaga, who returned home Monday from a GATT (General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade) meeting in Geneva, briefed Suzuki on European reaction to Japan's decision to ease or remove 67 "nontariff barriers." European countries have welcomed the decision but called on Japan to make further efforts to open its agricultural produce and service sectors, the deputy vice minister was quoted as saying.

"Trade friction with the United States and West European countries is a big issue, but finding ways to revitalize the world economy will be more important" at the Paris summit, the prime minister predicted. Suzuki asked Matsunaga to look into the problem to achieve the aim, the government officials added.

The Foreign Ministry said America, like Western Europe, considers the recent Japanese efforts to remove some nontariff barriers and introduce a trade ombudsman system as a step in the right direction. But the U.S. Trade Representative Office has requested the Tokyo Government to expand the existing quota on agricultural produce and ease service and investment restrictions, a Foreign Ministry official said.

SUZUKI AGREES WITH F-4 PHANTOM REMODELING PLAN

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 17 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki told the Diet (Parliament) Wednesday that his government would not change a plan to fit the Air Self-Defence Force's F-4 Phantom fighter interceptors with bombing equipment. He said that the bombing equipment was not of an aggressive character nor a threat to foreign countries. Speaking before the House of Councillors' Budget Committee, Suzuki said the plane's remodelling had already been approved by the Diet last year.

Suzuki's statement was tantamount to a lifting of the "freeze" on the remodelling plan, tentatively agreed on between the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party and the No. 1 opposition Japan Socialist Party on February 10. The JSP had taken up the F-4 problem in the Diet, saying that the remodelling plan is contradictory to a 1968 pledge by Kaneshichi Masuda, then Defense Agency chief, that the Phantoms would not be equipped with bombing gear.

Threatened with confusion in Diet discussion of the fiscal 1981 supplementary budget, the ruling party tentatively accepted a JSP demand for "freezing" the yen 1.3 billion budgetary appropriation for the remodelling plan in fiscal 1981. This was followed by passage of the supplementary budget through the House of Representatives late Monday night and early Tuesday morning amid tussles over the F-4 issue in both the ruling and opposition camps. The bill for the supplementary budget was immediately sent to the upper house. But replying to opposition interpellators of the upper house budget committee on Wednesday, Prime Minister Suzuki revoked the tentative "freezing" accord, saying that the remodelling plan would be carried out as planned by the end of fiscal 1981, that is, by March 31. Later in the day, the supplementary budget was also passed through the upper house by virtue of the majority strength of the ruling party.

Also appearing before the same house committee, Akira Shioda, director of the Defense Agency's Defense Bureau, said the bombing gear at issue was not the same as that which had come under criticism from the opposition camp in 1968. The device is not one for continuous, atuomatic bombing, but only an accessory for improving the fighter's performance, Shioda said. Thus, there is no change in government policy from the 1968 position, he said.

However, Soichiro Ito, Defense Agency chief, offered a different view on the matter to the house committee. Ito said that taking into account the latest progress in military technology, the bombing gear did not pose an offensive, aggressive threat to foreign countries. The bombing gear-equipped F-4 would be no more of an offensive threat than the F-15 Eagle fighters possessed by Japan, Ito said.

Ito's statement could fan up [word indistinct] voices among the opposition parties if they choose to assert that his argument about the introduction of the latest military technological progress would leave no brake on defensive weapons.

An opposition dietman also raised the suspicion that the Phantoms might be remodelled to make them into next-generation air-to-surface support fighters (FSX) replacing the present F-1 planes. Shioda denied the suspicion, but said that after the remodelling the F-4s could come under future discussion as a candidate for FSX remodelling.

OKINAWA 'ACTION COMMITTEE' PROTESTS U.S. DRILL

OW161351 Naha NHK Television Network in Japanese 0940 GMT 16 Feb 82

[Text] With another round of live firing exercise by the U.S. military scheduled for tomorrow, the Okinawan Action Committee Against U.S. Military Exercises, made up of reformist political factions and women and labor unions in the prefecture, held a rally today to protest against the prefectural government for tolerating such exercises.

The U.S. Marine Corps will hold the exercise at Camp Hansen tomorrow by sealing off prefectural Highway 104 to civilian traffic. The committee plans to mobilize some 1,000 people for an onsite rally to obstruct the scheduled drill. Today's rally at the prefectural government plaza was attended by some 100 people. Representatives of political factions spoke one after another, noting that U.S. military exercises are increasing both in frequency and intensity. They accused the prefectural government of approving of such military exercises. They also accused Governor Nishime of attending secret parties given by members of the U.S. forces and the Self-Defense Forces, while turning a deaf ear to pleas for an end to military exercises.

Committee members then attempted to meet with Governor Nishime to hand him a written statement demanding a halt to tomorrow's exercise. The governor, however, refused to receive them, saying he had no time to do so.

PRC OIL DELEGATION ARRIVES IN TOKYO FOR TALKS

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 15, KYODO -- A group of Chinese officials arrived here Monday for talks on Chinese crude oil shipments to Japan. The negotiations are likely to drag on as Japanese oil companies are poised to demand price cuts of 20 to 30 cents per barrel amid a global glut of oil supplies, industry sources said.

Hard hit by a shortage of hard currency reserves, however, the Chinese will almost certainly refuse to go along. The Chinese lowered the price for their shipments to dollar 34.90 per barrel FOB for last July through December, compared with dollar 36.50 in April-June. Under the long-term Japan-China trade agreement to 1978, the volume of shipment is set at 61 million barrels for 1982, unchanged from the 1981 level.

The five-man Chinese group, led by China National Chemicals Import and Export Corporation General Manager Sun Suochang, is expected to stay in Tokyo for about two weeks. Acting as negotiators for the Japanese industry are the 27-member Chinese Crude Oil Import Council and International Oil Trading Co.

The signing took place in Beijing between NEDO and the Chinese Coal Development Corporation, NEDO officials said.

The five-year agreement calls on the Japanese side to conduct physical exploration using Japanese equipment and to analyze data obtained. China is to undertake boring surveys, the officials added.

NODONG SINMUN LAUDS CPRF REUNIFICATION PROPOSAL

SK171115 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1059 GMT 17 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 17 (KCNA) -- The proposal for the convocation of a joint conference of one hundred well-known politicians in the North and South and abroad, which was made by the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] is a token of our consistent efforts to remove at any cost the ever growing danger of permanent division and achieve an independent and peaceful reunification through democratic negotiation and a manifestation of our patriotic stand of treasuring the destiny of the country and the nation more than anything else, declares NODONG SINMUN Wednesday.

The signed article headlined "100-Man Joint Conference Would Be True Negotiating Organ for Reunification Feasible Under Obtaining Situation" says: The convocation of such joint conference is a requisite for pulling through the present difficulties lying in the way of national reunification.

Pointing out that the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique are resorting to vicious schemings to create "two Koreas" under the cloak of "unification," circulating a fraudulent "unification proposal," the article says: Owing to the splittist manoeuvres of the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique, the barriers between the North and the South are being piled up still higher and even the danger of a new war is brewing. The situation prevailing in the country makes it all the more urgent to seek a way for cutting through the present difficulties, and it is a pressing question to correctly solve the negotiations here. It is a correct step proceeding from this to convene the 100-man joint conference.

The article declares that the convocation of the joint conference of politicians in the North and South and abroad is the reasonable way least adaptable under the present political situation of South Korea. It is a serious historical lesson drawn from the North-South dialogue in the past period that no positive results in the cause of achieving national unity and accelerating national reunification can be attained by sitting at one table with those who seek a way out in the perpetuation of division by clinging to the sleeves of the outside forces.

It is only too natural to exclude traitor Chon Tu-hwan from the dialogue and negotiation. The South Korean political parties and social organisations either are not qualified to sit at the table of negotiation as long as they serve the present ruler as his maidservants. To form a negotiating organ with patriotic personages desirous of reunification, with the splittists excluded, is a sacred work for uniting the conscience and will of the nation and hewing the path of reunification and patriotism, proceeding from the present political situation created in South Korea. The 100-men joint conference at which well-known politicians in the North and South and abroad who seek the reunification and national salvation would sit down together and discuss reunification proposals and questions of realising collaboration and interchange betwen the North and the South in this connection would be a negotiating organ truly desirous of reunification in view of its composition, character and mission as well.

The article stresses: If the South Korean politicians turned out for national reunification, deeply conscious of their noble historic mission to the country and the nation, such negotiation for reunification as the 100-men joint conference would be arranged and it would surely bear good fruits. We will as in the past, so in the future, too, fight on perseveringly for the accomplishment of the national cause of reunification, united closely with all the patriotic people and conscientious democratic figures in South Korea and abroad.

KSDP BACKS 100-MAN JOINT REUNIFICATION MEETING

[Talk on 16 February by spokesman of the Korean Social Democratic Party -- read by announcer]

[Text] On 10 February, the Committee for Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] put forward a new proposal to convene a joint conference composed of 100 noted politicians from the North, South and overseas to overcome the crisis created by the splittists at home and abroad and to step up the cause of national reunification. This proposal is a just and realistic measure for accelerating the cause of the national reunification in the current situation in our country.

The Korean Social Democratic Party [KSDP], regarding the proposal to convene the joint conference by politicians from the North, South and overseas as a well-timed and realistic measure correctly reflecting the national aspiration for reunification and prevailing situation, ardently supports and welcomes this proposal.

Our nation's reunification should be achieved peacefully, based on democratic principles, by the Korean people themselves without outside interference. To do so, dialogue and negotiations should be realized between the North and South without fail. Only when we hold dialogue can we successfully solve the reunification question based on the will of the entire people and urgent questions raised in North-South relations.

In particular, a most reasonable and just plan on reunification, the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK] has been put forward. The question on enacting this plan remains an urgent issue today. In this situation, the realization of dialogue and negotiations between the North and the South is a common national task.

In order to make the North-South dialogue -- which we should provide anew -- genuine negotiations for reunification, we should exclude the incumbent South Korean rulers who pursue the nation's permanent division and should realize broad-range dialogue among patriotic figures from all walks of life aspiring for reunification. As is known to all, dialogue was repeatedly held between the North and the South in our country in the early 1970's, in 1979 and in the early 1980's. However, nothing positive came of such a dialogue, and it was ruptured despite sincere efforts and the patient leniency of our side. This was entirely due to the treacherous acts of the South Korean authorities, who exploited the North-South dialogue as a means for division, not reunification, and hindered the progress of dialogue in every way.

Our experience shows that even if we hold dialogue with those who pursue the nation's permanent division, we cannot expect any positive results. The incumbent South Korean rulers, in particular, are the most vicious human butchers and national splittists who cruelly massacred a number of people aspiring for democracy and reunification, raving that only confrontation should be sought in relations with the North and reunification can be achieved only when they gain supremacy over communism. They are national splittists who persistently pursue antagonism and confrontation between the North and the South and the nation's permanent division.

Recently, the South Korean authorities pretended they are interested in reunification by raving about a general election, pilot projects and so forth. However, these are measures for permanent division disguised in the trappings of reunification, aimed at blocking the daily growing influence of the proposal for founding the DCRK, mollifying the South Korean people's antigovernment advance and misleading public opinion at home and abroad.

The incumbent South Korean ruler, cursed and denounced by all the Korean people and the world's people for cruel repression of democracy and the reunification movement after emerging as a toadstool in a sea of blood of the fellow countrymen, is intensifying the fascist suppression and the two Koreas' plot.

Sitting face to face with such a man in this situation would be a treacherous act against the South Korean people and mockery against the sacred national cause for reunification.

Political parties and public organizations in South Korea, as long as they act as the puppets of the incumbent ruler, are not entitled to sit at the negotiating table discussing reunification. However, we know there are politicians who are seeking the road of national reunification, who have not lost their national conscience, and who are concerned with the future of the nation even under the current situation in South Korea in which basic human rights and democracy are being trampled underfoot and psuedo-politicians are running amok. We also know that many patriotic compatriots are devotedly struggling oveseas for democratization of the South Korean society and national reunification.

Thus, we regard the new proposal to convene the joint conference of the politicians from the North, South and overseas as a reasonable plan for negotiations which we can adopt in the current situation. The 100-man joint conference, which would be a multilateral round-table conference of politicians from the North, South and overseas, irrespective their past careers, residence and affiliation and transcending North and South, will be an important turning point in achieving great national unity, transcending the differences in ideologies, ideals and religion under the banner of national reunification, and stepping up the nationwide movement for reunification.

The KSDP, hoping that the 100-man joint conference -- which is of great significance to opening a broad avenue of national reunification -- will be convened at an early date, is resolved to do all it can to accomplish the 100-man joint conference and to make it successful. It is an unanimous demand of the people and a sacred national right, which should not be violated by anyone, for politicians at home and abroad to pariticpate in the 100-man joint conference.

If the South Korean rulers wish to atone even a little for their crimes against the nation, they should not keep the South Korean politicians from participating in the joint conference. They should immediately and unconditionally release all imprisoned democratic figures, including Kim Tae-chung, and ensure their free political activities. We firmly believe that all South Korean politicians, even through their situation is difficult, will participate in the 100-man joint conference by courageously repelling all the obstructions and will struggle to fulfill their mission assigned by the nation.

NODONG SINMUN NOTES ANTI-CHON STUDENT STRUGGLE

[NODONG SINMUN 18 February commentary: "Heinous Design"]

[Text] On 12 February, the traitor Chon Tu-hwan babbled about doing away with chronic disturbances on the campuses, reestablishing reachers' authority and creating an atmosphere of study. He also directed his stooges to make students understand the so-called proposals for reunification.

His babbling about doing away with disturbances on the campuses, reestablishing teachers' authority and creating an atmosphere of study is aimed at strengthening suppression of the students, who are struggling for democracy and reunification. His clamoring about making students understand the proposals for reunification is gibberish to arouse the consciousness of division among students and rally them to the road of an antireunification intrigue. In short, the puppet traitor's remarks expose his heinous design to block and thwart the growing reunification movement among the students.

As is well known the Chon Tu-hwan puppet clique is a shcok brigade pursuing the line of division and a major obstacle to reunification. Its crminal nature has been demonstrated by its more truculent maneuvers against reunification since it put forward a so-called proposal.

While babbling about reunification and the proposal, it is running amok to suppress people in a fascist way by mobilizing suppressive forces. Groundlessly charging students with hampering educational authority and the atmosphere of study or causing disturbance on the campuses, the puppet clique has handed down heavy penalties on students at successive trials. By kicking up rackets of punishment, it has expelled students from campuses. Everybody knows that this is criminal activity to trample underfoot the growing aspirations for democracy and reunifaction among students.

Every fact shows that all the proposals they have espoused are fraudulent. While raving about a proposal and reunification as if they were interested in reunification, the South Korean puppets are trying to mislead public opinion, concealing their splittist nature. Their talk about holding a general election, contained in their proposal, is empty talk copied from a textbook on politics. Their proposal for concluding an agreement is one for perpetrating division copying another nation's model. Their proposal for pilot projects is a maneuver to build the barrier of division higher, paying lipservice to opening the door.

For this reason, the South Korean youths and students, who love justice and hate injustice, are more stoutly struggling for democracy and reunification and against fascism and division, despite the fact they are facing a horrible regime with bayonets. Such a struggle is striking a heavy blow at the puppets really seeking division under the guise of reunification. This is the reason why the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique is running amok to trample down the aspirations of students and youths for reunification. This only exposes their splittist nature and the deceitful and fraudulent nature of their proposals.

However frantically they may babble about reunification and advance proposals, no one will believe them. As long as the traitor Chon Tu-hwan persists in splittist maneuvers and remains in power, the reunification movement of the South Korean youths and students will grow. The incumbent South Korean rulers should immediately stop their criminal maneuvers to thwart the struggle of youths, students and people for democracy and national reunification. They should release patriotic youths, students, people and democratic personages in prison and guarantee their free activities.

KCNA CITES CSSR PAPER ON 1988 SEOUL OLYMPIAD

[Text] Pyongyang, February 17 (KCNA) -- The Czechoslovak paper RUDE PRAVO February 13 published a commentary denouncing the decision to award the 24th Olympiad to Seoul, according to a CETEKA report from Prague. The paper said: Six years before the Olympic Games in Seoul, it is evident that the South Korean dictatorial "regime" does not intend to respect the Olympic charter.

The "regime" systematically violates fundamental human rights and under the patronage of American imperialists is killing, torturing, jailing and terrorizing many South Koreans. In this state of affairs, it is desecration of the Olympic idea if the dictatorial "regime" is allowed to retain the right to organize the Olympics. It is a gross mockery of the Olympic idea of friendship and cooperation that the highest representative of the fascist dictatorial "regime," with thousands of human lives on his conscience, and tens of thousands of jailed and tortured patriots, becomes "honorary chairman" of the organizing committee. The "election" of dictator Chon Tu-hwan to this function is mockery of humanity.

It is characteristic for Western reaction and its propaganda that in connection with the events in South Korea, it does not spare a single word for the fact that those who are using all available means to destroy everything progressive in South Korea are to organize the Olympic Games, the paper noted.

VRPR NOTES SIGNIFICANCE OF KIM CHONG-IL BIRTHDAY

[VRPR editorial writer Kim's talk: "Endlessly Bright Is the Future of our Nation, Which Holds the Chuche Guiding Star in High Esteem"]

[Text] The day 16 February is the nation's greatest jubilee. On that day the dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il -- the inheritor of the revolutionary cause of the sun of the nation, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song -- was born. On this joyful occasion, the RPR members and patriotic people of all strata, who keep marching for independence, democracy and peaceful reunification, look toward the skies of the North and respectfully wish good health and long life to the sun of the nation Comrade Kim Il-song and the great guiding star Comrade Kim Chong-il.

Today in the chuche era, as the chuche revolutionary cause is shining under the ray of the great sun, even in the face of fascism, the bright spring of democracy and reunification is coming for our masses. The fatherland's reunification and the bright future of our nation are guaranteed because they are upholding the great guiding star that will carry on the sacred revolutionary cause.

Despite its division, our nation has become the proudest nation in the history of mankind owing to the two great leaders [tubunui widaehan suryongnim]. It is now in the most glorious era in its 5,000-year history. To have an outstanding leader [suryong] is a key factor determining the fate of the nation. The choice of the successor who will brilliantly inherit the cause of the leader is important not only for the nation today but also for its future. This is a lesson drawn from the history of our nation and a precious truth proved by mankind's struggle for independence.

The glorious era our nation is enjoying and its promising future are, above all, attributable to the fact that the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song -- the benefactor of the nation's rehabilitation -- unfolded a shining blueprint for the future of the nation and the unified fatherland and is energetically leading the struggle to implement it. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song liberated our nation from the colonial rule of the Japanese imperialists and has built a new world in the North where the people are considered precious. He is the lodestar of national liberation and the genius of creation and construction. He has made our fatherland the most prestigious nation in the world.

At a time when our nation faced extinction, with hope for the fatherland's liberation, the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song set out on the road of revolution, illuminated the future of the nation by creating the chuche idea and, through the prolonged great revolutionary practice, has established an eternal foundation for national prosperity. Thanks to the precious gains made by the devotion of the great leader, the bright future of our nation is guaranteed. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song is leading the struggle for the independent fatherland's liberation and the endless prosperity of the nation. Nothing is more honorable and blissful than this. Thanks to the wisdom and vitality of the great leader and his outstanding leadership, our nation's power is growing with each passing day, and the historic cause of the fatherland's reunification -- the supreme task of the nation -- is being advanced. Thanks to the sun of the nation Comrade Kim Il-song, we can take pride in the prestige of the nation and the future of the unified fatherland. This is our belief.

The bright future of our nation and its prestige are also attributable to the fact that the wise leader [chidoja] Comrade Kim Chong-il, who is brilliantly carrying on the sacred revolutionary cause of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, is held in high esteem as the guiding star of the nation. To achieve the endless prosperity of the nation and live with pride in the glorious nation from generation to generation, the cause of the great leader who shaped the destiny of the nation must be firmly defended and completed.

At the same time, to win the victory of the revolutionary cause of the leader, his successor must be correctly chosen. By upholding the dear Comrade Kim Chong-il as the inheritor of the great leader's revolutionary cause and as the guiding star of the nation, our nation has brilliantly solved this important question on which its future depends. By upholding the dear Comrade Kim Chong-il -- the great guiding star -- as the wise leader [hidoja] and following him, our nation is able to glorify the great leader's revolutionary cause to eternity. The future of our people is endlessly bright.

The dear Comrade Kim Chong-il, unanimously admired by the whole nation, is the wise leader [chidoja] who is brilliantly carrying on the chuche revolutionary cause by assisting the great leader. The dear Comrade Kim Chong-il is a paragon of loyalty. He considers it his noble duty to systematically safeguard the well-being of the respected and beloved leader and to inherit and complete his ideology and cause.

The dear comrade leader considers it a firm principle to be loyal to the great leader. He makes everything serve this aim. It is the dear comrade leader's firm will and faith to uphold the great leader until the end of the world and to be forever loyal to the revolutionary cause of the leader.

Thanks to the ardent loyalty of the dear comrade leader, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary ideology is firmly defended, developed and enriched. Thanks to this, the leader's leadership has become more glorious, and his love for our nation and the people has become benevolent and warm. With extraordinary ideological and theoretical activities, the dear comrade leader formulated the great leader's revolutionary ideology as the glorious Kimilsongism commensurate with its historic position and proclaimed it to the world. Thanks to this, the nation's and progressive people's unanimous desire and aspiration for linking the great leader's revolutionary ideology to his noble name has been brilliantly achieved. The leader's revolutionary ideology has become more splendid in the world as a guiding concept of the times.

The dear comrade leader, who is brillinatly carrying on the great leader's revolutionary cause, led our masses to the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture and won proud achievements opening a new golden age in the history of our nation. The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il is devoting himself to implement the great leader's reunification policy and is giving courage and faith in victory to workers, peasants and patriotic people of all strata on this soil who set out on the road of reunification and national salvation under the threat of guns and swords of the fascists.

The dear leader Comrade Kim Chong-il is, indeed, a great chuche-type revolutionary with whom no one can compete for his loyalty to the great leader, the vitality and correctness of his revolutionary activities, his endless meditation and passion, his outstanding leadership over the masses, and his ardent love and service for the nation and people. His extraordinary wisdom and wise leadership give vigor to everything and, like life-saving water, bring growth and prosperity. His noble characteristics and virtue are known around the world as a hymn of the masses.

The road taken by him -- the path of revolution which is being traversed from one generation to another -- is indeed linked with the prosperity, growth and future of our nation and people. As long as we have the leadership of the great leader, who illuminates the future of our nation with the immortal chuche idea, and the guidance of the dear Comrade Kim Chong-il, who is brilliantly inheriting the chuche revolutionary cause, our masses can overcome any difficulties. The sacred revolutionary cause of democracy and reunification will certainly be victorious.

In the dark and suffocating land where fascism is rampant, as we look up the shining and warn sun and the brilliant and benevolent guiding star, our hearts yearn for reunification and the victory of the revolution. We have faith and courage.

Today our masses are facing a task to wage a pan-national struggle to expel the atrocious U.S. aggressors, bury the fascist fanatics, establish a democratic coalition government on their graves and establish the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo with the brethren in the North.

A splendid spring of independence, democracy and reunification and a paradise of reunification and national salvation which will infinitely display the national prestige and be prosperous from generation to generation await our masses, who are overcoming the deadly cold winter of fascism under the wise leadership of the great leader and the guidance of the dear comrade leader.

11 FEB DFRF LETTER OF APPEAL ON SPA ELECTIONS

SK120445 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 11 Feb 82

[Letter of appeal to all Korean people adopted on 11 February at 68th meeting of the Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland]

[Text] All workers, peasants, soldiers, working intellectuals and all men and women of the republic: 28 February is the day for the election of deputies to the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly [SPA].

The election of deputies to the Seventh SPA is to be conducted under majestic circumstances in which our republic's authority and dignity are being enhanced more than ever before and ceaseless innovations are being effected in all fields of the revolution and construction.

Upholding the militant programs set forth by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth KWP Congress and in his New Year's message, all workers in our country are vigorously accelerating the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture on all fronts of socialist construction. They are energetically struggling to expedite national reunification and the complete victory of socialism.

The election of deputiés to the SPA, which will be held at such a historic moment, is a political event with great significance for the struggle to consolidate the revolutionary government of our workers and peasants founded and led by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and to step up the chuche-orientation of the entire society.

The election of deputies to the SPA will again vigorously demonstrate to the entire world the invincible strength of our people, who are united with one idea and one will around the party Central Committee headed by the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song, and it will clearly show our entire people's absolute trust and support for our republic.

The election will bring a new epochal turning point for consolidating the brilliant victories and achievements attained by the government of our republic under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and for accelerating the complete victory of socialism and the cause of national reunification. Through the upcoming election, we will further solidify the revolutionary government of workers and peasants by forming our supreme power organ with disciplined and tested representatives of workers, peasants, soldiers and working intellectuals, who are boundlessly loyal to the revolutionary cause and devote themselves to the fatherland and the people.

Our government is a revolutionary one which has inherited the brilliant traditions formed by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song during the glorious anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle. It is an independent government which struggles to implement the immortal chuche idea, assuming this as the guideline for its all activities.

Our government is a genuine people's government based on the worker-peasant alliance led by the working class and on the unified strength of all people. This protects the interests of workers, peasants, soldiers and working intellectuals and safeguards, consolidates and develops the socialist system in our country by allowing all the people to live happily, without exploitation and repression.

Our people's government has traversed the road of proud struggle for the people's happiness and prosperity and development of the fatherland and made immortal achievements for the nation and the people.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: From the first day of its founding, the people's government has thoroughly safeguarded the freedom and rights of the working people and led our people's revolution and construction to brilliant victory. The path which the government of the republic has traversed has been embroidered with heroic struggle and brilliant exploits in the cause of the fatherland's independence and national prosperity. It has also been embroidered with brilliant achievements which, in the course of remodelling nature, society and human beings, have brought about a great upsurge in development and civilization.

The republic has faced many difficulties; we have also undergone severe hardships several times. However, our republic has marched forward under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, holding high the revolutionary banner of the chuche ideology. Therefore, our republic has weathered all kinds of difficulties and repeated ordeals, thereby victoriously carrying out serious social reforms and tremendous construction struggles.

The government of the republic has upheld the policy for building a new democratic Korea put forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song. It successfully carried out the democratic revolution against imperialism and feudalism in the northern half of the country in a short time following liberation. Having liquidated the outmoded colonial and semifeudalistic social system, it opened the broad way of an independent and creative life for the working masses.

Because the government of the republic, under the outstanding leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, vigorously spurred all the people to the sacred struggle for victory during the difficult days of the fatherland liberation war, it could honorably safeguard the fatherland's independence and national dignity and firmly defend the revolutionary gains.

The government of the republic has brilliantly accomplished the unique line and policy of the socialist revolution and construction illuminated by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song after the war. Thus, it has established the most advanced socialist system on this land, accomplished the difficult and complicated task of achieving industrialization within only 14 years and turned our country into an independent and more prosperous socialist country in modeling society on the chuche idea.

It is one of the most valuable achievements of the government of the republic that it consolidated, as firmly as a rock, the political-ideological unity of society on the basis of the chuche ideology. Today all the workers in our country are firmly united around the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the KWP, regarding the immortal chuche ideology as their firm faith. With common ideals and goals, they are vigorously marching forward in the strongest political-ideological unity and in a comradely cooperative relationship toward the future of a more prosperous fatherland.

Our country's socialist system is being consolidated and developed with each passing day; the might of the republic is being endlessly enhanced and strengthened in all sectors of politics, the economy, culture and military affairs. Our country's state and social system guarantees socialist democracy for the working masses, fully displaying its superiority.

Today in our country, freedom and the rights of the working masses as masters of the state and society are fully guaranteed; all the assets of society are directed to promoting the working masses' welfare. In our country, all state policies are executed in conformity with opinions and interests of the working masses. Our country's workers are fully exercising all kinds of freedom and rights in social-political activities as masters of the state and society.

By virtue of the popular policies of the government of the republic, which shoulders the responsibility for and guarantees the material-cultural life of the working masses, including workers and peasants, all of our workers have jobs suited to their ability. Safe working conditions and recreation facilities are guaranteed by the state. The state guarantees all material life: food, clothing and shelter for all people. And by virtue of the free medical and educational systems, anyone can receive free medical treatment and study to their heart's content.

Our republic is exercising perfect sovereign rights in the international arena. It has a number of friends and sympathizers throughout the world. There has never been a time in our history when our fatherland has been so prosperous, demonstrating its strength and dignity to the world.

The boundlessly prosperous republic is a beacon of hope for the South Korean people, who are suffering repression and exploitation by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges.

This is a genuine fatherland for all overseas Korean compatriots, including 700,000 Koreans in Japan. With the brilliant achievements for the fatherland and the people, the government of the republic enjoys the absolute support and trust of the Korean people. Our people firmly believe that only the government of the republic can guarantee an independent and creative life. They see a happier future by strengthening and developing the republic.

All the people in our country take great pride and honor in living and working as masters of the republic. They are firmly resolved to tenaciously defend the government of the republic and devote everything to the prosperity and development of the republic. Consolidation and development of our republic's government and all miraculous innovations effected in our people's situation are the consequence of the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and of the KWP. Advancing the question of sovereignty as the basic question of the revolution from the early days of the revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song put forward a line for building a chuche-type government during the period of arduous anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle and founded the people's revolutionary government in guerrilla bases. Thus, he made lofty achievements by building the people's government and attained precious experience.

Thanks to the brilliant tradition and the rich experiences in building the people's government achieved by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song during the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, our people could successfully achieve the historic cause of establishing a genuine people's government in a short time.

In September 1948, the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song founded the DPRK, the genuine fatherland of workers and peasants, by enacting the demand of revolutionary development and the people's unanimous desire. This is a great event with epochal significance in the history of our fatherland and our people's life.

With the founding of the republic, our people, who suffered scorn and contempt as a race without a nation, became the sagacious people of an independent country who built their fatherland with their own strength and by firmly seizing sovereignty. Our people advanced to the international arena with equal rights with the world's nations, large and small; thus, they became a proud people demonstrating the dignity of chuche Korea.

With the establishment of the republic, our people have come to live in a benevolent socialist fatherland which takes care of them in all aspects of life and possesses mighty weapons enabling them to consummate the cause of the chuche revolution. By thoroughly embodying the immortal chuche idea in all fields of national activities and by leading the government and people on a straight road leading to the victory of the revolution, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has turned our country, which was poverty-stricken and backward, into a powerful socialist country which is politically independent, economically self-reliant and able to defend itself.

Indeed, thanks to the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the chuche-type revolutionary lines set forth by the leader, our republic has been able to advance while exploring victoriously the unfamiliar road of the revolution and construction. It is now admired by the peoples of the world as the fatherland of chuche and a model socialist country.

Thanks to the wise leadership of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the chuche socialist fatherland founded by the leader now exists, and as long as the strong revolutionary sovereignty of the workers and peasants continue to exist, our people will be able to achieve the reunification and independence of the fatherland and the final victory of the revolution by overcoming all serious trials.

All the workers, peasants, soldiers, working intellectuals and all the citizens of both sexes of the republic: To greet the elections for deputies to the SPA with political zeal and brilliant labor successes is an expression of the noble patriotism with which to devote yourselves to the prosperity and development of the republic. It is an expression of warm support for and confidence in the government of the republic.

All the citizens, with political enthusiasm and awareness to develop the government of the republic and socialist system and to achieve new advances in the revolution under the banner of the republic, should join in the elections for deputies to the SPA.

Let us all display endless confidence in and burning patriotic zeal for the government of the republic in the SPA elections. Let us consolidate the revolutionary government of the workers and peasants for the fatherland's prosperity and the happiness of generations to come.

Let us display the invincible unity of all the people, including our workers and peasants who seized sovereignty.

The question of modelling society on the chuche idea is the general mission of our revolution and the ultimate goal of the government of the republic. Let us make epoch-making progress in the work of modelling society on the chuche idea. The three revolutions -- ideological, technological and cultural -- are the way to model society on the chuche idea. Giving priority to the ideological revolution is the firm principle which the KWP and the government of the republic have maintained in carrying out the three revolutions.

All workers should regard the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's revolutionary ideology -- the chuche ideology -- as their firm faith and be prepared to be chuche-type communist revolutionaries who think and act in conformity with the demand of the chuche ideology and who fight for the victory of the chuche ideology. They should resolutely defend and glorify forever the glorious revolutionary tradition established by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song during the anit-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

Let us workers become determined revolutionaries who are inheriting the revolutionary cause of chuche generation after generation by firmly arming ourselves with the KWP's glorious revolutionary traditon and exhibiting endless loyalty to the leader and revolutionary cause and the indomitable revolutionary spirit displayed by the young communists at the dawn of the Korean revolution. Let us make new progress in achieving the revolutionization and working-classization of society.

Organizational life is the school of ideological training and the school for revolutionary indoctrination. All workers should value revolutionary organizations, voluntarily participate in organizational life and continuously strengthen themselves through struggle.

The unheralded heroes are the models of communist-type men and the heroes of our era. Everyone should follow their excellent example. By striving to follow the noble spiritual train and revolutionary work style of the unheralded heroes, all workers should struggle with dedication and lofty loyalty for the party, the leader, the fatherland and the people.

The cause of making the people's economy chuche-oriented, modern and scientific is a strategic line which we should consistently and correctly follow in socialist and communist economic construction. Only when we firmly guarantee the self-reliant nature of the people's economy by accelerating the work of making the people's economy chuche-oriented, modern and scientific, continuously modernize the people's economy and throughly make all production activities scientific can we achieve the final victory of socialism and successfully achieve the material goals of communism.

Let us continuously forge ahead with the struggle to resolve the raw material, fuel and energy problems of chuche industry and to complete the sectional structure of the people's economy exploiting and utilizing underground, forestry and marine resources. Let us forge ahead with the work of modernizing the people's economy by accelerating the work of introducing a technical innovation movement in all sectors of the people's economy and by vigorously carrying it out. By accelerating the work of making the people's economy scientific, let us make all production processes and methods and management activities scientific.

The cultural revolution is the important revolutionary task of eliminating cultural backwardness -- a legacy of the old society -- of creating a socialist and communist culture and of developing all members of society into communist-type men who have been trained in a revolutionary manner.

The most important task assigned to us is to accelerate the work of filling society with intellectuals. By thoroughly implementing the theses on socialist education — a great program for the construction of socialist and communist education -- functionaries in the education sector should decisively improve the quality of education.

By correctly implementing the comprehensive 11-year compulsory education system and improving higher education work, let us make new progress in training the people's cadres. Literature and the arts are a powerful means to raise workers' ideological and cultural level and encourage them to struggles and innovations. Based on the precious achievements and experiences attained in developing chuche-type literature and arts, let us develop all sectors of literature and the arts.

Let us improve the people's health by enacting new innovations in public health. Let us enact a new upsurge and innovation on all fronts of socialist construction by vigorously launching an all-out assault on the eve of the election of deputies to the SPA.

The most important task assigned to us this year in socialist economic construction is to carry out the work of remodelling nature. The reclamation of tideland, land reclamation and the construction of the Nampo lockgate and the Taechon powerplant, which have been put forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, are the work of remodelling nature to expand the natural territory and to turn the fatherland into a more beautiful and livable people's paradise, to glorify the socialist system of our country and expedite the complete victory of socialism and the fatherland's reunification.

All the people throughout the country should unanimously rise to accomplish the four nature remodelling tasks and more rapidly build everlasting objects. With pride in enacting the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's far-sighted plan for remodelling nature, all construction workers and assistants should make all construction sites overflow with the revolutionary spirit of a speed battle by displaying the revolutionary fighting spirit of self-reliance.

Building monumental objects in the era of the KWP is our people's glorious work. Let us more successfully and speedily build the great monumental objects which are under construction in Pyongyang and throughout the country. All sectors of production and construction should implement the people's economic plan for this year and open the prospect for implementing the Second 7-Year Plan ahead of schedule. This year we should concentrate on achieving goals in the chemical sector.

Let us achieve a new upsurge in producing chemical products including chemical fibers, chemical fertilizer and synthetic resins by making the most of the already existing production capacity and improving and expanding some production facilities.

Only when we seize the metal goal can we meet the ever-increasing demand for steel products and nonferrous metals and rapidly develop various sectors in the people's economy.

Let us increase production of iron, rolled steel and nonferrous metals and strengthen self-reliance in the ferrous metal industry by giving priority to the promising iron ore and nonferrous metal mines, placing emphasis on producing minerals and maintaining production facilities for metals.

The machine industry is the heart of industries and a foundation for technological advancement. The machine industry should endlessly increase the standards of technical provisions by positively accepting the new casting method, giving more weight to introduction of precision equipment, automation of plant machinery and producing more kinds of modern plant machiery, including mining equipment.

Electricity is the fundamental power source for the people's economy. Let us vigorously wage a struggle to generate more electricity by improving management of facilities at existing powerplants, to accelerate construction of new powerplants and to reduce the consumption of electricity in all sectors.

We should decisively increase production of various minerals, including coal, by giving priority to the extractive industry sector. Let us find more abundant underground resources in the country by emphasizing geological surveys.

Let us rapidly increase production of building materials, including cement and timber.

In the railway transportation sector, let us give top priority to production of freight cars and repair of rolling stock, mechanization of loading and unloading work, and the control and management of all railway facilities.

Let us meet the increasing demand of transportation by developing automotive and marine transport. Let us strengthen economic exchanges and cooperation with foreign countries by developing foreign trade.

It is the supreme policy of the government of the republic and one of the basic tasks of socialist economic construction in the 1980's to promote the people's living standards.

We should achieve a new upsurge in this year's grain production by sticking to the farming-first policy and thoroughly accomplishing the chuche farming method and produce and supply more meat, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Let us repair and maintain tractors and small- and medium-sized farm implements and be prepared to carry out this year's farming. The country and all people should vigorously support rural areas.

In the fishery sector, we should supply more fish in all seasons by universalizing and modernizing fishing boats, accepting the scientific fishing method and catching more fish and carrying out fish processing work.

Rapidly developing light industry and decisively increasing production of people's consumer goods are important tasks in promoting the people's living standards. Let us produce and supply more quality clothes and daily necessities by operating all light industry plants at full capacity. Let us increase production of various kinds of delicious and nutritious foodstuffs by normalizing production at a high level at the foodstuff factories of local industry. Let us construct more houses and cultural and welfare facilities through an all-out mass movement.

Improving economic guidance and enterprise management is an important guarantee in pushing ahead with the socialist economic construction. Let us achieve a greater upsurge in economic guidance and enterprise management by enacting the Taean work system -- the most superior communist enterprise management system -- and our era's new industrial guidance system -- which has embodied the demand of the Taean work system.

Let us assiduously manage state affairs and normalize production at a high level by improving the work of managing equipment, material, labor and finances in all sectors of the people's economy.

The movement to win the red flag of the three revolutions is a prime force powerfully accelerating the three revolutions -- ideological, technical and cultural. By rising as one to carry out the movement to win the red flag of the three revolutions, let us vigorously accelerate the work of revolutionizing society and developing it into the working class and enact a new innovation in all sectors, including the economic, cultural, ideological and moral sectors.

All workers should correctly perform their duties in accordance with the requirements of the socialist Constitution and voluntarily abide by state laws and regulations.

Ardently loving and following the revolutionary government of workers and peasants is the sacred duty of all people. All workers and officers and men of the People's Armed Forces and the People's Security Force should keenly watch all acts of the enemy to protect the revolutionary government of our workers and peasants and firmly defend the socialist fatherland and revolutionary gains. Let us increase our revolutionary vigilance in all sectors and at all outposts and work and live with a vigilant and mobilized attitude and in a revolutionary manner.

Achieving the fatherland's independent and peaceful reunification is the supreme, long-cherished desire of all the Korean people and the most important revolutionary duty of the government of the republic. Division is a way toward subjugation and national ruin. Reunification is the only way to independence and prosperity.

The new proposal for the fatherland's reunification, set forth by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song at the Sixth KWP Congress, is a unique plan for reunifying the fatherland in an independent and peaceful manner and based on the principle of the grand unity of the people. Let us tenaciously struggle to expedite the day when all fellow countrymen will lead a happy life in a reunified fatherland by founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK].

The proposal for reunification made by the South Korean fascist military clique is one for division and is designed to make a mockery of the people's desire for reunification under the cloak of reunification and to fabricate two Koreas. This proposal is the product of a political scheme to avoid isolation and denunciation at home and abroad and achieve long-term power. Let us resolutely reject the South Korean fascist military clique's sham reunification proposal and vigorously advance along the road of true reunification.

To quickly overcome the present difficulties on the road of reunification, we should correctly resolve the question of negotiations between the North and South. The way to conduct true negotiations for reunification in the present political situation in South Korea is to convene a confederal meeting with the participation of well-known and conscientious politicians in the North and South and overseas. All figures in South Korea and overseas who are interested in achieving reunification and saving the country should traverse the sacred road of nation-saving reunification and convene a 100-man confederal meeting regardless of past deeds, addresses and affiliation, transcending North and South. All Korean compatriots in the North and South and overseas should firmly unite around the grand united national front regardless of ideologies, systems, factions and political views.

The occupation of South Korea by U.S. forces is the cause of all misfortunes and hardships suffered by the South Korean people and a basic obstacle to the fatherland's reunification. Let us tenaciously struggle to force the U.S. imperialist aggressive forces to withdraw from South Korea. Let us resolutely smash the maneuvers by the U.S. imperialists and their stooges to fabricate two Koreas and their policy of anti-communist confrontation. Let us strongly struggle against the dangerous war exercise rackets, such as Team Spirit 1982, kicked up by the U.S. imperialists and the fascist Chon Tu-hwan clique and against their policy of war.

The most urgent task assigned to the South Korean people today is to eliminate the fascist military rule and achieve social democratization. We should struggle to repeal fascist evil laws, including the national security law, and claim all democratic rights and freedom in South Korea, such as freedom of organization and the activities of patriotic and progressive political parties and social organizations.

The South Korean people should struggle to nullify all penalties imposed on all unjustly arrested and imprisoned democrats and patriotic people and to unconditionally and immediately release them. All patriotic democratic forces in South Korea should unite and resolutely join the struggle to overthrow the Chon Tu-hwan ring and establish a democratic government which protects and represents the desire and interests of the broad strata of the people.

The 700,000 Korean residents in Japan should more vigorously stage a patriotic struggle to smash the maneuvers by the splittists to fabricate two Koreas. They should also struggle to found the DCRK. With a sense of dignity and pride as members of the overseas compatriots of the republic, they should struggle to achieve democratic national sovereignty.

All workers, peasants, soldiers, working intellectuals and men and women of the republic, the election of deputies to the SPA is a national festive event in which, unanimously rising, all workers will perform their duty. This event is the sacred work of strengthening the government of our republic.

Consolidating and developing the DPRK -- the glorious fatherland of our people -- is the source of the happiness of our people and a factor guaranteeing victory in the revolution and construction. Let us all participate in the election of deputies to the SPA with a lofty political awareness that they are masters of the country and with endless trust in the revolutionary government of workers and peasants.

The vote cast by each voter will be a patriotic one with which he will extend his support for and trust in his revolutionary government, entrusting the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and the KWP with his destiny and firmly believing in the endless prosperity of our republic. Representatives of workers, peasants, soldiers and working intellectuals who are endlessly faithful to the cause of the Korean revolution and who have served the fatherland and the people with dedication should cast a vote of 100-percent approval.

Let us make this significant year the most brilliant one in the history of our people's revolutionary struggle by enacting a new great upsurge in all sectors of revolution and construction on the eve of the election of deputies to the SPA.

The revolutionary cause of our people is just, and the future of the republic is bright. The future of our people struggling to achieve the just revolutionary cause under the banner of the republic always promises victories and glory. Let us all unite around the KWP Central Committee led by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and advance to achieve the fatherland's reunification and the complete victory of socialism and complete the chuche revolutionary cause.

Long live Comrade Kim Il-song, the great leader of our people; the KWP, the organizer and guide of the Korean people in achieving all victories; and the DPRK, our glorious fatherland!

The Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland; 11 February 1982

Judge Sin Song-taek of the court, heading a three-judge panel, handed out the capital punishment to Yi Hon-chi for violating the national security and anti-communist laws.

The judge found the 29-year-old defendant guilty of passing industrial and military secrets to the North Korean regime since 1979 when he entered the country on information-gathering orders from Pyongyang. Mrs. Yi, 25 and a codefendant, was sentenced to two years in prison and the term was suspended for three years by the court for collaborating with him in the espionage.

ROK, JAPAN AGREE ON FOREIGN MINISTERS' MEETING

[Text] Seoul, Jan. 16 (YONHAP) -- Vice Foreign Minister Kim Tong-hwi Tuesday said Japan and South Korea have agreed to hold a foreign ministers' meeting at an early date to discuss the latter's standing request for Japanese Government loans, and added that a Seoul-Tokyo summit was likely to follow.

In an appearance on an MBC-TV program, Kim said 92 nations have so far expressed their support for South Korea's unification formula unveiled by President Chon Tu-hwan last month. They included two nations which have diplomatic relations with North Korea but not with South Korea, Kim explained. Seoul's package formula for Korean unification calls for the adoption of a constitution for a unified Korea and an exchange of resident envoys between Seoul and Pyongyang by concluding an inter-Korea treaty on their basic relations.

[Text] Tokyo, Feb. 18 (YONHAP) -- Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi is expected to visit Seoul in March for talks with his Korean counterpart No Sin-yong, an informed diplomatic source here said Thursday.

The source said that negotiations on Seoul's standing request for six billion dollars in Japanese loans are moving in a positive direction, and that it would not be wrong to expect the foreign ministers to meet within the next month. The source based his prediction on the Japanese foreign minister's recent remarks that the Japanese side would present its counter-offer to Korea's loan request during the foreign ministers' meeting.

The source, however, added that Sakurauchi's visit to Korea would not mean a complete solution to the loan issue but one positive step to the settlement of the issue, hinting at some obstacles to overcome in connection with the scale and contents of the loans. The source noted that Sakurauchi's visit to Seoul is likely to take place prior to his visit to the United States, slated for around March 20.

REPORT SAYS 'NO SUDDEN BUSINESS UPSURGE' IN 1982

SK180201 Seoul YONHAP in English 0144 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Text] Seoul, Feb. 18 (YONHAP) -- Although Korea's major industries are expected to perk up slowly throughout this year due to rising domestic and export demand, no sudden business upsurge is expected, because of the uncertainty in the world economy.

A Federation of Korean Industries (FKI) report predicted Thursday that while domestic sales and exports of the shipbuilding, construction, electronic and other major industries would increase by 20 percent to 25 percent this year, petrochemical and some other industries would suffer a serious financial setback due to sluggish sales.

According to the FKI, the shipbuilding industry will continue to thrive this year because outstanding shipbuilding orders from abroad are enough to sustain it for two years. As of the end of last year, the outstanding shipbuilding orders stood at 1.9 billion tons, the second largest in the world.

Domestic construction orders are expected to rise by 25 percent over last year to 4.8 trillion won (roughly 6.9 billion U.S. dollars), and those coming from abroad are expected to amount to 6.5 billion dollars, 20 percent more than last year. The electronic industry will grow by 32.5 percent in production and 22.6 percent in exports, due to the mounting domestic demand for color TV sets and the abolition by the United States of the color TV export quota system.

On the other hand, the petrochemical industry will grow by only seven percent in domestic sales and five percent in exports, because of a sluggish domestic demand and rises in the prices of raw materials. The industry suffered a deficit of 90 billion won (128.6 million dollars) last year.

The automobile industry will see a 9.6-percent rise in production, a 17.1-percent gain in domestic sales, and a 29.6-percent growth in exports. Steel will grow by 16 percent in domestic sales, and 15 percent in exports, while machinery will pick up by 17 percent in production and 25 percent in exports, according to the FKI.

KAMPUCHEA DISCUSSES FOREIGN MINISTERS CONFERENCE

BK171355 Phnom Penh SPK in English 1429 GMT 16 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 16 Feb (SPK) -- The Kampuchean people warmly greet the fifth conference of the Indochinese foreign ministers held in Vientiane today to promote peace and cooperation among nations, the paper KAMPUCHEA says in an editorial.

The fruitful revolutionary relations among Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos, the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense's [KUFNCD] central organ points out, date back to very ancient times. The strategic alliance uniting the three Indochinese countries constitutes a determining factor in the defense of their independence, sovereignty and existence. It is their proletarian internationalist solidarity and their mutual assistance in national defense and national construction which have ensured their victories over all reactionary forces.

In the joint statements issued during the previous conferences, KAMPUCHEA continues, the three Indochinese countries affirmed their unchanging position of living on good terms with their neighbors so as to turn Southeast Asia into a stable and peaceful region. Over the past 3 years we have successively put forward reasonable and constructive proposals permeated with good will and designed to reduce tension along the Kampuchean-Thailand border and in the rest of the region. The Indochinese countries' foreign policy of peace and friendship have won the approval and support of the socialist countries, progressive peoples and peace- and justice-loving opinion throughout the world.

The paper notes that the Thai authorities are running counter to the interests of their people by following Beijing and Washington and openly pursuing a hostile policy against the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples. Thailand's provocative acts against Kampuchea and Laos cannot help reduce tension in the region. Their masters in Beijing, in collusion with Washington and other reactionaries, are doing everything they can to misrepresent the real situation in Kampuchea.

KAMPUCHEA demands that the Bangkok authorities immediately cease their unfriendly maneuvers against the Indochinese countries and that, to avoid being condemned by history, they should settle in good faith all disputes with the Indochinese countries on the basis of equality and mutual respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and interests.

The Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples are holding high the banner of peace and cooperation. The fifth conference of the Indochinese foreign ministers in Vientiane once again demonstrates their unchanging position of resolving through negotiations the problems of stability, peace and cooperation in Southeast Asia, thereby contributing to the defense of peace and stability in the world, KAMPUCHEA stresses.

L'HUMANITE INTERVIEWS HUN SEN ON REGIONAL ISSUES

PM161521 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 10 Feb 82 p 8

[Daniel Roussel interview with Hun Sen, Kampuchean foreign minister and member of the Political Bureau of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party: "For the Stability of Southeast Asia"]

[Text] Before his departure from Paris, where he had attended the 24th PCF Congress, Hun Sen, foreign minister of the People's Republic of Kampuchea and member of the Political Bureau of the Kampuchean People's Revolutionary Party, agreed to answer questions put by L'HUMANITE.

[Question] What state is Kampuchea in 3 years after the overthrow of the Pol Pot butchers?

[Answer] Kampuchea is fine. The people's living conditions are improving continuously. In 1980-81 we brought under cultivation 1.5 million hectares of land and have stabilized the food situation. So, looking at these 3 years -- which is a short period measured against a nation's history -- the results are important and meaningful. Yet there is no shortage of difficulties. But despite the natural disasters of 1981, we have not encountered problems as difficult as those in 1979-1980. If the weather conditions are good this year, we will be self-sufficient in foodstuffs as of 1982.

In all other spheres of the country's life progress has been just as great and this enables us to begin a new stage in our reconstruction -- that of development. Our main problem today is still the operations mounted against our people from Thai territory. This is a problem for us because we have to earmark a proportion of our energy and resources for defending the country. In no way can the clock be put back in Kampuchea.

[Question] The biannual meeting of the foreign ministers of Kampuchea, Laos and Vietnam will be held in Vientiane on 17 February.

[Answer] We will mainly discuss economic cooperation among our three countries. We will also continue our search for solutions to make Southeast Asia a region of peace, friendship and cooperation.

[Question] How are relations between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries developing?

[Answer] There is still deadlock. ASEAN believes that peace will come via the overthrow of the Phnom Penh regime, so it is making every effort to rally the reactionary Khmers of Pol Pot, Son Sann and Sihanouk. As for us we are proposing negotiations. We envisage two stages: convening a regional conference bringing together countries of Indochina and of ASEAN with Burma participating. Finally, convening an international conference to make official and guarantee the decisions and agreements adopted at the regional conference.

[Question] And what about Thailand?

[Answer] Thailand makes out that there is a threat from Kampuchea because of the presence of Vietnamese troops on our territory. We say that the threat stems from the collusion between Thailand and other countries which provide the Khmer reactionaries with food and arms with a view to destroying Kampuchea. If Thailand responds favorably to our proposals, Kampuchea will negotiate with Vietnam for the immediate withdrawal of some of the Vietnamese troops. In order to guarantee security between our two countries, we demand the creation of a demilitarized zone under international guarantee. I want to stress that holding a regional conference or establishing relations with Thailand will not necessarily involve recognition of the Phnom Penh government.

[Question] How do you see relations with France?

[Answer] Some good signs are appearing. In its approach to Southeast Asia the French Government must take account of the role of the Indochinese countries and Kampuchea in particular. France does not want to aggravate tension and would like to improve relations between the countries of the region. If France supported the ASEAN stances in the region, it would be on the wrong track. If it accepts the idea that the region's countries should start negotiations, this could create favorable conditions for the stability of Southeast Asia.

[Question] What do you mean by "good signs?"

[Answer] France has not recognized the Pol Pot regime. It even condemned and denounced it. I also think that the French Government will not be able to ignore the real state of affairs in Kampuchea for much longer. One question arises: Will the French Government pursue a foreign policy toward the countries of Southeast Asia independently of ASEAN? I think the French Government is pondering this question.

Text of Communique

OW171726 Hanoi VNA in English 1636 GMT 17 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 17 -- The following communique was released in Vientiane today by the fifth Indochinese foreign ministerial conference held in the Lao capital on February 16-17:

C O M M U N I Q U E
Fifth Foreign Ministers Conference of Laos,
Kampuchea and Vietnam
(Vientiane 16-17 February 1982)

1. The fifth conference of the foreign ministers of the Lao People's Democratic Republic, the People's Republic of Kampuchea and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam was held in the capital city of Vientiane from February 16th to 17th, 1982. The conference reviewed the world and regional situation as well as relations of friendship and brotherly cooperation between these three countries in their common struggle to build and defend their respective fatherland, for the sake of national independence and socialism on the Indochinese Peninsula, and of peace in Southeast Asia and the world.

The conference notes with satisfaction that in spite of the still numerous difficulties caused by the war and the hostile actions of expansionism, imperialism and other reactionary forces, the situation of the three Indochinese countries keeps improving. The situation of the three Indochinese countries keeps improving. The situation in Kampuchea is constantly stabilizing: The Kampuchean people have recovered their normal life and are now the true masters of their country. The prestige of the state of the People's Republic of Kampuchea, the sole legal and authentic representative of the Kampuchean people, keeps growing. The special ties between Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea keep consolidating and developing. The regular high-level consultations between the three countries have helped strengthen their militant solidarity and oneness of mind. The three countries' coordination on the diplomatic front in the recent period has proved harmonious and fruitful. With their foreign policy of peace, the three countries of Indochina have been constantly enhancing their role as a positive factor for peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

The conference highly values the fruitful efforts of the Lao People's Democratic Republic in its capacity as a representative of the three Indochinese countries and whose activities have contributed to increasing mutual understanding between the ASEAN and Indochina groups aimed at solving questions related to peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The conference has assessed preparatory work for the first summit conference of the three countries to be held this year and decided to step it up.

The conference is satisfied with the positive constant growth of the allround cooperation between the three countries of Indochina and the Soviet Union and the world socialist community. The conference expresses its high appreciation of the results of the working consultative conference of the vice-foreign ministers from the socialist countries held in Vientiane in December 1981, considering it a major contribution of the world socialist community to the common struggle for peace and stability in Southeast Asia that helps ease tension in the world.

The conference exchanged views on the situation of the Non-Aligned Movement and the coordination needed between the three countries so as to make an active contribution to the success of the 7th summit conference of the non-aligned countries so that the movement can bring into full play its important role in the common struggle for peace and independence, against imperialist, colonialism and the other reactionary forces.

2. The conference is of the unanimous view that the main cause of the tension that is threatening peace in the world at present stems from the interventionist policy of the imperialist circles and the hegemonistic expansionists headed by U.S. imperialism that are stepping up the arms race and rekindling the cold war aimed at the Soviet Union, the socialist countries, and at the revolutionary struggle of nations. The Chinese card policy of the Reagan administration and the Sino-American collusion represent a permanent threat to world peace and more particularly a serious danger to peace and stability in Asia. Given such a situation, the conference holds the view that the people's first and foremost task is to struggle to defend peace and defeat all dark schemes and acts of aggression on the part of American imperialism colluding with Chinese expansionism and other reactionary forces. The conference is happy to see that thanks to the allround growth and the foreign policy and line of peace of the Soviet Union and the other countries in the socialist community, thanks to the efforts of the non-aligned countries and the peace and democratic forces, as well as the long and deep-rooted aspiration of broad sections of the world peoples, mankind is more and more truly able to defend peace and drive back the danger of a new world war.

3. In order to safeguard their respective national independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity as well as peace and security in Southeast Asia and the world, the Lao, Kampuchean and Vietnamese peoples are determined to struggle against the policy of aggression and intervention of the reactionary Beijing authorities colluding with American imperialism. However, the Lao, Kampuchean and Vietnamese peoples consistently treasure their long-standing friendship with the Chinese people and wish to restore normal relations with the People's Republic of China on the basis of respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, of mutual non-aggression and non-intervention in each other's internal affairs, on an equal footing and on the basis of mutual benefit, good neighbourhood relations and of the settling of disputes through peaceful means.

World opinion shows great concern for the normalization of relations between the three Indochinese countries and China, considering it an important factor for peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The Lao People's Democratic Republic, the People's Republic of Kampuchea and the Socialist Republic of Vietnam once again state their wish for a positive response from the Chinese side to the proposal dated January 28th, 1981 of the three Indochinese countries concerning the signing of treaties of peaceful coexistence with the People's Republic of China.

The Lao People's Democratic Republic and the People's Republic of Kampuchea wholly support the good-will proposal of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam put forward in the note dated January 30th, 1982 and addressed by the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry to its Chinese counterpart concerning the termination of military hostilities in the borderline regions between the two countries and the rapid holding of the third round of Vietnam-China negotiations with a view to ensuring peace and stability in the borderline regions and discussing problems of interest to both parties. They express unreserved support for the January 31st, 1982 message of the president of the Council of Ministers, Pham Van Dong, welcoming the United Nations secretary general's initiative proposing that Vietnam and China prolong the state of peace in the borderline regions beyond the Tet period.

4. Having fought for centuries for their own independence, the three peoples of Indochina always respect the independence and sovereignty of neighbouring and other countries. In spite of the Thai authorities' former and present policy of hostility towards the three Indochinese countries, the latter's peoples always value the friendship with the Thai people and wish to establish relations of good neighbourhood with the Kingdom of Thailand for the sake of each country and of peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the People's Republic of Kampuchea welcome the results of the visit undertaken in the Kingdom of Thailand in November 1981 by the Lao deputy premier and foreign minister, Phoun Sipaseut, and totally support the just policy and good will of the Lao People's Democratic Republic in its relations with the Kingdom of Thailand. The Socialist Republic of Vietnam, the Lao People's Democratic Republic and the People's Republic of Kampuchea once more solemnly declare that they respect Thailand's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

The presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea results from an agreement between the Governments of the People's Republic of Kampuchea and of the Socialist Republic of Vietnam so as to deal with the threat from China's hegemonistic expansionism. Once this threat is removed, the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the People's Republic of Kampuchea will agree on the withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea.

The presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea in no way threatens Thailand's security. The three countries of Indochina are prepared to examine and support any initiative, from whatever quarters, that contributes to stabilizing the situation along the Kampuchea-Thailand border on the basis of respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. They are also prepared to discuss with Thailand all questions of common concern. These contacts may be undertaken directly or indirectly, bilaterally or between the three Indochinese countries on the one hand and Thailand on the other. Such contacts bear no relation whatsoever to the question of mutual de facto or de jure recognition. Depending on the results of these contacts, the Socialist Republic of Vietnam and the People's Republic of Kampuchea will agree on a partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea. The three countries of Indochina once more stress the just and reasonable character of the proposal of the People's Republic of Kampuchea concerning the creation of a demilitarized zone under some form of international supervision so as to ensure security in the Kampuchea-Thailand border line region.

5. At present the Indochinese countries are doing their utmost so that, together with other countries in the region, they may build new relations on the basis of the principles of peaceful coexistence between states of different socio-political regimes. At the 36th General Assembly of the United Nations, the Lao foreign minister, on behalf of the three Indochinese countries, put forward a 7-point proposal aiming at gradually turning Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability and cooperation. This proposal fully meets the Southeast Asian peoples' aspirations and enjoys the approval and support of world opinion. It is regrettable that the efforts of the Indochinese countries are being strongly impeded by the imperialist and expansionist forces' policy of intervention and aggression. The American imperialists, colluding with China and other reactionary forces, are undertaking a hostile policy of blockade and encirclement toward the Indochinese countries. They are reactivating American bases in Thailand, strengthening their military presence and organizing bilateral and multilateral military manoeuvres in the region, thus jeopardizing the sovereignty and security of the countries in this zone, while on a world scale encouraged by the United States the ruling circles in Beijing are trying to exacerbate tension in the world. They are trying by all means [to] pit the United States against the Soviet Union, the NATO bloc against the Warsaw bloc and to undermine peace and international detente.

In Southeast Asia, they are goading the ASEAN countries and Indochinese countries into confrontation in the hope of sowing division between these two groups of countries and thus pave the way for them to realize their dreams of hegemony and expansion in the region. While maintaining Maoist forces in order to interfere crudely in the internal affairs of the ASEAN countries and of Burma, the Beijing ruling circles are now engaged in a kind of multifaceted war of destruction against Vietnam and Laos. They go on feeding, supplying and using Pol Pot genocidal forces and other reactionary Khmer forces to impede the rebirth of the Kampuchean people and their task of national reconstruction.

China's repeated refusals to all the proposals made by Vietnam with a view to stabilizing the situation along the Vietnam-China border and to those of the Indochinese countries aimed at normalizing their relations with China as well as the fact that the latter constantly seek to impede the trend towards dialogue between the countries of Indochina and those of ASEAN rouse the discontent of work opinion. The latter realizes more and more clearly that China has an interest in maintaining tension in the region so as to serve its expansionist designs that go against the aspirations and interests of the peoples in the region. Consequently, it appears that the main threat to the independence and security of Southeast Asian countries comes from Chinese expansionism. It is growingly evident that the true nature of the present crisis in Southeast Asia does not consist in the dissension between the ASEAN countries and the Indochinese countries, but in the policy of aggression and intervention of the Chinese authorities against the latter.

In the face of such a situation, an urgent task sets itself to the peoples in the region, namely, act jointly to root out the origin of the threat to the Southeast Asian peoples' sovereignty and security, and to peace and stability in the region, and to put an end to any intervention and dictate on the part of expansionist and imperialist forces. It is necessary that the countries in the region meet to discuss and solve regional problems on the basis of equality, mutual respect and non-imposition of one's views on others. The Indochinese countries hail the trend existing within the ASEAN countries in favour of dialogue with the Indochinese countries. If the ASEAN countries should not yet be ready to take part in a regional conference as proposed by the Indochinese countries, Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam are prepared to hold contacts with the ASEAN countries, directly or indirectly, bilaterally or multilaterally, so as to discuss together and together find a solution to questions related to peace and stability in the region. Such contacts can in no way be linked to the question of a mutual de facto or de jure recognition.

6. The conference has been held in an atmosphere of friendship and solidarity and characterized by oneness of mind. The conference states its confidence and firm conviction that in spite of the numerous difficulties and complexities still ahead, the struggle of the three peoples to build and defend their respective fatherlands is bound to meet with complete success. Peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the work are bound to be consolidated and strengthened further.

FIGHTING ALONG BORDER FORCES EVACUATIONS

[Text] Aranyaprathet -- Residents have been evacuated from three villages south of here as fighting between the occupying Vietnamese forces and the Khmer Rouge guerrillas continued along the Thai border.

Field military sources said so far about 80 percent of the 2,300 people of the three villages of Wang Mon, Kok Sabaeng and Saen Suk have been moved out.

Most of those evacuated were women and young children. Many men stayed behind to help troops guard the villages.

At least 14 artillery shells landed in Thailand between Wang Mon and Kok Sabaeng on Saturday evening. Two of the shells caused slight damage to the house of Kok Sabaeng village headman, Thom Phonthai, the sources said.

Flares fired by the Vietnamese to locate the Khmer Rouge strongholds close to the Thai border also panicked Thai villagers, the sources said.

Military authorities have ordered the digging of more bunkers along the border.

Troops are supplying food and other necessities to the villagers who have been evacuated to safer places.

Aranyaprathet District Officer Uthai Chaichak yesterday arranged a meeting of villagers living along the frontier to discuss the problems caused to them by the fighting within Kampuchea.

Military intelligence sources said, meanwhile, that the Vietnamese forces yesterday reinforced tanks and half-tracked vehicles near the Kampuchean town of Poipet and at the area opposite Thap Phrik some 50 kilometres south of Aranyaprathet.

SRV-PRK FORCES SAID TO ENCIRCLE BORDER PATROL

[Text] According to a report by Supreme Command Information Office Director Lt Gen Som Khattaphan, 15 border patrol policemen of Platoon 233 clashed at 1330 on 17 February with a group of Vietnamese-Heng Samrin forces intruding about 1 km deep into Thailand in Ban Sap Tari, Tambon Patong, Pong Nam Ron District, Chanthaburi Province.

According to the latest report received at 1100 today, the intruders numbering about 300 were encircling the Thai border patrol policemen. Reinforcements have been dispatched to rescue the Thai policemen. A number of the policemen have already broken out of the encirclement. Another group of reinforcements has been dispatched from the commander of the Zone 1 border patrol police as well as from the forces stationed in Chanthaburi and Trat Provinces. The director of the Supreme Command Information Office said it was believed the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin forces intruded into Thailand in hot pursuit of the Khmer Rouge.

KHMER RESISTANCE COMMANDERS HOLD TALKS

BK130630 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 13 Feb 82 pp 1, 12

[By the NATION's regional desk]

[Text] Top field commanders of the pro-Sihanouk and Son Sann's resistance forces have held two important meetings in Nong Chan on the Thai-Kampuchean border and Bangkok recently to put an end to their long-standing bickering, reliable sources told the NATION yesterday.

On Feb 6, Gen Dien Del, military commander of the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF) under Son Sann met Gen Teap Ben, a major Sihanoukist military leader, and Nhem Sophon, president of pro-Sihanouk Moulinaka force in Nong Chan.

On Feb 9, Gen Dien Del and Gen Teap Ben held the second meeting in Bangkok.

The two meetings were confirmed by both KPNLF and Sihanoukist sources.

"I felt it was about time we stopped the bickering among ourselves," Moulinaka's Nhem Sophon told the NATION in an exclusive interview recently.

"I have always tried to maintain good relations with every nationalist force. I am faithful to Prince Norodom Sihanouk but I also respect Mr Son Sann. I have no intention however to join the KPNLF as had been rumoured in certain circles. But I believe strongly in helping each other. We have a common enemy and we both want to liberate our country," Nhem Sophon said.

The first meeting was arranged by Nhem Sophon and took place at Nong Chan in the camp of pro-KPNLF leader Chea Chut. The parley had been proposed by Dien Del. "The Sihanoukists promptly agreed to the meeting and location," an informed source close to both sides said.

Representing the Sihanoukist side in the meeting were Teap Ben, Nhem Sophon, Duong Khem (tactical adviser for the Moulinaka)and Men Bunthan (chief of Moulinaka's Third Bureau).

Dien Del and Teap Ben, former military schoolmates, had not met each other since 1975.

"They hugged each other emotionally when they met in the camp for the meeting. Everybody was just so happy that the meeting took place after all," said Nhem Sophon.

Dien Del told the meeting that all Kampuchean nationalists should patch up and forget about their differences. "Let's put an end to our quarrels which have been dragging on for too long. We should leave the political solution to Prince Sihanouk and President Son Sann," he was quoted as having told the first Non Chan meeting.

Nhem Sophon, responding to Dien Del's remarks, replied that he had never encouraged bickering among the nationalists.

"I had never looked for quarrels with the KPNLF. I know that you (Dien Del) are a true nationalist," Nhem Sophon was quoted as saying. He also warned the nationalists to be wary of the Khmer Rouge who might try to drive a wedge between pro-Sihanouk and pro-KPNLF elements.

Informed sources said that, in the past, the pro-Sihanouk Moulinaka had developed some severe conflicts with Chea Chut and his second in command, a former Khmer Rouge identified only as Sun.

Dien Del was said to have shaken hands with everybody present in the meeting before leaving the Feb 6 meeting.

Three days later, on Feb 9, another meeting was held in Bangkok between Dien Del and Teap Ben. The meeting proceeded under a "cordial atmosphere," according to an informed source present in the meeting.

Son Sann's resistance forces have claimed to be about 8,000 strong while other independent sources have put the strength at around 4,000 to 5,000.

Diplomatic sources have told the NATION that the weapons to arm 3,000 men promised by China to Sihanouk in late May, last year, are due to be delivered "very soon" to the Sihanoukist fighters in the jungle.

Sihanoukist sources have claimed that with the new shipment of weapons, their armed strength should be boosted to around 5,000.

The Sihanoukist forces are known to have three camps — O Khsach (led by Toun Chhay); O Smach (headed by Savy Thoeun) and the oldest stronghold in Nong Chan where the Moulinaka troops operate under the leadership of Nhem Sophon.

GENERAL CONFIRMS SRV PLANE INTRUSION ACCIDENTAL

[Text] Thai authorities investigating the crash-landing of a Vietnamese transport plane inside Thailand last week has concluded that the aircraft violated Thai airspace by accident, Assistant Army Commander in Chief Gen Athit Kamlang-ek said yesterday.

He said the army had no more doubts over the motive of the intrusion of the Thai airspace by the Soviet-made Antonov AN-26 which crash-landed at Sa Kaeo District of Prachin Buri last week after being intercepted by Thai F-5E jets.

"Our investigation shows that its engine had developed trouble and the weather was bad at the time," he said.

Gen Athit said the matter will be transferred to the Foreign Ministry to decide whether or when the plane and its crew will be returned to Vietnam.

Full reports of the investigation had already been passed on to the Foreign Ministry and the Supreme Command, he said.

Hanoi has asked for "prompt return" of the aircraft and its crew.

Gen Athit said Thailand was not likely to demand compensation for damage caused by the crash.

The aircraft crash-landed in a field villagers were preparing for tapioca planting and the villagers did not ask for any compensation, he said.

"We are convinced that the Vietnamese harboured no ill intention against us. The pilots might have no experience. They said during investigation that they mistook the road in Sa Kaeo as those in Saigon," he said.

Gen Athit also said that hevy fightings were reported around areas in Khao Din, Khao Ta-Ngok and Khao Saraphi opposite Thai border recently.

On Feb 13 at 7 pm Vietnamese forces fired artillery shells with gas canisters into areas around Khao Din, he said.

About 30 Kampucheas were injured in the attack and many of them suffered burning eyes and vomitted profoundly, he said.

And on the same day, an SAM rocket was fired across the border from Kampuchea and landed in Ban Khok Sabaeng in Aranyaprathet. The missile, however, did not explode, he said.

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN REVIEWS PRC HOSTILE ATTITUDE

BK171035 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2330 GMT 16 Feb 82

[QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 17 February editorial: "Beijing Is Still Plunging Deeply Along the Path of Opposition and Sabotage Against Vietnam"]

[Text] Three years ago, after meeting with failure in using the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary clique to carry out the war of aggression against Vietnam at its southwestern border, the Beijing reactionaries resorted to a large-scale war of aggression by deploying 600,000 troops to attack Vietnam's northern border areas. The Chinese, however, were duly punished and driven back to their territory. This was the severest failure of the Chinese reactionary leadership in their schedule to annex Vietnam and the Indochinese Peninsula in order to continue their expansionist dream in Southeast Asia.

Our army and people, under the clear-sighted leadership of the party, have heightened the indomitable tradition and stalwart spirit of our nation. They have developed the nation's great strength, maintained national independence to advance toward socialism, scored glorious victories in defending the nation's territorial integrity and firmly protected revolutionary gains. These victories are of historical significance.

Through their struggle and their glorious victories, the Vietnamese people have exposed the Beijing reactionary clique's vile characteristics, its expansionism and hegemonism against national independence and socialism. Our people have contributed to strengthening the revolutionary combat position of the three Indochinese peoples, maintaining security and peace in Southeast Asia, increasing the offensive strength of the three revolutionary currents of the epoch to fight against imperialism and international reactionaries for peace, national independence, democracy and socialism.

Since then, Beijing has not learned from its lesson of defeats, but continues to collude closely with the United States and the ultrarightist leadership of the ASEAN countries to plunge deeply along the path of hostility against Vietnam. They have not only rejected all of Vietnam's initiatives and good will aimed at solving problems of mutual concern to both countries, but have persistently carried out a war of multisided sabotage to weaken and annex Vietnam. They have undermined us militarily, economically and politically, carried out sabotage activities on our land, islands and at our border areas as well as on the whole Indochinese Peninsula. They have continued to exert military pressure at our border, relentlessly created conflicts to occupy our territory, sent aircraft, warships and armed fishing boats to violate our airspace and territorial waters in order to conduct reconnaissance, collect intelligence and carry out provocations.

They have nurtured, organized and commanded various armed bandit commando groups to create disturbances and rebellion from inside our territory. They have also resorted to all wicked tactics to oppose and sabotage us politically, weaken our all-people solidarity alliance, undermine socialism and attack our party and state leadership organs. They have sought to undermine the combatant solidarity bloc of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea, slandered and undermined the solidarity between Vietnam and the Soviet Union and the socialist community and tried to discredit and sow division between Vietnam and nations which are struggling for national independence and to isolate Vietnam in the international arena. They are not reluctant to resort to various tactics to undermine our production, collude with international reactionary forces to encircle our economy in order to create difficulties to our people's daily life and disturbances to our society, thus effecting our social order and security.

They have striven to use decadent and reactionary culture, psychological warfare and espionage activities to attack us ideologically in order to create distrust and lessen the revolutionary impetus in the army, especially among the youths. They have incited opposition among the backward and degenerate elements of our people.

Along with carrying out their war of sabotage against Vietnam, the Beijing leadership has also sought to increase their guerrilla warfare and other sabotage activities in Kampuchea and has accelerated psychological warfare and espionage activities in Laos with a scheme to weaken and obstruct the three Indochinese countries' advance on their path to consolidate national independence and building socialism.

This perfidious and cunning war of multisided sabotage has been waged on the basis of strategic collusion and coordination of actions among China, the United States and reactionary forces of the region, especially of Thailand and Singapore. Nevertheless, this scheme is merely the product of a weak position and a serious crisis experienced by the masterminds who are attempting to reverse the wheel of history, and it certainly cannot avoid bankruptcy. It is obvious that over the past 3 years, the more China has stepped up its unjust designs against our country, the more bitter defeats it has sustained, the more internal contradictions and unrest it has experienced, the deeper the recession its economy has gone into, the more divided its people have become, and the more condemnations it has drawn from the world. This reality shows that all the frenzied schemes and acts against Vietnam by the Beijing authorities are nothing but a dream fraught with ambitions nurtured by aggressors and expansionists who, though already heavily defeated, still remain stubborn and think subjectively.

Our people, by constant heightening of their vigilance and by their extraordinary efforts, are determined to foil all forms of the war of aggression conducted by Chinese expansionism and hegemonism in collusion with U.S. imperialism and other reactionary forces. We place absolute confidence in the party's leadership, unite singlemindedly, uphold the spirit of socialist collective mastery and devote all our efforts and capabilities to carry out outstandingly all the tasks assigned so that our country will possess the strength necessary to thwart the enemy's sabotage strategy and stand ready to smash its war of aggression under all circumstances.

To fulfill this glorious mission we must intensively strengthen and consolidate the all-people solidarity bloc and promote unity among the various nationalities and religious beliefs, army-people unity and international solidarity so as to create strength from unity in thought and action. We must continue to build firm and strong people's armed forces, build a standardized and modernized people's army and strengthen national defense and security constantly, determined to foil all of the enemy's schemes and maneuvers. We must concentrate efforts on the production and national construction fronts with the immediate goal of satisfactorily resolving the grain problem, stabilizing the people's life and creating conditions for production development so as to boost our country's economic and national defense potential constantly.

Our people desire nothing other than to live in peace, independence and freedom in order to build their country and a plentiful and happy life. Now as always, we deeply cherish our age-old friendship with the Chinese people. We believe that the genuine revolutionaries and people of China also want peace and friendship, not war; just as we do. The expansionist and hegemonist forces in Beijing must bear responsibility for their serious sabotage of the existing Vietnam-China friendship and their betrayal of the earnest aspirations of both nations.

For the socialist fatherland and for the people's happiness, we are determined to counter all the schemes of aggression and sabotage of the Beijing authorities. However, we are always prepared to extend our hands in good will toward anyone who wishes to sit down with us to settle through negotiations the outstanding hot issues between the two countries in order to promptly restore the age-old friendship between the two nations and normal relations between the two countries. For this reason, our government has repeatedly advanced many positive and serious proposals aimed at settling peacefully all the problems concerning relations between Vietnam and China to meet the interests and aspirations of the peoples of Vietnam and China as well as the common desire of the peoples of Southeast Asia and the rest of the world for peace and stability in this region as well as elsewhere on earth.

Most recently, on 30 January 1982, our Foreign Ministry sent a note to the Chinese side, proposing constructively and realistically that the two sides cease all hostile armed actions in the border regions of the two countries and promptly resume the third round of Vietnam-China talks, which were unilaterally suspended by the Chinese side in March 1980, to resolve the issue of maintaining peace and stability in the border regions of the two countries and discuss all problems of interest to each side. Once again, the Chinese side stubbornly rejected our government's constructive proposal. This shows that it is deliberately pursuing a scheme to weaken and then annex our country and is opposing the revolutionary cause of our country.

We must resolutely defeat the Beijing expansionists' war of multisided sabotage and stand ready to fight for the defense of the fatherland while persisting in our policy of peace and friendship with the Chinese people. Our people will surely win total victory in their just struggle.

NHAN DAN PRAISES INDOCHINESE MINISTERS MEETING

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 18 -- "The communique of the Indochinese countries' fifth foreign ministerial conference, held in Vientiane on February 16-17, bears expression to the goodwill and untiring efforts of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea for peace and stability in Southeast Asia and the world," remarks NHAN DAN in a commentary today.

"The increasing stability of the Kampuchean situation and the constant consolidation of the Vietnam-Laos-Kampuchea special relationship as confirmed by the three foreign ministers demonstrate Beijing's failure in its collusion with Washington to reverse the Kampuchean situation and weaken the Vietnamese and Lao revolutions", the paper says. It continues:

"The conference paid special attention to peace, stability and cooperation in Southeast Asia. Realities show more and more clearly that it is Chinese expansionism and hegemonism that are jeopardizing the independence and security of nations in this region. The three Indochinese countries are firmly opposing the policy of aggression and intervention pursued by the reactionary Beijing authorities in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, for the defence of their national independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, and for peace and security in Southeast Asia. However, the three Indochinese peoples, now as in the past, always set great store by their long-standing friendship with the Chinese people and are desirous to restore their normal relations with the People's Republic of China on the basis of respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, non-aggression, equality, mutual benefit, good neighbourhood and settlement of disputes through peaceful negotiations.

"Regarding the other Southeast Asian nations", NHAN DAN goes on, "the three Indochinese countries have been doing all they can for the establishment of new relations on the principles of peaceful co-existence among states having different political and social systems.

"As to Thailand, in particular, the Indochinese countries have further expounded their goodwill by solemnly declaring their preparedness to commit themselves to respect Thailand's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and their preparedness to talk with Thailand on all matters of mutual concern, including peace and security along the Kampuchean-Thai border".

"We hope that the A.S.E.A.N. countries, and particularly the Thai authorities, thoroughly study and then respond to the three Indochinese countries' proposals, which conform to the interests of peace and stability in the region and the legitimate interests of all its people".

"Until now," the paper continues, "the three Indochinese countries' continuous efforts for peace, stability and mutual understanding in the region are still opposed by Chinese expansionism colluding with U.S. imperialism. These war-mongering forces seek to do nothing but cause division, confrontation and conflicts in an attempt to enslave other nations. Such a policy is the root cause of the present tension in Southeast Asia. The very nature of the crisis is not the differences between the A.S.E.A.N. and Indochinese groups but the Chinese authorities' policy of aggression and intervention vis-a-vis the three Indochinese countries and their ambition for expansion to the whole of Southeast Asia."

"The Chinese authorities can by no means justify their arrogant attitude in stubbornly refusing relations of peaceful co-existence with the Indochinese countries and shirking its responsibility to ensure peace and stability along the Sino-Vietnamese border," NHAN DAN affirms.

ANNIVERSARY OF PRK-SRV TREATY COMMEMORATED

[Unattributed commentary]

[Text] Together with the fraternal Kampuchean people, the Vietnamese people are celebrating the third anniversary of the signing of the Vietnam-Kampuchea treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation. Tomorrow, February 18, will be observed as the day of solidarity between the two countries.

The treaty, signed 3 years ago, marked a new chapter in the relations between Vietnam and Kampuchea and a magnificent development of their special friendship. Since then, it has helped to promote bilateral cooperation in the economic, cultural and other fields.

The Kampuchean people, under the leadership of the People's Revolutionary Party and the Council of State, headed by Heng Samrin, have obtained many successes in national defense and production. The resurgence of life in Kampuchea as well as deep-going changes in this country gladden all our friends far and near but greatly embarass our enemies.

In the past 3 years, the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists, openly colluding with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces, have frantically resorted to all possible means to oppose Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. They have waged a war of destruction against Vietnam in many fields and continued to threaten and undermine the peace and security of Laos. They have also tried to knock together all groups of Khmer reaction in a so-called coalition government with the hope of maintaining the illegal presence of their henchmen in the United Nations and opposing the revival of the Kampuchean people. Despite their attempts, the situation in the three Indochinese countries, particularly in Kampuchea, continues to change for the better. Obviously, this is thanks to the sacred solidarity between the peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. This constitutes a factor of peace and stability in Southeast Asia and helps to stay the hands of the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists.

The fifth conference of the foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries being held in Vientiane is a demonstration of the close friendship and militant solidarity. The recent peace initiatives of the three Indochinese countries show that they always try for a peaceful, stable, friendly and cooperative Southeast Asia.

On this occasion, the Vietnamese people declare that they are determined to strengthen their solidarity and all-round cooperation with the fraternal peoples of Kampuchea and Laos so as to bring about greater successes in each country.

NHAN DAN HAILS INDIAN MINISTER RAO'S VISIT

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 16 -- NHAN DAN today says that the recent fruitful visit of External Affairs Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao marked a new development in the Indo-Vietnamese friendship. "The Government of the Republic of India headed by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi has increased its support and assistance for the Vietnamese people in national construction and defence," it notes.

The paper says that cooperation in many fields between the two countries over the past years has constantly developed. Quoting the joint statement between Vietnam and India, the paper says the two sides agree to further expand and strengthen existing cooperation under a long-term plan. NHAN DAN highly values the development of relations between the two countries, saying that this is a valuable assistance to the Vietnamese people. The paper welcomes India's support for the proposal for dialogues between the Indochinese and A.S.E.A.N. countries to solve existing problems without outside interference. This support encourages the three Indochinese peoples in their struggle for peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

NHAN DAN expresses the belief that outstanding regional problems will eventually be solved through frank, constructive dialogues. The paper says: "As members of the Non-Aligned Movement with India as a founder, the two countries will continue to work for the fundamental objectives of the movement by stepping up the struggle against imperialism and colonialism, for peace, national independence and social progress." This struggle, it adds, is all the more important now the Reagan administration is stepping up the arms race and increasing interference in the internal affairs of other countries, military collusion and commitments, thus straining the situation in Southeast and southern Asia and elsewhere.

"The growing friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and India is an important contribution to turning Southeast Asia into a peaceful, stable region" NHAN DAN concludes.

[Text] Paris, 12 Feb (AFP) -- Several hundred Soviet military experts and technicians recently arrived at Con Dao Archipelago in southern Vietnam to build a naval base there, a spokesman of the Committee for the National Salvation of Vietnam said today. The organization, which groups many anti-communist Vietnamese exiles, was formed in December 1980 and is led by Thai Quang Trung. Con Dao, 100 kms (65 miles) east of Point Camau, is a group of 12 islands, including the former penal colony of Poulo-Condor.

The spokesman also said that a recent trip by Soviet General [as received] Nikolay Ogarkov to Indochina's communist capitals was made to reach an agreement on the establishment of Soviet bases in Indochina and the enlargement of several naval bases there.

According to information from Washington, the Soviet navy is using former U.S. bases at Danang and Nha Trang.

The committee's report, as yet unconfirmed, follows a report in the Vietnamese Communist Party newspaper NHAN DAN last December that a member of the party Central Committee, Do Moi, had visited a Soviet advisor "living at Vung Tau," the southern tip of Vietnam.

PHAM VAN DONG VISITS HA BAC COOPERATIVE

[Text] According to the VIETNAM NEWS AGENCY, Tan Moc is a cooperative that embraces the entire village comprising many ethnic nationalities of the Luc Ngan Mountain District, Ha Bac Province. Despite many production difficulties in the mountain region, the cooperative, by applying many organizational and managerial measures in production, has quickly solved its grain and foodstuff problem and produced a large quantity of agricultural products for delivery to the state.

In view of its outstanding achievements over the past few years, Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong recently, on the occasion of the Nham Tuat [Year of the Dog] spring, visited the compatriots of various nationalities in Tan Moc. There he urged the local people to make still greater efforts and expressed the hope that the cooperatives in Ha Bac will promptly follow the example of Tan Moc to satisfactorily resolve their grain and foodstuff problems.

The Ha Bac Provincial Party Committee has in good time drawn five lessons of experience from the realities of Tan Moc to guide the other cooperatives in the province to apply them under their own particular conditions. These include the experiences in expanding the area and intensive cultivation of soybeans as well as of rice; satisfactory management and delivery of products; building a firm and strong party organization; firmly maintaining political security and social order and safety; and raising the people's living standards.

TO HUU VISITS VINH PHU, COMMENTS ON CONDITIONS

[Text] Comrade To Huu, member of the party Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, recently made a tour of Vinh Phu Province where he also visited many factories and enterprises. Accompanying him on this tour were leading cadres of the Ministries of Communications and Transportation, Building, Power, Light Industry and Food Industry, and the Chemical General Department.

Comrade To Huu was briefed by Comrade Hoang Quy, secretary of the provincial party committee, and Comrade Nguyen Van Ton, chairman of the provincial people's committee, on the status of production and life in Vinh Phu Province, as well as on its guidelines and tasks for 1982 in light of the resolutions adopted by various party Central Committee plenums. The vice chairman of the Council of Ministers provided the comrade leaders of Vinh Phu with many concrete views concerning guidelines for local agricultural, forestry and industrial production, and measures for the further expansion of production and business transactions in the province.

Pointing to the favorable conditions in a province which has many major central-level enterprises, Comrade To Huu said: In addition to the availability of arable land for use in growing additional rice, subsidiary crops, vegetables, fruit trees and soybeans, the hilly region of Vinh Phu has tremendous economic potential with so many products of great export value -- such as tea, lacquer trees, pineapples, bananas, bamboo and rattan -- and valuable natural resources -- such as pyrite, mica, kaolin and so forth. Vinh Phu also enjoys the advantages of riverline, railway and land communications and transportation, and a relatively abundant labor force. If the province knows how to organize production and business transactions satisfactorily, it can become a prosperous agricultural-forestry-industrial province, capable not only of balancing its major requirements but also of contributing considerably to the central government.

Comrade To Huu also pointed out the need for the province to establish economic relations on a large-scale basis between central level enterprises and local enterprises and cooperatives.

Together with the comrade ministers and vice ministers, Comrade To Huu visited and worked at the Minh Phuong textile complex, the Bai Bang paper and paper pulp factory, the Lam Thao superphosphate factory, the Vinh Phu battery plant, the Dao Phu concrete plant, the Vinh Yen export fruit processing factory, the Song Lo combined textile enterprise, the Phu Tho tea research station, the Viet Tri industrial complex, and the sugar, paper, seasoning power, chemical and prefabricated concrete factories. He attended a meeting jointly held by the directors of these factories and leading cadres of various ministries and Vinh Phu Province to discuss managerial measures aimed at accelerating production and improving the livelihood of the workers and cadres.

During his visit to Vinh Phu Province, Comrade To Huu also held friendly get-togethers with the Soviet, Bulgarian and Swedish specialists. On behalf of the party Central Committee and government, Comrade To Huu extended his sincere thanks and new year greetings to these specialists.

HANOI PEOPLE'S COUNCIL REVIEWS 1982 TASKS, BUDGET

[Text] The Eighth Hanoi Municipal People's Council held its fourth session from 29 to 31 January 1982. During the session, the council discussed the implementation of the 1981 plan and budget and decided on the tasks and budget for 1982.

In the past year, various production sectors and establishments in Hanoi took the initiative in establishing economic relations with other provinces and cities, in securing more supplies and raw materials and in making full use of discards and rejects to produce consumer goods worth tens of millions of dong. Owing to the policies of stabilizing grain obligations and applying product contracts with labor groups and laborers, agricultural production achieved fairly good progress with grain output exceeding that in 1980 by 40,000 tons. More agricultural products, foodstuffs and industrial goods were sold to the state than in the previous year, and the amount of exportable agricultural products sold to the state was double that of 1980. The trade, cultural, educational, public health, social welfare, sports and physical education sectors scored many appreciable achievements. Numerous efforts were made in national defense and in the maintenance of public order and security.

Fully imbued with the spirit of the resolution issued by the 11th Plenum of the VCP Central Committee, the Hanoi Municipal People's Council discussed and unanimously adopted the planned tasks for 1982, which are as follows: uphold the spirit of creative labor and self-reliance; improve organizational and managerial work; and broaden socialist production and business. All local economic establishments must maintain close contact with those run by the central level, provinces and cities; expand local import and export activities; and take the initiative in overcoming some of the difficulties regarding supplies and raw materials so as to restore and develop industrial, artisan, handicraft and agricultural production. They must also satisfactorily carry out distribution and circulation, stabilize the people's living conditions, strengthen national defense, maintain public order and security and protect the fatherland and the capital.

In economic management, the bureaucratic managerial system based on subsidies must be quickly done away with and replaced by the system based on socialist economic accounting and business. Planning must be carried out at the three basic levels and plans must be formulated from production units upward so as to develop industrial, artisan and handicraft production vigorously, thereby contributing to stabilizing production and the people's living conditions, creating more jobs for laborers and increasing the commodities fund. Food processing and the production of consumer and export goods, construction materials, machinery in support of agricultural production and so forth must be promoted so as to increase the value of gross output by 16 percent or more over 1981. Agricultural production must be actively stepped up to contribute to resolving the grain problem satisfactorily.

The building of the food belt must be continued and the production of industrial crops, medicinal herbs and exportable agricultural products must be developed. Hanoi will strive to carry out its plans for capital construction even more satisfactorily, especially the construction of dwellings. It will strengthen communications and transportation, actively resolve the pressing problems of daily life and provide jobs for people of working age while continuing to develop culture, education, public health, social welfare, sports and physical education and the education of youth and teenagers.

COUNCIL OF MINISTERS ISSUES RESOLUTION ON THRIFT

[Text] NHAN DAN today carries on page 1 and part of page 4 the text of the resolution issued by the Council of Ministers on the practice of thrift. The resolution reads in part:

Our country has embarked on the second year of the Third 1981-85 5-Year Plan. However, while the economy still has many sharply imbalanced aspects, grain, energy, materials, equipment and capital have been used inefficiently, involving serious wastage, and the bad practices of enjoying luxurious things and showing off one's formalism continue to develop.

To quickly overcome this situation in 1982, we must try at all costs to reduce by 10 percent the consumption of energy, supplies, raw materials and other expenditures specified in the plans and budgets approved by the state.

It is also necessary further to reorganize various production and construction branches and live in a way that is consonant with the economic conditions, broadly apply advanced technology to achieve thrift, and promptly control the economy in accordance with set systems, criteria and norms so that all sources of capital, supplies, grain and manpower can be used effectively, thus helping to boost production and improve the people's livelihood.

[NHAN DAN 16 February editorial: "Thrift Is a Virtue and a Socialist Way of Life"]

[Text] The Council of Ministers has issued a resolution on the practice of thrift. This is a major and long-term economic policy of the party and the state aimed at effectively using production capacities and various sources of reserves in order to develop the economy, expand production and gradually improve the working people's livelihood.

Socialist construction requires many things, ranging from grain to machinery, equipment, raw materials and fuel. Our country's natural resources are rich and its sources of reserves are relatively abundant. Yet efforts to exploit these resources have only been on the initial stage. We have depended chiefly on fraternal countries for the supply of almost all of essential materials and fuels or have obtained these supplies through imports. Our demands have grown bigger and bigger. Many imbalanced aspects in the economy can only be overcome gradually. Instead of practicing strict economy in order to reduce this imbalance, we have squandered materials, energy, equipment and capital and have obtained poor results. Despite some efforts noted in establishing and complying with various economic and technical norms, the rate of materials and fuel used per unit of product has been on a rising trend with certain kinds increasing considerably as compared with 10 or 20 years ago.

In social consumption, the bad practices of enjoying luxurious things and showing off one's formalism continue to develop. Wastage is a great obstacle to efforts to increase production results and improve the people's living conditions. In order to do away with such wastage, we must strictly observe the policy of thrift in all links of the national economy and in all aspects of life, from production to distribution, circulation and consumption. The Council of Ministers has set an immediate goal that in 1982 we must seek every way possible to cut down by some 10 percent the consumption of energy, supplies and raw material and other expenditures specified in the plans and budgets approved by the state.

These objectives must be reflected in the everyday activities of all economic sectors in all localities, production units and throughout society. Realities at many establishments show that in many cases, excessive consumption occurs not due to limited economic-technical conditions but, first of all, to laxity in management and the lack of responsibility in spending. By overcoming these tendencies, we can rapidly reduce the consumption of social wealth. To achieve a 10-percent saving, we must cut down on unnecessary or deferrable expenditures and at the same time enforce other measures, especially managerial and technical ones.

Practicing thrift in production is meant to reduce the cost of each product unit in order to make production output increase at a faster rate than production expenses and to enable relatively small sources of reserves, when put into production, to bring about greater results. The practical measures that should be enforced consist of reorganizing the various production branches, building and serving life in a way commensurate with the economic conditions, broadly applying technical innovations and promptly controlling the economy in accordance with set systems, criteria and norms. Every sector, every locality and every establishment must act in accordance with the motto set forth by the ninth plenum of the party Central Committee: With the same or less means and supplies provided by the state, it is necessary to produce more efficiently and create more material wealth.

Achieving a 10-percent saving means that with the current production requirements, we must immediately reduce by 10 percent the consumption of supplies and raw material; or in other words, with the current rate of supply, we must increase by 10 percent or more the volume of production. A 10-percent saving rate is expected of society as a whole. Each sector and echelon must, on the basis of their own specific conditions, set a higher rate.

Thrift in production can only develop its results when it is closely linked with thrift in circulation and consumption. Therefore, we must quickly overcome losses that occur in the process of circulation. Practicing thrift in making budgeted expenditures and abstaining from luxury and wasteful practices in everyday life are actions that must be broadly taken under strict control.

Doing business with economic results and practicing thrift constitutes an important condition for ensuring success in socialist construction. Practicing thrift is a virtue and a socialist way of life.

COMMISSION ASSESSES WEAKNESSES IN CONTROL WORK

BK140614 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 13 Feb 82

[Text] The VCP Central Committee Control Commission has recently held a conference to recapitulate control work in 1981, discuss new tasks for early 1982 and review the promotion and maintenance of discipline at the grassroots level. In 1981 the quality of party members and basic party organizations was further improved through the implementation of various VCP Central Committee policies and resolutions on stepping up all aspects of party-control and party-building work. Through consolidation, many basic party organizations successfully maintained regular activities and discipline and strengthened the management and education of party members. Numerous positive factors and front-rank models emerged.

However, many negative practices were not checked. The number of party members and party organizations violating discipline remained large. In some places, this number even increased over the previous year. The party line and policies and the state law were not scrupulously implemented. In some party organization echelons discipline was still lax. A number of persons who should have been disciplined were not dealt with or were dealt with improperly.

The control commissions at all levels, however, made many efforts to improve the quality of control work in support of various political tasks and party building activities. Compared with previous years, party members violating discipline were dealt with and letters of denunciation taken care of more promptly and more actively. The Binh, Ha Nam Ninh, Vinh Phu, Ha Bac, Quang Ninh, Thanh Hoa, Ha Tuyen, Dac Lac, Quang Nam-Danang and Long An Provinces considered and settled 80-96.7 percent of their disciplinary cases.

The control commissions at all levels also inspected the disciplinary actions taken by subordinate party organizations and their financial activities. This was aimed at helping grassroots-level organizations correctly implement the guidelines on disciplinary actions and rectify errors in budgetary work and in the management and use of property. The implementation of party resolutions and policies and state law in nearly 3,000 party bases was inspected to help party committee echelons correctly appraise situations and rectify shortcomings.

The control commissions at all levels also made numerous efforts to strengthen and improve the contingent of cadres of the control sector; assist party committee echelons in settling complaints; improve the quality of the campaign for promoting and maintaining discipline in basic party organizations; struggle against negative practices, and support the issuance of party membership cards.

Last year's control work, however, was still hampered by shortcomings and failed to meet the requirements of the political and party-building tasks. The quality of denunciation and complaint-settling work was low. Due attention was not paid to dealing with party members violating discipline, to the inspection of disciplinary actions taken by subordinate party organizations or to checking the party's financial work in some places. Violations of discipline were not detected promptly enough to assist party committee echelons in taking disciplinary actions. Control work in a number of important areas and units as well as in some weak party bases was not satisfactorily carried out, thus preventing the control sector from fulfilling its active role in consolidating weak grassroots organizations. The professional skills of control cadres, especially at the district and grassroots levels, were still limited. The campaign for promoting and maintaining party discipline was carried out only in those party bases where favorable conditions existed; attention was not paid to expanding this campaign into average and weak bases and into the party organizations of organs and enterprises.

During the first months of 1982, the control commissions at all levels must concentrate the control sector's forces on supporting the congresses of party organizations at various echelons and the fifth national party congress. They must continue to fulfill their responsibility in the struggle against negativism and in the issuance of party membership cards satisfactorily. They must assist party committee echelons in guiding and promoting the maintenance of discipline, thereby turning this campaign into a broad movement in all basic party organizations.

All localities must combine guiding the discipline-promotion campaign with consolidating the control commissions at the district, city and equivalent levels. They must develop and improve the contingent of cadres for control work at the grassroots level, strengthen management and education, promptly detect and deal with all breaches of discipline and take the initiative in preventing party members from violating party discipline and state law.

MARCOS ADDRESSES MILITARY ALUMNI ON SECURITY

OW171327 Quezon City RPN Television Network in English 1100 GMT 17 Feb 82

[Text] The president stressed today the capability of the government and the armed forces to meet new threats to our security. Speaking this noon before the alumni of the Philippine Military Academy [PMA], the president warned subversives the military is ready to face any exigencies. The president's warning was made with the disclosure of the latest subversive infiltration in labor and student ranks.

On the government's Mindanao policy, the president clarified certain foreign diplomatic reports and innuendos. Jose Carlos reports: [Begin Jose Carlos recording] The president today revealed official documents and the Tripoli agreement and the cease-fire agreement to show that the Philippine Government has not violated these agreements concluded with Libya's Colonel al-Qadhdhafi and the MNLF. The chief executive said he will release these documents, now with the office of the president, (?the Batasan), to stop misinformation being spread in the Middle East by highly placed foreign diplomats. It was urgent to clarify this matter, the president pointed out, because some assemblymen have sought enlightenment on the implementation of the agreements. Addressing the PMA Alumni Association, the president said it is unfair to say that the referendum, called in 1977 in Mindanao, was not in accordance with the Tripoli agreement.

[Begin Marcos recording] It is not, therefore, true, as being spread by some of the better situated and highly placed diplomatic circles, that the referendum was called by me without any authority whatsoever from the Islamic Conference. The Islamic Conference did not only agree to it, they were the ones who authorized it. They authorized the referendum and Colonel al-Qadhdhafi authorized it. He even recommended the questions to be asked in this referendum. It is not also true that Christians now run the autonomous government. [end Marcos recording]

The president pointed out that the MNLF, which was a signatory to the agreement, has repeatedly committed violations resulting, among others, in the (Patikul) and (Pata) massacres where top military officers and men died.

On the role of the PMA and its alumni, the president urged them to continue to be more vigilant, as subversives and insurgents have renewed their violent campaign against the government. The armed forces, he warned, have contingency plans for every threat the enemies of government may pose to the peace and order situation in the country. For KBS News, Jose Carlos at the PICC [Philippine International Convention Center] [end Jose Carlos recording]

JAPAN TO MAKE 'INDEPENDENT JUDGMENT' ON DEFENSE

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 19 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Friday Japan would build up its defense power at its own discretion in disregard of resolutions being introduced before the U.S. Congress calling on Japan to boost its defense. In answer to a question made by Socialist Takahiro Yokomichi in a session of the House of Representatives Budget Committee, Suzuki said the U.S. resolutions were not based on views of the whole American people.

Suzuki said he thought that the U.S. legislative resolutions reflected American complaints arising from huge military budgetary appropriations in the face of the present economic difficulty and Japan's steady but slow defense buildup. The prime minister said Japan's defense policy is established under the Constitution and on the basis of fundamental policies as well as the understanding and support of the people. He added that regardless of the outcome of U.S. legislative resolutions Japan will make its own "independent judgment" on its defense policy.

To solve the pending Japan-U.S. trade friction, Suzuki said the government would deploy a Japan-U.S. diplomacy at lawmakers' level to make the Japanese market better known to U.S. congressmen, promote Japan-U.S. industrial cooperation and set up an ombudsman system on Japan-U.S. trade.

FIRST DAY OF ECONOMIC TALKS WITH ROK ENDS

OW181255 Tokyo KYODO in English 1235 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 18 (KYODO) -- Japanese and South Korean Government officials met here Thursday to discuss Japanese aid for South Korea's five-year economic development projects. The Koreans were reported to have filled the Japanese in on 11 projects that the Seoul government plans to carry out in the five years between 1982 and 1986.

South Korea had earlier asked Japan for dollar six billion in aid. Japan rejected the request, saying the sum was too large.

The Thursday meeting was the first in the current two-day session of working-level talks. The first round of negotiations was held in Seoul last month. The Koreans briefed the Japanese on the projects in response to a Japanese request, according to officials. They said the Koreans did not give concrete reports on the overall five-year plan which reportedly requires dollar 46 billion, nor comment on which projects have priority over others. The officials said the Japanese side will ask the Koreans for more information Friday.

Further on Aid Request

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Feb 19 (KYODO) -- Japan plans to reach an agreement on South Korea's request for Japanese aid at a meeting in Seoul in early May between Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi and his Korean counterpart No Sin-yong, a ranking Foreign Ministry official disclosed Thursday night.

The ministry official said the Korean foreign minister has also expressed the hope to settle the aid problem in the first half of this year. If No's diplomatic schedule is taken into account, the Korean minister may be considering early May as the time for settling the aid problem, the official said. The official's speculation on the holding of a meeting in May between the foreign ministers also is based on the schedule of Foreign Minister Sakurauchi who is due to visit Washington in March and the Diet schedule in April which requires his presence at parliamentary discussions.

Commenting on the aid amount of dollar 6 billion asked by South Korea, the official said it is not so difficult a problem for Japan to deal with because Seoul is requesting the aid under two kinds of loans -- dollar 3.5 billion in yen loans and dollar 2.5 billion in commodity loans.

Observers believe the statements by the official hinted at the possibility of Japan's political consideration in deciding the amount of its commodity loans to South Korea.

The same ministry official said the current second round of working-level talks on the aid issue is being conducted in a good atmosphere. The two-day talks in Tokyo end Friday. But discussions on deciding the aid amount at the working-level negotiations appear to be behind schedule, the official added.

SAKURAUCHI URGES UN LAW OF SEA PACKAGE AGREEMENT

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 19 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Friday he hopes the coming session of the U.N. Conference on the Law of the Sea will produce a package agreement. The 11th session will be held in New York from March 8 through April 30.

At a Cabinet meeting, Sakurauchi said establishment of a "new comprehensive maritime order" at the coming session is essential for Japan's long-term national interests. "We will make efforts so that the U.N. conference will be concluded this time," he said.

The conference, discussing territorial waters, continental shelves, deep sea-bed development and other matters, was expected to come up with a package agreement on a draft treaty during the 10th session last year. But it failed when the United States called for a review of the treaty. The government decided Friday to send a 24-member delegation to the New York meeting, to be headed by Toru Nakagawa, adviser to the Foreign Ministry.

SUZUKI 'PASSIVE' TOWARD 1968 PLEDGE ON F-4

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 19 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki Friday showed a passive attitude toward a decision by a ruling Liberal-Democratic Party body to regard the 1968 government pledge not to equip the F-4 Phantom fighters with bombing capability as having been revised in the meantime due to changes in the international situation.

Suzuki told reporters that the decision made by a joint meeting of the party's National Defense Committee, the Security Research Council and other officials concerned Thursday is subject to be approved by such upper party organs as the Policy Affairs Research Council and the Executive Council.

Diet business has been suspended since last week over the Defense Agency's plan to give an Air Self-Defense Force's F-4 Phantom bombing facility as a test. Opposition parties claimed that the plan contradicted the 1968 pledge which was made by then Defense Agency chief Kaneshichi Masuda when the Phantoms were introduced as Japan's mainstay interceptors.

Meanwhile, the prime minister is reportedly doubtful of the approval of the decision because it might run counter to the government policy to limit the reinforcement of defense forces within the basic defense capability. The decision cited changes in the international situation as a reason for the revision of the pledge and this might lead to an endless military buildup, the source said.

OTO HOLDS FIRST MEETING, DECIDES ON MANAGEMENT

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 19 (KYODO) -- The Office of Trade Ombudsman [OTO], a government mechanism to deal promptly with overseas complaints regarding access to the Japanese market, held the first meeting Thursday at the Prime Minister's Office to decide on its management.

The OTO, formally known as the headquarters for promotion of settlements of grievances related to the openness of the Japanese market, was created within the Economic Planning Agency on February 1 to dispel trade friction with the United States and Europe.

At the meeting, officials decided to:

1. Explain the progress of a case to a complainant within 10 days after the office has accepted the complaint and report monthly on the development when a settlement takes more than one month.
2. Try to set a trustworthy standard for import tests that can be relied on by foreign exporters.
3. Report acceptance and progress of a complaint to a Cabinet meeting for economic measures and at the same time make public the case to news media.

Complaints from foreign countries will be accepted at the Foreign, Finance and Welfare Ministries as well as the Ministry of International Trade and Industry. These ministries will report to the Economic Planning Agency [EPA] every Friday on the complaints they have received by that time, officials said. EPA said it has received five complaints so far, three from domestic importers, one from the United States and another one from Ireland. Two of them were already settled, it said.

OFFICIAL VIEWS NATURAL GAS PROJECT WITH USSR

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 18 (KYODO) -- A senior Foreign Ministry official Thursday expressed doubt that U.S. economic sanctions against the Soviet Union would hold up a joint Japan-Soviet oil and natural gas development project off the coast of Sakhalin. The official was referring to press reports earlier this week suggesting the project might be in jeopardy if U.S. exports of essential equipment are withheld as part of U.S. sanctions imposed against the Soviet Union last December.

The U.S. Government had been notified of Japan's concern, the official said, and it gave no indication that export of parts necessary for the project would be vetoed. He said Japan had explained to the United States that the project was in its final stage and was in that regard "a little different from other projects."

West European countries have called on the Reagan administration to lift restrictions on machinery exports which are threatening to disrupt a Soviet natural gas pipeline project between Western Siberia and Western Europe.

INVESTMENT PROTECTION TALKS TO BE HELD WIT[illegible]

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 19 (KYODO) — Japan and China will hold working-level negotiations on the conclusion of a bilateral agreement on investment protection in Beijing February 24-27, according to the government. It will be the first time for the two countries to hold negotiations of the kind on a full-fledged basis, although they held preliminary talks in May last year.

Japan and China agreed to conclude an investment protection agreement at the first bilateral ministerial conference in December 1980. An investment protection agreement is primarily designed to ensure safe Japanese investments in developing countries still lacking proper legislation for protection of foreign investments. Japan has already signed such an agreement with Egypt and is currently engaged in negotiations for the conclusion of similar accords with members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

At the Beijing talks, Japanese and Chinese officials will exchange views on relevant matters on the basis of draft agreements worked out by the two countries.

U.S. DEPLOYMENT OF A-10 IN SOUTH SCORED

SK190254 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2300 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Text] According to a report, the U.S. imperialists are maneuvering to deploy a squadron of 18 A-10 fighter-bombers at the beginning of March at the U.S. Air Force base in South Korea. On 16 February a spokesman for the U.S. Air Force disclosed this criminal plan.

The U.S. imperialists are conducting propaganda on the advantage of flying at a low altitude and the effectiveness of attacking ground forces possessed by this fighter-bomber. The massive deployment of the sophisticated brigandish plane in South Korea shows that the U.S. imperialists are accelerating their maneuvers to provoke a new war in Korea. They plan to deploy more A-10 fighter-bombers in South Korea at the beginning of next year.

DFRF SUPPORTS 100-MAN REUNIFICATION MEETING

[Talk on 18 February by a spokesman of the Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland -- read by announcer]

[Text] The statement of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] calling for convening a 100-man joint conference composed of politicians from the North, South and abroad who desire national reunification, has aroused great support and sympathy among all Korean compatriots at home and abroad.

The Central Committee of the Democratic Front for the Reunification of the Fatherland [DFRF] fully supports and ardently welcomes the proposal to convene a 100-man joint conference put forward in the statement of the CPRF, regarding it as a patriotic initiative for overcoming the prevailing difficulties on the road to reunification and opening up a new phase for national reunification.

The proposal to convene a 100-man joint conference by politicians from the North, South and abroad is well-timed and realistic in view of the nature of the reunification question and requirements of the current situation. We can prove this by our past experience.

The DFRF Central Committee, from the first day of the nation's division, advanced various measures and proposals which fully accord with the nationwide nature of the reunification question and made every sincere effort for the nation's independent and peaceful reunification.

In February 1948 when the danger of national division was increasing because of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges after the 15 August liberation, we convened the Central Committee of the North Korean Democratic Front for National Reunification and put forward a concrete proposal to establish a democratic government through election of the pan-Korea supreme legislative organ based on democratic principles and by having this organ recognize the Constitution.

In July 1950 when the internal strife became reality in our country, we adopted a letter of appeal for achieving national reunification by conducting a nationwide general election between 5-8 August 1950 and by organizing a unified supreme legislative organ. We dispatched three members of the reunification front to deliver this letter to the South Korean side.

In May 1956 when the Syngman Rhee puppet clique's racket of northward aggression was violent, we proposed to convene a political consultative meeting. In January 1961, we proposed holding negotiations between delegates of the North and the South at Panmunjom or other places to realize economic and cultural exchange, exchange of correspondence and mutual visits by people between the North and the South.

In January 1979, in particular, we announced a statement containing a 4-point proposal including the question of convening a national people's congress and dispatched our side's delegation -- composed of four persons -- to contacts between the liaison delegates of the North and the South to organize the preparatory committee for national reunification. Thus, we made all possible efforts for success of the dialogue.

In August 1981, we cordially proposed convening a national congress for promotion of national reunification composed of representatives of political parties and public organizations between the North and the South and of representatives of compatriots abroad to put into effect the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK], the justness of which was proved and acknowledged at home and abroad, and to discuss various questions on North-South relations. In addition, we advanced various reasonable and just proposals and measures for negotiations toward reunification which correspond with the situation and actively made efforts to realize them. However, none of our reasonable proposals have been realized due to hindering maneuvers by all successive South Korean ruling factions.

The South Korean puppets' criminal maneuvers to hinder national reunification are reaching an extreme stage today. The Chon Tu-hwan group suppressed with bayonets the movement for democracy and reunification which rapidly mounted after the October incident, slaughtered people in cold blood, indiscriminately arrested and imprisoned Kim Tae-chung and many other democratic figures and patriots and punished or executed them through murderous trials in South Korea. It is intensifying more than ever before the confrontation racket against us, raving about victory over communists and about exterminating communism. It is driving the situation to the brink of war by staging a large-scale war exercise such as "Team Spirit 1982."

Siting face to face with such a man at the negotiating table for reunification would be a mockery against the sacred national cause and a treacherous act against the South Korean people.

The existing political parties and public organizations in South Korea are acting as puppets of the ruler by fawning on power without political principle. In such a situation, it is natural that they would not be entitled to take part in the sacred table of dialogue discussing reunification. A consultative organ for national reunification must be a consultative body of those sincerely desirous of reunification, not one of those seeking division.

The proposal of the CPRF to convene a 100-man joint conference is a most reasonable and realistic measure which we can adopt in the current situation for stepping up the cause of national reunification. The 100-man joint conference -- a grand gathering for reunification -- will be a site of democratic negotiation correctly reflecting national aspirations for reunification and an excellent platform for great national unity.

If well-known politicians in the North and South and abroad sit at one place to discuss in an open-hearted way all possible proposals for reunification, including the proposal for founding the DCRK, and problems of collaboration and interchange between the North and South, transcending differences in ideas, systems, political views and religious beliefs, it will be a definite contribution to making a breach in the barrier dividing the country and paving the way to reunification.

We express the hope that politicians in the South and abroad who are concerned about the future of the nation, though under difficult conditions, will actively respond to the patriotic proposal of the CPRF for the convocation of the 100-man joint conference, deeply conscious of the mission they shoulder before time and history.

It is the sacred national right of politicians in the North and South and abroad to participate in the 100-man joint conference to discuss the reunification question -- an important national issue. The South Korean puppets must unconditionally and immediately release jailed political figures including Kim Tae-chung, restore freedom of political activity and provide them with all conditions for participating in the joint conference.

If the South Korean puppets hinder the convocation of the 100-man joint conference, running counter to national aspirations, they will again commit indelible crimes against the fatherland and the people and cannot escape stern judgment by the entire Korean people.

The DFRF Central Committee will make every effort for an early convocation of the joint conference of politicians in the North and South and abroad.

NODONG SINMUN ARTICLE HAILS LEADERSHIP OF KWP

SK162334 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2224 GMT 15 Feb 82

[NODONG SINMUN 16 February article: "Pride Is Growing Over Time"]

[Text] Today our people are living amidst pride and joy growing over time. This is an incomparable pride and joy which our people are experiencing under the rewarding reality in which our revolution is advancing along a single road of victory under the wise leadership of our party and in which the revolutionary chuche cause pioneered on Mt Paektu is victoriously making progress, holding sway over the times.

The struggle spirit and way of life of the anti-Japanese guerrillas who traversed the road of liberation, upholding the great leader, have been inherited intact into today's reality. The whole country is seething with revolutionary zeal. All tasks in party and state work and the tasks in all fields of economic and cultural construction are being smoothly carried out in accordance with the leader's intent. This is the new appearance of our society.

The vast economy is dashing toward the road of leap and innovation amid the flames of speed battle. The joy of the working people freed from arduous labor is overflowing at every site, as seen in the Hwanghae iron and steel complex, where automation has been brilliantly achieved. Many masterpieces which will be brilliantly engraved in the history of mankind are being created in succession, arousing storm-like repercussions in the world. This is the proud reality of our fatherland today. Under this proud reality, in which a new history of creation and innovation is being forged, our people are singing of the glory they enjoy under the leadership of our party and the source of their powerful life.

The beginnings of this life and its blooming are thanks to the bosom of our party. Because of this bosom, our life will shine eternally. The glory and pride of our people, who greeted the brilliant first dawn of the great era bestowed by the immortal chuche idea and its shining rays and who have created and experienced the brilliant reality in which the ideal of chuche is blooming beautifully! This is indeed the incomparable glory and pride which our people have been able to enjoy by upholding the great leader and the glorious party center.

There is an old saying that a prosperous house has many guests. Countless foreigners from every place in the world are coming to visit our fatherland, where unprecedented progress is being made in the revolution and construction under the brilliant rays of guidance. Deeply impressed by the successes attained in the political, economic and cultural fields and by the lofty spiritual and moral traits of our people, foreign guests are unanimously praising the might of our party's leadership in creating in Korea such a brilliant reality.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: Our party has enjoyed absolute support and trust from all the Korean people and the international working class because of its devoted service to the fatherland and the people and its immortal exploits performed before the history and the mankind.

One day last summer a car was on a wide road leading to downtown Pyongyang from the airport on the outskirts of the city. A middle-aged foreigner was in the car. He was looking with surprise at street scenes through the car window. This man was a noted foreign reporter who has visited our country frequently since the fatherland liberation war. He had last visited Korea in the late 1970's. What miracle has made such a great change in Korea in only a few years, which cannot be considered a long time in the history of a country?

His first impression of this change was deeply moving. The next day he toured many places in Pyongyang where great monuments stand. He expressed his surprise, saying that the ability and wisdom of human beings to create these monuments is hardly believable. Later, when he had an opportunity to see the reality of the Korean economy, he was greatly moved to find its potential and the miraculous speed of its development.

One day, he went on the Pyongyang-Wonsan highway to go around to regional areas. Spread out before him was an endlessly picturesque scene -- mountains, fields, valleys, tunnels -- covering an area of several hundred li.

He was lost deep in thought the whole time on the highway where he was able to keenly feel again Korea's economic might. As soon as he arrived in Wonsan, he told our workers in excitement: the KWP has made truly great achievements in the glorious struggle to carry out the revolutionary cause of chuche. All achievements that the Korean people have made in socialist construction under your party's leadership are worthy of special mention in this centruy.

His remarks had deep meaning. In recent years, he had closely observed the development of the world economy with his keen journalistic insight. The 1970's was a difficult decade in which mankind was faced with numerous problems. Catastrophic economic recession and abnormal weather conditions threatening people's existence swept over the world. Rural areas suffered numerous calamities; economies were in depression and crisis.

The prospects for the 1980's, ushered in along with the complicated problems of the 1970's, were still gloomy. Thus, a pessimistic view, full of anxiety and apprehensions over the future of the world's economy, had arisen. Even a new Malthusianism, that surplus population should be eliminated, had become powerful.

He could not constrain his admiration and seething adoration for the might of the leadership of the KWP, which has correctly led Korea to the brilliant present.

Extraordinary wisdom -- with which the KWP is always leading the revolution and construction to victory, continuously putting forth correct struggle slogans properly reflecting the demands of revolutionary development and the masses' aspirations and putting forth correct ways to accomplish them.

Skillful organizational capability -- with which the KWP is managing the entire party, the whole country, all the people and the entire army as one and is achieving innovations and upsurges in all sectors by grasping and guiding all party and state affairs while giving detailed and careful guidance to every sector.

Extraordinary driving force -- with which the KWP is leading the revolution and construction to endless upsurges by dealing with all problems from a realistic point of view, pushing ahead with the work of coping with problems by bold and audacious planning after always setting goals high and carrying out assigned tasks with unprecedentedly high speed and at the highest level.

The more he knew about Korea's proud reality under the glorious leadership of the party, which is leading our revolution and people to victory after having brilliantly inherited the revolutionary cause of chuche pioneered by the great leader, the more he, the journalist, was burning with excitement and an appetite for writing.

Before leaving, he emotionally said to the workers: A reporter is not one who just writes about a scene of action. A reporter should introduce the true nature of facts to the world.

He continued: I published a book about the secret of the great changes in Korea after having visited your country a few years ago. Though I wrote it with zeal and sincerity, I now find that the book lacks substance. Without noting the KWP's leadership, no one can say that he has grasped all the secrets of the miracles being brought about in Korea. I am going to emphasize this point in my new book, which I will write in my country.

Anyone who has visited this land will, of his own accord, introduce the reality of Korea. This is a vivid case which demonstrates the glory and pride of our people under the great party's leadership.

Those who visit Korea today experience excitement at the sight of new type of men who have noble ideological and spiritual traits. A few days ago, the delegation of a country visited a cooperative farm while touring local areas. Delegation members met a young scientist who, for a decade, has devoted his life to research work on paddyfields. Studying his sunburned face -- a face which seemed to belie his status as a scientist -- they asked him to explain his view of life, especially of his youth devoted to research work in a rural area. Calmly listening to this question, wiping drops of sweat on his forehead with his sleeve, the young scientist said: Our youth is valuable because we can do more work for the fatherland and the people. Living in Korea, we consider it our great happiness, glory and pleasure to devote our entire lifetime to faithfully defending the revolutionary outpost the great leader has assigned to us.

These remarks greatly moved the guests. They realized that a great change had taken place in the ideological and spiritual trait of the Korean people. They pondered over the secret of the proud achievments in Korea. They experienced excitement when they understood during their stay in Korea the unique policy set forth by our party -- a profound and unique theory and policy for developing all members of society into true chuche-type communists by reforming men's ideology and consciousness to complete the cause of communism -- the cause of imbuing society with the chuche idea -- based on the principle that man's ideology is the basis of the revolutionary struggle and construction work and that men decide everything.

Based on the profound insight and scientific analysis that loyalty to the leader and the party is the basic trait of chuche-type revolutionaries and that this trait is a key to successfully solving all questions in imbuing society with the chuche idea, concrete tasks have been performed to implement a unique policy of placing emphasis on loyalty indoctrination in ideological work. Thanks to the policies for solving questions concerning the remodelling of men with profound insight into people's spiritual and moral traits, we see today the emergence of a great force of proud chuche-type men -- the ranks of loyal people -- just as a flower garden thrives in a sunny place. This force is developing with each passing day.

Our party has ushered in a great heyday of revolution and construction with outstanding leadership and has materialized the chuche idea. Its greatness rests with the fact that it has brilliantly spread the respected and beloved leader's revolutionary idea and displayed mature wisdom and benevolence in embracing our people with the endlessly noble morality of the leader.

All theories and policies set forth by our party thoroughly reflect the basic stand and requirement for inheriting and completing the chuche revolutionary cause developed by the great leader -- the originator of the Korean revolution -- and for successfully implementing the leader's plan and intent. These theories and policies are comprehensive, diverse and profound developments and enrichments of the great leader's ideological and theoretical methodology to meet the requirements for imbuing society with the chuche idea. These theories and policies include revolutionary theories on all sectors of revolution and construction, such as theories on the construction of a chuche-type party, on speed battle and on the creation of revolutionary literature and arts. They are the collection of the precious revolutionary achievements and experiences attained by the great leader and the achievements and experiences attained by our party in inheriting and developing the revolutionary cause.

The bosom of our party is a benevolent, motherly one which unsparingly devotes everything to the cause of the people's freedom and happiness and for their affluent and civilized life.

Our people, who are accelerating the revolution along the path of chuche with firm faith and fighting spirit, are unanimously upholding and following the glorious party, which is excellently leading the struggle for the revolutionary chuche cause, calling it the star of guidance of chuche.

The expression "the star of guidance of chuche is overflowing with the infinite trust in the glorious party center," which elucidates the path of revolution by embodying the revolutionary ideology of the great leader, also reflects praise of the greatness of the party center.

These stories have been handed down as a legend, arousing enthusiastic reverence and reactions among the people. Last March, a South Korean publication reported that a 15-year-old-boy residing in Yanggu, Kangwon Province as a farm servant was arrested at a South Korean Army guard post while attempting to come to the bosom of the republic. Among the boy's personal effects which were confiscated, the publication reported, was a handbill praising the star of guidance. The boy was reportedly bereft of his parents when he was in primary school and was left an orphan. After having wandered about in search of a living, he came to a relative's house where he heard about the star of guidance and learned the song praising it. Since then, he made up his mind to cherish a new hope -- to live happily in a reunified land. In February, he finally made up his mind to leave the house for the northern half of the republic with a burning sentiment of reverance. This one fact implies many things.

The legend of the general star of Mt Paektu related that in the dark period prior to national liberation, the general star became a ray of salvation and hope, led public sentiment to Mt Paektu, protected our nation from the Japanese imperialists' brutal oppression and melted the frozen minds of our people.

The legend was born anew everyday, and everywhere it was handed down, the people's firm determination cemented their unity around the great leader. Today the story about the star of guidance of chuche has been handed down as a beautiful legend; and the South Korean people longing for the northern half of the republic are seething with the same emotion and joy as they had prior to national liberation: the firm faith and belief that the future of the fatherland and nation will be firmly guaranteed and that the historic cause of national reunification will be expedited; the faith to advance along the path of loyalty forever, cherishing in the heart the ray of this star of guidance; the firm faith and determination which cannot be blocked by the point of a bayonet! Because of such faith, the story about the star of guidance of chuche is blooming eternally and spreading throughout South Korea today.

The star of guidance which elucidates for the people a genuine road toward their independent and creative life: The ray of this great and benevolent star of guidance bestows a strong will of struggle and hope for a brilliant future in the hearts of the people.

The voices of emotion and joy, reverbersting from the sites of international seminars on the chuche idea, are ones praising the great leader and the star of guidance. The radio waves coming to Korea contain messages of congratulations at the glory of enjoying the promising future of mankind.

It was when an announcement of the convocation of the historic Sixth KWP Congress was made public. For the people desiring to build a communist society under the banner of the chuche idea, this announcement was a great felicitous occasion signalling an historic event to guarantee the realization of this desire. At a time when all people were eagerly awaiting the historic day of glory to come, a politician in Latin America sent to our party, 10 days before the congress, a letter of loyalty congratulating us on the historic event.

October 10, 1980, dawned amid the enthusiastic emotion of all people. The eyes of the participants at the historic Sixth KWP Congress looked up to the rostrum. One of the foreign guests at the congress expressed his excitement: At this moment, as we hold in high esteem the star of guidance which will elucidate an eternal and happy future with the chuche idea like the shining sun, our hearts are filled with infinite emotion and joy. Today's event is not only an infinitely happy one for the Korean people but is also the greatest, happiest day for the progressive people of the world.

That moment, when the hearts of the participants were overflowing with deep emotion and joy, was indeed a moment of glory when the scene greeting the brilliant sunrise of chuche was again unfolded. As the sentiment of this glory is becoming stronger, people are spreading a new and beautiful story about the star of guidance of chuche.

The story of the star of guidance of chuche is blooming in the hearts of all people and is arousing infinite gratitude and joy among them. All people want to convey it to others whenever they hear it. Whenever it is conveyed among people, the story of the star of guidance of chuche becomes fresher.

Indeed, because of our people's glory in upholding the bright star of guidance together with the sun of chuche, our era is indeed glorious. Because we live, cherishing the brilliant rays of the star of guidance, the future of our fatherland and the revolution is bright and promising.

SOSC TO PROPOSE 'SPORTS TALKS' TO NORTH KOREA

SK190124 Seoul THE KOREA HERALD in English 19 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Text] The Seoul Olympic Support Committee (SOSC) plans to propose "sports talks" to North Korea before the 1986 Asian and 1988 Olympic Games, Minister of State for National Security and Diplomacy No Tae-u said yesterday.

In testimony before the National Assembly ad hoc committee for the 1988 Olympics, No, who concurrently serves as SOSC vice chairman, said "our brethren in North Korea" will be invited to the forthcoming world sports event. The SOSC will seek sports exchanges between South and North Korea, and will ensure that athletes from communist countries will enter Seoul through the truce village of Panmunjom, he said.

Brisk negotiations will be launched to induce communist and nonaligned countries to take part in the upcoming Seoul Olympics. Moves by North Korea to prevent communist and nonaligned countries from participating in the world sports event will be forestalled, he said. The government will take advantage of the occasion to establish diplomatic relations with nonaligned nations which have yet to establish diplomatic ties with Seoul, he said.

He said the catchphrase for the 1988 Seoul Olympics will be the festival of unity and reconciliation for all the world nations. To help conduct the world sports festival successfully, the committee will mount what he called an Olympic saemaul (new community) drive, he said. The minister revealed that the 1988 Seoul Olympics will be made the largest in scale with the largest number of countries attending. Political considerations will be expelled from the Seoul sports festival during which Korea will seek to improve relations with North Korea and other communist countries, he said. Korea, he said, will utilize the sports event as an occasion to achieve another remarkable economic development, and enter the ranks of developed countries and settle peace on the Korean Peninsula. Efforts will be exerted to reap the utmost results from the event at the least cost to demonstrate the uniqueness of Korea's culture to the people of the world, he said.

In the meantime Kim Yong-sik, chairman of the Seoul Olympics Organizing Committee (SOOC), said an estimated 10,000 athletes from 140 countries are expected to compete in 23 events in the 1988 Seoul Summer Olympic Games. Kim said the world sports festival will be held for 16 days starting Sept. 20, 1988.

Preparations are under way to accommodate 10,000 athletes, 3,000 officials, coaches and 11,000 mass media people, Kim said. He also predicted that 250,000-300,000 foreign tourists are expected to visit Korea for the Seoul Olympics.

SK190132 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 2300 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Report from Hong Kong by KBS correspondent Song Chang-kil]

[Text] It is learned that puppet North Korea will convene the Supreme People's Assembly [SPA] on 28 February and put Kim Chong-il -- son of Kim Il-song -- in the position of head of the vice presidents.

The Hong Kong weekly FAR EASTERN ECONOMIC REVIEW today reports: The SPA of puppet North Korea is preparing to put Kim Chong-il in the position of head of the three vice presidents through a formal election. This will legalize Kim Chong-il's status as political successor to his father Kim Il-song. The report says that Kim Chong-il has already seized political power in puppet North Korea. Puppet North Korea is upholding Kim Chong-il's leadership at home and abroad. Besides Communist China, the Soviet Union, which has been reluctant to recognize Kim Chong-il as successor to Kim Il-song, has recently made remarks recognizing Kim Chong-il as the successor through their envoys in Pyongyang.

The FAR EASTERN ECONOMIC REVIEW adds: Puppet North Korea's political reshuffle expected at the forthcoming SPA is an important step to be taken to settle the question of Kim Chong-il's succession and is aimed at ensuring his status as successor prior to Kim Il-song's 70th birthday.

NUCLEAR-FUEL-PROCESSING FIRM TO BE SET UP IN 1982

[Text] The government plans to set up a nuclear fuel processing company this year in order to meet the future nuclear fuel demands from eight nuclear power plants now under construction, Minister of Science and Technology Yi Chong-o said yesterday.

In a briefing to President Chon Tu-hwan on his ministry's major policies and projects for this year, Yi said that his ministry will promote the construction of a nuclear fuel processing facility with the annual production capacity of 200 tons by 1988. He said his ministry will produce nuclear fuel by processing low-quality uranium ore. By the domestic production of atomic fuel, Korea will save some 440 million a year, Yi explained. The eight nuclear power plants are light-water-type reactors introduced from the United States and France.

For the heavy-water-type plant which is now under construction in Wolsong, Yi said, experimental atomic fuel will be made from next year. The technology for its mass production will be developed by 1986, he said.

In addition to local production of atomic fuel, Yi said, his ministry will promote the development of nuclear power plant planning and equipment production technology. By the plan, the ministry will establish a nuclear power plant planning company this year in cooperation with Bechtel, a U.S. engineering firm. His ministry will also train more than 1,500 planning specialists by 1986, Yi said. The ministry will promote the plan so that by 1986 some 80 percent of the nuclear power plants to be built in Korea will be designed by Korean engineers, Yi said.

Major research and development projects to be conducted this year, he said, include fine chemistry, robotics, development of IC's for video tape recorders and development of nuclear fuel production technology for heavy-water-type reactors, Yi explained. Technology for the utilization of low quality coal, food production, and energy saving will also be included, he added.

For the projects, Yi defined, a total of 39.7 billion won will be invested this year alone. In order to improve the welfare of scientists and engineers, Yi said, one billion won welfare fund will be established this year. The fund will be used to provide researchers with housing and other conveniences, Yi explained.

His ministry will expand its overseas studies program in order to assist qualified people to learn the advanced technologies of the more developed countries immediately, Yi said. This year, 175 people will be sent to advanced countries and by 1986, about 2,700 will go, he said. Meanwhile, 150 experts will be introduced from developed countries this year and by 1986, 2,250 experts will be invited, Yi said.

His ministry will also intensify technical cooperation with developing and underdeveloped countries, especially with ASEAN countries and Saudi Arabia, Yi explained. Some 200 people from the ASEAN countries will be trained in Korea and while nine Korean experts will be sent there this year. The program includes training 47 students from a Saudi Arabian engineering college, he said.

For the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul, Yi said, his ministry plans to give technical support such as computerization of data management, and other business which require high technology.

AFP: SON SANN REJECTS SIHANOUK SUMMIT PROPOSAL

NC181444 Paris AFP in English 1432 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Text] Paris, 18 Feb (AFP) -- Former Cambodian Premier Son Sann said here today he is opposed to the Cambodian resistance summit recently proposed by former head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk and Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan.

"I shall be going to Beijing at a date to be agreed on," Mr Son Sann told a press conference, "but I shall not take part in the proposed summit."

He said that the Khmer People's National Liberation Front (KPNLF), which he heads, sticks by its agreement to form a "flexible coalition" of the anti-Vietnamese resistance.

(The Khmer Rouge have however mainly rejected the idea and have proposed a Beijing summit to work out a new formula for creating a united front of the three resistance forces -- themselves, the KPNLF, and Sihanouk supporters.)

The KPNLF, Mr Son Sann said, still seeks a political solution to the Cambodian problem. He said there were 114,000 persons living in the KPNLF zone at the end of last November. The KPNLF forces consisted of 9,000 armed men and 3,000 men awaiting weapons.

Most of the leaders in Phnom Penh had been trained in Vietnam, he said. In 1954, he added, the Vietnamese took with them at least 4,000 Cambodian intellectuals, who married Vietnamese women.

AFP REPORTS INDOCHINESE PEACE PROPOSAL REJECTED

BK190700 Hong Kong AFP in English 0630 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Bangkok, 19 Feb (AFP) -- Thailand today rejected regional peace talks proposals put forward by the communist-ruled Indochinese states following a meeting of their foreign ministers in Vientiane earlier this week. Addressing a press conference, Thai Foreign Ministry spokesman Chet Sutcharitkun said the offer for a partial withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia "contravenes" a United Nations resolution calling for the total, unconditional withdrawal of foreign forces from that country.

Describing his comments as Thailand's "preliminary views," Mr Chet dismissed a call for a demilitarised zone along the Thai-Cambodian border as inappropriate. Saying that the Cambodian conflict pitted Vietnam against Cambodian nationalist forces, he counter-proposed the establishment of a demilitarised zone along the Cambodian-Vietnamese border.

The spokesman rejected another aspect of the Indochinese proposal for regional talks between Cambodia, Laos and Vietnam and the non-communist Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN), stressing that Thailand regarded Cambodia as an international issue.

Vietnam should take up the question with the United Nations ad hoc committee on Cambodia if it were genuinely interested in solving the Cambodian problem, he added.

"The war in Cambodia is a no-win situation for Vietnam," he said. "For its own sake and the sake of other countries in the region, it must compromise," he added.

The spokesman affirmed that the ASEAN states of Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand would hold "consultations" before giving a formal reply to the Indochinese proposals.

Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan, here today to discuss Cambodia, would exchange views on the proposals with Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila, the spokesman said.

The Indochinese foreign ministers of Hanoi, Vientiane and Phnom Penh put forward the proposals after meeting in the Laotian capital -- the fifth such gathering since Vietnamese-led forces toppled the Khmer Rouge leadership in January 1979.

SPOKESMAN GIVES VIEWS ON VIENTIANE COMMUNIQUE

BK191130 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Chet Sutcharitkun, director general of the Foreign Ministry Information Department, revealed his 6-point opinion concerning the communique issued at the 5th conference of Indochinese foreign ministers in Vientiane. He said:

1. The proposal is at variance with the UN resolution which calls for the total, unconditional withdrawal of foreign troops from Kampuchea.

2. The proposal for stabilizing the Thai-Kampuchean border only twists the words of the demilitarized zone proposal made earlier by the Indochinese countries. Besides, the Kampuchean problem is a problem between Vietnam and Kampuchea and such a zone should be along the Vietnamese-Kampuchean border.

3. The conflict in Kampuchea is an international problem, not one between Thailand and Vietnam.

4. Vietnam should negotiate with the UN ad hoc committee in charge of solving the Kampuchean problem.

5. The recent dialogue between the Thai and Indian sides, although yielding satisfactory results for the effort to solve the Kampuchean problem, brought about no changes in the Vietnamese attitude.

6. Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila will hold discussions with Singapore Foreign Minister Suppiah Dhanabalan, in his capacity of chairman of the ASEAN standing committee today on the new proposals of the Indochinese countries before making an official reply.

Asked about returning the Vietnamese transport plane to Vietnam, Chet said the Foreign Ministry has no additional information on this matter the details of which will be made public by the Supreme Command headquarters after the investigation is complete.

NATION REVIEW DISCUSSES REGIONAL CONFERENCE ISSUE

[From "Bangkok Diary" column: "Open Letter From Khun Sa? BBC in a Rare Mess-up...."]

[Excerpt] It could have been a slip of the tongue but the Foreign Ministry and the BBC were exchanging denials this week over a story attributed to Deputy Foreign Minister Arun Phanuphong who was quoted as saying that Thailand had agreed to a "regional conference" to resolve the Kampuchean issue.

That prompted a vehement denial on Wednesday from the Thai Foreign Office which said that Arun had said no such thing whatsoever. In fact, considering the context of the situation, Arun didn't even say anything to any effect on that day.

Bangkokian [presumably the reporter] was present at the weekly press conference at the ministry and could tell you how the mess-up got started.

Director General Chet Sutcharitkun of the Information Department, Foreign Ministry, was talking to reporters who were asking about the outcome of talks between visiting Indian Foreign Minister Narasimha Rao who had just paid a visit to Hanoi.

Somewhere along the line, Chet was heard to have told reporters that Thailand would agree to a "regional conference" to settle the issue of Kampuchea. That, apparently, was something worth a great deal of attention since Thailand and other ASEAN countries had all along rejected the Vietnam-proposed regional conference concept, arguing that an international conference was already in the process of finding a negotiated settlement to the problem. Besides, the Kampuchea issue, with the involvement of China and the Soviet Union, had been "internationalized" and that a regional conference would get nowhere.

But no reporters questioned Chet on the spot on that. BBC apparently rushed to report the quote, attributing the statement to the wrong person, and added an interpretative line that Thailand might have changed its policy since it had agreed to the "regional conference" proposed by Vietnam earlier.

Bangkokian remembered calling up Chet that same night at his house to double-check the statement since I sensed that something must have gone wrong somewhere.

Chet admitted that he had misspoken and that what he meant was "regional dialogue" and not "regional conference" that Thailand had always agreed to -- and there is a great area of difference between the two.

We ended up not reporting the statement since it contained nothing new. The BBC "scooped" us all, and got the Foreign Ministry to say it was not a scoop after all...

Well, nobody is to blame. It was one of those things we reporters are used to anyway.

TRUONG CHINH ARTICLE ON PRC EXPANSIONISM

Parts 1, 2, 3

[This article was also published by Hanoi QAN DOI NHAN DAN on 17 February]

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 17 -- NHAN DAN today carries an article signed by Truong Chinh, member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Vietnam and president of the Council of State, and titled, "The Vietnamese People Are Determined To Defeat any Aggressive Schemes of Chinese Expansionism and Hegemony." The article, in five parts, is occasioned by the third anniversary of the victory over the Chinese aggression in 1979. Following are parts one, two and three:

-1-

The war of aggression made by the Chinese army against our country three years ago and its humiliating defeat will go down forever in history as an important victory of the Vietnamese people and the world's people as a whole for peace, national independence, democracy and social progress, and also as one of the dirtiest actions of the reactionary clique in the Beijing leadership.

On February 17, 1979, the leaders of the Government of the People's Republic of China openly launched a brutal aggression against Vietnam, a socialist, independent, sovereign country whose decades-long struggle for national liberation had always been closely related to the fight of the Chinese people and had actively contributed to the defence of the southern part of the Chinese mainland.

This out-and-out war of aggression, however, was conducted by Beijing under the signboard of an "offensive in self-defence" to "protect the border" against "Vietnamese provocations and aggression against China!" Who could be convinced that the Vietnamese people, who were fresh from a long and extremely difficult anti-aggression war for independence and freedom, who are still bearing many battle wounds, and who valued nothing more than peace to rebuild their country and build for themselves a happy life free from want and care, were sending their troops in an aggression against a neighbouring country many times bigger? Nobody could believe this, not even the people in power in Beijing, whatever they might be saying.

This way of aggression of the expansionists and hegemonists in Beijing was designed to be as a strategic deployment to catch Vietnam in a crossfire in order to surround and annex it from two directions -- from the southwest, with a "special war" undertaken by the puppet Pol Pot army, and from the north, with a direct war conducted by the Chinese army; yet Beijing was claiming that Vietnam, as a "minor hegemony," was "invading and bullying Kampuchea," and had to be "punished" and taught a "lesson" to "explode the myth of an ever-victorious Vietnam!" The outcome of the war, as we could see, was that it was Beijing, not Vietnam, that was taught a good lesson!

The fact was that the war of aggression made by Beijing in February 1979 had been planned for a long time, and the reason for its being launched has neither the victories of the Vietnam People's Army along Vietnam's southwestern border, nor its assistance to the Kampuchean people in liberating Phnom Penh in January 7th that year. Even so, that war revealed Beijing's passivity and confusion in deploying and carrying out its two-pronged strategic plan. As revealed by an American source, Geng Biao, now minister of defence, said in January 1979 that under the devastating onslaught of the Vietnam People's Army in coordination with the attacks and uprisings of the People's Revolutionary Army of Kampuchea, the puppet clique of Pol Pot and Ieng Sary had lost Phnom Penh seven months earlier than expected.

This was a war of aggression of a fairly large scale ever conducted since the end of the Second World War. It has very sinister objectives, but was described as an "operation limited in time and space" with "limited objectives!" Beijing wanted to hoodwink public opinion and, by diversionary tactics and deception, to blunt the vigilance of our army and people with the "limits" of the war. This, it hoped, would give it the benefit of surprise and also a chance to save its face in case of a hurried retreat.

In practice Beijing fielded almost 600,000 regular troops, including 11 army corps and many unattached divisions, about 700 aircraft of various kinds, almost 600 tanks, armoured vehicles, and thousands of artillery pieces. At the same time all the great military regions were ordered to stand by. In strength the invasion army almost doubled the U.S. forces at the height of the Korean war (1950-1953) and by far exceeded the number of U.S. combat troops during the peak of the U.S. war of aggression in Vietnam (U.S. troop strength was 327,000 in the Korean war, and 549,500 in the Vietnam war. Israel, in its aggression against Egypt, Syria and Jordan in 1967, fielded 100,000 troops).

The Chinese aggressors launched attacks the length of Vietnam's northern border, from Quang Ninh Province to Lai Chau Province, with concentration on the provinces of Lang Son, Cao Bang and Hoang Lien Son. Big forces were used in "human wave tactics" and attacks followed attacks in an effort to smash our defences and occupy the towns of Cao Bang, Lang Son and Lao Cai within a few days and then deploy further on our territory. Units of the "Chinese People's Liberation Army" committed intolerable crimes everywhere, destroying towns, villages, factories, schools and hospitals, killing women and children in an utterly inhuman manner, looting and committing arson. Their crimes were reminiscent of the fascist "scorched earth policy".

One wonders what the 600,000 Chinese troops would have done if they had not been violently intercepted and severely punished by our army and people. Would they have stopped at our border towns and then would have withdrawn willingly? Or would they have moved further? War develops according to its own logic and with the subjective assistance of the belligerent parties. Have there been any generals, who, in leading their armies, failed to seize a good occasion to press attacks and follow up exploits in order to win resounding, unexpected victories? How could it be that the people in power in Beijing did not have such ambitions? So it was clear that our own efforts and great international support decided the outcome of the war in our favour. The fight put up by our army and people with great courage and sacrifices on the northern border received a devoted assistance from the whole country. It had the effect of stopping all enemy advances and forcing the aggressors to withdraw in shame. It put a stop to the war in a manner favourable to Vietnam, and dashed all arrogant ambitions of the reactionary rulers in China.

A few people, not knowledgeable, were astounded by the Chinese invasion in Vietnam. But the fact was that China had long harboured this dirty scheme, and Vietnam, with initiative, had prepared for the eventually of a war provoked by China from the north.

Certain circles in the West are still speaking abut this as a "fight between communist countries," saying that it showed that "differences on national interests have prevailed over ideological unity in the socialist countries!" No. This author, in an article called Ve Van de Cam-pu-chia (on Kampuchea) published in November 1979, gives the main outlines of the nature of the reactionary clique within the Beijing leadership, and speaks about their schemes and actions to annex Kampuchea and oppose Vietnam and Laos for hegemony over Indochina and expansion to Southeast Asia. The present article will deal with a number of historical facts of the Sino-Vietnamese relations and with Beijing's long-standing schemes and premeditated actions against Vietnam, thereby pointing to the reactionary nature of the present Beijing leaders who are following "post-Mao Maoism" or "Maoism without Mao."

As it had already been known, the Vietnamese people and the Chinese people, in long revolutionary struggles against imperialism, their common enemy, supported and assisted each other and joined efforts in building a friendship between two nations with "common mountains and common rivers." Together with the Soviet people and the peoples of other fraternal socialist countries the Chinese people gave Vietnam a great support and assistance which will be forever remembered by the Vietnamese people. A completely new chapter opened in the histories of the two nations with the advent of the new era in the human society. Old hatred engendered by aggressions committed by feudal China were gradually forgotten. Owing to historical and geographical conditions in Vietnam and China, especially to the international situation at the beginning of this century, very close relations were established between the Vietnamese revolution and the Chinese revolution: Vietnamese revolutionaries, especially Nguyen Ai Quoc (Ho Chi Minh), in their quest for a way to save their country, espoused Marxism-Leninism and took the Vietnamese revolution along the path charted by Lenin. In pursuing the cause of national liberation under the leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam, Vietnamese revolutionaries primarily learned from the experiences of the Russian October Revolution and from the experiences of the Soviet people in many fields. At the same time they benefited from the experiences of the Chinese revolution, the French revolution, etc. The Communist Party of Vietnam applied with fluency the universal theories of Marxism-Leninism to the concrete situation in Vietnam, thereby charting a correct, creative course for the Vietnamese revolution and taking it from one victory to another. History over the past decades shows that certain number of leaders of the Chinese revolution headed by Mao Zedong, while continuing to assist the Vietnamese revolution -- a thing which they could hardly desist from while imperialism remained their enemy -- continued to harbour their expansionist and hegemonistic dream toward Vietnam just as the Chinese emperors did in the past. And they pursued this sinister design by capitalizing on the assistance full of proletarian internationalism of the Chinese people to the Vietnamese revolution. Furthermore, these schemes and acts were dissimulated under the cloak of "revolution" and "Marxism." Mao Zedong's thought, even when it still played a certain role in the democratic revolution in China -- a positive role in the struggle against imperialism and feudalism, which, however, was limited by the ideologies of the petty bourgeoisie and bourgeoisie -- already gradually revealed its non-proletarian nature. In particular, after the People's Republic of China was born and embarked on the period of socialist revolution, Mao Zedong's thought became reactionary. It has revealed itself more and more as a medley of the the ideologies of many different non-proletarian classes and social strata, from the peasantry, petty bourgeoisie and bourgeoisie to the feudal landlords, which has nothing in common with Marxism-Leninism and scientific socialism. This hodge-podge, however, has been camouflaged under Marxist terminologies. It is actually aimed at opposing Marxism-Leninism, socialism and the independence of nations, driven by the foolish ambition of ruling over the whole of our planet. Mao's global strategy may be summed up in the following major objectives:

1. To make Maoism replace Marxism-Leninism.

2. To make the Chinese Communist Party the leading party of the revolutionary movement of the working class and people throughout the world.

3. To make China the centre of the world ruling the whole planet.

To realize these ambitions, it is essential that China must be strong and stronger than the Soviet Union. Accordingly, China has entered into strategic alliance with imperialism headed by the United States, and has asked the United States and the other imperialist powers to help it in its "modernization" program including tbe modernization of the army.

What is the most prominent feature of Maoism? It is expansionism and the doctrine of Greater Han hegemonism. This is actually big-nation chauvinism, a type of bourgeois nationalism heavily seasoned with the feudalist ideology born at a very early date from the historical and geographic conditions of ancient China. It lingered through medieval China, sustained humiliating defeats in the modern times when China was parcelled out by the colonialist and imperialist forces and reared its head again in modern China following the victory of the Chinese revolution of 1949, thanks to the impact of Marxism-Leninism and the inexorable trend of our era.

In the present era when the working class has become the central figure of society and socialism has become the inevitable development of human society, the Greater Han Ideology becomes Mao Zedong Thought decked out as Sino-rized Marxism-Leninism with the illusion of transforming China into the centre of world revolution and building a Chinese-type socialism as opposed to scientific socialism of Marxism-Leninism.

In fact, during the many decades of assisting the Vietnamese revolution, Mao Zedong and his followers in the leadership of the Chinese Communist Party deftly played the "Vietnam card" with a view to attaining the status of a big power on an equal footing with the other big powers in the world. They contained and used pressure on Vietnam when giving it aid, and sought every possible means to control Vietnam and drag it into China's orbit in order to have its hold on Vietnam and thereby to control Indochina and expand to the whole of Southeast Asia. During the war imposed by the French colonialists and later during the war launched by U.S. imperialism against Vietnam, they applied a policy of keeping Vietnam from either winning or losing, and permanently divided in order to serve as a buffer between China and imperialism. They wanted Vietnam never to grow strong, instead to remain always dependent on China.

During the Vietnamese people's war against French colonialism, when the possibility had been opened for the Vietnamese army and people, following the Dien Bien Phu victory, to push the offensive ahead and liberate the whole country, Beijing stepped out to act as the main negotiator with the French colonialists and compromised with them on a solution which benefited only China and France and was detrimental to Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea. It pressured Vietnam into accepting a solution which did not fully reflect Vietnam's victory and the balance of force between Vietnam and the enemy on the battlefield at the time. Beijing intentionally limited Vietnam's victory, sacrificed the interests of the peoples of the three Indochinese countries so that China might have a peaceful environment to build itself into a super-power and also to carry out step by step its scheme of weakening and eventually controlling the Indochinese countries, as part of its strategy of pushing southward into Southeast Asia.

Through the above diplomatic move, China also aimed to win international recognition as a country on a par with the four big powers, standing members of the United Nations Security Council, and therefore acquired a major role in the settlement of international issues, first of all issues in Asia. In the Vietnamese people's fight against the U.S. imperialists, China at first attempted to prevent Vietnam from carrying out the struggle to achieve national reunification by pressuring it into accepting the theory of "prolonged ambush" in southern Vietnam. It did not approve of the Vietnamese people in the south undertaking an armed uprising and a revolutionary war to overthrow the neo-colonialist rule of the United States.

Even in the early sixties China still tried to draw Vietnam into opposing the Soviet Union in an attempt to "assume the leadership of the world revolution". But it did not succeed. While loudly denouncing U.S. imperialism, Beijing had in fact given the green light to the United States to launch a direct war of aggression in both parts of Vietnam with Mao Zedong making his notoriously reactionary statement: "If you do not harm us, we will not harm you."

Beijing exerted itself to undercut all unified actions of the world revolutionary and progressive forces in support of the Vietnamese people's resistance to American aggression, and continued to make Vietnam rely and depend on China. It opposed Vietnam's diplomatic struggle in Paris aimed at forcing the U.S. to de-escalate, and it did this under the signboard of "opposing the United States to the end," which was actually to "fight the United States to the last Vietnamese" and prolong the Vietnamese people's anti-U.S. resistance indefinitely thereby to weaken Vietnam for the benefit of its expansionist policy. From the late sixties Beijing reversed its alliance policy, gradually revealing its policy of regarding the Soviet Union as its main enemy while entering into trade relations with the United States in an attempt to take China to the position of the third super-power of the world. In the early seventies, capitalizing on Vietnam's victory Beijing conducted negotiations with the United States behind Vietnam's back in order to prevent Vietnam from completely liberating the south. It wanted the United States to withdraw its troops but to maintain the Nguyen Van Thieu puppet regime in order to keep Vietnam permanently divided and weaken it.

In that sense, the complete victory of the Vietnamese people in the resistance against U.S. aggression for national salvation was not only a disastrous defeat for the U.S. imperialists but also a stinging failure for the expansionists and hegemonists in Beijing. (On the historical questions mentioned above, see the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry's white book published in October 1979 and entitled "Truth About the Vietnamese-Chinese Relations During the Past Thirty Years).

Obviously, Vietnam has always been a factor of paramount importance in Beijing's global strategy in general and more particularly in its strategy of pushing southward over the past several decades. In the eyes of the reactionary rulers in Beijing, an independent, unified, socialist and growingly prosperous Vietnam would be a major obstacle to China's policy of expansion in Indochina and the rest of Southeast Asia. It is actually for this reason that since the complete liberation and reunification of Vietnam Beijing has been even more frenzied in opposing Vietnam and this it did by many brutal means and methods, of which the most brazen have been the "special war" they conducted in Kampuchea and their large-scale "two-pronged strategy," which have both failed miserably.

Thus, the war between Vietnam and China in February 1979 was not a "conflict between communists" but essentially a bitter struggle between national independence and socialism on the one hand and aggression, expansionism and hegemonism on the other, a bitter struggle between Marxism-Leninism and Maoism.

By openly invading Vietnam with intent to annex later the rest of Indochina and Southeast Asia, the reactionaries in the Beijing authorities have fully revealed their real nature. Under the cloak of Marxism-Leninism and borrowing the name of socialism, today they are unblushingly following the tracks of the "sons of heaven" in ancient China. They have proved themselves to be the direct and dangerous enemy of the Vietnamese people, the enemy of national independence and socialism in Indochina and of peace and stability in Southeast Asia, a very dangerous enemy of the world revolutionary movement, and the enemy of the Chinese people themselves.

Their war against Vietnam has been a profession of faith through which to clearly demonstrate their position of anti-communism and alliance with imperialism, to win the "confidence" of the U.S. and the other war-mongering imperialist forces, and plead with the U.S. and other imperialist powers for help in order to step up their "four modernizations" and translate their dream of quickly turning China into a super-power and the centre of the world -- which is actually a dream of global hegemony -- into reality. They have been willingly serving as a storm-trooper of the U.S. in Asia in the counterrevolutionary global strategy of U.S. imperialism and have actually become an "eastern NATO" as they often call themselves shamelessly.

If one is to accept the definition of "proxy wars" in the present world as often mentioned by Brzezinski and some other Western strategists, China's aggressive war against Vietnam is actually one such war of the U.S. conducted by the proxy of Beijing. Likewise, the Pol Pot clique's aggressive war on Vietnam's southwestern border is a proxy war of Beijing conducted by Pol Pot. It can also be seem as a proxy war of the U.S. conducted by Beijing and the Kampuchean reactionaries against Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries. The U.S. has been playing the "China card" in the Kampuchea issue, and Beijing has offered to serve as a valet of the U.S. taking upon itself the task of punishing Vietnam to avenge the U.S. and, coincidentally, to materialize its expansionism and hegemonism in Indochina and Southeast Asia. The reactionary Beijing authorities have really betrayed the Chinese people's long-standing revolutionary tradition.

Nevertheless, as did the Chinese emperors in the past, the Beijing expansionists and hegemonists have suffered a humiliating failure in all fields, military, political and diplomatic, on the battlefront, at home and in the world, just as the defeat of the U.S. and its henchmen in southern Vietnam in 1975 was also the failure of China's scheme of dividing Vietnam permanently and turning it into a buffer and dependency of China, Beijing's defeats in its aggressive wars on Vietnam's southwestern and northern border respectively in 1975 and 1979 were also defeats of the U.S. plan to stage a comeback on Indochina and Southeast Asia in the "post-Vietnam" period.

Beijing's defeats have proved that under the rule of the Maoist clique without Mao, China is big but not strong. In its war of aggression against Vietnam, Beijing showed many weak points in the military, political and economic fields, although it has a number of advantages such as a large land area, a big population and a common border with our country by land, sea and air. These defeats have also proved that U.S. imperialism and the Sino-American collusion in the past and in the "post-Vietnam" period may cause to us certain difficulties and complexities but cannot tip the balance of force which is favourable for the revolution in Indochina and Southeast Asia, nor check the impetuous offensive of the three revolutionary currents in the world and reverse the inexorable trend of development of our time.

The Vietnamese people's victories in their fight against the aggressive wars waged by the reactionaries in the Beijing authorities demonstrate the great might in national defence of the Vietnamese people which, following their victory over the U.S. aggressors, quickly reunified their country and took it onto the path of socialism. The Vietnamese armed forces and people have inherited rich experiences accumulated for many decades in their past struggle against imperialism for national liberation and have further enriched them in the concrete conditions of their present war for national defence against the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists and their henchmen. We have drawn many valuable lessons in the process in order to constantly improve our defence capabilities along the line of closely combining economy with national defence, building an all-people, all-sided and modern socialist national defence, and building strong people's armed forces, in order to cope with all contingencies. We have stood our ground victoriously and will stand steadily forever in this storm-beaten land on the shore of the Pacific soaked with the blood of our most beloved sons.

Every Vietnamese has the right to be proud of the glorious Communist Party of Vietnam, the great President Ho Chi Minh and the heroic Vietnamese nation and Vietnam People's Army.

Under the leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam, the Vietnamese nation has fulfilled its great historic mission of defeating the U.S. imperialist, smashing the U.S. scheme of aggression in Indochina, and preventing the U.S. from using Vietnam and Indochina as a whole as a springboard to expand to east Asia and Southeast Asia, thus inflicting a heavy blow on U.S. neo-colonialism and contributing to the stormy development of the three revolutionary currents in the world.

Under the leadership of the Communist Party of Vietnam, the Vietnamese nation has won in its first confrontations with Chinese expansionism and hegemonism, thus blocking the expansion southwards of the new emperors in "New China," defending the Vietnamese people's independence, freedom and socialism, fulfilling its internationalist duty towards the fraternal Lao and Kampuchean peoples and positively protecting the revolution and peace in Indochina and Southeast Asia.

In ancient, medieval and contemporary times, whenever the northern expansionists wanted to use Vietnam as a foothold to advance southwards, they were stopped by the Vietnamese nation. At present, by bringing that glorious national tradition to new heights in the new historical conditions, the Vietnamese armed forces and people have recorded very brilliant victories, further illumining the traditions of self-reliance, heroism and unsubmissiveness of their nation.

We have fought and have won not only for the sake of our country and the other countries on the Indochinese Peninsula, but also for the sake of all nations in Southeast Asia and the Chinese people themselves. The genuine Chinese revolutionaries loyal to Marxism-Leninism clearly understand this. An increasing number of people in ASEAN countries have become conscious of this. As time has proved and will prove, Vietnam has never invaded and will never invade any one of the ASEAN countries.

The Vietnamese people's victories in the two past wars for national liberation as well as in the two recent wars for national defense allow us to affirm that in their new historic confrontation with Chinese expansionism and hegmonism in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, the Vietnamese people have won and will certainly win complete victory. Relying on the superiority of the socialist system which is being built and consolidated step by step in the whole of our beloved country, strengthening our close solidarity and militant alliance with the fraternal Lao and Kampuchean peoples, enjoying the assistance and allround cooperation of the Soviet Union and the other fraternal socialist countries, we have enough spiritual and material force to firmly defend our socialist homeland against all aggressive wars launched on any scale by any enemy, however big and fierce it may be.

Though heavily defeated in their war of aggression against Vietnam, the reactionary clique in the Beijing leadership have not given up their scheme of weakening and annexing our country and their strategic scheme of southward advance.

They are now engaged in a type of sabotage war against Vietnam in many fields in the hope of causing our collapse without having to resort to a major war, according to the ancient Chinese military theory of "victory without battle." At the same time they go on with preparations for a large-scale war.

This type of Beijing sabotage war is not like the war of destruction conducted by the U.S. Air Force. It is waged on all the military, economic, political and cultural fronts and involves many different forces and many extremely vicious methods.

Chinese armed forces, permanently massed close to our northern border, are harassing us with the permanent threat of aggressive attacks. The enemy provokes localized armed clashes, nibbles at our territory, sabotages military, economic and cultural installations on the first line, organizes bases for counterrevolutionary, rebellious and subversive activities from within, while feverishly preparing for war of aggression of different magnitudes.

Along with military activities the enemy is trying to sap our economic strength in the hope of weakening up both economically and militarily, locally and on the national plane. Taking advantage of our difficulties in economy and everyday life, the enemy sabotages machines, equipment, means of transport and communications, etc., hindering our efforts in socialist transformations and socialist construction in various localities.

The enemy is also feverishly engaged in psychological warfare and espionage by covertly organizing anti-government activities and disrupting public order and security, thereby sapping our political, ideological and organizational strength.

In its schemes of opposing, weakening and annexing Vietnam, Beijing has always resorted to the guise of revolution, Marxism-Leninism and socialism. It viciously attacks our party and its correct revolutionary line with the pretext of "defending the revolutionary line of President Ho Chi Minh" and helping a handful of reactionaries under Hoang Van Hoan to "remake revolution" and "restore the Sino-Vietnamese friendship."

Thse dirty schemes and actions of the reactionary clique in the Beijing leadership must be completely exposed to the Vietnamese people, the peoples of the other Indochinese countries, the Chinese people, and the world's people as a whole.

While scheming and maneuvering against Vietnam, Beijing also teams up reactionary forces on the payrolls of China and the United States in opposition to the Kampuchean revolution and the Lao revolution.

In Kampuchea the enemy steps up a "special war" based on the territory of Thailand and conducted mainly by remnants of the army of the defunct "Democratic Kampuchea" after [in accordance with] Mao Zedong's "protracted guerrilla warfare." Meanwhile Beijing continues to draw the Asian countries and many other countries in a noisy chorus at the United Nations on the so-called "Kampuchean problem," blatantly interfering in Kampuchea's internal affairs.

Concerning Laos many different methods are combined: Sabotage from within, rallying Lao reactionary forces, organizing bases of counter-revolution and making guerrilla warfare locally to control vital points, while preparing for rebellions and subversive war. At the same time Beijing maintains a permanent tension along the Lao-Thai border and repeatedly threatens to throw Chinese forces in a war of aggression along the Chinese-Lao border.

On the strength of these facts should one not now say about a new strategy deployed by Beijing in Indochina following the emergency of the "Kampuchean problem?" This strategy is designed to oppose national independence and socialism in Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries now that the peoples of the three countries, having won together, are advancing together toward socialism and in this way, bringing about a new situation and creating a new, unprecedentedly firm, strategic posture in this part of the world. In this strategy Beijing benefits from a growing collusion with the United States, which, taking advantage of China's betrayal, is seeking to "return" to Indochina to counter the revolution on this peninsula.

It is clear that U.S. imperialism continues playing the "China card" in both its global strategy of counter-revolution and its Southeast Asia strategy. Beijing, for its part, is playing the "American card" to carry out both its global strategy against the Soviet Union, the socialist community and the world revolutionary movement, and its southward advance strategy against Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries to conquer the whole of Southeast Asia.

That China is a great threat to peace and independence in Southeast Asia has been made clear again by its refusal to our proposals for a ceasefire along the Sino-Vietnamese border and for resumption of the Sino-Vietnamese talks, its continued abetment of pro-Chinese reactionaries in Southeast Asia, its harbouring the Pol Pot clique for use against Kampuchea, and its opposition to the trend towards dialogue in Southeast Asia. This reveals China's scheme of causing tension in Southeast Asia in an attempt to pit the ASEAN countries against the Indochinese countries in service of its divide-and-rule policy regarding this region.

The present rulers in Beijing are criticizing Mao Zedong in what [is] described by the West as "de-Maoization," thus causing some people to believe that they are "returning to Marxism-Leninism." Yet, what they are doing is calculated to defend Mao's thinking which they term as "the common property of the Chinese people" and a "collective product of Chinese revolutionary leaders led by Mao Zedong," thereby to apply Maoism more effectively. Post-Mao Maoism, as such, is all the more dangerous.

Although there are some dissimilarities between post-Mao Maoism as practised by the present ruling clique in Beijing and Maoism in practice during Mao's lifetime, the two are in no way different in nature. It remains Great-Han expanionism and hegemony applied to new historical circumstances and carried out under the guise of Marxism-Leninism and socialism. The "four modernizations" programme adovcated by Deng Xiaoping and his followers within the framework of the Chinese global strategy of counter-revolution is always aimed at making China a super-power by the end of this century to achieve global hegemony. Beijing, for this purpose, is openly siding with imperialism and all other reactionary forces in opposition to the Soviet Union, Vietnam, the socialist community, and all the three currents of the world revolution.

Beijing's policy is to rely on the United States and the West in general to carry out its "modernization" program. It has always stressed that China's modernization must be "socialist modernization." But the fact is that it is causing a gradual degeneration of the socialist factors in Chinese society, from the superstructure to the infrastructure. Meanwhile, the capitalist factors are being restored step by step, and are taking shape and developing in a variety of forms. This has consequently exacerbated the internal contradictions of the Chinese society as can be seen in the serious differences that have surfaced leading to infighting and purges among the authorities at different levels.

Thus, the road of "four modernizations" taken by Beijing in its drive for global hegemony is actually the road of capitalism of China and making China dependent on imperialism. By the whims of history, nobody can dismiss the possibility of the new China becoming a new-type colony of the imperialist countries as the China of contemporary times which became a new-type colony dismembered by different imperialist forces.

It is certain that the genuine revolutionaries in China and the great Chinese people shall not let this misfortune occur. There is only one way out: to repudiate Maoism and Mao's global strategy and return to genuine Marxism-Leninism.

We Vietnamese are determined to defend our beloved socialist motherland while fulfilling our international obligation toward the fraternal Lao and Kampuchean people in defeating all aggressive schemes and acts of Beijing. We should make no mistake that the dangerous and immediate enemy of our people at present is the reactionary Maoist group in the ruling circles of China, and that the fundamental and long-term enemy of the revolution of our country and the world revolution is imperialism headed by U.S. imperialism.

Thus, for our people, to oppose Maoism is actually to oppose Beijing's expansionism and hegemonism, the worst expression of Maoism at present. At the same time, we must defeat China's current type of war of sabotage and stand prepared to smash any aggressive war on any scale in the dischange of our national and international obligation. We must expose the psychological warfare and pseudo-revolutionary rhetorics, criticize the pseudo-Marxist theories and eliminate the noxious effects of Maoism in order to defend the correct revolutionary line of our party, defend the ideological front of our people and army, and defend the purity of Marxism-Leninism. We must use both the "weapon of criticism" and the "criticism by weapons" when necessary to defeat the new aggressor both on the military and political fronts, both on the theoretical and ideological fronts. We must be armed with a correct outlook of history when examining issues in our country and in the world.

By our own fight against the southward push strategy of Beijing in collusion with the U.S. imperialists, our people have made a positive contribution to defending national independence, peace and stability in Southeast Asia, to the revolutionary cause and safeguarding of peace of the world's people including the Chinese people.

Under the clearsighted leadership of the party, let our entire people and army step up the emulation movement to fulfill the two strategic tasks of our country's revolution in the new stage: to successfully build socialism and to firmly defend the socialist Vietnamese motherland.

In all circumstances we must strengthen our country in all fields. In this way, we shall foil the enemy's plan of weakening us and bringing about our collapse, and also will create conditions for addressing the urgent demands of the economy and the people's life, generating a positive force to defeat all aggressive wars of the enemy if ever it is reckless to launch one. As we grow stronger the enemy would have to think twice before undertaking any military adventure, and in this sense we will be in a position to push back the danger of war and preserve a lasting peace.

We regard the building of socialism as our primordial task but at the same time will not for a moment relax in our task of preparing to fight and fighting victoriously in defence of our motherland. We must closely combine economy with defense and security, care for the material and cultural life of the people, ensure social security and order and oppose all negative manifestations in society. That also means to care for building and consolidating the rear, a paramount permanent factor determining the victory of war.

We must build a strong all-people national defence, improve the quality of our people's armed forces and constantly improve our defence posture so as to ensure that the whole country as well as each locality, while engaging in productive labour for economic construction and cultural development, always remain in high preparedness to cope victoriously with all contingencies.

NGUYEN CO THACH COMMENTS ON PRC, ASEAN RELATIONS

BK191038 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese GMT 18 Feb 82

[Text] Foreign Minister Nguyen Co Thach granted the following interview to the VNA correspondent in Vientiane following the Indochinese foreign ministerial conference:

Question: The fifth conference of the Vietnamese, Lao and Kampuchean foreign ministers discussed the convening of an Indochinese summit some time this year. Would you explain the importance of the summit?

Answer: The solidarity and friendship among the peoples of Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea dates back a long time. Over the past 50 years in particular, the three peoples have been bound together in the struggle against the common enemies for national liberation and in their present national construction and defense. This is also an important factor for peace and stability in Southeast Asia. In the new state of the revolution, the three countries have decided to convene a summit this year.

The special relationship between the three Indochinese countries is based on the principle of full equality between independent and sovereign nations and on the firm foundations of international law of the bilateral treaties of friendship and cooperation between the three countries. This conforms to the present common trend of nations, of grouping in regional cooperative organizations, to help one another solve those problems that are beyond the capacity of any single country.

Question: Would you comment on the relations between the three Indochinese countries and China with regard to peace and stability in Southeast Asia?

Answer: China has pursued a policy of expansion to Southeast Asia for thousands of years. Especially over the past 30 years, the Beijing rulers have conducted this policy in many perfidious forms. They have sought to control the Indochinese revolutionary forces through providing aid and at the same time used these forces as a "card" in their collusion with the colonialists and imperialists in their hegemonistic interests. When these schemes fail, they have not hesitated to use military forces for direct aggression and intervention against the Indochinese revolution. Meanwhile, they have fostered and trained pro-Chinese reactionaries to interfere in other countries in the region. They have sought all ways and means to sow division and confrontation among the countries in the region to realize their "divide and rule" policy and to mask their expansionist and hegemonist activities, the source of tension in the region. However, China has sustained a serious setback over the past three years. The fact that China has repeatedly rejected the peace proposals of Vietnam and the other Indochinese countries, undermined the trend of dialogue between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries and stubbornly maintained hostile military activities on its borders with Vietnam and Laos and on the Thai-Kampuchean border eloquently proves that China is the only cause of tension in Southeast Asia. To restore peace and stability in the region, it is essential for China to end its policy of aggression and intervention, first of all toward the Indochinese countries.

Question: Would you expand on the significance of the proposal Vietnam raised in its note of 30 January 1982 to the Chinese Foreign Ministry, and what is your comment on the fact that China has still not answered this note?

Answer: The border problem between Vietnam and China is not an exceptional case. China has border problems with almost all its neighbors. Over the past 30 years, China has always used border problems to put pressure on its neighbors. The real nature of the so-called Sino-Vietnamese border problem is China's current illegal occupation of the Hoang Sa Archipelago and dozens of other points in Vietnamese territory along its border with Vietnam. We have many times urged the Chinese side to agree to a cessation of all hostile military actions along the common border and negotiate a peaceful settlement of questions in the relations between the two countries. But China has invariably rejected our proposals. Recently, we declared that we would unilaterally observe our own proposal for the cessation of military actions during the Tet -- (Lunar New Year) -- festival. This gesture of goodwill has been warmly welcomed by the world public. On 30 January 1982, following the Tet cease-fire, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry sent a note to its Chinese counterpart proposing that the two sides continue to observe this cease-fire along the common border and open the third round of the Vietnamese-Chinese negotiations at an early date. But so far, however, the Chinese side has still not replied to this good-will proposal. On the contrary, it has spoken about imaginary border conflicts during the Tet in order to smear us. These fabrications are virtually at odds with its report to the UN secretary general on the quiet situation along the Sino-Vietnamese border during the Tet period. This attitude of China's is added proof that it does not want peace and stability in Southeast Asia.

Question: At this foreign ministerial conference, the three Indochinese countries declared their readiness to talk with Thailand on all matters of mutual concern. Would you elaborate on the importance of the three Indochinese countries' relations with Thailand for peace and stability in this region?

Answer: Over nearly 1,000 years of history has shown that Thailand has frequently invaded the Indochinese countries. In the past 40 years Thailand committed aggressive or hostile actions against the Indochinese countries on five occasions. Nevertheless, the Indochinese countries always look beyond their relations with Thailand, because confrontation with Thailand would benefit only the imperialists and international reactionaries and run counter to the aspiration of the people in the region. The Indochinese countries are prepared to talk with Thailand on all matters of mutual concern on the basis of peaceful coexistence and friendly, neighborly relations. It is regrettable that Thailand still continues to adopt a negative attitude in its relations with the Indochinese countries. If Thailand really wants peace in the region, we think that it should respond positively to the good-will proposal put forward by the Indochinese countries.

Question: We are glad to see that more and more people in the ASEAN countries have come to realize that China is the main threat to their independence and security. They have also begun to realize that the Indochinese countries and the ASEAN countries are all victims of the Chinese ruling circles' hegemonistic and expansionist policy and have not fallen dupe to China's plot to pit ASEAN against Indochina. They stand for dialogue and peaceful coexistence with the Indochinese countries. The Indochinese countries hold that the issues concerning peace and stability in Southeast Asia should be settled by the countries in the region through negotiations on the principle of equality, nonimposition and mutual respect. The seven-point proposal on the principles governing the relations between the Indochinese and ASEAN countries put forth by the deputy prime minister and foreign minister of the Lao People's Democratic Republic on behalf of the threee Indochinese countries at the 36th session of the UN General Assembly, as well as the proposals made so far by the foreign ministerial conferences of the three Indochinese countries are consistent with the interests of the Southeast Asian countries. The ASEAN countries should positively respond to those proposals in the interest of peace in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world.

NHAN DAN MARKS SRV-PRK TREATY ANNIVERSARY

[NHAN DAN 18 February editorial: "The Militant Solidarity and All-Round Cooperation Between Vietnam and Kampuchea"]

[Text] Three years ago, only 1 month after the downfall of the genocidal regime in Kampuchea and at a time when the reactionary clique in the Beijing leadership was sending 600,000 troops to invade our country's northern border provinces, the Vietnamese-Kampuchean treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation was solemnly signed in Phnom Penh. This historic event marked the glorious victories of the two nations of Vietnam and Kampuchea in the struggle against their common enemies -- the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists and their henchmen, the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary clique. This event also opened a new stage of glorious development in relations between the two countries.

The signing of the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation reasserted the determination of the peoples of the two countries to preserve and strengthen their militant solidarity and their longstanding and all-round cooperation and friendship in order to consolidate the independence and build the prosperity of each respective country.

Over the past 3 years the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation has developed its tremendous effect and has brought about many fine results. With their extraordinary efforts and with the strength of their solidarity and mutual assistance, our two peoples have scored many great successes in their national construction and in defense of their independence against all schemes and acts of aggression and sabotage and of sowing division of the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists who are working hand in glove with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces.

In compliance with the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation, members of the Vietnam People's Army, upholding the spirit of internationalism, have joined with the people and the Kampuchean Revolutionary Armed Forces in wholeheartedly implementing the lofty mission -- which was assigned to them by the two peoples -- for the benefit of both sides.

Thousands of cadres, workers and experts in the economic and cultural sectors were sent by our state to join with the Kampuchean cadres and workers in implementing many specific agreements which have already been signed. The movement to establish brotherhood between the provinces of our country and those of Kampuchea has developed vigorously, reflecting the depth of the relations of friendship and all-round cooperation between the peoples of the two countries.

Celebrating the third anniversary of the signing of this treaty of historic importance, we feel very elated at the many great successes of the fraternal Kampuchean people. Led by the KPRP and with the traditions of struggling persistently and working diligently and creatively, the Kampuchean people have quickly reorganized the life of the entire society, have firmly defended their independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity and have foiled all the wicked schemes and acts of sabotage of the Beijing reactionary clique in collusion with Washington and other reactionary forces.

The Fourth KPRP Congress and the first-ever truly free and democratic general elections of the people have concluded with glorious success. Kampuchea is reviving vigorously. The people are more confident in and more attached to the new regime.

In its recent session, the National Assembly of the young people's republic noted with elation the many great achievements of the Kampuchean people in various fields -- political, economic, cultural, social, security and national defense. The PRK's popularity has been increasingly enhanced in the world arena. The relations of friendship and cooperation between Kampuchea and Vietnam and Laos, between Kampuchea and other countries in the socialist community and between Kampuchea and many countries in the Nonaligned Movement have developed with every passing day.

We are very pleased at the deep concern and high appraisal by the comrade leaders of Kampuchea of the relations of militant solidarity between Vietnam and Kampuchea. At the 7 January 1982 grand meeting held to mark the Kampuchean national day, Comrade Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP and chairman of the PRK State Council said: Uniting with Vietnam is an unswerving strategic line of the Kampuchean revolution. The more our brothers and friends rejoice over the beautiful development of relations between Vietnam and Kampuchea and over the many profound changes in Kampuchea, the more the imperialists and the international reactionaries will become exasperated and infuriated. Despite repeated setbacks, the Chinese reactionaries continue to increase their collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces in conducting a type of all-round war of destruction against the just struggles of the peoples of our two countries.

They are striving to misinterpret the presence of the Vietnam People's Army in Kampuchea under the treaty, distort the real situation in Kampuchea and fabricate many stories to slander Vietnam and the Kampuchean revolutionary administration in order to sow dissension between the two peoples and to weaken the international prestige of Vietnam and the PRK. They have also abused many international forums to create wrongful resolutions on Kampuchea in order to interfere in the internal affairs of the Kampuchean people and to restore the genocidal regime in that country. Recently, they have intensively rallied many counter-revolutionary groups, trying to create a certain form of alliance for these groups in order to deceive public opinion. But all their countermeasures and pressure-creating tricks, regardless of how brazenly sophisticated and crafty they may be, will be doomed to failure.

The facts of the past 3 years testify to the steady and vigorous upward trend of the Kampuchean revolution. All the calculations of various reactionary forces are being shattered. These reactionary forces are being caught in an awkward situation and are in conflict with each other. Obviously, they will be unable to alter the situation in Kampuchea.

On the occasion of this grand anniversary, the Vietnamese people would like to reassert their determination to fulfill properly their obligations as stipulated in the treaty. We vow to try our best to join with the Kampuchean people in preserving and developing the traditional militant solidarity and relations of friendship and all-round cooperation and in increasing the strength of each country and the overall strength of the three fraternal nations in the Indochinese Peninsula.

The militant solidarity and the all-round cooperation among Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos is an invincible strength and a factor for firmly ensuring the preservation of independence and the successful building of socialism in each country respectively. It is also a factor for ensuring peace, security and cooperation in Southeast Asia.

AFP: VCP CONGRESS 'PROBABLY' TO MEET 27-31 MAR

BK181649 Hong Kong AFP in English 1638 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, 18 Feb (AFP) -- The Vietnamese Communist Party will probably hold its fifth congress from March 27-31, diplomatic sources said here today. Vietnamese sources have remained tightlipped about the actual date, merely indicating that the congress which was to have been held in November last year and then postponed until March is to be held at the end of next month. The dates are not likely to be made public until the very last moment, observers said.

Preparations for the congress have already been completed now that district and provincial congresses have finished examining the reports of the 10th and 11th Central Committee plenary sessions held in October and December 1981, Western diplomatic sources said, adding that a 12th plenum could be held in between now and the party congress.

The fifth congress will have to study a report on the country's economy, currently in difficult straits, and will adopt the Third Five-Year Plan (1981-85), which is expected to produce "concrete solutions" to the economic problems. Changes are expected in the makeup of the Politburo and Central Committee but observers have only speculation to go on at present. The party held its fourth congress from December 14 to 21, 1976.

FURTHER REPORT ON HAI HUNG PARTY CONGRESS

[Second and last part of station correspondent Van Xuyen's report: "Through the Party Organization Congress of Hai Hung Province"]

[Text] We asked the director of the office of the Hai Hung Provincial Party Committee: Summing up the situation, how do you view the suggestions made by the party organization on the guidelines and tasks set forth by the Central Committee for the coming years?

The director jovially answered: Grassroots cadres and party members as well as the delegates to the congress have expressed a very high unanimity of views with the guidelines and tasks set forth by the Central Committees. Although many difficulties still lie ahead of us, everyone is confident that hurdles will be removed, difficulties surmounted and victory achieved.

How about the provincial party committee's resolution on the 1982 guidelines and tasks for the region, we asked the office director.

As if remembering something interesting, he told us: Our resolution has just been printed. We have readjusted some figures. Flipping the pages of the resolution, which still had the fresh smell of printing ink, he cheerfully pointed out to us the new, readjusted figures. They included more than 840,000 tons of food to be produced by the province in 1982 as determined by the congress instead of the 800,000 tons targeted by the provincial party committee. The value of export goods was also to increase by from 7 to 10 percent as compared with 1980.

How does Hai Hung assess its potential and how does it plan to implement the future measures in order to raise its planned targets?

The delegates have come up with many valuable and useful suggestions on this matter. In connection with the target of producing 846,000 tons of food, Comrade Nguyen Phung, head of the Agriculture Service, in his speech at the congress, said: This is a modest target that is entirely within Hai Hung's reach. Hai Hung's food production in 1981 was already more than 800,000 tons.

With the target planned for 1982 being 846,000 tons, this will mean an increase of only over 40,000 tons. Dividing this figure equally among the nearly 280,000 hectares of Hai Hung's crop area, only some 150 kilograms more of food will be required from each hectare. Calculated in terms of northern Vietnamese sao, each sao will have to produce some 3 kilograms more per crop. Hai Hung has many ways to do this. First of all, we must raise the uniformity of productivity.

Comrade Nguyen Phung added: At present, there are still a number of districts in Hai Hung with an average output below that of the province. In 1981, while the whole province attained a paddy output of 6 tons per hectare, the Chi Linh mountain province, although enjoying a good crop, attained only an average of 5 tons. By better solving the question of water for Chi Linh, not only will we add thousands of hectares for food cultivation, but we will also be able to steadily increase the paddy output to 6 tons per hectare.

Even in a district with highly intensive paddy cultivation and a good winter crop such as Tu Loc, there are still areas and villages which have not attained the province's average yield. In areas south of Tu Loc District, some cooperatives have not yet exceeded the 5 ton per hectare mark. By strengthening guidance and the material-technical base of these weak units and gradually raising the uniformity of productivity, we will be able to increase food production by 3 kilograms per each northern Vietnamese sao.

Amplifying the opinion of the comrade head of the Agriculture Service, the deputy chairman of the provincial planning committee stressed the need to maintain the average per capita crop area. To do so, we must endeavor to reclaim land on the spot, use available land fully and rationally, implement family planning and continue to motivate the people to go and build new economic zones. He said that over the past 5 years Hai Hung has been carrying out the movement of "each inch of land, an inch of gold," but that there still is fallow land in practically every district. If the cooperatives make full use of each plot on the banks of the Red River, the Duong River and the Luoc River, of the land in hilly areas and so forth, Hai Hung's cultivated area will not be limited to 145,000 hectares but will be more.

With regard to the intensive cultivation of food crops, the deputy chairman of the provincial planning committee observed that the reason for the slow increase of crop productivity is basically that we badly lack fertilizer. The more the crop area is expanded, the more we lack fertilizer. Why so? This is because livestock breeding develops slowly compared to cultivation. Only 12 percent of the cooperatives throughout the province attained the target of 2 hogs per hectare of cultivation. In 1981, the whole province had slightly more than 500,000 hogs. Furthermore, although the herd of oxen and cows increased slightly, the herd of buffaloes declined greatly. In order to make up for this reduction of manure sources, there is no other way but to quickly expand duckweed acreage and grow more sesbania and tephrosia candida. However, in order to develop livestock breeding, step up the duckweed planting movement and grow green manure, there must be close guidance and proper encouragement. He added that livestock breeding in Hai Hung has not been given as much attention as cultivation. The production of fertilizer, particularly of duckweed, has been slighted. Relative success has been achieved in raising funds for hog breeding, but funds for duckweed growing have been insufficient. From the provincial level down to the village levels, such funds have not been adequate.

Comrade Truong Giao, secretary of the Tu Loc District Party Committee, also said that we must give more importance to producing duckweed and green manure. By increasing this type of manure, we can partially make up for the chemical fertilizer we need. For a long time now we have been thinking of relying on higher levels for obtaining a large quantity of nitrogenous fertilizer to somewhat replace organic manure. The regions, however, forget this: With reduced exports, how can we possibly have plenty of nitrogenous fertilizer?

The delegates also put forth many suggestions relating to water conservancy measures, facilities and elimination of harmful insects to carry out intensive cultivation. The delegate from the water conservancy service was of the opinion that the waterlogging of the 10th month crop in 1980, causing the complete loss of tens of thousands of hectares, has taught Hai Hung that one cannot rely on the electric pumping system. This is because even though it had as many as three electric pumping stations, Hai Hung could effectively combat waterlogging only when rainfall was less than 300 milliliters on any single day. Second, under the present conditions, electric supply cannot be assured on a permanent basis. Consequently, along with the electric pumps, Hai Hung cannot ignore water baskets or disregard the building of ricefield dikes to bring water to each region.

With regard to paddy seeds, the delegates agreed that we must continue to boldly replace the old seed varieties characterized by low productivity and poor resistance to harmful insects with new seed varieties marked by high productivity and better resistance to harmful insects.

Over the past few years Hai Hung has been successful in the early transplantation of a number of new, short-term varieties in the 10th month crop, thus creating conditions for expanding the winter crop area. However, considering the realities of production, particularly the 10th month crop in 1980, we find that increasing the acreage of the 10th month crop too rapidly will entail many disadvantages. First, after the early rice ripens, there is the strong possibility of running into a typhoon during the harvest. Second, the yield of the current short-term early rice variety is generally not as high as that of the Dai Tra 10th month variety. Consequently, rapidly increasing the acreage of the early 10th month rice will increase instability and this could mean reducing the rice output.

For this reason, Hai Hung is reorganizing its production in a scientific manner. It will use only a certain percentage of the land designated for short-term 10th month rice for planting the 75/6 variety. Some land will be used for growing early winter crops area will be used for planting main crop rice of high-yield varieties so that later potatoes, vegetables, beans and other winter crops that are not greatly affected by the weather can be grown.

One evening we visited the delegation of the Gu Loc District, a district that had enjoyed a good winter crop. When asked about the development of the district's winter crop, Comrade Pham Van Viet, while putting his arms around our shoulders, said animatedly: We have figured it out. Under the present conditions, the winter crop will use only 40 percent of the arable land. That is just right. By using more land, and thus following our inclination without changing our way of thinking, we would not increase the total food output by very much but would cause great hardships to the cooperative members.

The comrade district chairman added: Fertilizer is not abundantly available. By using too much land without having enough fertilizer, we cannot practice intensive cultivation. It is better to use just enough land and engage in intensive cultivation. Over the recent past, in view of the lack of fertilizer, we have grown more sweet potatoes than potatoes. Now, our policy is to reduce sweet potato output and develop potatoes. At the same time, we will expand the acreage of crops with high economic value to support exports in order to be able to import nitrogenous fertilizer. We are planting peanuts and red pepper now. When you have a chance, be sure to visit Tu Loc.

This year we plan to put a few hundred hectares under cultivation of each type. We have experimentally planted a few dozen of red pepper plants at our headquarters. Their fruits are very big and delicious. By processing 500 hectares of red pepper into pepper sauce and exporting it, we will get a few thousand tons of nitrogenous fertilizer in return.

In addition to soybeans and winter crops, Hai Hung will continue to improve the areas specializing in jute, rush and peanuts so as to have agricultural products for export and for use as raw materials to develop handicrafts. The Hai Hung handicrafts sector was one of the sectors that fulfilled its plan norms earliest in 1981. Developing this further and encouraged by the party congresses of various levels, the sector will endeavor to achieve this year a total output value nearly 10 million dong higher than last year and increase exports by from 7 to 10 percent in terms of value.

Being a big province in the Red River Delta, a province with some 2 million people and a party membership of nearly 20 times the country's total membership during the prerevolution days, and with the new vigor that has emerged following the party congresses of various levels, certainly Hai Hung will rapidly overcome its weak and sluggish conditions and make steady progress, to become worthy as an advanced province east of the capital, a province that is stable politically, rich economically and powerful militarily.

NHAN DAN CRITICAL OF U.S. CENTRAL AMERICA POLICY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 19 -- NHAN DAN today condemns the Reagan administration for planning to step up intervention, including the use of military forces, in the Caribbean Sea and the rest of Central America. The paper quotes Washington POST as saying recently that U.S. President Reagan had approved a large-scale plan for what he called to contain communist influence in Central America. [as received]

"Since the beginning of this year," the paper says, "The Reagan administration has tried harder to increase tension in the Caribbean and other parts of Central America while continuing to threaten and pressure Cuba, Nicaragua and Grenada... The White House has launched a big campaign to prepare public opinion for possible use of American ground forces in El Salvador."

It recalls that C.I.A. is preparing for a 19-million-dollar programme to rally forces against Nicaragua and form para-military units for political and spying activities in that country and elsewhere. "The White House plan," NHAN DAN points out, "is aimed at countering revolutionary movements in that region. To lend a hand to client regimes the United States is seeking to increase its military presence, collusion and military commitments. This plan is very dangerous since it makes the situation in the region easily explosive".

UNITY CALLED FOR IN WAKE OF SOVIET SPY CASE

[Unattributed commentary: "Vigilance Against Foreign Espionage"]

[Text] The red-handed capture of Soviet Assistant Military Attache Sergey Igorov along with a middle-ranking Indonesian military officer while they were conducting transactions involving state secrets on 4 February was the beginning of the uncovering of espionage activities by Soviet nationals in Indonesia. As a followup to the incident, on 6 February the government also arrested the head of the Soviet Aeroflot Airlines office in Jakarta, Aleksandr Finenko, who had engaged in espionage activities in Indonesia.

The successful discovery of the spy activities, which harmed Soviet-Indonesian relations, was considered to be a brilliant success by the Indonesian counter-espionage apparatus, because in their activities in various countries, Soviet spies had been able, to some extent, to infiltrate the ranks of important government officials and their activities are crucial.

In handling the Soviet spy case, the government took firm action by expelling Assistant Military Attache Igorov and ordered the Soviet Embassy to remove Aleksandr Finenko -- who had resorted to a hunger strike during his 6 days of detention -- from Indonesia. In view of the worsening health resulting from his hunger strike, as well as the Indonesian people's humanitarian concern, the government has decided to deport Aleksandr Finenko. In dealing with the incident, including Finenko's hunger strike, the Indonesian Government has handled the case with a cool head and long term considerations. Aleksandr Finenko had been prevented from dying in detention since this could exacerbate the problem.

When briefing newsmen on Monday [15 February] about the incident, the commander of the Security and Order Restoration Command, Admiral Sudomo, said that although Finenko continued his hunger strike during his interrogations, the government already knew about Soviet spy activities in Indonesia.

The question for us now is how we can increase our vigilance against the possible infiltration of spies from other countries into our country. Indonesia's natural wealth, its marine as well as land resources, strategic location, geographic situation -- which comprises tens of thousands of inhabited and uninhabited big and small islands -- as well as Indonesia's position in the world political forum, could encourage the infiltration of foreign spies into this country.

In connection with the government decision in solving the Soviet spy case, many quarters may be dissatisfied, but it would not be proper for the difference of views to harm our national unity and cohesion. For this reason it is necessary to underline the call by Admiral Sudomo for the people to bolster their strength and support the government decision on the case besides increasing their love toward their motherland, nation and state and not seeking individual profit by sacrificing the national interest.

AFP: SPY WANTED INFORMATION ON SEA LANES

BK171657 Hong Kong AFP in English 1156 GMT 17 Feb 82

[Text] Jakarta, 17 Feb (AFP) -- The Soviet espionage ring recently unearthed here appeared to have aimed at getting information about the strategic sea lanes around the disputed Vietnamese-claimed Natuna Islands group in the South China Sea, it was reported today.

Films seized by Indonesian intelligence officers from Soviet Assistant Military Attache Lieutenant Colonel Sergey Igorov, who was expelled on spy charges last week, contained maps of Indonesian seas including the strategic lanes around the Natuna Islands and in east Indonesia, the weekly news magazine TEMPO reported.

Being a superpower with a strong naval presence, the Soviet Union badly needs such films, the magazine said, adding that the Soviets might direct their spying activities to seeking information on these sea lanes around Natuna and other strategic areas, it said.

Indonesia and Vietnam both claim ownership of part of the Naturn Islands and Hanoi had once warned foreign oil firms not to conduct explorations on these islands. But Indonesia appears to have disregarded the warning by allowing six foreign oil companies to seek oil there.

ADAM MALIK DISCUSSES KAMPUCHEA ON BANGKOK TOUR

BK120938 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 2300 GMT 16 Feb 82

[Text] Vice President Adam Malik has stressed that efforts to solve the Kampuchean problem must be continued in an effort to create a zone of freedom, security and peace in Southeast Asia. ASEAN countries, especially Indonesia, should be more active in efforts to seek a settlement of the problem. Adam Malik stated this during his meeting with Indonesian Embassy officials and members of the Indonesian community in Bangkok yesterday. He also stressed that ASEAN is not adopting a hostile attitude toward Vietnam, but in the framework of seeking a settlement of the Kampuchean problem, Vietnam must withdraw its troops from that country. This, according to Adam Malik, is in line with the Bandung principles and UN resolutions.

Speaking about ASEAN progress, the vice president said that although much progress has been achieved since the establishment of the association 15 years ago, ASEAN should not be too hasty in feeling satisfied. ASEAN unity and cohesion should be further developed.

Vice President and Mrs Adam Malik and their party have returned home after winding up their 3-day visit to Thailand.

BAKIN CHIEF DISCUSSES CORRUPTION, KAMPUCHEA

BK181422 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 1200 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Text] General Yoga Sugama, head of the State Intelligence Coordination Agency [BAKIN] believes corruption and other irregularities committed by civil servants are so far of a private character, having no particular political motives. According to the BAKIN chief, corruption and other irregularities have taken place in Indonesia due to low moral and intellectual standards and have not been committed collectively for certain purposes. Yoga Sugama said this in reply to a query posed by a member of Parliamentary Commission 1 at a hearing in Parliament today.

On the Kampuchean problem, Yoga Sugama said that the problem would not be settled in the near future because it involved the interests of big powers such as the Soviet Union and China. According to him, a continuing Kampuchean problem would only benefit the two countries in expanding their influence in Southeast Asia.

SUBROTO DISCUSSES MOVES TO FORM TIN CARTEL

BK111406 Jakarta Domestic Service in Indonesian 0700 GMT 11 Feb 82

Subroto said that Indonesia, as a tin-producing country, was concerned about the current international tin market while the United States was releasing its stockpiled tin.

Speaking at the work conference which was chaired by Commission 6 Chairman Pakhmat Witular, the minister said that so far the sixth international tin agreement has been ratified by only three countries, namely Indonesia, Malaysia and Norway. Siwtzerland had declared its intention to sign it. The EEC countries were going to discuss possible participation in the agreement at their forthcoming ministerial conference, he said.

ENRILE ASSESSES MINDANAO REBEL CAMPAIGN

HK190037 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile says subversive elements have shifted their campaign from the military to the civilian population. In a speech read for him before the Butuan City Press Club, Enrile said the rebels are working to frustrate government efforts at reconciliation. Enrile warned however that the rebels should not mistake the government's reconciliation efforts and sincerity for weakness.

Enrile was to have flown to Butuan to invest the new officers of the Butuan City Press Club, but was unable to do so because of bad weather. His speech was read for him by Brigadier-General (Pedro Zafra), Philippine Constabulary Region 10 commander. More on Enrile's assessment of the rebel campaign from correspondent (June Francisco):

[Begin (Francisco) recording] Enrile said that even in the face of the government's reconciliation efforts, which have drawn thousands of misguided rebels and dissidents from the hills in the Mindanao region, the remaining terrorist elements in both the so-called Moro National Liberation Front and the New People's Army have engaged in localist attacks on the civilian populace, killing innocent families and robbing their houses, exploding grenades in public markets and burning down commercial and private buildings. He added that the media in Mindanao must play its role in the reconciliation and unity of various religious and enthnic groups -- Muslim and Christian -- especially those who are inclined to be misguided into violence by terrorist forces.

The defense chief also pointed to current efforts of the terrorists and criminal elements to smuggle firearms into the country, and said that it is for this reason that President Marcos has ordered a tight watch on seaports and airports to prevent these renewed activities of terrorist elements. [end (Francisco) recording]

Meantime Armed Forces Chief of Staff General Fabian Ver announced that drastic countermeasures have been taken to prevent more grenade explosions in Cotabato city. He said he has ordered the military to conduct random checks of civilians and vehicles in that city. A spate of grenade explosions in Cotabato the past weeks has caused death to 1 person and injury to 35 others. Additional troops have also been fielded in the city and the surrounding areas, to monitor movement of men and vehicles. As a further countermeasure, General Ver ordered the revitalization of the Cotabato city garrison command to beef up the city's police force. The latest grenade explosions in Cotabato city occurred 9 days ago, when terrorists lobbed 2 grenades in downtown Cotabato. Two suspects have been arrested.

AFP REPORTS TANADA ASSUMES PDP LEADERSHIP

OW071329 Hong Kong AFP in English 1255 GMT 7 Feb 82

[Text] Cebu City, Philippines, 7 Feb (AFP) -- Eighty-four year old former Philippine Senator Lorenzo Tanada, who is staunchly against United States military bases in this country, assumed leadership today of a new opposition party named the Filipino Democratic Party (PDP).

The PDP held a five-hour kick-off rally before a crowd of about 7,000 in a historic park in this central Philippine city, some 552 kilometers (345 miles) southeast of Manila, capping a two-day party convention. The new party urged a national reconciliation movement which would include communists and Muslim separatists and the full restoration of civil liberties.

The elderly Tanada amended a [words indistinct] program which called for the "denuclearization" of U.S. bases in the country to add that the party [words indistinct] objected to the presence of any foreign base in the country.

The PDP party program, however, fell short of calling for the immediate dismantling of U.S. naval and air force bases in the Philippines, as Mr Tanada had earlier hoped.

Before the formal organization of the PDP, Mr Tanada headed a Manila-based opposition party called Lakas ng Bayan (Strength of the People). Mr Tanada said he would return to Manila and propose to his colleagues in the Lakas ng Bayan (Laban) Party to merge with the PDP. Mr Tanada also earlier signed an agreement in principle to unite with other opposition blocks such as the old Nationalista and Liberal Party. He said the PDP would soon meet with the NP and LP leadership to map this out.

United States-based oppositionists, among them former Senators Benigno Aquino and Raul Manglapus, had sent their messages of support to the PDP and likewise urged them to unite with other groups towards a unified front against the administration of President Ferdinand Marcos.

Former Senator Salvador Laurel, leader of a faction in the Nationalista Party, urged the closing of ranks among some 14 regional and national opposition groups. Mr Laurel said he "expects the Marcos regime to collapse [words indistinct] year," ending that if [words indistinct] opposition is not united, "either the military or the extreme left may take over."

Mr Laurel [words indistinct] basis of his prediction was the "worsening poverty and economic crisis, repeated betrayal of the people's trust and abuses by the present regime, and increasing [words indistinct] extravagance and corruption."

NEW SANCTIONS TO BE ENFORCED AGAINST USSR, POLAND

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 22 (KYODO) -- The government decided Monday to enforce new sanctions against the Soviet Union and Poland as further warning against a deterioration of the political situation in Poland. The new sanctions would be announced by Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa Tuesday morning after they are approved at Tuesday's Cabinet meeting presided over by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki.

The sanctions worked out by the Japanese Government officials referred to the restrictions announced earlier this month by Britain against the Soviet Union and Poland, and similar moves by West Germany and other West European countries to impose similar sanctions.

Government sources here said the government restrictions include such steps against the Soviet Union as indefinite postponement of the annual consultative meeting scheduled to be held sometime this summer in Tokyo based on the 1981 Japanese-Soviet trade and payment agreement, and scaling down scientific and technological exchanges between the two nations.

As for Poland, they said such steps as restricting movements of Polish diplomats in Japan, curtailment of scientific and technological exchanges and halt in extension of new credits were to be taken soon.

OFFICIAL ON SALE OF PIPE-LAYING MACHINES TO USSR

OW221207 Tokyo KYODO in English 1155 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 22 (KYODO) -- A top Foreign Ministry official said Monday a Japanese company's deal to export pipelayers to the Soviet Union does not constitute a breach of a Japanese pledge to go along with U.S. economic sanctions against the Soviet Union. The official, who declined to be named, said the export deal was made by Komatsu Ltd., a major construction machinery maker, last November on a cash payment basis before martial law was proclaimed in Poland. "Therefore," he said, "there is no problematical point about the deal."

The Foreign Ministry official was commenting on a NEWSWEEK magazine report that Komatsu, which had earlier signed a contract to export 400 pipelayers to the Soviet Union, contracted to sell another 500 machines to the communist nation after President Reagan imposed economic sanctions against Moscow in December in connection with the Polish crisis.

The report said the additional export deal by Komatsu thus constitutes breach of a Japanese pledge that the Tokyo government would not allow any Japanese enterprise to export pipeline layers to the Soviet Union, taking advantage of the U.S. economic sanctions. As part of the economic sanctions, the U.S. Government had Caterpillar Tractor Company cancel its contract to supply 200 pipeline layers, worth dollar 900 million, to the Soviet Union.

MINISTER SAYS USSR WAS ASKED TO REMOVE MISSILES

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 19 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Friday disclosed that Japan had asked the Soviet Union to remove SS-20, SS-4 and SS-5 nuclear missiles from the Far East region. Sakurauchi disclosed this for the first time before the House of Representatives Budget Committee in reply to Socialist interpellator Takahiro Yokomichi who questioned him in connection with nuclear disarmament.

Sakurauchi said that Deputy Foreign Minister Kansuke Yanagiya, the Japanese representative to the Japan-Soviet working-level consultations in January, had requested that the Soviet Union remove its nuclear missiles from the Far East.

In connection with the European nuclear arms limitation negotiations now underway between the United States and the Soviet Union, Shinichiro Asao, director general of the North American Affairs Bureau of the Foreign Ministry, explained that Japan had asked the U.S. to keep in mind the possibility of the Soviets deploying nuclear weapons in Asia. He told the Budget Committee that Japan, since the days of former President Jimmy Carter, had asked the U.S. to conduct such negotiations with the Soviet Union from a global viewpoint.

He stressed that if the SS-20's and other Soviet nuclear missiles were removed from Europe and deployed in the areas east of the Ural Mountains, they would pose a serious threat to Japan.

LDP'S ESAKI LEAVES FOR TRADE TALKS IN U.S.

OW200353 Tokyo KYODO in English 0242 GMT 20 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Feb 20 (KYODO) -- A Liberal-Democratic Party mission, led by former Minister of International Trade and Industry Masumi Esaki, left for the United States Saturday to seek understanding of Japan's views in the trade relations between the two countries. The eight-member mission of the LDP's Special Committee on International Economic Relations will refute the increasing calls in the U.S. Congress for reciprocity in trade with foreign countries.

During a week-long tour of New York and Washington, Esaki and other members are scheduled to talk with business leaders, the press and government and congressional representatives. Among those expected to meet with the mission are Vice President George Bush, Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige, U.S. Trade Representative William Brock and John Danforth, chairman of the Senate Subcommittee for International Trade.

Esaki will explain to the Americans measures the Japanese Government has recently introduced to open its market for foreign trade partners. The measures include a package decrease of tariff rates two years ahead of the original schedule set during General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) negotiations, and lifting of nontariff barriers so as to meet the requests by the United States and the European Community.

The mission will lay stress on refuting the moves in the Congress for reciprocal legislation which was said to be aimed to impose the same treatment on foreign traders in the U.S. market that the American companies meet in the foreign market. Esaki will express concern about the reciprocal legislation by saying that it will lead to protectionism and affect the world economy by curbing free trade.

ITO VIEWS DEFENSE PROGRAM ESTIMATE, USSR BUILDUP

[Excerpt] Tokyo, Feb 20 (KYODO) -- The 1981 mid-term defense program estimate, now being compiled by the Defense Agency, will give priority to building up sea and air defense capabilities, Defense Agency Chief Soichiro Ito indicated Saturday. At a lower house Budget Committee meeting, the director general of the agency affirmed a ruling Liberal-Democratic Party dietman's request to do so, by saying, "Accents have to be given to certain points in the program estimate." The 1981 mid-term program estimate will cover the five years from 1983 to 1987.

Ito said the Soviet Union has been building up its military capabilities in the Far East in the last 10 years, posing threats in and around the region. The Defense Agency has so far cited merely an increase of "potential threats" by the Soviet Union. Ito did not elaborate whether he regards the potential threats to have turned into actual ones.

ITO DISCUSSES EASING OF ARMS EXPORT RESTRICTIONS

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 22 (KYODO) -- Defense Agency Chief Soichiro Ito suggested Monday Japan can export arms and military technology jointly developed with another country or countries despite the current government policy banning such deals. The indication was given when Ito said the government will study such arms export "case by case."

The remark, made at a House of Representatives Budget Committee meeting, may be a sign that the government will make an exception out of the United States concerning its policy which virtually bans export of weapons and military technology.

Earlier this month, Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said the government has to respond to U.S. requests for transfer of military-related technology in order to execute the Japan-U.S. security treaty smoothly. The United States is reportedly interested in advanced Japanese electronics technology that can be applied for use in radar and other surveillance equipment.

AGROTECHNOLOGY TALKS WITH PRC END IN BEIJING

[Excerpts] Beijing, Feb 17 (KYODO) -- Japan and China agreed Wednesday to conduct a joint project to breed a new rice plant species this year in a move to promote Japan-China agricultural technology exchange. The agreement came during the first two-day conference of Japanese and Chinese agro-technology officials aimed at exchanging agricultural technology, which closed here the same day.

The participants agreed on a joint study to breed a new species of winter-hardy, disease-resistant, high-yielding rice by drawing on their respective genetic resources. They also decided to initiate a joint study concerning the forecasting of blight and harmful insects. They further agreed that the two countries would exchange inspection missions to study various themes.

Japan will send two teams to China to study natural enemies of that country's forests and technology relating to harmful migratory insects, while China will send six teams on animal quarantine, agricultural meteorology, forestry resources, agricultural economics, and other themes.

STATE-RUN FIRM TO BID FOR PRC OIL CONTRACT

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 18, (KYODO) -- Japan National Oil Corp. said Thursday it will enter a bid for offshore oil drilling covering 150,000 square kilometers in southwestern China. The state-run organization expressed its intention to take part in the tender one day after the China National Offshore Oil Corp. started the first round of bidding for the petroleum exploitation. In addition to JNOC, Japan's Idemitsu Oil and major oil companies of the United States and Europe are expected to bid for the Chinese project.

According to the Chinese Oil Corp., the Chinese sent letters of notification to 46 companies in 12 countries which had concluded geophysical survey agreements and paid for surveys at the Pearl River mouth, the southern part of Beibu Gulf, the western part of the Yingge Sea basin and the South Yellow Sea. The two stage-bidding envelops 150,000 square kilometers in the northern and southern parts of the South Yellow Sea, the Pearl River mouth basin, southern part of the Beibu Gulf basin and western part of Yingge Sea basin.
"Areas opened for bidding are expected to contain large reserves," a China National Offshore Oil Corp. spokesman said in Beijing. "Bidders may bid on any of the designated areas, or an area with a number of adjoining blocks." JNOC officials said they hope to outbid others for the right to seek oil in the Pearl River mouth region. They predicted that drilling in one such potential area will cost about dollar 90 million (about yen 21 billion).

PROTEST LODGED ON 20 FEB SR-71 'INFILTRATION'

SK201350 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 1300 GMT 20 Feb 82

[Text] The U.S. imperialist aggressors, who are exacerbating the situation to an extreme degree while running wild with rackets to provoke a new war in South Korea, committed acts of espionage against the northern half of the republic by infiltrating an SR-71, high-speed, high-altitude, reconnaissance plane deep into the territorial airspace east of Kosong, Kangwon Province of our country, and flying the spy plane all the way to Musudan, North Hamgyong Province and in the coastal airspace of Chongjin, from 1115 till 1125 on 20 February. The U.S. imperialist aggressors committed serious military provocations of infiltrating spy planes into our country's territorial airspace on 16 and 19 February, too.

Now, bringing into South Korea a vast number of aggressive military forces from abroad, including the continental United States, they have deployed them for actual combat and are staging the largest-scale war exercise named "Team Spirit 1982," simulating offensive operations against the northern half of the republic. Simultaneously, they are further intensifying acts of espionage against our country. This shows that the U.S. imperialist aggressors' maneuvers for a new war in South Korea have reached an extremely serious stage.

The U.S. imperialist aggressors should stop all acts hostile to our country without delay. If the U.S. imperialist aggressors, despite our repeated warnings, continue to infringe on our people's sovereignty and adhere to an adventurous war policy, they will be held fully responsible for the consequences arising therefrom.

NODONG SINMUN DENOUNCES U.S. 'WAR MANEUVERS'

[NODONG SINMUN 20 February commentary: "Reckless and Adventurous War Maneuvers"]

[Text] While accelerating preparations for a new war, the U.S. imperialists are continuously deploying aggressive troops and military equipment in South Korea. According to news reports, the U.S. imperialists plan to deploy 18 A-10 close support planes and 1,200 air force personnel in South Korea by the early part of March. They also plan to deploy an additional 24 A-10 close support planes in South Korea in the latter half of this year. They are attempting to deploy OA-37 planes there. On 17 February, the U.S. Defense Department announced that it will transfer 170 improved Hawk missiles and 723 rockets to the South Korean puppets.

The U.S. imperialists are now staging a large-scale war exercise called "Team Spirit 1982" in South Korea with the South Korean puppets. Deployed in this military exercise, which simulates an attack against the northern half of the republic, is sophisticated military hardware and equipment. The aim of the U.S. imperialists in attempting to increase the U.S. forces occupying South Korea and in transfering large quantities of missiles and rockets to the puppets in this situation is crystal clear.

The U.S. imperialists' invariable, wild desire is to hold onto South Korea militarily forever and to dominate the whole of Korea through strength. In order to achieve this desire, the U.S. imperialists have continuously increased the U.S. forces occupying South Korea, have transferred sophisticated military equipment to the South Korean puppets -- the local mercenary for their war policy -- and have accelerated the modernization of the puppet armed forces.

This year the U.S. imperialists have more frantically stepped up their maneuvers for a military buildup. In accordance with the plan for this buildup, they have greatly increased the numbers of the U.S. forces occupying South Korea. In particular, they have taken measures to strengthen the collection of ground intelligence on the northern half of the republic and to increase the ground troops and mobility of the U.S. forces occupying South Korea.

By supplying modern lethal weapons to the puppets, the U.S. imperialists have instigated them to confrontation and war. Because of the U.S. imperialists' maneuvers to increase military capabilities and to provoke a new war, South Korea has been converted into a powder keg of war and into a nuclear war base. Tension has been created there to the point where war might break out at any moment.

Peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea is the urgent desire of the people and the trend of the times. The Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland has recently proposed convening a joint meeting of politicians of the North and South and overseas to peacefully solve the Korean question. This proposal has won broad support at home and abroad. Voices have been raised to demand the implementation of this proposal.

The U.S. imperialists' maneuvers for military buildup and their military aid to the puppets are a brazen challenge to this demand and are grave acts threatening peace in Korea and Asia.

The U.S. imperialists say that they have increased the U.S. forces occupying South Korea and have transferred missiles and rockets to the puppets to offset someone's numerical supremacy and to maintain a military balance. The world's people well know that the U.S. imperialists' sophisticated strategic and tactical weapons form a forest in South Korea, that many nuclear weapons are deployed there and that their manpower strength far surpasses ours. The reference to military supremacy and balance is a smokescreen designed to justify their maneuvers for military buildup and war in South Korea. No one will ever be deceived by this smokescreen. The U.S. imperialists try to threaten someone with strength and to achieve their wild desire for aggression. This is anachronistic. By doing so, they will only reveal in more detail their true colors as ones who, while hindering peace and the peaceful reunification of Korea, believe in strength, as war maniacs and as disturbers of the peace.

While sitting astride South Korea for 37 years, the United States has supplied large quantities of weapons, has instigated the puppets and has pursued a policy of aggression and war. By doing so, it has gained nothing except to reveal its aggressive nature and to degrade itself.

There is no guarantee that, should the United States continue to kick up military rackets by clinging to the policy of strength we see today, this would not spread the flames of war. Should the United States start a war in Korea, it will never benefit from this.

This United States should stop its indiscreet act of pursuing an adventurous policy of war against our people and immediately withdraw all its aggressive troops, including nuclear weapons, from South Korea. If the United States continues to play at war-rope-dancing, without trying to meet the trend of the times, it will face stronger denunciation and rejection from our people and the world's people as an aggressor and as one who tries to provoke a war.

NODONG SINMUN HITS U.S. OVERSEAS MILITARY BASES

[Text] Pyongyang, February 20 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN Saturday carries a signed article headlined "Removal of Aggressive Military Bases Is Important Guarantee for World Peace and Security." The article says that peace and security of the world cannot be maintained unless the overseas military bases of the imperialists are dismantled.

It continues: Through their aggressive military bases overseas the imperialists openly interfere in the internal affairs of other countries, threaten them and put pressure upon them with armed forces in a bid to bring them into the sphere of their domination and back economic infiltration militarily.

By mobilizing their aggressive armed forces deployed in the military bases in alien lands, the imperialists even overthrow governments which advance along the road of anti-imperialism and independence and place their faithful servants in "power," support reactionary and anti-popular governments and brutally suppress the just struggle of peoples for freedom and liberation.

The U.S. imperialists have bestially suppressed the just struggle of the South Korean people for the democratisation of society and national reunification by mobilizing their aggression armed forces occupying South Korea and seated military fascist Chon Tu-hwan in "power."

By relying upon their aggressive bases in the Caribbean region they also interfere in the internal affairs of the countries there and threaten and blackmail with armed forces the people struggling for independence, building of a new society and freedom and liberation.

Noting that the United States is expanding overseas military bases and reinforcing their aggression armed forces, the article continues: It attached great importance to South Korea in carrying out its strategic plan for a war of aggression. Tens of thousands of U.S. imperialist aggression troops are constantly stationed in South Korea and there are several dozen aggressive military bases equipped with numerous nuclear weapons and other modern mass destruction weapons and combat equipment.

Today South Korea has turned literally into a nuclear depot of the U.S. imperialists and their logistic base for aggression, a source of the increasing tension on the Korean Peninsula and the rest of Asia and a dangerous hotbed of war threatening world peace and security.

The imperialists are frequently staging powder-reeking war exercises for going over to a real war with their overseas aggressive military bases as a springboard, the article notes, and continues: This was proved by a series of war exercises staged last year in their aggressive military bases in the Far East, Indian Ocean, Europe and the Caribbean region. The United States is now staging reckless war exercises codenamed "Team Spirit 1982" with the mobilization of huge armed forces stationed in its aggressive military bases in and around South Korea. They are, in actuality, a "test war" and "preliminary war" to kindle the flame of a new war in Korea.

The imperialists' stepped-up policy of turning others' territories into their military bases and their war manoeuvres are bringing the international situation to the highest pitch of strain and gravely menace world peace and security. In the countries where there are aggressive military bases of the imperialists, their sovereignty is violated and the destiny of their people flouted. This is clearly testified by the reality of South Korea which has been reduced to a colony and military base of the U.S. imperialists.

All the anti-imperialist, independent forces and peace-loving forces of the world should actively struggle with united efforts to thwart and frustrate the imperialists' policy of turning other countries into their military bases, and each country should refrain from such act as leaving its territory as a military appendage of the imperialists.

U.S. UNITS PARTICIPATING IN 'TEAM SPIRIT' NOTED

[Text] Pyongyang, February 22 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors reportedly moved the Third Adjustment Support Force of the U.S. Third Marine Landing Brigade with some 60 tons of equipment from the Kadena air base in Okinawa to South Korea on the very day when the criminal war exercises "Team Spirit 1982" started. They also plan to move to South Korea 800 troops and 27 fighter and transport planes of the U.S. Tactical Air Force Command.

Besides, they plan to send shortly the "Mercury" of the U.S. naval force carrying over 23,000 tons of vehicles and repair machines for the U.S. Marines participating in the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises from Naha port of Okinawa to Pusan. On the other hand, they are contemplating to send a fleet of vessels carrying 5,000 men including the notorious aircraft carrier "Midway" of the U.S. Seventh Fleet to South Korea to participate in the war exercises and move "F-4 G" planes of the 26th Tactical Training Attack Force, one of their biggest tactical air force units, to South Korea from the Philippines to have a test of "modern electronic disturbing operations."

During the war exercises, they are reported to mobilise "F-15," "F-16," "B-52," "F-111" and various other planes of new type and "AWACS" and test the "capacity of prolonged air battle through the air refueling station."

RENMIN RIBAO CITED ON U.S. AMBASSADOR'S REMARKS

SK210925 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0849 GMT 21 Feb 82

[Text] Beijing, February 19 (KCNA) -- The Chinese PEOPLE'S DAILY February 19 carried a short commentary titled "What He Can Say to Himself" denouncing the ridiculous utterances of the U.S. ambassador to South Korea supporting the so-called "unification proposal" brought forward by the South Korean puppet clique. The commentary says:

Recently U.S. Ambassador Walker, highly speaking of Chon Tu-hwan's "unification proposal," jabbered that he had made a big advance in "withdrawing" his fascist means. This is "what he can say to himself."

It was made known that personages of all walks of life and students of South Korea who were sentenced to prison terms by the Chon Tu-hwan clique in the past one year number as many as 100,000.

The South Korean authorities recently passed prison terms on 25 patriotic figures and young people. Kim Tae-chung, a well-known democratic figure of South Korea, is still in prison. All this shows that Chon Tu-hwan has not made a big advance in "withdrawing" his fascist means but woven a big plot.

It goes without saying that Walker in Seoul knows all these acts of Chon Tu-hwan like the palm of his hand. As long as the U.S. troops are staying in South Korea, neither democracy in South Korea can be argued about nor can the peaceful reunification of Korea be realised.

Mr. Walker had better stop such talk which he can make only to himself for Chon Tu-hwan but no one will believe and deeply think of what the United States itself should. [as received]

CPRF DENOUNCES SPY TRIAL IN SOUTH KOREA

SK210916 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0844 GMT 21 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 21 (KCNA) -- The Secretariat of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] issued Information No. 216 on February 20 denouncing the Chon Tu-hwan military fascist clique for launching an anti-communist smear campaign recently by rigging up one more "spy case."

According to a report, on February 17 the Chon Tu-hwan group at a trial held at the puppet Seoul District Criminal Court passed death upon a Japan-resident Korean electronic technician Kim Hon-chi on charges of "violation of the national security law" and two years in prison with a three-year stay of execution and suspension of qualification for two years upon his wife Pak Chong-suk, the information noted, and said: As for Kim Hon-chi, he had once been a "Mindan"-lining cadre and worked as an employee of the South Korean branch of a Japanese company.

Nevertheless, the Chon Tu-hwan group tries to connect him with us groundlessly, claiming that he infiltrated into South Korea to "obtain industrial information" and "collect military secrets" on the "orders" of the North.

Noting that now voices calling for the realization of the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo and hailing and supporting the proposal for the convocation of a 100-men joint conference put forward by us some time ago are ringing out louder from among the people at home and abroad, the information stressed: Under such conditions the Chon Tu-hwan group rigged up a shocking "spy case" to deliver itself from a quandry as its so-called "January 22 proposal" and "temporary work" can no longer cover up its splittist nature.

NODONG SINMUN SUPPORTS CPRF CONFERENCE PROPOSAL

[Text] Pyongyang, February 22 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today runs a signed article titled "Peaceful Reunification Is Incompatible With War Manoeuvres" in support of the proposal of the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] for the convocation of a 100-men joint conference.

Noting that our proposal for convening a 100-men joint conference reflects our party's stand of opening up a peaceful phase in the solution of the reunification question by means of negotiations, the article says: If the peaceful reunification is to be achieved, factors threatening peace should be removed first of all. The present South Korean rulers are loud-mouthed about "peace," "unification" and "detente," but, in actual deeds, are disturbing peace, opposing reunification and heightening tension.

The stepped-up new war provocation maneouvres of the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets are increasing the tension in our country and bringing the situation to the brink of war. Peaceful reunification is in no way compatible with war manoeuvres. Peace would be permanently threatened and no peaceful phase be opened up in the solution of the reunification question, unless the tension is relaxed and the danger of war removed in our country.

The present reality in which the tension is heightened and peace gravely menaced due to the anti-communist confrontation and war manoeuvres of the South Korean puppets urgently demands an early arrangement of a realistic consultative body to ease tension and improve the relations between North and South.

The 100-men joint conference proposed by the Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland will serve as a realistic multilateral consultative body for discussing and accelerating the solution of the reunification question at the present stage.

If the South Korean puppets have any slightest intention to achieve national reunification, they should not raise war rackets and aggravate the situation but stop the reckless war gamble and refrain from obstructing reunification.

The South Korean rulers must not hinder the convocation of the 100-men joint conference but guarantee the freedom of political activities in South Korea and ensure all the necessary conditions for the proposed politicians to participate in the conference. The attitude towards the 100-men joint conference is a touchstone showing whether one truly desires reunification or seeks division, the article says.

ANNIVERSARY OF NORTH'S FIRST GOVERNMENT MARKED

[Text] Pyongyang, February 22 (KCNA) -- Papers here Sunday dedicated articles to the 35th anniversary of the establishment of the People's Committee of North Korea by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song on February 21, 1947. A NODONG SINMUN article headlined "Correct Solution of Question of Power Is Important Guarantee for Victory of Revolution" says that the People's Committee of North Korea was the first government of proletarian dictatorship in our country.

It says: The question of power is of great importance in the revolution and construction. The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song established the Provisional People's Committee of North Korea, the central power organ of North Korea, on February 8, 1946, shortly after liberation, on the basis of the achievements and practical experiences in the building of political power in the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle.

The Provisional People's Committee of North Korea was a government of people's democratic dictatorship which was not only fundamentally different from the bourgeois government but distinguished from the preceding governments of the working class. It was a government capable of successfully enforcing progressive democracy.

Under the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, the Provisional People's Committee of North Korea carried out with credit its mission -- the task of the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution in the northern half of the republic and the task to build a revolutionary democratic base, a reliable guarantee for national reunification, the article says, and continues: After successfully carrying out the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution, our people faced the new task to fulfill the socialist revolution and it stood out as an important question to solve correctly the question of power.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, with his scientific penetration into the realities of the northern half and the demand of the developing revolution at that time, put forward the original policy of establishing the government of proletarian dictatorship in such a way as to strengthen and develop the existing people's government. This indicated a most correct way of solving the question of power arising in going over to the stage of the socialist revolution from the anti-imperialist, anti-feudal democratic revolution. He strengthened and developed the Provisional People's Committee of North Korea into the North Korean People's Committee with legal guarantee through democratic elections.

The People's Committee of North Korea was also a powerful weapon of the socialist revolution and socialist construction. It successfully discharged its historic mission as a power of proletarian dictatorship operating in the first days of the period of transition to socialism and all its functions went over to the Government of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea with its founding on September 9, 1948.

The power of the DPRK founded by the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song and led by the glorious party centre is in the hand of the workers, peasants, soldiers and working intellectuals and our state sets it as a most important mission to defend and guard the interests of the workers, peasants, soldiers and working intellectuals freed from exploitation and oppression for good. Our people owe to the Government of the DPRK their genuine political rights and boundlessly happy life.

OFFICIAL CALLS LOAN TALKS IN TOKYO 'FRUITFUL'

SK200821 Seoul YONHAP in English 0744 GMT 20 Feb 82

[Text] Seoul, Feb. 20 (YONHAP) -- Korea's First Assistant Minister for Foreign Affairs Kong No-myong, Saturday assessed as "fruitful and practical" the second Korea-Japan preliminary talks, held in Tokyo Thursday and Friday on Seoul's request for six billion dollars of economic aid. Kong, fresh from the Tokyo meeting, was commenting on the results of the bilateral conference.

Meeting with reporters here, Kong said that the talks had provided a step toward a political solution of the loan issue and had enabled the two sides to rest their cases. Pointing out that the talks were part of efforts to arrange a foreign ministers' meet, Kong said the two sides agreed to discuss further details through diplomatic channels.

KOREA HERALD Report

[YONHAP "News Analysis" column]

[Text] Korea and Japan have made some headway toward a negotiated settlement on the outstanding issue of Seoul's request for $6,000 million in soft public loans, as they have wrapped up their final working-level deliberations. In the Tokyo meeting Korea has explained the details of the request to Japan and Japan is in a position to present the amount of loans it intends to render.

In a press conference Tuesday, Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said he will disclose the amount of Japanese loans to Korea during the forthcoming foreign ministers' meeting. Korea initially showed negative response to the second working-level contacts, saying preliminary talks would be meaningless unless Japan produced a concrete proposal. Japan, however, showed a positive attitude toward preliminary talks by calling for Korea's minute explanation of the loan request in a joint meeting of working-level officials from four Japanese ministries.

Demanding the explanation, the Japanese Foreign Ministry made it clear that the ministry could not solve the issue without the help of the Finance Ministry, the International Trade and Industry Ministry and the Economic Planning Agency. In this vein, Japan may be said to have been since in its request for more working-level talks which were originally intended to be a foreign ministers' meeting. [sentence as published]

Korea explained the 11 projects to be financed by the $6 billion and underscored the need for the loans. Although it still remains to be seen how well Korea convinced Japan in the working-level talks, Korean First Assistant Minister of Foreign Affairs Kong No-myong implied that the mood for a Seoul-Tokyo foreign ministers' meeting has been created by saying, "Japan's understanding must have deepened." Japanese Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi Thursday appraised the working-level talks as conducive.

The two countries in the working-level negotiations have deepened their understanding of each other's position on the issue of economic cooperation and both desire an early solution to it. Sakurauchi said in a news conference Tuesday that Japan will unveil the amount of its public loans to Korea during the forthcoming foreign ministers' meeting. This may be interpreted as Japan's retreat from its previous position that it will render loans to Korea in annual installments over the next five years. In this connection, Sakurauchi might visit Seoul next month to hammer out an early settlement of the loan issue.

A ranking Japanese diplomatic official, however, dampened that speculation by noting Sakurauchi plans to visit Seoul in early May to carve out a negotiated settlement with his Korean counterpart No Sin-yong. The Japanese foreign minister is expected to visit Seoul during the holiday period starting May 3. The Japanese Constitution Day falls on May 3 and the Children's Day on May 5.

Japan's plan is to start work on the amount of soft public loans it will consider rendering to Korea on the basis of the result of the second working-level negotiations. Korea and Japan are expected to continue negotiations over the amount, but there seems to be a wall between the positions of the two countries.

Specifically, Korea wants $6 billion in low-interest long-term conditions, whereas Japan is said to be considering rendering $3.5-4 billion ($1.5 billion in ODA loans and the remaining $2-2.5 billion in EXIM Bank loans). As the two countries have completed working-level negotiations, they may head for another tug of war over the amount of the loans.

PRIME MINISTER URGES STRONGER SECURITY MEASURES

[Text] Seoul, Feb. 20 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Prime Minister Yu Chang-sun Saturday called for stepped-up national self-defense posture to safeguard the national security and the people's survival.

In an address at a commissioning ceremony for the ROTC (Reserve Officers' Training Corps) officers at the Army Consolidated Administration School here, Yu pointed out that the North Korean communists have not abandoned their strategy of communizing the Korean Peninsula by force.

He said that they have simply intensified their aggression and slander against South Korea, while disguising them as peaceful overtures.

"Under the international political realities of today, peace can be attained only through the balance of power, and we should strive to protect the nation's security and prosperity by securing superiority of power and strengthening our system of self-defense," he said.

CHON REASSURES FOREIGN INVESTORS ON ECONOMY

[Text] New York, Feb. 22 (YONHAP) -- South Korean President Chon Tu-hwan said in an interview published here Monday that he was "very confident" about his country's ability to repay foreign debts, and reassured foreign investors that money invested in South Korea "will not go sour."

In an interview with the INSTITUTIONAL INVESTOR magazine, the Korean president said that his government was in the process of liberalizing all economic activities, except in those cases where government approval is absolutely necessary because of the impact on the whole economy as a whole.

Chon said that he would see to it that the country's economic policies would not be distorted by extraneous factors, such as political pressures. "It is my unwavering conviction that the economy must be operated according to economic considerations and judgments."

SPK: THAILAND ATTACKS WITH TOXIC CHEMICALS

BK191524 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1457 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 19 Feb (SPK) -- According to a military source, during the past few days in February, Thai artillery has fired chemical shells into Kampuchean territory.

On 11 February, at about 1800 and 1830, chemical rounds fired by 105-mm artillery inside Thailand fell to the west and to the north of Oda in Phnum Malai, the border province of Battambang, causing vomiting in about 20 people.

In the afternoon of 14 February, nine chemical rounds of (?105-mm) artillery fired from Thailand exploded in Phnum Malai. The chemicals contained in the shells fired from Thailand caused tears and vomiting among several Kampuchean civilians.

'Acts of War' Protested

BK191539 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1505 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 19 Feb (SPK) -- The PRK Ministry of Foreign Affairs today issued a statement energetically protesting against the fact that Thai artillery fired chemical shells from 105-mm artillery against Kampuchean territory recently. Here is the text of the statement:

On 11 February 1982 Thai artillery fired many 105-mm shells with toxic chemical materials into the region south of Phnum Malai, Battambang Province.

On 14 February 1982 Thai artillery again fired 105-mm shells with toxic chemicals into the same region.

These attacks claimed 20 victims from among the local civilian population, who suffered violent vomiting.

Following the recent deliberate attack by the Thai navy against a Kampuchean vessel on patrol in Kampuchean territorial waters, these premeditated acts of war on the part of the Thai authorities constitute an extremely grave provocation agains the sovereignty and territorial integrity of the PRK and a dangerous threat to peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The Thai authorities have thus stepped up their hostile activities toward the reviving Kampuchean people, thereby placing themselves at the service of the Chinese hegemonists and expansionists, who are colluding with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces.

It should be noted that these criminal acts by the Thai autho.ities are taking place at the time when the Reagan administration has just decided to produce chemical weapons on a huge scale while launching a campaign of slander against the Soviet Union on the so-called use of chemical weapons in Afghanistan and Indochina.

The PRK Government energetically protests against these extremely dangerous acts of war by the Thai authorities and severely condemns them.

It demands that the Thai authorities immediately cease these acts and strictly respect the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Kampuchea. The Thai Government must be held entirely responsible for all the consequences arising from its acts of aggression against the Kampuchean people.

HUN SEN INTERVIEWED ON INDOCHINESE RELATIONS

BK200740 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Interview granted to a station correspondent by Foreign Minister Hun Sen on the significance of the fifth foreign ministerial conference of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos -- recorded, date not given]

[Text] [Question] Recently the fifth foreign ministerial conference of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos ended successfully in Vientiane, the capital of the LPDR. Would you please comment on the significance of this fifth ministerial conference?

[Answer] The fifth Indochinese foreign ministerial conference in Vientiane is important to the strengthening and development of relations between the three countries and to peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The conference was held to prepare for a summit conference of the three Indochinese countries in 1982.

We exchanged numerous (?views) on convening the summit conference of the three countries. During this conference, the three countries because it provides numerous possibilities to develop and strengthen our relations, especially the development of cooperation in the economic field and other fields.

In addition to strengthening and developing relations between our three countries and preparations for the summit conference, we also discussed the Nonaligned Movement. The seventh summit conference of the Nonaligned Movement will be convened in Baghdad, Iraq. We discussed various principles for strengthening and guaranteeing the Nonaligned Movement's true nature as an organization against the imperialists, the colonialists and all forms of oppression. We discussed different principles aimed at making the seventh summit conference in Baghdad successful.

Concurrently, we discussed at length solutions to peace and stability in Southeast Asia, because the present situation in Southeast Asia is tense due to the permanent threats of the Chinese expansionists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists. This has had bad consequences for the national construction efforts not only for the Indochinese countries but also for ASEAN countries as well as Burma. Thus, as a solution, the conference reiterated the proposal made at the 36th UN General Assembly by Comrade Phoun Sipaseut, LPDR deputy prime minister and foreign minister, on behalf of the three Indochinese countries. It is because this is the only principle and the only way of making Southeast Asia a zone of peace, stability, friendship and cooperation. Taking any path other than this would be tantamount to proceping toward an impasse. For three years, ASEAN has followed the policy of the Chinese and the imperialists against Kampuchea as well as the Indochinese countries. They cannot reverse the situation or ease the tension in Southeast Asia; but the situation has become more tense and it serves the interests of the Chinese expansionists and the imperialists, because this is a political game being played by Beijing and Washington.

In order to demonstrate ways to achieve peace to ASEAN and the Chinese, the conference raised a number of principles for a peaceful solution.

First, the relations between Indochina and China must be resolved. We are ready to negotiate with China on all issues related to Indochina in general, as well those related to separate countries in Indochina, if the Chinese give a positive answer to the Indochinese countries' proposal. The PRK and the LPDR recalled their support for the Vietnamese policy and the Vietnamese proposal to the Chinese party to end the border conflicts, as well as the continuation of the third round of talks between China and Vietnam. Concerning the problems between China and Vietnam, I would like to point out that it now depends on the Chinese side to respond. If it gives a positive reply, the (?tense) situation between Indochina and China, as well as that along the Vietnamese-Chinese border, the Lao-Chinese border and Kampuchean-Thai border -- where the Chinese continue to support Pol Pot's forces -- will end and stability will be restored. Thus, it depends on whether China wants peace or not. There are already keys to the solution.

There is another issue that we discussed in order to pave the way for negotiations on this problem. The Indochinese countries raised their proposal to ASEAN — a call which lies within the framework of the proposals made by Comrade Phoun Sipaseut at the United Nations. We always maintain that the formula to achieve peace and stability in Southeast Asia must be in conformity with both regional and international conferences. It is true that this is not a new point — concerning this conference and this issue — but it is the only direction that ASEAN can take. Comparing it to a football match, the ball is now with the ASEAN side; if ASEAN kicks it, Indochina will join in. If ASEAN continues to pursue the line it has over the past three years, it will not benefit either the Indochinese or the ASEAN countries. ASEAN must realize that China is the greater threat to them and to stability and security in their countries. The fact that the Chinese support the Maoists in their countries and the Chinese residents control and damage their economy, and undermine political security in their countries are a great danger for the ASEAN countries. Therefore, negotiations between ASEAN and Indochina to put an end to external threats are not only in Indochina's interest, but they are also in their own interest.

Another important issue in the conference discussions was the Indochina-Thailand problem. Indochina has land and sea borders with Thailand. Kampuchea has land and sea borders with it. Laos has land and river borders with it. Vietnam has a sea border with it. Therefore, we made a separate proposal regarding relations between Indochina and Thailand. The Thais used to say that they were being threatened by Indochina. We Kampucheans also used to say that Thailand was a threat because it has colluded with the Chinese in using Khmer reactionaries to try to topple the PRK. Two other countries (?of Indochina) used to say so. Therefore, in order to put an end to (?threatening words) from both sides and for the security of all of us, (?during) this conference we recalled that in accordance with the results of the negotiations, Kampuchea and Vietnam will agree to withdraw a portion of the Vietnamese troops from Kampuchea and, concurrently, a demilitarized zone will be established with international supervision which is acceptable to the two parties.

I would like to comment separately on the issue of the Kampuchean-Thai border. In order to put an end to these (?threatening words), Thailand should stop playing with fire. What do I mean by saying that Thailand has been playing with fire and that they must stop doing so?

(?I mean) that Thailand has (?bowed) to the Chinese policy. The Thais are permitting the Chinese to interfere seriously in their internal affairs. Thailand is now faced with the problem of Maoists who are siding with Beijing and overseas Chinese who (?control) Thailand's economy. By allowing the Chinese to penetrate deeply into its interior, Thailand is facing danger. There are a large number of Chinese forces in Thailand because the Pol Pot Maoists are also Chinese forces. We call on Thailand to stop playing with fire. This is not only for the benefit of Kampuchea, but also for that of the Thai people.

If Thailand stops playing with fire, that is, if it stops colluding with China and using the reactionary Khmers — who are lackeys of Beijing and the imperialists — and it gathers them in one area — a specific place — Kampuchea and Vietnam would withdraw Vietnamese troops from the Thai border [words indistinct]. If they want more stability along the border area, the two sides should agree to set up a demilitarized zone. If Thailand withdraws its troops from the border to a distance agreed upon by the two parties, Kampuchea will withdraw its forces from the border in order to avoid any possibility of major armed confrontation by the armies of the two countries on opposite sides. We should do this with international observation or supervision which is acceptable to both sides. In doing so, Kampuchea does not set any conditions that Thailand must recognize Kampuchea in negotiations with it. If Thailand does not recognize Kampuchea, it will not die and that it is a fact.

In the past, Thailand never supported Kampuchea — this is the truth. Thailand used to cooperate with the French and the Japanese to fight against Kampuchea. Thailand used to commit aggression against Kampuchea. We do not want to recall the past, but this did occur. The Thais used to cooperate with the imperialists, French and the Japanese against Kampuchea. Thailand used to send troops into Kampuchea during wartime, when the U.S. committed aggression against Kampuchea. Thailand has opposed Kampuchea from 1979 up to now. Therefore, Kampuchea's conditions for negotiations with Thailand are concerned with the maintenance of peace and stability along the border. They are not related to Thai recognition of Kampuchea, because if it does not recognize Kampuchea, Kampuchea will not die.

In summary, this foreign ministerial conference in Vientiane was of significance (?for the following) reasons: First, (?this conference) was an important forum in the field of strengthening and developing solidarity among the three countries; secondly, it was a forum to express the peaceful good will of the Indochinese countries.

COVERAGE OF DK DELEGATION TRIP TO PRC FOR TALKS

19 Feb Departure

BK210103 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 20 Feb 82

[Text] A Democratic Kampuchean delegation led by Khieu Samphan, chairman of the State Presidium and prime minister of Democratic Kampuchea, left the fatherland for Beijing on 19 February in order to hold discussions with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, former Kampuchean head of state. They intend to meet and talk with the other Kampuchean groups on the problem of rallying forces to fight and drive out the Vietnamese aggressors from Kampuchea, our beloved fatherland. Despite their pressing engagements on the battlefield, the Democratic Kampuchean leaders have always worked for the coalition. Members of the delegation include Keat Chhon, minister attached to the Prime Minister's Office; Thuch Rin, secretary of state of the Ministry of Information; Pech Cheang, Democratic Kampuchean ambassador to the PRC; Suong Sikhoeun, chief of the Prime Minister's Office; and (In Sopheat), counsellor of the Democratic Kampuchean Embassy to the PRC, who is already in Beijing.

20 Feb Arrival

[Text] On 20 February 1982, the Democratic Kampuchean delegation led by Khieu Samphan, chairman of the State Presidium and prime minister of Democratic Kampuchea and provisional chairman of the Patriotic and Democratic Front of Great National Union of Kampuchea [PDFGNUK], arrived in Beijing -- capital of the People's Republic of China.

On that occasion, Khieu Samphan issued a statement to reporters and representatives of radio and television stations and Chinese and foreign news agencies on the purpose of the Democratic Kampuchean delegation's mission. The statement said: By firmly upholding its policy of great national union that it has been carrying out since 1979, the Democratic Kampuchean Government has always made every effort to achieve a union of all Kampuchean parties, provided that this union contributes to increasing the combat forces against the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors in all fields — military, political and diplomatic. A coalition must not adversely affect forces which are now struggling in Kampuchea.

Although we are very busy at the front, we have come to Beijing to meet and talk with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk with a sincere desire to achieve results. We also hope to meet His Excellency Son Sann here.

We would like to express our warm thanks to the PRC Government for its kind hospitality and the facilities granted to our delegation for the fulfilment of our mission.

Present on that occasion to welcome Prime Minister Khieu Samphan and our Democratic Kampuchean delegation were Huang Hua, PRC vice premier and minister of foreign affairs; Xiao Xiangqian, chief of the Asian Affairs Department of the PRC Foreign Ministry; and Sun Hao, PRC ambassador to Democratic Kampuchea. Pech Cheang, Democratic Kampuchean Ambassador; and (In Sopheap), counsellor of the Democratic Kampuchean Embassy; and other members of the embassy staff as well as Pong Peng Cheng, Samdech Norodom Sihanouk's representative, were also on hand to welcome the prime minister and our Democratic Kampuchean delegation.

Phnom Penh Commentary

[Unattributed commentary: "Beijing Is Laying Bare Its Pernicious Deceit"]

[Text] According to Western news sources, the Beijing ruling circles have summoned Son Sann, Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan to put their heads together in Beijing in the very near future with the intention of rallying the three traitorous groups into a coalition government against the PRK. In the past, the Beijing ruling circles feigned reluctance and disinclination, pretending to be completely indifferent to this matter. Seeing that the outcome of that pretense went counter to their ambitions, however, the Beijing ruling circles have deemed it necessary to take in into their own hands to convene the three stooges.

It is no secret that since the beginning Beijing has actively played the role of a protector, defender and instigator of the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and other antinational reactionary groups taking refuge abroad, such as Sihanouk and Son Sann. At present, Beijing has become the lair where the executioners and reactionary elements from all corners are reassembled to seek by all means to sabotage peace and stability in Indochina and Southeast Asia.

Faced with an impasse in all fields, the three groups of traitors have used Beijing as their refuge and Khieu Samphan has regarded Beijing as his own father while Sihanouk and Son Sann have been behaving in much the same way as Khieu Samphan. According to BBC on the evening of 21 January 1982, Sihanouk said in an interview in Beijing that China was his best friend and that he would do everything that China wanted him to do. This remark more clearly exposes Sihanouk's character which is that of an out-and-out lackey of the Beijing expansionists. Presently Sihanouk is waiting doggedly in Beijing to receive Khieu Samphan and Son Sann.

We must note once again that the convocation of the three traitorous groups to meet in Beijing in the very near future is taking place at a time when they suffered nine consecutive setbacks in their meetings in various ASEAN capitals.

Since September 1981 the Beijing ruline circles, in collusion with U.S. imperialism, have dragged and pulled the ruling circles of a number of ASEAN countries to gather up the three traitorous groups for meetings in Singapore and then in Bangkok and Phatthaya with the aim of establishing a coalition government. Nevertheless, despite all the efforts, these sinister pawns of the Chinese have not been able to make any progress or to succeed in setting up even a loose coalition government. On the contrary, the only result they have achieved is to worsen the differences among the masters and sharpen the squabbles among the lackeys.

Faced with such a failure, the Beijing ruling circles have seen it necessary to personally call up a meeting of their valets. Now Beijing's ugly features are laid even barer to the eyes of world public opinion. In the past, Beijing tried to hide its dark and pernicious deceit behind every conceivable cover. Now Beijing is laying bare its true colors.

The Kampuchean people see more clearly the ugly face of the Beijing authorities and most categorically condemn all their senseless acts. In the past the Beijing authorities fed, maintained and protected the Pol Pot remnants and other reactionary Khmer groups. At present, they are continuing to support and use these demons to oppose and sabotage the PRK.

Let it be known that we resolutely oppose all perfidious maneuvers of the Beijing ruling circles.

CENTRAL COMMITTEE STATEMENT ON THIRD CONGRESS

BK200430 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 20 Feb 82

[20 February statement of the LPRP Central Committee on the convening of the Third Congress of the LPRP -- read by announcer]

[Text] To the party committees at all levels, and all cadres, party members and people of all ethnic tribes throughout the country:

It has been almost 10 years since the Second Congress of the LPRP was held in March of 1972. Since the Second Congress, our party has led the people of all tribes throughout the country to carry out the two revolutionary strategic tasks through the two different revolutionary stages:

1. Our party has mustered all forces in our country to cooperate with the two fraternal countries -- Vietnam and Kampuchea -- in defeating the U.S. imperialists in their war of aggression and neocolonialism, and to mobilize the masses to simultaneously stage an uprising throughout the country to seize the administrative power, liberate the entire country, and fulfill the national democratic revolution.

2. In turning toward the socialist revolution since 1976 our party has led the people throughout the country to fulfill the tasks of defending and building the country and to march toward socialism by bypassing the period of capitalist development.

Under the correct and talented leadership of our party, with militant solidarity and all-round cooperation with Vietnam and Kampuchea, and with wholehearted and great assistance from the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, over the past 10 years the armed forces and people of all ethnic tribes throughout the country have further enhanced the tradition of solidarity and undauntedness, have held aloft the spirit of patriotism and love of socialism, have overcome numerous difficulties, and have scored numerous great victories. The situation in our country has significantly changed in all respects. Thus, it is necessary for us to work hard and utilize the wisdom of the entire party to review the situation in our country, and to reiterate and revamp the line and policies of the party in the new period of the revolution so as to use them as guidelines and objectives of the entire party, army and people in appropriately consolidating and building all party organizations so that they will be more capable of leading the people throughout the country to triumphantly fulfill the tasks of defending and building the socialist country.

Therefore, the party Central Committee has decided to convene the party third congress in the near future. The party Central Committee calls on the party committees at all levels to urgently carry out the following tasks:

1. To utilize the resolution adopted by the party Central Committee on 16 February 1982 regarding the convening of the third party congress; to inform and call on all cadres and party members to acknowledge the objectives and contents of the congress; to closely coordinate the political life with the convening of the party congress or with the conferences of cadres, in accordance with the timetable set up by the party Central Committee; and to effectively begin the party congress from the grassroots level with a view to consolidating the party, raising the quality of party members and selecting outstanding representatives to attend the party third congress.

2. To gather the opinions of all cadres, party members and people of all ethnic tribes on the work of fulfilling the tasks of continuing to defend and build the country in the immediate future, as well as the tasks of building and consolidating the party so as to prepare for full participation in the forthcoming party congress.

3. To energetically launch emulation campaigns to score achievements to welcome the party congress, to concentrate all efforts to gloriously fulfill the 1982 plan and effectively carry out duties in defending the country, maintaining public security, building political bases and the economy, developing culture and improving the living conditions of the people in all localities and foundations.

4. To promote movements in the cultural, art and literary, propaganda and information, and sports fields; to thoroughly and profoundly popularize the party's line, policies and correct and talented leadership; and to make use of the leading role of the party in the new period of the revolution, as well as all achievements and victories of the past, to create a joyous atmosphere to welcome our party congress.

The third party congress constitutes an important political event in the life of our party and the masses. All party members and cadres must clearly understand their responsibilities to the party, the country and the international community, strengthen the unity within the party on the basis of the line and policies of the party, hold aloft the spirit of serving the laboring people of all tribes, encourage all the people to closely unite, strengthen our solidarity with Vietnam, Kampuchea, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, closely coordinate the tasks of building the party with the revolutionary movement among the masses, build and strengthen the party foundations, strengthen the party's combat strength, promote and develop democracy, self-criticism and mutual criticism with a view to uniting the party so that it will be capable of shouldering the heavy responsibilities entrusted by history.

Let the people of all ethnic tribes and the armed forces throughout the country further unite under the party, and contribute to the building of the party, party organizations and party members so that they will become stronger and stable and will strive to further enhance the traditional relationship between the party and the people of all ethnic tribes.

The revolutionary struggle of our people of all tribes and nationalities under the correct and creative leadership of our party has scored great victories unprecedented in the history of our nation. In the immediate future, the struggle to defend the country and to build socialism remains a difficult one, fierce and complicated. However, we are convinced that under the banner of our party all the people are resolved to overcome all obstacles in order to score yet greater victories in the new period of the revolution and socialism in the world.

Let our entire party, army and masses carry out actual revolutionary deeds and march forward to score new achievements on the path of socialist construction and to bring health and prosperity to the LPDR -- our beloved and cherished fatherland.

[Signed]

PHOUMI VONGVICHIT ADDRESSES PCF CONGRESS

BK210423 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0430 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Speech by Phoumi Vongvichit, member of the LPRP Central Committee Political Bureau; deputy prime minister; minister of education, sports and religious affairs of the LPDR; and head of the LPRP delegation, delivered at the 24th Congress of the French Communist Party -- read by announcer, date not given]

[Text] Beloved comrades and friends, beloved comrade delegates: On behalf of the LPRP delegation, I would like to express my warmest greetings to the 24th Congress of the French Communist Party [PCF].

I also would like to convey to Comrade General Secretary Georges Marchais, comrade members of the Central Committee and comrade members of the PCF, and to all delegates attending the congress, the fraternal friendship and warmest greetings of Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, general secretary of the LPRP, comrade members of the LPRP Central Committee, all the communists and people of Laos. From this glorious rostrum, I would like to express my sincere thanks to all comrades and friends of the beautiful capital, Paris, [names of two other cities indistinct] -- renowned cities of revolutionary traditions -- for the most warm welcome accorded to us. This cordial welcome has reflected a bright friendship that you comrades have extended to our Lao party, nation and people.

Beloved comrades and friends; beloved comrade delegates, the political report of PCF Central Committee General Secretary Comrade Georges Marchais, the report that we have attentively listened to, pointed out that since its 23d congress the PCF has scored many great achievements for the French nation and people. The PCF has always been loyal to the interests of the working class and laboring people. It has concentrated its abilities and energy on incessantly pursuing the revolutionary traditions of the French people by combining their struggle for national independence and social progress with the struggle for peace in Europe and the world. At present, the French working class and laboring people, under the correct leadership of the PCF, headed by Comrade Georges Marchais, have concentrated their energies on consolidating solidarity with other leftist political parties. As a result, they have successfully made a positive contribution to the historic victory of the recent general elections. This victory has created a new manner for the PCF to worthily contribute to the state and social management. This historic victory has not only brought a good life and joy to all the French people, it has also served as a vivid example of a positive contribution to the struggle against imperialism, new and old colonialism, expansionism and hegemonism, and racism in favor of peace, national independence, unification, democracy, justice and social progress in the world. We take this occasion to express warm congratulations to the party, comrade communists and people of France for the aforesaid great achievements.

Beloved comrades and friends; beloved delegates, the Lao people achieved a brilliant success on 2 December, 1975, in their heroic, fierce, furious, hard and protracted struggle, which was marked by more than 30 years of sacrifice for the national liberation cause. Since then, under the clearsighted leadership of the LPRP, headed by Comrade Kaysone Phomvihan, the Lao people of various nationalities have fulfilled the national-democratic revolution and have led the nation to march forward along the path of socialism, bypassing the period of capitalist development. Over the past 6 years, we have correctly implemented the proletarian dictatorship system while carrying out the three revolutions -- the revolution in production relations, the scientific and technical revolutions, and the ideological and cultural revolution. As a result, we have secured the LPDR as an outpost of socialism in Southeast Asia. The national economy has been restored along the socialist path. In 1980, we harvested nearly 1,200,000 tons of rice, an unprecendented figure in the history of Laos. The production of rice in 1981 was not less than that of the previous year. Sixty-five percent of the people were illiterate in 1975, a number which has now been reduced to only 15 percent. The development of formal and vocational education schools has continuously built capable men for the task of defending the country and maintaining public security, as well as the task of building the socialist economy. We have also achieved progress in public health work both quantitatively and qualitatively. With regard to the information, radio and newspaper work, news reports in various fields have been taken to cantons and villages throughout the country.

Following the aforesaid achievements, new forms of development for towns and the countryside have been achieved step by step. The people's living conditions have improved daily. These achievements have also guaranteed our country's continual advance along the socialist road.

All these achievements mark the great, firm and historically significant successes of the Lao people, and are a victory of the LPRP, which has appropriately applied Marxism-Leninism to the practical conditions of Laos. They are also a victory of the solidarity of the Lao people of various nationalities, who, with the party's guidance, are determined to surmount all difficulties and obstacles so as to become their own masters and the owners of their country and society. These achievements are a victory of special solidarity among the Lao, Vietnamese and Kampuchean peoples. They are a victory of the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries which have always rendered precious, effective assistance, both material and spiritual, to Laos. They are also a victory of the PCF and the French laboring people as well as of the people of various friendly countries in all five continents and of the various international organizations which have always fostered and assisted the Lao people.

I would like to take this opportunity to express profound thanks and gratitude to the parties and peoples of various fraternal countries and to all friends here.

Beloved comrades and friends; beloved delegates, in implementing the party's tasks in the immediate future, we still face several difficulties. Our country is a backward, agricultural country which is dependent on nature and which has suffered disasters caused by the political hostile policies of Beijing, the imperialists and other reactionaries. Our Lao people are well aware that such vicious political policies have been implemented at a time when all imperialists and reactionaries in the world are being driven into an unavoidable defeat, while the various revolutionary forces throughout the world are continually advancing to an ever greater victory. With this in mind, our Lao people have always united and pursued the domestic and foreign policies of the party in a spirit of utmost confidence. In the country, we have implemented two tasks, namely, the task of defending the country and maintaining public security and the task of building a socialist economy for everyone.

With regard to the foreign policy, we have strengthened our special solidarity with the SRV and the PRK. We have strengthened the close solidarity and all-round cooperation with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries. We support the peace policy announced by Comrade General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev at the 26th CPSU Congress, a policy which has been welcomed by the various nations which cherish peace throughout the world. We support the Polish Government in taking effective measures to end the disturbances created by external reactionary forces, aimed at safeguarding the stability of Poland and maintaining it in the socialist community. We support the party and Government of the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan in fighting resolutely to defeat the intervention and aggression of the imperialists and international reactionaries with a view toward maintaining peace, national independence and the people's happiness. We support the just struggle of the Palestinian people as well as the people of various Arab countries against imperialism, old and new colonialism, Zionism and apartheid. We support the Afro-Asian and Latin American people, as well as workers throughout the world who have struggled against the imperialists and international reactionaries for peace, national independence and social progress. We are firmly convinced that the ambitious, inhuman hope of the U.S. imperialists, who intend to conduct economic blockades against Cuba, Poland and the Soviet Union and to install medium-size nuclear missiles in Western European countries, as well as to threaten the world with their neutron bombs, will undoubtedly be defeated.

In conclusion, I wish the PCF ever greater success. I wish Comrade General Secretary Georges Marchais good health and long life. I wish all delegates here good health. I wish the 24th PCF Congress glorious success.

May the solidarity between the French and the Lao peoples be strengthened and develop with every passing day! Long live Marxism-Leninism! Long live world peace!

L'HUMANITE PHOUMI VONGVICHIT INTERVIEW ON AID

PM170935 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 11 Feb 82 p 7

[Daniel Roussel report: "Laos: The Door is Open for Cooperation With France"]

[Text] Laos, the country of the silent revolution, has no capital and no industry and is one of the poorest countries in the world. "It needs help from everyone, and particularly from France," Phoumi Vongvichit, deputy prime minister of the Lao People's Democratic Republic [LPDR] and member of the Lao people's revolutionary party Politburo, said with a smile during the press conference he gave in Paris on Wednesday.

Phoumi Vongvichit explained that Laos has already done a great deal on its own and, with the help of socialist countries, has managed to eradicate the aftermath of colonization and 30 years of war. The LPDR no longer imports rice. But, Phoumi Vongvichit explained, "We are in the position of the owner of a house that has been burned down. We lack everything, building materials, capital, technicians...." The economic blockade imposed in particular by Western countries has not helped. P. Vogvichit makes no secret of his desire to see real cooperation with France developing on the immense construction site that is Laos. He also pointed out that it wants "the assistance of all countries...whatever the terms."

Following the resumption of Franco-Laotian diplomatic relations on 3 December 1981, it is to be hoped that the two sides will resume fruitful cooperation. Laos ranks high in the table of Third World countries that want to build up new relations with the rich countries. France's Third World policy is raising hopes. We must not disappoint them.

P. Vongvichit again denied the slanderous accusations relating to Vietnamese use of toxic chemicals for military purposes on Lao territory, and said that he was surprised how little attention had been paid to his government's protests — Western countries being more ready to heed Reagan's unsubstantiated assertions. "There is no Vietnamese military presence in Laos at the moment," he said.

"They do not like socialism," the Lao deputy prime minister said, referring to those who were leaving their country. "But," he added, "anyone can come back to help rebuild the country," and more and more Laotians are doing that. During his visit to Paris, P. Vongvichit met in particular many Lao students, who told him of their desire to return to Vientiane when they had finished their studies.

On Monday [8 February] evening, P. Vongvichit was the guest of the committee for cooperation with Laos in scientific and educational affairs. This association organizes direct cooperation between scientists in Western Europe and Laos. It signed a protocol agreement in October 1981 establishing the program for 1982-1983. This is an example of the multifaceted aid that can be developed in Laos.

USSR OFFICIALLY PRESENTS SATELLITE RELAY STATION

BK201034 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0430 GMT 20 Feb 82

[Text] The satellite communications relay system (Antek-Sputnik), which the Soviet Union has been building for Laos, is now completed and installed. A test run shows that the station is fully operational. Its circuits are capable of handling telephone communications and relaying television programs from Moscow to Laos.

A ceremony to hand over the station officially was held on the morning of 19 February 1982. Presenting the station was Zubarev, Soviet deputy minister of posts and telecommunications, and Thammasinh Saikhampanh, acting minister of posts and telecommunications. Attending the ceremony were Sali Vongkhamsao, secretary of the LPRP Central Committee, vice premier and chairman of the National Planning Committee; several ministers and vice ministers; diplomats of socialist countries; and a large number of cadres from various ministries and departments.

At the ceremony, the Soviet and Lao ministers delivered statements to officially hand over and accept the station. The two sides expressed mutual affection, friendship and fraternal cooperation. The Lao side expressed particular thanks and gratitude to the fraternal Soviet party, government and people for building the station as a gift for the Lao party, government and people. The representatives of the Soviet and Lao Governments signed an official document handing over the station in the presence of all distinguished guests attending the ceremony.

On this occasion, Sali Vongkhamsao, representing the Lao party, government and people, presented a banner to Zubarev as a gesture of gratitude to the fraternal Soviet party, government and people and to praise the dedication and virtue of the Soviet experts who have collaborated with Lao technicians and workers to build the station successfully.

The construction of the relay station began in October 1980 in accordance with the Lao-Soviet agreement signed on 4 October 1978 and has been completed after more than a year of work. The station is composed of two satellite relay systems. The first system transmits to and accepts signals from the satellite, while the other relays those signals to and from Vientiane. Each system is equipped with a transmitter, a receiver and an antenna 32 meters in diameter. The antenna for relaying signals to and from Vientiane is 108 meters tall, while the one for relaying signals to and from the satellite is 78 meters tall. With maximum utilization the station is capable of simultaneously handling telephone communications through 12 channels and providing 144 channels for other forms of communications -- telegraph, teletype and other telecommunications -- and two channels for color television. It is capable of linking telecommunications with any country in the world through a country which also operates an (Antek-Sputnik) satellite relay station.

REPORTAGE ON SUSPECTED SRV TOXIC USE NEAR BORDER

AFP Report

BK191616 Hong Kong AFP in English 1541 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Aranyaprathet, Eastern Thailand, 19 Feb (AFP) — Thai villagers in a district along the Cambodian border were warned not to consume water from a nearby canal after a Vietnamese plane was seen spraying a yellow substance suspected to be toxic "yellow rain" early today.

Military sources said villagers in Pong Nam Ron District bordering Cambodia spotted the Vietnamese plane while it sprayed a yellow substance for about 20 minutes near the border. The villagers also collected samples of the substance which fell inside Thai territory and turned then over to border patrol policemen for analysis, the sources added. Village chiefs immediately urged the population in their areas to stop drinking water in the canal and to cover their water buckets, the sources also said.

Pong Nam Ron, located south of here, was the scene of fierce fighting between Thai border policemen and Vietnamese-led forces on Wednesday and yesterday. Five border policemen were killed. Their bodies were only recovered early today.

A Thai reconnaissance plane later flew over the area and spotted three Vietnamese tanks parked on the Cambodian side of the border, the sources said.

Reports of alleged use of chemical agents first emerged in 1976 through accounts of Hmong hilltribe refugees who had fled landlocked Laos to Thailand.

Last September U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig announced for the first time that Washington had "physical evidence" that toxic agents called mycotoxins were being used by Vietnamese-led forces in Cambodia.

Samples To Be Tested

BK210430 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 21 Feb 82 pp 1, 2

[Excerpt] Chanthaburi -- Leaf samples and pieces of corrugated zinc sheets believed to have been tainted by "yellow rain" sprayed from a Vietnamese plane on Friday were yesterday sent to the Medical Science Department for laboratory tests, Governor Bunnak Saisawang said yesterday after an inspection trip.

The governor, accompanied by local health officials, said preliminary tests found to be "bio-toxin" [as published] -- a kind of poisonous chemical believed to have been used by Vietnamese in Laos before.

"The Vietnamese plane which sprayed the chemicals was seen circling seven times over the area before dropping the chemical, apparently trying to contaminate the water in a reservoir built by the accelerated rural development office. But the chemical fell instead on rooftops and trees nearby," the governor said. He said all local villagers had been told to stop drinking water from nearby wells in Baan Saptali of Amphoe Pong Nam Ron of this province until the tests were concluded.

The governor confirmed the sighting of 400 Vietnamese soliders and three tanks hear Saptali village apparently in pursuit of Khmer Rouge soldiers. "The area was heavily jungled and the sound of the tank movements could be clearly heard when I made the inspection trip today," Governor Bunnag said. "My personal feeling is that the Vietnamese had sent in their tanks and ordered heavy troops movements to provoke us and to serve as a bargaining power to get back their plane which crash-landed in Thai territory recently," the governor said.

He also reported that on Feb 19, an unmarked plane had flown eight kms into Thai airspace over Village No 6, Tambon Saikaho, Pong Nam Ron District. "Yellow chemicals were also sprayed from the plane on that day," the governor added.

Use of Mycotoxins Doubted

[Text] The yellowish chemical allegedly airdropped by a Vietnamese aircraft over a Thai border village during the Vietnamese incursion last week is unlikely to be "yellow rain," a senior official said yesterday. Director General of the Medical Sciences Department Dr Manatsawi Unhanan said the officials who collected the chemical sample should have died if it was mycotoxin, dubbed "yellow rain" as claimed. He said people who inhaled mycotoxin, allegedly produced by the Soviet Union and used by the Vietnamese in Laos and western Kampuchea, would vomit blood and die in five minutes.

The collection of the substance had been roughly carried out without any safety measures, he said. "A collector of samples tainted with such a highly toxic chemical must put on specially designed gear and the collection procedures must be more sophisticated," he told the NATION.

He said his department would possibly be able to complete testing the chemical-tainted leaves to be sent from the border village within five days. "But I don't think it is mycotoxin," he added. He said laboratories in Thailand are not efficient enough to test mycotoxin-tained samples which required highly-qualified labs. "There are only a few labs of this kind in the world," he added.

A Vietnamese plane allegedly sprayed yellowish substances over a village in Pong Nam Ron District in Chanthaburi last Friday after a clash between Thai security forces and a group of Vietnamese troops. About 300 Vietnamese troopers reportedly intruded into Thai territory on Thursday and Friday.

Vietnam has been accused of using mycotoxin, the latest development of chemical weapon, in suppressing resistance forces in Laos and Kampuchea.

FURTHER ON ALLEGED SRV AIRSPACE VIOLATION

Military Investigation

BK191720 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 19 Feb 82

[Text] The violation of Thai airspace on Feb 11, by a Vietnamese aircraft was a deliberate act, a preliminary military investigation was quoted as saying yesterday.

Speaking at a news conference spokesman of the Supreme Command Lt Gen Som Khattaphan said that he personally believed the Soviet-made Antonov AN-26 had intentionally infringed the Thai airspace. "The Vietnamese have been attacking us through their propaganda machine, saying that Thailand has been provoking Kampuchea, but the incident clearly shows that the Vietnamese provoke us," he told the monthly press conference at the Supreme Command.

An air force spokesman quoted the investigation as showing that the two compass sets aboard the plane are still in good shape. The arrested Vietnamese crews were earlier quoted as saying that their plane had strayed into the Thai airspace over Pong Nam Ron District of Chanthaburi Province.

The air force spokesman also said the investigation team had found that the left side engine of the Soviet-made transport plane was still in working condition after crash-landing in Sa Kaeo District of Prachin Buri Province. The right side engine of the aircraft was badly damaged when it crash-landed in a tapioca field at Ban Pong Saeng, Tambon Ban Kaeng of Sa Kaeo District on Feb 11.

Lt Gen Som said the left engine continued to operate for two hours after the crash-landing. "The engine went off only after it had been switched off by a pilot," he added. He said that the Vietnamese pilot had been trained to control Antonov AN-26 aircraft for a "considerably long time" in Russia. "His flight hours are also impressive," he added.

According to the preliminary investigation, two of the four oil tanks of the aircraft still had sufficient fuel, the air force military spokesman said. However, he stated that the air force still needed a few more days to complete the probe.

The air force was assigned to look into the technical matters in an attempt to establish the cause of airspace violation by the Vietnamese aircraft, while the First Army Region is responsible for the interrogation of the Vietnamese crewmen arrested on board the plane.

Lt Gen Som said that it was natural that his statement might have contradicted that of First Army Region Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek as the commander based his statement on the questioning of the Vietnamese captives. "But I base my opinion on different sources of information and I am convinced that the violation was intentional," he said.

Gen Athit Kamlang-ek who is also assistant army commander earlier said that the Vietnamese aircraft had strayed into the airspace over Prachin Buri and Chanthaburi.

However, the military spokesman yesterday ruled out the possibility that the Vietnamese aircraft had been assigned an espionage mission in Thai territory. "Firstly, the communications equipment on the plane is not complicated enough for espionage purposes," the air force spokesman said.

He added that the Vietnamese would not use a transport plane for espionage. "A plane assigned to conduct such a mission usually has high velocity," he added.

He also said that the Vietnamese aircraft crash-landed without being forced by the two Thai jet fighters despatched from the Korat airbase to intercept the intruding plane. "The two jet fighters did not even meet the Vietnamese aircraft before it crash-landed because of bad visibility on that day," he said.

He told the press conference that the jet fighters were flying at an altitude of about 10,000 ft, while the Antonov AN-26 was flying below the altitude of 6,500 ft.

Supreme Command Statement

BK201400 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 0000 GMT 20 Feb 82

[Statement issued by Thai Supreme Command Headquarters on 19 February]

[Text] On 11 February, a Vietnamese AN-26 plane, Serial No 264, intruded into Thai airspace and made an emergency landing in Ban Prong Saeng, Tambon Ban Kaeng, Sa Kaeo District, Prachin Buri Province. The Supreme Command Headquarters hereby gives the following account for the information of the public:

1. On the day the incident took place, Thai air force radar detected an unidentified plane flying from the Kampuchean border toward the Thai border. Thai aircraft were sent up for search and interception. Once it was clear that the plane in question had intruded into Thai airspace, in violation of Thai territory, Thai aircraft were instructed to intercept the plane. The Vietnamese plane tried to avoid radar detection and the interceptors by adopting tactical flying procedures instead of an ordinary flight. The plane reduced its altitude while heading deeper into Thailand. Following preliminary interception by the Thai aircraft, the Vietnamese plane made an emergency landing, which damaged the plane. An army unit has guarded the plane, its pilot and the crewmembers. It has protected the aircraft and provided medical treatment for the wounded among the crewmembers based on humanitarian principles. It also began immediately to carry out an investigation in order to find out the truth about the incident.

2. Because the Thai people showed great interest in what happened, a high-level commanding army officer decided to make a press statement on the incident based on a preliminary interrogation of the captives who claimed that they strayed into Thailand because of poor visibility and the malfunctioning of their compasses. However, the officer stressed in his preliminary press briefing that the authorities did not necessarily hold such testimony valid and that further intelligence procedures would have to be taken in order to find the truth. From subsequent investigations it has become quite clear that the testimony given by the pilot and crew of the Vietnamese plane is somewhat suspicious. Besides, the flight was a military operation and not simply a straying plane. The Supreme Command Information Office reported the progress of the investigations and informed the public that the Royal Thai Air Force would have to make an investigation into the flight techniques in order to find out the true purpose of the flight and to determine if the plane had really strayed into Thailand or if it was carrying out a combat mission against Thailand. The press statements given on both occasions were based on the results achieved during different stages of the investigations.

3. Following the preliminary technical inspection conducted by the air force and the interrogation and the gathering of other evidence by the army, it can be concluded that in their testimony the captives were covering up some information, such as the flight direction -- which indicated the plane was deliberately heading into Thailand -- that the magnetic and radio compasses which they claim were malfunctioning were in fact functioning normally, and that there was sufficient fuel in the tanks. Thus the findings were in contradiction to the testimony given by the captives. In addition, the Vietnamese plane was not an ordinary transport plane but had been modified for reconnaissance and combat missions, being equipped with full navigation gear and additional equipment for bombing. The plane is well equipped for air reconnaissance and patrol missions.

On 16 December 1981 a Vietnamese plane conducted an air strike in Pong Nam Ron District, Chanthaburi Province. Therefore, it is essential that we prove beyond a doubt the intention of this intrusion. It should also be noted that, according to witnesses, some of the Vietnamese crew could speak Thai and they asked the name of the place where they had landed. This shows that they knew all along they were intruding into Thai territory.

In view of the results yielded by the various stages of the investigation to date, the military will need to impound the plane and detain the pilot and crew for another period of time in order to conduct further investigations to prove the true purpose of this intrusion. However, the Royal Thai Armed Forces will uphold the government's policy of safeguarding national security and honor and will take into consideration the government's policy of maintaining good relations between Vietnam and Thailand for the sake of regional peace in their search for a just solution to this problem.

This is for the information of the general public.

Supreme Command Headquarters, 19 February 1982.

VNA REJECTS REPORT ON CLASH AT THAI BORDER

SPOKESMAN CONDEMNS TAIWAN SPRATLY DECISION

BK201505 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1430 GMT 20 Feb 82

[Text] Our Foreign Ministry spokesman today issued a statement on the Taiwanese administraton's decision to place the Spratly Archipelago under its management. The statement reads as follows:

According to foreign sources, the Taiwanese administration recently announced its decision to place the Spratly Archipelago under its management. This is an illegal act that violates Vietnam's territorial sovreignty. As everyone knows, like the Paracel Archipelago, the Spratly Archipelago has been part of Vietnamese territory for many centuries. The white book published by the SRV Foreign Ministry on 18 January 1982 fully testifies to the fact that Vietnam has indisputable sovereignty and has long exercised this sovereignty over the Spratly and Paracel Archipelagoes. The SRV Foreign Ministry strongly condemns all plots and acts that violate Vietnam's territorial sovereignty over the Paracel and Spratly Archipelagoes.

VNA INTERVIEWS PRK'S HUN SEN ON REGIONAL ISSUES

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, Feb 19 -- "The policy of peace and good will of the three Indochinese countries with regard to the A.S.E.A.N. countries is the only way to peace and stability in Southeast Asia" declared Kampuchean Foreign Minister Hun Sen in an interview given to VNA correspondent in Vientiane following the recent 5th conference of the Indochinese foreign ministers. Hun Sen, who is also a member of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the People's Revolutionary Party of Kampuchea and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, went on:

"In recent years the Chinese reactionaries have perpetrated many crimes against the people of Kampuchea and the other Indochinese countries. They encouraged the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary clique to massacre the Kampuchean people and invade neighbouring countries, especially the Socialist Republic of Vietnam. After this clique was toppled by the Kampuchean people and armed forces with the assistance of the Vietnamese, Beijing adopted a two-stage plan of sabotage against the People's Republic of Kampuchea. First, it put its hope on the Pol Pot clique, thinking it capable of overthrowing the People's Republic of Kampuchea. However, all efforts made by Beijing throughout 1979 led it nowhere. On the contrary, the situation in Kampuchea has stabilized day by day. In 1980 Beijing replaced Pol Pot with Khieu Samphan, but this, too, did not help.

Thus, it started rallying the Khmer reactionaries of different colours within a "broad front" then "loose coalition government" through the recent meeting of Sihanouk, Son Sann and Khieu Samphan in Singapore".

Hun Sen continued: "But it is no easy job for China and A.S.E.A.N. to resolve the differences between the Khmer reactionaries because it is like putting a pack of wolves in the same cage. The recent failure of the Singapore meeting which followed the failure of the Bangkok meeting earlier has forced the Khmer reactionaries to think of another bargaining round in Beijing. Beijing's main objective is to use these reactionaries to topple the People's Republic of Kampuchea. If A.S.E.A.N. accepts this formula, it cannot help restore stability in the region but will only render the situation more tense. One thing is certain: Whatever coalition they may hammer out, wherever they may meet and whatever amount of support they may get from China, Thailand and other A.S.E.A.N. countries, these reactionary groups cannot change anything".

Asked to comment on the significance of the recent Indochinese foreign ministerial conference in Vientiane, Hun Sen said: "This conference laid the groundwork for the first summit conference of the three Indochinese countries, which is an important step to strengthen the solidarity, special friendship and all-round cooperation among the three Indochinese countries in the consolidation of the independence of each country and in its national construction, as well as in contributing to the cause of peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The fifth Indochinese foreign ministerial conference discussed and declared the Indochinese countries' policy of peace and good will toward the A.S.E.A.N. countries, especially Thailand, this is the only way to peace and stability in Southeast Asia. We also discussed the Non-Aligned Movement for we wanted that at the coming summit in Baghdad this movement would remain an organization opposed to imperialism, colonialism and all forms of oppression in the world, an organisation for defending peace and installing a new international economic order.

THAI, SINGAPORE STANCE ON VIENTIANE OFFER HIT

BK211107 Hanoi International Service in English 1000 GMT 21 Feb 82

[Text] Commenting on the brazen statements of the spokesman for the Thai Foreign Ministry and Singapore's foreign minister on Friday, VNA said:

By rejecting the new good-will proposals put forward by the foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries at their recent Vientiane conference, the Thai and Singapore authorities have shown their irresponsibility to peace, stability and cooperation in Southeast Asia. The agency noted that their action followed Beijing's rejection of Vietnam's new proposals for a settlement of the problems in the relations between the two countries.

The agency said: The lack of good will on the part of Thailand and Singapore is only beneficial to Beijing's designs of expansion and hegemony in Southeast Asia. It is contrary to the interests of the countries in the region and the trend toward dialogue among countries in Southeast Asia.

KHMER COALITION ATTEMPT CALLED 'BLIND ALLEY'

The paper said: Using reactionary henchmen against Vietnam, Kampuchea and Laos is one of their long-term strategic goals. But this is only an ambition. What they are pursuing is a blind alley that will lead them to a complete failure.

HAIG ALLEGATIONS ON TOXIC CHEMICALS REJECTED

[Unattributed commentary: "U.S. Charges Against Vietnam Over the Alleged Use of Chemical Weapons in Laos, Kampuchea and Afghanistan"]

[Text] On 15 February U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig went on television to say that the United States had more evidence concerning the use of chemical weapons in Laos, Kampuchea and Afghanistan. People thought that Haig would produce something new and more convincing than a simple sample of leaves and stems previously declared by him as carrying chemical agents. However, this time he merely said that thousands of persons had died of poison and that chemical agents are still being used in these countries. Nobody can believe him.

Many scientists in the United States and elsewhere have already challenged his allegations by saying that there is no scientific evidence of Vietnam's using toxic chemicals in Laos and Kampuchea. Even the United Nations group of experts recently dispatched to Thailand to conduct investigations in refugee camps found itself unable to reach a final conclusion.

Most recently, on 11 February, American Dr (Aires Therview), who works for the international relief agency in Bangkok, declared that he himself had not seen anyone die of toxic chemicals, directly or indirectly. So, the United States' allegations about the Soviet Union and Vietnam using toxical chemicals are but an out-and-out fabrication.

Washington cannot deny the fact that it has been storing and using chemical weapons on a large scale. A document on U.S. chemical weapons policy made public on 8 February estimates that U.S. $705 million would be spent in the coming fiscal year for chemical arms production, including $30 billion for such new weapons as 155-mm dual canons and chemical shells. Many newspapers have disclosed that Washington now has 37,000 tons of toxic chemical weapons in its stores. The British paper THE GUARDIAN remarked that there is no doubt Mr Haig has charged the Soviet Union and Vietnam with using toxic chemicals so as to expand the present U.S. chemical arms depots and to cover up Washington's chemical armaments plans.

It is bad enough to blame others for what you yourselves are doing and much worse to justify this using false evidence. By charging the Soviet Union and Vietnam with using toxic chemicals, the Reagan administration has shown its deceitful nature.

XUAN THUY WRITES ON PRC EXPANSIONIST PLANS

[Text] On the occasion of the third anniversary of the victory over the Chinese aggressors, NHAN DAN today carries on page 3 an excerpt from an article by Comrade Xuan Thuy entitled "Chinese Expansionism in Southeast Asia." The article reads in part as follows:

The substance of the Chinese ruling circles' current policies consists of colluding with U.S.-led international imperialism against those countries treasuring national independence, against national liberation movements and against world detente. They are striving to encourage the arms race and are making large-scale war preparations against the Soviet Union and other genuine socialist countries.

These policies initially are being directed against the Indochinese countries as a prelude to further moves to annex the Southeast Asian countries and to create a zone of influence shared with the United States and Japan. Therefore, foiling the PRC powerholders' counter-revolutionary schemes and their acts of sabotage is now a task not only for the Indochinese countries and the other countries in the Southeast Asian region alone but also for all progressive mankind.

Naturally, the Indochinese people and the Southeast Asian people as a whole must be united more closely and be determined to struggle for peace and stability in the region. In addition, they must list in their agenda the issue of setting up an international people's front for peace and social progress, using the Soviet Union and the socialist community as a backbone.

NHAN DAN SUPPORTS 'SOCIALIST' STATE IN POLAND

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 20 -- "Realities have shown that the measures enforced by the Polish state since December 13, 1981 are timely, expedient and judicious. They have been accepted and observed by the Polish people and accordingly, the danger to socialism and peace has been repelled," says NHAN DAN today.

The paper goes on: "It is an unquestionable fact that the Polish crisis is essentially a counter-attack launched by the U.S.-led imperialist forces by the proxy of their most zealous agents in the 'Solidarity' trade union and the other reactionary organizations to oppose the Polish people, abolish the gains of socialism and set up a reactionary administration in Poland, and to steer it back to the capitalist path with some cosmetic change.

"The psychological warfare campaign staged on an unprecedented scale by the Reagan administration against Poland and the Soviet Union reflects the full extent of the imperialists' bitterness and at the same time reveals their dark scheme of continuing to interfere in that country's internal affairs and taking advantage of the Polish events to fan up anti-communism, intensify the arms race and increase world tension.

"It is regrettable that at the exact moment when the Polish people are needing the international solidarity of the revolutionaries and other progressive people and when imperialism is frenziedly opposing Poland and the Soviet Union, a number of communists in Western Europe openly voiced viewpoints contrary to the interests of the Polish people and of peace and socialism. A number of persons in the name of a communist party assigned to themselves the task of assessing the Polish situation and adopted resolutions on this issue according to their subjective thoughts in disregard of the views and assessments of the Polish United Workers' Party and state themselves.

"It is common knowledge that there is not much difference between these viewpoints and the imperialists' allegations concerning the Polish situation. "Obviously, such viewpoints are erroneous and harmful and, willy nilly, beneficial to imperialism."

NHAN DAN affirms: "As the other sincere brothers and friends of the Polish people, we have been consistently siding with the revolution and socialism in Poland. We fully support actions taken by the Polish party and state with a view to normalizing the home situation and ensuring the continuity of the socialist process in their country. We rejoice at the initial results of the restoration of stability and order in Poland."

SYRIAN PRESIDENT THANKS SRV FOR UN SUPPORT

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 16 -- President of the Council of State Truong Chinh has received a message from Syrian President Hafiz al-Asad thanking Vietnam for supporting the Syrian people's struggle against Israeli annexation of the Golan Heights.

At an ad hoc meeting of the U.N. General Assembly early this month, a Vietnamese representative voiced support for a U.N. resolution to reject Israeli decision to annex the Golan Heights. Hafiz al-Asad's message describes this support as an important contribution to justice, freedom and international law and to consolidating the United Nations and its charter. It points out that this support will also help develop relations between Vietnam and Syria and other Arab countries.

IMPROVING DISTRICT AGRICULTURE-INDUSTRY ANALYZED

[Text] Friends: The policy of building up the district into a planning level, an agricultural-industrial economic unit, an essential area for conducting the three revolutions and coordinating economic activities with national defense is a major policy of our party and state which was mentioned in the resolution of the Fourth VCP Congress. Under the conditions in which many objective and subjective difficulties still exist, over the past 5 years, we have not been able to implement this policy satisfactorily. However, some localities have initially done fairly well in building up the district level, thus giving us some valuable experiences.

While discussing the party Central Committee's draft political report to be presented at the fifth party congress, many delegates, through their suggestions, affirmed that the policy of building up the district level is an absolutely correct and creative policy. They also made many realistic suggestions to help devise concrete measures to rapidly build up and perfect the district level. The following are some suggestions made on the subject by a number of district leaders in the provinces of Nghe Tinh, Thanh Hoa and Vinh Phu.

At the recent party organization congresses of grassroots, district and provincial levels in Nghe Tinh, Thanh Hoa and Vinh Phu Provinces, the delegates agreed that in order to build up the district into an agricultural-industrial economic unit, it is of primary importance for the district to make rapid progress in resolving by itself its own food and clothing problems.

At the Nghi Loc District party organization congress, the delegates affirmed that in 1982 and subsequent years, the district must focus its efforts on achieving four objectives: meet its own needs in grain so as to relieve the province of its annual subsidy of 5,000 tons of grain; resolve by itself the clothing problem; rapidly promote export; and step up production of consumer goods. Comrade Vo Si Hoa, chairman of the Nghi Loc District People's Committee, said: In order to achieve these objectives, Nghi Loc District should carry out the following eight basic measures:

1. Satisfactorily build up the areas for intensive cultivation rice, secondary and industrial crops for export so as to produce large quantities of goods; disseminate and accelerate the application of scientific and technological achievements in agricultural production; satisfactorily apply technological advances so as to increase cultivation productivity; attach importance to investments so as to effectively apply scientific and technological advances in agriculture; rationally organize cultivation patterns; secure sufficient technical material supplies; and rapidly apply cultivation of new strains in order to increase productivity.

2. Carry out intensive cultivation while expanding the cultivated acreage by various means -- increase the companion crop acreage, mainly for the winter and spring corn crops; enlarge the winter crop acreage; raise the cultivated acreage from 30,000 to 35,000 hectares; open up new lands; carry out intensive cultivation of rush on 200 hectares along the Cam River so as to secure raw materials for production of export goods; allow the people to use 2,000 hectares of hilly soil for cultivation of secondary and industrial crops, fruit trees and perennial plants.

3. Comprehensively promote side economy by families; rearrange cultivation in family gardens so that every cooperative member's family can produce peanuts, hot pepper, sesame and citrus fruits to increase exports and can plant fibrous plants to help meet clothing needs.

4. Reduce the birth rate from 1.94 to 1.8 percent; maintain the current population level of 180,000 up to 1985; make good preparations for sending people to new economic zones in the province and other parts of the country.

5. Cooperate with the provincial level and with other provinces and municipalities for exporting agricultural, maritime, handicraft, and fine art products.

6. Effectively carry out maritime economic projects; put the 5,000 jobless coastal workers on the production of fine art products for export; rapidly restore coastal fishing practices; practice fishing of different maritime products on one fishing boat so as to catch varied maritime products; seek to catch the targeted 8,000 tons of maritime products, including 20 tons of shrimp and 10 tons of squid for export.

7. Motivate the people to economize on material consumption, mainly on grain; urge the sectors that do not engage in agricultural production to so some planting to partially help meet their own needs in grain.

8. Promote the application of the agricultural product contract system and expand the product contract system to other fields of production and trades.

In order to effectively resolve the food problem under the conditions in which our country's territory is small and its population is large, we must, along with practicing intensive cultivation and expanding rice acreage, do the same with the secondary crops.

Comrade Quach Le Thanh, secretary of the Party Committee of Cam Thuy District, Thanh Hoa Province, himself an agriculture engineer, is highly aware of our country's conditions and of his locality's capabilities. He suggested that in addition to developing corn cultivation, Cam Thuy District can, and should, develop the cultivation of manioc, sweet potatoes, other tuberous plants and farinaceous plants. He said: In light of the resolution of the fourth party congress, Cam Thuy District has concentrated efforts on building it up into a district with an agricultural-forestry-industrial economic structure. We have reorganized production, built more material-technical bases for agricultural production, attached importance to practicing intensive corn cultivation, expanding the cultivated acreage by opening up new lands and enlarging the cultivation of secondary crops, considering secondary crops an important factor in resolving the food problem. By practicing intensive cultivation and expanding the cultivated acreage, Cam Thuy District has repeatedly increased its food production, thanks to a rapid increase in secondary crop area and productivity. The 1980 total food crop area increased 5 percent over 1976, the increase in the secondary crop area being 13 percent. The 1980 grain production increased 47 percent over 1976, with the secondary crop production increasing by 22.7 percent in terms of paddy equivalent. The annual secondary crop production accounts for 40 percent -- and even 47.1 percent in some years -- of the whole annual food production.

In coming years, implementing the guidelines and tasks for developing agricultural production as pointed out in the central-level's political draft report to be presented at the fifth party congress, our district will do its best for production with the available work force, land and material-technical bases. We will strive to achieve 24,500 tons of grain in 1982 and 30,100 tons in 1985, with the secondary crop production accounting for 45-46 percent of the total. Our district will focus its efforts on tapping its overall potential in promoting the cultivation of secondary crops, mainly of corn, will apply the production experiences of past years and will, particularly, apply the end-product contract system.

We will motivate the people to concentrate their efforts on practicing intensive corn cultivation on the 4,200 hectares available for each year and strive to achieve an average 18-20 tons per hectare and per crop so as to attain the targeted annual production of 7,500-8,400 tons of food. We will use to the full all parts of the corn plant: corn husk for production of mats -- about 50,000 square meters for export each year, and the corn stalk as cow feed. Cam Thuy District is still unable to meet its food requirements. The state has to provide it with 25-30 percent of its grain needs annually.

He continued: In order to stabilize the production of secondary crops, thus helping steadily ensure the production of sufficient food for the district, we suggest that policies be devised to encourage production of secondary crop products by accepting, for example, as paddy equivalent secondary crop products sold or delivered to the state as grain obligations, that the district and villages be assisted in building secondary crop product processing installations and that plans be devised to harmonize secondary crop production in major rice growing areas.

In order to build up and perfect the district level, of course, the district needs further higher-level guidance and investments in material-technical bases. However, the delegates stressed that the districts must not rely on higher levels but, instead, must strive to best tap their potentials in work forces and arable land and rely on their own strengths in building them up.

Quoting realities from his districts, Comrade Chuvan Cam, secretary of the Party Committee of Lap Thach District, Vinh Phu Province, said: During the study of the central level's documents, our district party organization has realized, after strict self-criticism, our district's still heavy reliance on higher levels and lack of the spirit of self-reliance. We asked for trucks and fuel for transportation of goods on short distances of 5-6 kms. We live in a district with 50 percent of forest land, yet we even asked for supplies of plow (?handles) from higher levels. Camellias and palm trees are grown in areas not reserved for food crops, yet, when we sold their products, we demanded that the state sell us grain in exchange. The district and grassroots-level units have not paid due attention to developing trades and occupations, especially those relating to agricultural production, thus causing their deterioration. The tapping of the land potential and work force has not been given due attention. The cultural and educational tasks aimed at building up a new-type man have been carried out slowly. Bad practices in funeral services and weddings are still causing much waste. Meanwhile, superstitious practices continue to develop.

In order to build up the district into a strong agricultural-industrial economic unit, we think that, first of all, we must develop the spirit of self-reliance, combat the habit of relying on other people, shunning difficulties and hardship, and strive to tap our potential in work force, land and occupations and trades. We just quote here some examples to illustrate the difference between self-reliance and reliance on others. In 1980, Lap Thach District removed or embanked with only 31,000 cubic meters of earth in water conservancy work, yet the state had to provide it with 14 tons of grain. In 1981, the state did not provide any grain, yet the district did better in water conservancy work: It removed or embanked with 200,000 cubic meters of earth. In 1980, the district delivered to the state as grain obligations 3,300 tons of grain, 80 tons of peanuts, 31 tons of peas and beans, yet the provincial level had to send two trucks to the locality and used dozens of tons of fuel to carry the goods to the state granaries. In 1981, we delivered to the state as grain obligations 5,000 tons of grain, 175 tons of peanuts, and 33 tons of peas and beans, but the state did not have to supply us with any fuel, and the deliveries were carried out ahead of schedule.

By tapping to the full its potentials in land, work force and occupations and trades, by improving its management mechanism and by paying due attention to the three types of interests, we believe that Lap Thach District will score better successes in seeking to achieve new economic and social objectives.

ENVOY CONDEMNS U.S. FOR HUMAN RIGHTS VIOLATIONS

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 12 -- Ambassador Vo Anh Tuan, head of the Vietnamese permanent mission to the office of the U.N. at Geneva, has condemned colonialism, imperialism and expansionism for "using science against the rights to self-determination and national independence and also the right to life, the most sacred and fundamental right of man".

Addressing the 38th session of the U.N. Commission for Human Rights on Wednesday, Vo Anh Tuan recalled the great amounts of explosives and toxic chemicals used by the United States in the Vietnam war. "It was the most brutal war of aggression in modern history. It was also the most condemnable manifestation of use of science and technology by the United States against not only the Vietnamese people's right to shape their own destiny and develop the politico-social system of their choice, but also the most sacred and basic right of every Vietnamese, namely, the right to live in peace, independence and freedom", Vo Anh Tuan stated.

"The United States failed to drive Vietnam back to the stone age with bombs, shells and chemicals, as the aggressors had expected. Yet it did great damage to the country, which will take our people many years to repair", Vo Anh Tuan stressed. He condemned Beijing and Washington for increasing their threat of war and political, economic and military pressure to undermine the reconstruction of Vietnam.

AFP: 2 SOVIETS EXPELLED ON ESPIONAGE CHARGES

[Text] Singapore, 22 Feb (AFP) -- The Singapore Government today expelled a Soviet diplomat and a Soviet marine superintendent attached to a local shipyard for espionage activities. The Soviet diplomat expelled is Anatoliy Alekseyevich Larkin, second secretary, who was also in charge of the press and information division of the embassy. Mr. Larkin had been serving at the Soviet Embassy here since September 1979. Also expelled was Aleksandr Aleksandrovich Bondarev, marine superintendent attached to the semi-government Koppel shipyard to oversee repairs of Soviet merchant vessels. Both have been asked to leave within 24 hours.

A Singapore Government statement today said Mr. Larkin had cultivated a technical officer of the Singapore Armed Forces [SAF] to obtain "sensitive military information." The statement said Mr. Larkin identified himself as Anthony A. Toni and passed as a Swedish national working as a journalist for a European newspaper.

The statement added: "Larkin offered the SAF officer monetary incentives to entice him to cooperate. But the SAF officer reported to his superiors the attempt to use him for espionage. Larkin has been declared persona non grata and asked to leave Singapore within 24 hours."

The statement said Mr. Bondarev had been using a Singapore businessman since October 1979 as an agent "as part of his intelligence network." Mr. Bondarev allegedly induced the businessman to cooperate by promising him business deals. Mr. Bondarev's employment pass has been withdrawn. The statement said Mr. Bondarev would be prohibited from entering Singapore.

The Singapore Government's action comes on the heels of the expulsion of Soviet diplomats from Malaysia and Indonesia for alleged espionage activities.

SANCTIONS ANNOUNCED AGAINST SOVIET UNION, POLAND

OW230209 Tokyo KYODO in English 0156 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb (KYODO) -- The government announced Tuesday new punitive actions against the Soviet Union and Poland in protest against continuation of military rule in the East European country. In announcing the government's imposition of further sanctions on the Soviet Union and Poland decided at Tuesday's Cabinet meeting, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa said the Polish situation "has not shown any sign of improvement" since that nation was placed under martial law last December 13.

He said the Tokyo government took the latest action because "unity and cooperation among Western countries are of utmost importance in coping with the Polish question." Miyazawa said negotiations with Poland on rescheduling the payments of official debts due in 1982 will be held in abeyance "for the time being." He also said that the government will not extend new official credits to Poland, also for the time being.

The government on February 17 announced restrictions on the movements of Polish diplomats in Japan. This will remain in force. The chief government spokesman said, however, that economic assistance already committed to Poland will continue. Miyazawa said that under the new measures taken against the Moscow regime, the commission on science and technology cooperation will not meet for the time being. Also to be suspended will be the Japan-U.S.S.R. annual consultation on trade, Miyazawa said, adding that the Soviet request for the "enlargement of the office of trade representatives and other similar organizations" in Japan will not be "studied." The Soviet Union already has a trade representative office in Tokyo. He said "the extension of the period of stay of the members of the Soviet purchasing commission, which is due to expire at the end of this year, will be cautiously examined, taking into account the future developments of the Polish situation."

These measures were taken in addition to the three-point sanctions imposed on the Soviet Union in early 1980 shortly after Soviet troops invaded Afghanistan. They were restrictions on new export credits, a curb on personnel exchanges and the withholding of exports of high technology to the Soviet Union.

Miyazawa said "Japan has repeatedly urged Poland to put an early end to the present extraordinary state of affairs in Poland, and at the same time urged the Soviet Union to exercise self-restraint, pointing out its responsibility for the Polish situation." All the latest punitive actions against the Soviet Union were set for the time being, according to the official announcement.

Miyazawa told newsmen this was because Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi stressed at the Cabinet meeting the need to maintain cooperation and unity among Western nations. The chief Cabinet secretary explained it is difficult to say how long the measures will be in force but added that Japan will consult with Western countries. Miyazawa also said that Japan will continue holding working level talks with the Soviet Union on bilatral science and technology cooperation and the annual consultations on trade.

SUZUKI PLANS TO BAN SOVIET MINISTERS' VISIT

OW230023 Tokyo KYODO in English 0009 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 23 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki has revealed a negative stand on allowing the visit to Japan of Cabinet-level Soviet officials scheduled to come to Tokyo to attend a Japan-Soviet round table conference to be held from April 20 by the Dietmen's League for Japan-Soviet Friendship.

The prime minister told Vice Foreign Minister Ryozo Sunobe on Monday that it was not desirable for Soviet officials to visit Japan at a time when the government was planning to take sanctions against the Soviet Union in connection with the Polish problem.

He thus revealed, in effect, that the government planned to refuse the entry of the Cabinet-level Soviet officials planning to take part in the roundtable conference. Secretary General Susumu Nikaido of the Liberal-Democratic Party was informed of Suzuki's stand on the matter later on Monday by the Foreign Ministry.

Although it is not known clearly as yet who will take part in the round table conference from the Soviet Union, observers said that the Soviet delegation was expected to include Culture Minister Petr Demichev and Mikhail S. Solomentsev, premier of the Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic, both candidate members of the Communist Party's Politburo. The Japan-Soviet round table conference is being held annually alternately in Tokyo and Moscow, participated in by politicians and businessmen of Japan and the Soviet Union.

Observers believed that Prime Minister Suzuki revealed a stand against visits of Soviet officials because he judged that such visits will be undesirable from the standpoint of easing Japan-U.S. frictions at a time when the United States was calling on Japan and the European Community to act in harmony with it in taking sanctions against the Soviet Union.

At the time of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan, the government took measures to restrict official personnel exchanges. Soviet Education Minister Mikhail Prokofyev was scheduled to visit Tokyo last October at the invitation of the Dietmen's League for Japan-Soviet Friendship but he canceled his visit because the government refused to issue a diplomatic visa.

SUZUKI VIEWS ECONOMIC SUMMIT, MITTERRAND VISIT

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 22 (KYODO) -- Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said Monday that the biggest task facing the eighth economic summit of industrial democracies, scheduled for early June in Paris, will be to explore possible avenues for revitalizing the world economy.

With that in mind, he said, Japan will pursue four main policies -- (1) affording foreign products greater access to the Japanese market and stepping up imports; (2) appealing to Japan's trading partners, such as the U.S. and Western Europe, to redouble their efforts to expand their exports to this country; (3) speeding up Japan's economic recovery through measures primarily geared to stimulating domestic demand; and (4) promoting industrial cooperation with developed countries, and economic aid to Third World nations.

Touching on Japan's trade frictions with the U.S. stemming from a heavy trade imbalance in favor of this country, the prime minister showed a rather negative attitude to the suggestion that Japan lift the so-called "residual import restrictions" on agricultural products in response to American demand. He told reporters that the acceptance of the U.S. demand could pose a life-and-death problem for Japanese farmers. But that would reduce Japan's trade surplus with the U.S. by only dollar 700 million or 800 million according to an estimate, so it would not be desirable to cause a big stir among Japanese farmers by such a step, he added. Japan's trade surplus with the U.S. amounted to dollar 13.4 billion last year, according to Japanese statistics.

The prime minister also referred to a series of bills recently introduced in the U.S. Congress, calling for "reciprocity" in bilateral trade, Japan's economic aid to South Korea and French President Francois Mitterrand's visit to Japan scheduled for mid-April this year.

On the problem of removing import curbs on farm products, Suzuki noted that after all, only the imports of oranges and meat would be debatable. He did say, however, that Japan should remain receptive to Washington's call for a dialogue on the matter. In the course of such dialogue, Japan should give a convincing account of realities facing Japanese farmers to seek the understanding of the Americans, he added.

Regarding trade frictions with Western Europe as well as the U.S., Suzuki said there seems to be a similar problem between the U.S. and Western Europe. He feels such a situation would last until the world economy brightens, since each nation now finds itself in economic straits, he said. He thus indicated he thinks the problem of trade friction would drag on. The prime minister said, however, that Japan will strive to improve the situation by deepening mutual understanding and carrying on a dialogue with the nations concerned.

But the prime minister took an indirect swipe at the so-called "trade reciprocity" bills now before the U.S. Congress. Those bills are mainly designed to seek Japan's trade concessions on threat of retaliation, he said. "The reciprocity principle, if applied in a backward-looking way, would solve nothing," he said. That would result in balancing bilateral trade only on a decreasing scale, and could even trigger a vicious circle of mutual retaliatory measures, worsening the situation further, he warned.

On the long-pending problem of Japan's economic aid to South Korea, Prime Minister Suzuki said it has started to move ahead smoothly, although the exact amount of Japan's aid has yet to be worked out. He thus expressed the view that the second round of working-level talks between the two nations, held here last Thursday and Friday, had brought progress in the matter. Suzuki expressed hope that an amicable settlement will be reached at the foreign ministers' level, adding that when Sakurauchi goes to Seoul, that would be solely for promoting friendship between the two countries. South Korea is seeking dollar 6 billion in aid from Tokyo for its economic development program, which got under way last month.

Touching on French President Mitterrand's scheduled visit here, the prime minister said he wants policy-level discussions with the French leader on bilateral cooperation in the cultural, scientific and technological fields. Japan is especially interested in that country's advanced technologies relating to peaceful use of atomic energy, he added.

SAKURAUCHI DENIES PLEDGE TO U.S. ON SEALANES

OW230415 Tokyo KYODO in English 0348 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 23 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, Tuesday denied that Japan has promised Washington it will defend sea lanes up to 1,000 nautical miles from the Japanese home islands.

Responding to questions at a lower house Budget Committee meeting, Sakurauchi said statements by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki that Japan would defend the shipping routes across the Pacific were an expression of the prime minister's "independent judgement." While visiting the United States for a summit meeting last May, Suzuki told an audience at the National Press Club that Japan would defend the waters around Japan "for several hundred nautical miles, and sea lanes for a thousand nautical miles."

Opposition Komeito member Yuichi Ichikawa, Tuesday observed that the U.S. Department of Defense has since stated that Japan will defend its sea lanes for a thousand miles. He pressed Sakurauchi on whether or not a promise to that effect had been made.

While stating that Suzuki's remarks were considered "important," the foreign minister said they were intended to stress the "life-and-death importance" of sea lane defense to Japan. Suzuki's statement indicated that Japan would independently, and with in the limits imposed by the Constitution, work to strengthen its self-defense in the waters around Japan, and along sea lanes within 1,000 nautical miles of Japan, Sakurauchi said. He said U.S. Defense Department statements reflect America's understanding and expectations regarding Japan's position, but that no promise had been made.

Defense Agency Director General Soichiro Ito also commented on the prime minister's remarks, saying he believed Suzuki was "indicating his awareness that marine transportation is Japan's lifeline," and that Japan would work to strengthen its defense capabilities.

SR-71 FLIGHT PROMPTS 'VIGILANCE OF PEOPLE'S ARMY'

[Text] Pyongyang, February 22 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors frantic with manoeuvres to provoke a new war in Korea infiltrated the "SR-71" high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane deep into the sky above the Kangnyong Peninsula and the sky above territorial waters east of Kosong, Kangwon Province, of our country, from 9 hours 44 minutes to 10 hours 4 minutes on February 22 to commit espionage acts against the DPRK. In the wake of this, at around 11 hours 36 minutes, they again committed the grave military provocation of sending the "SR-71" spy plane deep into the sky above our territorial waters east of Tongchon, Kangwon Province.

The U.S. imperialist warmaniacs' aerial espionage acts against our country are becoming ever more frequent after they introduced a large armed force of aggression into South Korea and started the "Team Spirit 1982" war exercises, "the largest ever in history," in a simulated attack on the DPRK. Aerial espionage acts against the DPRK by the U.S. imperialist warmaniacs numbered as many as 6 in the last one week alone.

All facts clearly show once again that the U.S. imperialists are the very disturber of peace in Korea and the vicious enemy of her peaceful reunification.

The entire Korean people and officers and men of the People's Army are watching with heightened vigilance the reckless aggressive manoeuvres of the U.S. imperialist warmaniacs leading the situation to the brink of war. The U.S. imperialist aggressors must give up an anachronistic delusion and immediately stop all hostile acts against our people.

KCNA REPORTS U.S. NAVAL EXERCISE NEAR SOUTH KOREA

SK230423 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0359 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 23 (KCNA) -- An aircraft-carrier task force of the Seventh Fleet of the U.S. imperialist aggression navy staged a large-scale military exercise in strict secrecy on the east Sea of Korea for several days early in February, according to a KNS report quoting the February 21 issue of the Japanese SANKEI SHIMBUN.

The paper says that such "full-scale action of a large U.S. task force on the east Sea of Korea was the first in 13 years" and it deserves keen attention, as it implies that "the position of reattaching importance to the Far East shown by the United States at the end of last year is already being carried into practice in real earnest."

The 14 warships which participated in the exercise included the offensive carrier "Coral Sea," missile-carrying cruiser "Gridley," destroyer "Ingersoll," and frigates, a missile-destroyer and an offensive nuclear-powered submarine. In a circular formation with the carrier in the centre, the large-scale exercises took place, which included a air striking battle, anti-aircraft battle, anti-warship-on-the-surface battle, anti-submarine battle and naval supply.

Conveying this fact, the paper recalled that the commander of the U.S. Seventh Fleet intimated the intention to "attach importance to the Far East" when he said that he would like to move the centre of the deployment of the combat forces of the Seventh Fleet from the Indian Ocean to the northern Pacific and to the east Sea of Korea, and U.S. secretary of navy in his "naval report" submitted to Congress on February 8 said that the main point of the U.S. naval strategy lies in restoring the "command of the sea" in important regions.

NODONG SIMMUN HITS 'FISHERMEN SPY CASE' IN SOUTH

[Text] Pyongyang, February 23 (KCNA) -- NODONG SINMUN today, commenting on the malicious anti-communist racket the South Korean puppets kicked up against us by rigging up a "fisherman spy case," says: The so-called "fisherman spy case" is a premeditated one rigged up by those who are much upset by the widespread response called forth by our patriotic initiative on convening a 100-men joint conference as a consultative body for national reunification, in an attempt to block its influence and divert elsewhere the attention of the people.

Noting that recently the South Korean puppet National Security Planning Agency arrested an old couple and their daughter engaged in fishing in Mibop Island, Kanghwa County, Kyonggi Province, labelling them as "spies," and is spreading a rumour, groundlessly connecting them with us, that we tried to infiltrate into the South Korean fishermen and "communise" the coastal area for the purpose of "unification through communisation," the author of the commentary says: The Chon Tu-Hwan military fascist clique shamelessly claimed that we have "kidnapped" a large number of South Korean fishermen since the 1960's.

The "kidnapped" fishermen loudly clamoured about by this clique are those who were drifted into our waters after being caught by a storm in the sea while catching fish or those who were captured by our side while catching fish in our waters. The world knows full well that each time we warmly treated them with compatriotic sentiments, repaired their damaged fishing boats and sent all of them back to South Korea.

It is an unpardonable treacherous act to infuse antagonism and incite the consciousness of confrontation within the nation by cooking up a "case" to slander us at a time when we are making all efforts to realise the historic cause of national reunification.

The Chon Tu-hwan group must stop arresting guiltless people and conducting a smear campaign against us to maintain its power, release the arrested people and refrain from kicking up an anti-communist racket at once.

VRPR URGES POPULAR STRUGGLE THROUGH UNITY

SK220034 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 1000 GMT 21 Feb 82

[From the program "Weekly Feature": Station commentator Pak's commentary: "Unity Is Key to Victory"]

[Text] As you know, history has shown that only when we are firmly united can we achieve victory in any struggle. Struggle means a confrontation through strength. That is the case with all types of struggle: Struggle for wage increases, struggle for improving farming conditions, struggle for acquiring the rights to existence against capitalist suppression and landlords' exploitation, and struggle for opposing the present fascist dictatorship and realizing democratization of society. We cannot achieve victory in all these struggles through the strength of only a few people.

The fascist force has vast suppressive armed power. However, our patriotic people of all walks of life, including peasants and workers, are bare-handed. Accordingly, the only way our masses can win victory in all these struggles is to firmly unite. It is easy to snap a stick in two, but is impossible to snap a bundle of sticks in two. Likewise, a man's strength is not worth considering; but if many people unite as one, no one can match such united strength.

Let us suppose workers at a workshop wage a struggle for a wage increase. If all the workers do not firmly unite but only a few workers take part in the struggle, the employers will say:

"You are not the only ones working here. If you don't like your wages you can quit the job." However, if all the workers at the workshop unite as one and launch a struggle, the employer cannot lay off all of them and will accede to the workers' demands. Moreover, the fascist authorities cannot arrest all of the workers. That is also the case with the antifascist democratization struggle against the Chon Tu-hwan military rule.

If people of all walks of life such as workers, peasants, youths and students firmly unite to struggle, they can overthrow the fascist rule. We have such experience. In the 19 April uprising, even the army and police, who had been mobilized to suppress the people, left alone people of all walks of life including youths and students and workers and peasants; they launched into the sacred fight against the dictatorship. Thus, they could topple the Syngman Rhee dictatorship. People also were able to display their great might in the pan-national October democratization resistance which drove traitor Pak Chong-hui to death. Again, they struggled through unity.

On account of this, the Chon Tu-hwan ring is cunningly scheming to prevent people of all walks of life from uniting. It fears their unity. Patriotic people of all walks of life should heighten their vigilance against the Chon Tu-hwan ring's cunning splittist and mischief-making machinations and deceitful tactics. All the people who are suppressed and ill-treated should bear in mind that unity is the key to victory. They should boldly wage an antifascist national salvation resistance for democracy in unity.

As I said, unity is the weapon for struggle and a key to victory. Nonetheless, no matter how earnestly we desire unity, we cannot easily attain it without hard work. As we need a bowl in gleaning ears of grains, we need an organization to rally popular strength. Without a bowl, we cannot glean ears of grain. Without an organization, we cannot rally the people's strength nor demonstrate the people's unity. Accordingly, there should be an organization if our masses are to unite.

This organization can take various forms. We can create a friendship society or an ad interim struggle committee. We can make a progovernment body a democratic one. However, I think what is more important is to create an independent and democratic organization which protects the rights and interest of all the people. Workers should organize independent trade unions -- genuine organizations which protect their rights and interests. Peasants should organize independent agricultural unions. Students should organize democratic student struggle organizations and vigorously wage a struggle against the fascist dictatorship with firm unity on the basis of the organizations.

What is more important is to organize a pan-national organization which uniformly leads organizations of all segments and rally the strength of the patriotic people of all walks of life. In this way we can display great might in the struggle for realizing democratization of society and the fatherland's peaceful reunification. I think the patriotic people of all walks of life such as workers, peasants, youths and students, merchants and industrialists, intellectuals and religious men should form a united front against fascism and for democratization -- a pan-national struggle organization -- and firmly unite in the struggle.

Without an organization which uniformly binds people of all walks of life and democratic forces -- all having interests in democratizing society -- we cannot rally people of all walks of life who are fighting in a dispersed manner in a powerful struggle.

The united front against fascism and for democratization should serve as a united body to be participated in by people of all walks of life such as workers, peasants, youths and students, intellectuals, and religious men aspiring democracy. Such a united body has not been created in this land. This united body can take any form. Regardless of its form, the body should comprise all classes and strata and democratic forces aspiring democracy and reunification.

Of course, there may arise difficulties in forming the united body. However, if we transcend differences of opinion and achieve unity in the face of the great principle of democratizing the society, we can easily overcome them.

The democratic and patriotic forces, which are charged with the glorious responsibility of overthrowing the fascist dictatorship and bringing in the dawn of democracy and reunification on its tomb, should form a united front against fascism and for democratization and boldly wage a pan-national democratization resistance against the Chon Tu-hwan military rule. Patriotic people of all walks of life should bear in mind that unity is the weapon for struggle and the key to victory. They should make strenuous efforts to wage a united popular struggle.

FRANCE, ROK AGREE TO EXPAND COOPERATIVE TIES

[By Kim Song-u]

[Text] Paris -- Korea and France have agreed to further expand the bilateral cooperative relations between the two states for mutual benefits through the promotion of exchanges in all fields. The accord came in a meeting Foreign Minister No Sin-yong had with French President Francois Mitterrand at the Elysee Palace, Monday (Feb. 22).

The No-Mitterrand talks lasted for about 20 minutes from 11 a.m. (7 p.m. KST), during which they exchanged a wide range of opinions on the latest political situation in Northeast Asia including the Korean Peninsula. Emerging from the 20-minute talks with Mitterrand, Minister No said: "Our side briefed him on President Chon Tu-hwan's new peace formula and proposals for a meeting of the top authorities between Seoul and North Korea." He went on that the talks also covered a wide range of issues to further promote binational amicable and cooperative relations.

Asked if a summit conference between Seoul and Paris was taken up as a topic in the talks he held with Mitterrand, Minister No refused to comment on it. He told reporters that he was satisfied with the results of the talks with Mitterrand.

Minister No delivered President Chon's personal letter to him, obviously seeking positive cooperation from France on Seoul's new peace formula for democratic unification as well as French understanding of the situation on the Korean Peninsula. On hand for the No-Mitterrand meeting were Korean Ambassador to France Yun Sok-hun and Mitterrand's secretary general Pierre Beregovoy. Prior to talks with Mitterrand, Minister No held a lengthy meeting with Beregovoy for about one hour and 15 minutes.

Following his talks with Mitterrand, Minister No held business meetings separtately with his French counterpart Claude Cheysson and Foreign Commerce Minister Michel Jobert on avenues for increased cooperation in political and trade field.

Minister No arrived here Sunday night for a two-day official visit at the invitation of his French counterpart Cheysson. Minister No is the first foreign minister from Korea to visit Paris since the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two countries in 1949.

KOREA HERALD CALLS FOR INTER-KOREAN SPORTS THAW

[Editorial: "Inter-Korean Sports Thaw"]

[Text] As far as athletic exchange is concerned, Peking seems to be emerging as maker of the good news as against Pyongyang that continues to author the bad news by turning deaf ears to Seoul's positive and constructive overtures for peaceable contact and exchange in the field of sports with North Korea. The time has come for it to stop playing mischief with the well-meaning endeavor of the South.

On the other side of the Yellow and East China Seas the good news has it that Communist China will send a team to the Fifth World Women's Softball Championships scheduled for July in Taipei. The official confirmation of Peking's readiness to attend a sports tournament in the Nationalist-ruled Taiwan came in what could be seen as a "softball diplomacy" toward reunification.

Although there remain some political and technical hurdles involving the procedure of invitation and the flag and national anthem of the host country, the inter-Chinese sports exchange is likely to take place. In that event, the Chinese case would be an envy of the Koreans and set a striking example for North Korea to follow because it will remain the sole culprit, balking at inter-Korean athletic exchange.

Our government has made repeated proposals for opening doors to each other and initiating intercourse in nonpolitical and less controversial spheres including sports. The North Korean communists persist in their negative response with some excuse or other. Nonetheless, we cannot afford to let their rejection and intransigence exhaust our patience and forward-looking stance.

In a renewed bid to bring Pyongyang around to mutual consultation and coordination with Seoul, the government is about to make another proposal that South and North Korea should meet to discuss ways of enabling North Koreans to attend the Seoul Olumpics and delegations of other communist countries to enter South Korea via Panmunjom.

According to Minister of State for National Security and Diplomacy No Tae-u, Seoul will propose such talks to facilitate inter-Korean sporting exchange and participation of more communist-affiliated countries and nonaligned nations in the forthcoming global games here.

It is a standing policy of the Republic of Korea to make the major event as well as the Asian Games to precede it most amicable and successful ones not affected by politics. Thus, the Seoul Government is prepared to open its door wide to invite and receive any or all sportsmen and spectators from all parts of the world without distinction or prejudice.

In generating an atmosphere of fraternity and harmony conducive to a successful Olympiad it is desirable that North Koreans should come to terms with us for starting athletic exchange, working toward joint representation in international events and opening up territorial borders. Accommodation between South and North Korea will contribute decisively to making the Olympiad a true festival of peace and friendship.

What keeps North Korean communists from talking and coming to us? Why cannot the Korean compatriots arbitrarily separated in two zones visit each other and play together? Only desperate obstinacy and self-defeatism on the part of Kim Il-song stands in the way. He must come out of his shell now and answer our call for a thaw in sports to set in.

CENSORSHIP EASED, BOOKS ON COMMUNISM TO APPEAR

SK220807 Seoul YONHAP in English 0750 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Text] Seoul, Feb 22 (YONHAP) -- A book, which has been banned in South Korea for over three decades because of its Marxist contents was published here over the weekend, and a score of others previously banned books are expected to be published beginning next month.

The Culture-Information Ministry Friday permitted the sale of the Korean translation of "Karl Marx: His Life and Environment," written by the British author, Isiah Berlin. The book, dealing with the German-born dialectical materialist and his ideology, was published by a Seoul-based publishing co.

Other books, including "The Communist Party of the Soviet Union" by Leonard Schapiro, in their translated versions, are likely to appear at bookstores soon, under the easing of the ministry's censorship policies.

A ministry official said Monday that the ministry plans to allow books on Marxism, communism and related subjects to be translated and published, as long as they do not violate the current laws of the country. The ministry has controlled the sales of such books since the division of the Korean Peninsula. The change in its policy is in line with a series of government measures to liberalize the country's social system, and apparently indicates confidence in the prevailing system in South Korea over that of North Korea.

AYE KO DELIVERS UNION DAY SEMINAR SPEECH

BK121045 Rangoon Domestic Service in Burmese 1330 GMT 11 Feb 82

[Opening address by U Aye Ko, chairman of the 35th Union Day Celebrations Committee and secretary of the State Council, delivered at Union Day seminar held at the Kyaikkasan grounds in Rangoon on 11 February -- recorded]

[Summary] Distinguished union national delegates and guests: Union Day preserves the tradition of national unity and renews efforts to foster national solidarity. On the occasion of this Union Day seminar the Burma Socialist Program Party (BSPP] laid down three political objectives:

"1. To further consolidate and strengthen national unity;

"2. To make concerted efforts by all national groups for the national economic development; and

"3. To share national defense and security responsibilities."

The first political objective is the most basic and important factor. A review of our history shows that national unity brings about success, and national unity enables our country to exist today as an independent state. The foundation has been laid for further fostering and strengthening national unity. In 1974, the people of Burma approved the state Constitution at a referendum and unanimously accepted the leadership of the BSPP, the only political party.

Members of the armed forces are also discharging their duties for socialist construction. The Lanzin Youth Organization and the Academy for the Development of National Groups enable youths of various groups to participate in national development tasks and develop the union spirit.

On the economic front, the country's economy has improved due to implementation of economic pland through socialist democratic practice. It is necessary that these existing political, economic and organizational foundations be further strengthened by national groups to promote national unity according to the provisions of the state Constitution. The socialist democratic machinery comprising the People's Assembly and various levels of people's councils has been established to carry out the constitutional provisions. The people's councils at the local level are urged to carry out their local affairs efficiently while the People's Assembly, the State Council and other central organs of state pass decisions, laws and rules in the interest of the state. It is necessary for state organs at various levels to follow the socialist democratic practices and fully serve the interests of the people. Mass and class organizations are urged to efficiently carry out their respective tasks by accepting the leadership of the party.

Efforts are also being made to promote the culture and social development of national groups. The state organs and various class and mass organizations are urged to work for national unity by contributing to the development of culture and lifting the standard of living.

Distinguished delegates: I will now elaborate on the second objective of making concerted efforts for the country's economic development. The objective aims at developing the national economy through the participation of all national groups. The 20-year-long term economic plan and short-term plans have been laid down for the implementation of the socialist economy. Living standards in the country are expected to double by the end of the 20-year-long term economic plan. Thanks to organizations and people responsible for implementation of the economic plans at various levels, the gross national product rate surpassed the target during the third 3-year economic plan. The economic progress we expect can be attained only through the participation and cooperation of the working people and national groups in the implementation of economic plans.

At present, efforts are being made to develop and expand the country's agricultural, fish and meat sector. The surplus from these sectors can be exported to earn foreign exchange. Organizational tasks must be carried out to enable the national groups to employ modern and scientific techniques in these sectors. To attain the second objective, proportionate ownership of cooperatives, state and private sectors must be ensured in socialist economic construction. The national groups are responsible for economic development and the boosting of the standard of living of the people in accordance with the targets of the fourth 4-year economic plan to further increase the gross national product rate and national income.

"Dear respected national delegates, let me now explain the third objective: That is, for all the nationalities to share national defense and security responsibilities. As an independent and sovereign country, our most important task is national defense and security. If a country loses independence, its identity and stand also disappear. Our country, as a state which once lost its independence, has had the bitter experience of being enslaved. For this reason, in order to regain the independence we had lost, we had to sacrifice blood and sweat. We regained our independence by building national unity on the basis of patriotism and the spirit of not wanting to be slaves. After regaining independence, the armed forces and the people had to join hands to fight a different kind of threat -- from insurgencies. With the strength from our national unity we have safeguarded and maintained our independence, sovereignty and the integrity of our country.

"Today we have established a socialist democratic state under BSPP leadership for the sake of the perpetuity of the country, and to build an affluent socialist society. Insurgents, who want to destroy the constructive tasks undertaken by the people themselves in the interests of all the people, continue to disrupt the peace, tranquility and security of the people in some border areas. The state is resorting to political, diplomatic as well as military means to end the insurgency. It is working toward the goal of eradicating insurgency through the might of the people. As a result of the people joining hands with the armed forces in eliminating insurgency, the insurgents have disintegrated in the delta, the Pegu Yoma and some states and divisions.

"Moreover, efforts are being made to transform 'black' [insurgent-infested areas] into 'brown' areas, brown areas into white areas and white areas consolidated areas. The armed forces are carrying out these tasks in a heroic, outstanding, and efficient manner in the interests of the people and in accordance with the slogan: 'Fight while organizing and organize while fighting.' The people are also doing everything and providing assistance wherever possible to make the just war a success.

"Outstanding examples in this context would include people joining the people's militia and fighting heroically as well as holding mass rallies to unanimously oppose and condemn the subversive acts of the insurgents. They provide moral as well as material support for the armed forces personnel waging the just war at the frontline. Such cooperation from the people not only boosts the morale of the soldiers but also improves the combat efficiency of the people's army. Because of such distinguished efforts, the remnant insurgent forces are on the run, hiding in the remote border areas. Some, however, repenting their mistakes and seeing the truth, have returned to the legal fold. Such returnees were enthusiastically welcomed by the party, the state and the people. However, we must continue to suppress the insurgents still disrupting the people's peace, progress and prosperity, until they are completely eradicated.

"Some insurgents, after hiding in the border areas, have joined hands with blackmarketeers and profiteers and are continuing their subversive acts. Such acts disrupt the security of the border areas. Thus, for the sake of security in the border areas, in order to boost the momentum of the military campaigns, the people in such areas need to join with the armed forces and to use all means available to crush the insurgents.

"In doing so, people's militia units must be systematically expanded and developed even more than at present. As state security and national defense is improved, for the sake of peace and security in the country, we shall be able to carry out economic construction tasks successfully. Only then will we be able to work better for the progress and prosperity of the people of all nationalities.

"For the sake of eradicating insurgency, which is obstructing the development and progress of the state, as well as for any extraordinary situation, we must enhance the defense capability of the state so as to cope with any eventuality. Therefore, I must urge that organizational training and educational work must be carried out so as to motivate and enhance patriotism, national tradition and the spirit of national defense among the people of all nationalities so that they will all share the security and national defense responsibilities.

In conclusion, I would like to urge the delegates to give good and frank suggestions at the seminar so as to implement the political objectives of the 35th Union Day. [applause]

Khieu Samphan, Sihanouk Meet

BK230201 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Text] On 21 February 1982, Khieu Samphan, chairman of the State Presidium, prime minister of Democratic Kampuchea and provisional chairman of the Patriotic and Democratic Front of Great National Union of Kampuchea [PDFGNUK], with other members of the Democratic Kampuchean delegation, met and held talks in Beijing with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, former head of state of Kampuchea, and his associates on the issue of the coalition of Kampuchean national forces to fight the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators. The two parties exchanged their views in detail in an atmosphere of mutual understanding for 1 and 1/2 hours, and agreed to continue the discussions.

On behalf of the two sides, Samdech Norodom Sihanouk summed up the results of this round of talks to Chinese and foreign reporters as follows:

We agreed on three points: 1) If one day we form a tripartite coalition, this coalition must have a minimum political program. 2) Should the tripartite coalition government be formed one day, it must be based on the legal status of the Democratic Kampuchean state, which is a full member of the United Nations. 3) The three parties enjoy their full autonomy, freedom, ideology and points of view respectively. But if they form a tripartite government, this coalition government must have a number of principles which unite all parties and define the rights and duties of each side to be respected by these parties in order to cooperate with each other in harmony.

Concerning the possibility of a Kampuchean tripartite meeting in the future, Samdech Norodom Sihanouk indicated: Chairman Khieu Samphan and I hope that there will be possibility to meet Chairman Son Sann and hold a tripartite meeting. If we cannot convene a formal conference as in Singapore, we may have a tripartite meeting. Therefore, Chairman Khieu Samphan and myself hope that Mr Son Sann agrees with our wish for a tripartite meeting as soon as possible.

[Excerpts] Beijing, 23 Feb (AFP) -- Former Cambodian head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk today disclosed that China had recently provided light weapons to some 3,000 of his supporters fighting Vietnamese troops in Cambodia. Prince Sihanouk was speaking to newsmen before hosting a luncheon for Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan, who has come to Beijing for talks on a coalition of anti-Vietnamese Cambodian movements.

The prince, however, added that China had refused to provide his force with food supplies, suggesting instead that they turn to other countries, notably the United States and members of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN).

Khieu Samphan, for his part, reiterated the three points on which he had reached agreement with Prince Sihanouk. "Any possible coalition must be based on these three points -- maintenance of the legal status of the Democratic Kampuchean state (Khmer Rouge), autonomy for each movement taking part, and respect for 'common rules,'" the Khmer Rouge leader said.

An alliance would have to work on the basis of "the principle of consensus" between all participants, and "important decisions would have to be taken in common," he added.

Khieu Samphan acknowledged there were differences between the three movements, but added that these should be superseded by the "common goal" -- to force some 200,000 Vietnamese troops currently in Cambodia to evacuate the country. The Khmer Rouge leader, who declined to make any comment on Son Sann's refusal to come to Beijing, is to meet tomorrow with Mr Deng. He has previously met with Chinese Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang and Deputy Premier Huang Hua, the foreign minister.

Prince Sihanouk had earlier said no anti-Vietnamese coalition would be set up without Son Sann. "If former Prime Minister Son Sann is not ready to join, the coalition will have to wait for Mr Son Sann," he said.

REACTION TO ALLEGED SRV TOXIC CHEMICAL USE

Phnom Penh Commentary

BK230736 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 20 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Flagrant Violations by Thai Party"]

[Text] According to military sources, during the past few days, Thai artillery has fired many toxic chemical shells into Kampuchean territory. In fact, on 11 February, at about 1800 to 1830, toxic chemical rounds fired by 105-mm artillery inside Thailand fell to the west and to the north of O Da in the Phnum Malai region on the border zone of Battambang Province, causing vomitting and fainting to 20 people.

On the afternoon of 14 February, nine toxic chemical rounds of 105-mm artillery fired from Thailand exploded on Phnum Malai. Many Kampuchean civilians suffered from chemicals, contained in shells fried from Thailand, which induced tears and vomitting. These are flagrant violations by Thailand.

Concerning successive Thai violations along the Kampuchean-Thai border, the PRK Government always strongly condemns and asks the Thai powerholders to promptly end their hostility. But the Thai party is sutbborn and pretends to know nothing about this issue. Instead they fire their artillery shells into Kampuchean territory in order to support infiltrations by Pol Pot remnants who are taking refuge in Thailand. The Thais close their eyes and never recognize their mistakes in these unfriendly acts that they have committed. On the contrary, they accuse Kampuchea and Vietnam of violating their territory. Furthermore, the Thais and the U.S. imperialists accused the Vietnamese of using toxic chemicals in Kampuchea. How does the Thai side excuse their firing of toxic chemicals, obviously violating Kampuchean territory? Does this (?event) mean thief crying thief?

Therefore, the new Thai violation of Kampuchean territory is an obvious proof showing more clearly the ambition of the Thai ruling circle which opposes the PRK. Many times we have issued our stand and our correct good will to respect the sovereignty and territorial integrity of Thailand -- a neighbouring country. The presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea conforms with the Kampuchean people's sacred wish and their presence does not threaten Thai independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. But the Thai power circle follows the Beijing Chinese and the U.S. imperialists in order to oppose to the PRK. The Thais continue to assist and support Pol Pot remnants and other Khmer reactionary traitors to allow them to kill the Kampuchean people, destroy peace, stability and the Kampuchean people's livelihood once more.

We strongly condemn the barbarous acts and the unfriendly policy of the Thai powerholders for flagrantly violating the People's Republic of Kampuchea. We demand once more that the Thai authorities immediately cease all firing into Kampuchean territory and they must be held entirely responsible for all of their activities as well as all the consequences arising therefrom.

DK Health Ministry Advice

BK230813 (Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Advice by the Democratic Kampuchean Ministry of Public Health on how to cope with the chemical weapons in the form of poisonous chemicals and toxic gas that the Vietnamese enemy is systematically applying everywhere -- dated 16 February]

[Text] We are now entering the fourth dry season. The Le Duan Vietnamese aggressors are in a total impasse. In the military field, they have suffered strategic defeats. They are struggling tactically by mobilizing forces to try to initiate attacks against us in some areas in order to postpone their defeat. However, they have suffered successive defeats in all these attempts. Thus, in addition to launching all kinds of maneuvers to resist our Democratic Kampuchean National Army and guerrillas and our people, the Vietnamese enemy has intensified the use of chemical weapons -- poisonous chemicals and toxic gas -- in all areas in a systematic manner, such as sending airplanes to spray toxic chemicals from the air, stealthily pouring toxic chemicals into rivers, streams, streamlets, ponds, reservoirs and wells -- which are sources of water that our people use every day -- and sending its agents, such as those Vietnamese men and women who mingle among our people to poison cakes, vegetables, fruits and food and mix toxic chemicals with commodities, such as detergent powder, in order systematically to kill our people. In some areas, the Vietnamese enemy has placed toxic canisters and mines in order to poison and kill our people who pass by these areas. For example, from 25 January to 13 February, the Vietnamese enemy sent airplanes to spread toxic chemicals over our people's villages in Leach District of Pursat Province, causing serious injury to a number of inhabitants and slight injury to some others.

In this connection, the Democratic Kampuchean Ministry of Public Health wishes to give the following advice:

1. Disseminate among our male and female combatants and people the views concerning the Vietnamese enemy's impasse and strategic defeats in the military field and its attempt to get out of this impasse by resorting to the use of chemical weapons -- poisonous chemicals and toxic gas;

2. Take concrete and effective measures, such as:

A. Precautions in the use of water, vegetables, food and cakes and in traveling to any area where the Vietnamese enemy might be able to use toxic gas;

B. Readiness to provide treatment to any victim by, first, giving prompt treatment as available following the previous advice of the Ministry of Public Health, and, second, bringing the victim to a hospital quickly for treatment. Normally the medics can cure any victim who is promptly sent to the hospital.

HUN SEN INTERVIEWED ON PCF CONGRESS PARTICIPATION

BK230450 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1230 GMT 21 Feb 82

[Interview granted to a station correspondent by Hun Sen, foreign minister of the People's Republic of Kampuchea, on success of the KPRP delegation's participation in the 24th Congress of the Communist Party of France in Paris -- recorded; date not given]

[Text] [Question] Recently you led the KPRP delegation to attend the 24th Congress of the Communist Party of France [PCF]. Would you please comment on the results and significance of our delegation's participation in this congress?

[Answer] It is the first time that the KPRP had the chance to send its representatives to attend the PCF Congress which is a strong party in Europe. Participation in the 24th PCF Congress as well as my presence in France were very important.

First, as a representative of the KPRP, I was given a great honor by the French communists and workers during the congress and the meeting to welcome our delegation. I delivered speeches at the welcoming meeting and at the 24th PCF Congress expressing the solidarity and support of the Kampuchean party and workers for the PCF and French workers.

I know that the 24th PCF Congress was successful. The congress expressed its unity with the political report of Comrade George Marchais who is the PCF general secretary. Concurrently, I noted that the congress was unanimous on important, large international issues such as the situation in Poland and El Salvador. These are the main impressions of the KPRP.

Besides participating in the PCF Congress, my presence in Paris was sooner than expected because I am a diplomat among the high-ranking PRK leaders. I did not think that I could be present in Paris in 1982. As a diplomat, I thought that I would have the possibility to go there only after diplomatic relations were established. But due to the strong influence of PCF, I had the chance to go to Paris even before the establishment of diplomatic relations with the French Government. During that occasion, although it was unofficial, I met a number of personalities of the Socialist Party which presently rules France, responsible personalities of the French Government and the Foreign Ministry. During these meetings, although they were unofficial, I told them of the irreversible situation in Kampuchea. I also reiterated that there is no Kampuchean problem as raised by the Chinese and the ASEAN countries. On this point, I questioned whether they consider the revival of the Kampuchean people or the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea as the Kampuchean problem?

I told them that if they consider the revival of the Kampuchean people as the Kampuchean problem they must accept a genocidal regime unprecedented in history. If they contemplate the presence of Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea as the Kampuchean problem there would be Thai, Philippine, German, Japanese, Western German [as heard] problems and issues related to a number of countries in which there are foreign troops present as in Kampuchea. After all these indications, I reiterated that there is no Kampuchean problem to be solved at the United Nations or at an international conference, but there are solutions for Southeast Asia because at present it is there the situation is threatened by Chinese expansionists in collusion with the imperialists. Therefore, there is the problem of peace and stability in Southeast Asia to be solved. I indicated all of this to them and I noted that the French are also concerned with this problem.

I raised the issue between Indochina and China which has to be solved separately. Another issue is between Indochina and ASEAN in order to find solutions for peace and stability in Southeast Asia without interference from countries outside of this region. Conferences must proceed in two forms and steps: The regional conference between the Indochinese countries and the ASEAN countries with Burma's participation and the international conference to recognize and guarantee all resolutions of the regional conference.

On this issue, I told them about the Indochinese countries' concern for relations with Thailand because it shares land and sea borders with Indochina. I told them about our good will toward Thailand. We want Thailand to comply with a number of conditions, that is, to end its collusion with China, to stop using, assisting, giving refuge and foodstuffs to Pol Pot troops and Khmer reactionaries and to gather them in one area.

In exchange for Thailand's compliance with these conditions, Kampuchea and Vietnam will comply with a number of conditions. Some of the Vietnamese troops would be withdrawn from Kampuchea. If the two parties want to ensure more security than that, they should discuss a demilitarized zone under international guarantee or supervision acceptable to the two sides.

The French officials with whom I met and talked paid close attention to these issues. My impressions on the attitude of these French officials are as follows:

1. Concerning Southeast Asia, the French Government of Mr Mitterrand's Socialist Party pays attention to the role of the Indochinese countries of which Kampuchea is one. They recognize the irreversible situation in Kampuchea.

Thus, there are good signs that relations between France and Kampuchea might be brought about. However, we must not be too optimistic because it would not be today. We might have to wait for quite a long time on this problem, but it would be impossible that France would turn to support Pol Pot or to place its hopes or confidence in the other reactionary Khmers. But, we must not be overconfident in this matter.

The French paid particular attention to the problem of Southeast Asia. These officials told me that the French Government does not want to do anything to add to the tension in Southeast Asia. France wants Southeast Asia to be a region of peace and stability and wants the countries in the region to normalize their relations. I told them that the point of view of the French Socialist Party's government conformed with that of Kampuchea and the other Indochinese countries which also want peace and stability. I told them that since there are two different formulae concerning the desire for peace and stability in Southeast Asia, I do not know which one the French Government accepts. These two different formulae are:

The first formula, which belongs to China and the ASEAN, wants peace and stability in Southeast Asia through the overthrow of the Phnom Penh government as they have tried and are trying with the formation of a coalition government of Pol Pot, Son Sann and Sihanouk.

I told them that if the Mitterrand government accepts this formula, it would be a big mistake. It would be a big mistake and not only would it not contribute to peace and stability in Southeast Asia, but would also cause the situation in Southeast Asia to become more tense. This is the first formula concerning peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The second formula is the negotiations proposed by the Indochinese countries. However, it should be clearly defined that no Kampuchean problem would be discussed at these negotiations. It would first be a regional conference and then an international conference. Not only the Kampuchean problem but many problems of interest to the two sides would be discussed at these negotiations. I am of the opinion that if France accepts this formula, the French Government might play a significant role in bringing about peace and stability to Southeast Asia. This was the point that I stressed. I stressed the solution of problems in Southeast Asia, not the Kampuchean problem.

In addition to meeting with the (?PCF) personages and attending the PCF Congress, I also carried out important work, that is, work concerning Khmer residents in France. I would like to inform you that when I arrived in Paris, aside from the PCF officials and the Vietnamese and Lao diplomatic corps, I was greeted by a large crowd of members of Khmer patriotic associations in Paris. There are now three associations of our patriots. The first group is headed by Dr Kim Vieng; the second group is led by Professor Keng Vansak; and the third group if led by Dr Lok Chay. Both the committees of these three associations and the other Khmer residents went to welcome me at the airport in Paris.

The three associations organized a reception and a meeting in which I made a speech which lasted for 3 hours and 5 minutes and caused great surprise to the Khmer intellectuals and refugees in Paris. This is because they used to speak about the death of Khmers and the Khmers under the Vietnamese colonialists, but no one knows better than those who stayed in Kampuchea. During my trip to France, a number of intellectuals went with me. They are intellectuals who remained in the country and those who used to reside in France but returned to our country during the Pol Pot era, such as Comrade Sieng Saran, the assistant to the foreign minister. Thus, they could see [words indistinct]. They know that those who are in the country are also as patriotic as those living outside the country. I was told that the number of Khmer refugees and membership of the patriotic associations in Paris has increased. The chairmen of the three associations told me that during my presence in Paris, more people joined our associations. This is because they have become more aware of the real situation in Kampuchea.

Concerning the reactionaries, frankly speaking, Son Sann was also in Paris when I was there. One and a half days after my arrival, the reactionaries held meeting at Son Sann's residence in order to prepare a demonstration against my trip. There are now 45,000 Khmer people taking refuge in France. Of these 45,000 people, Son Sann could mobilize only 18 persons to stage a demonstration. But, since this number is too small for a demonstration, they cancelled it. This was a most serious setback to the Son Sann group and the reactionary Khmers who acted on the instigation of the imperialists. Nobody prevented the Son Sann group from staging this demonstration. It was because they are weak and we are strong. If they were strong, they might be able to stage a demonstration against my visit to Paris. Those 18 persons that Son Sann could mobilize of the 45,000 people there are former generals of the U.S. imperialists. This is a weak point of the enemy. I do not tell lies to the comrades on this radio. You might have heard yourselves that neither the French nor the American radio broadcast any reaction by the reactionary Khmers in Paris. They broadcast only the welcome that the Kampuchean residents in France accorded the visit by the delegation that I led. I do not lie, I do not say anything different from the facts.

I would like to tell you about the refugees' living conditions. In telling you about this, I am not trying to obstruct anyone who wants to escape to France, but I want to talk about the truth in France. In saying this, I do not mean that I criticize the capitalist regime in France.

The reactionaries such as the Son Sann, Sihanouk and Pol Pot groups always make propaganda instigating Khmer people and intellectuals to escape to France. They tell them that France is heaven. I also said it. I told Khmer refugees that France is an enjoyable country, but only for the rich who can afford it. It is not enjoyable for everybody. I recognize that France is a heaven, but it is a heaven for those people who can afford it but not for everybody.

After meeting and listening to my more than 3-hour speech, Khmer refugees organized a party (?for the delegation).

(?We) spent a long time meeting each other and understanding each other. Many of our Khmer patriots want to return to our country. I told them to be a little bit patient. (?I said) that if we were to take them back to kill and maltreat them as Pol Pot did (?it would not be difficult to do). The government can hire planes to facilitate their living, therefore they must be a little bit patient. The government does not abandon them. All of them replied that living in France is difficult for them. There are more than 2 million French unemployed. Some of the (?Khmer refugees) were fired because of small mistakes or for coming to work a little bit late, I realize it.

As an example, there was a high school teacher who came to meet me. He told me that at present he has a job cutting tree branches along the streets. It is his duty to climb trees and trim branches in order to made the streets attractive. Thus a Khmer teacher became a cutter of tree branches for the French. Some Khmer doctors are in charge of cleaning chamber pots and washing laundry in French hospitals, cleaning subway cars and collecting garbage for the French. I noted that a number of Khmers living in France who were fooled by the reactionaries are very disappointed. A number of them committed suicide by hanging. During my visit there, a number of French communists as well as some members of the Association for Development of Relations With Kampuchea told me that a number of Khmers who fled the country would commit suicide if the Phnom Penh government does not take them back home, because their situation is like a (?small) boat at sea which can neither advance nor turn back.

Concerning this issue, I did not have an answer for them. But for those who went to study and fled before 1979, I told them to be patient, the government (?always pays attention to them). For myself, I believe that we do not want to see Khmer (?residents) and intellectuals suffer in France. In the past, the reactionaries made a lot of efforts to (?make propaganda) saying that life outside the country is always easy. These refugees told me that there are more difficulties in (?living in France) than in (?refugee camps). As mentioned above, I do not intend to stop people from fleeing abroad. But this is a fact.

In sum, my participation to the CPF Congress was very important. It was the first time that our party and government had the chance to send their representatives to attend a CPF Congress. It was also the first visit of a Kampuchean diplomat in France.

SPK DISCUSSES INDOCHINESE RELATIONS WITH ASEAN

[Text] Phnom Penh, 22 Feb (SPK) -- The fifth conference of ministers of foreign affairs of the three Indochinese countries in Vientiane was crowned with brilliant success. It once again showed the desire of the Kampuchea, Vietnamese and Lao people to rebuild their countries after they were destroyed by war.

The three Indochinese countries have again manifested their good will in maintaining good-neighbor relations with the Southeast Asian countries in the interest of peace, stability and happiness of the peoples in the region and the rest of the world. The communique of the conference stressed that the Indochinese peoples always respect the friendship with the Thai people and wish to establish good-neighbor relations with Thailand in the interest of each country and of peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The three Indochinese countries are prepared to examine and support any initiative, from whatever quarter, that contributes to stabilizing the situation along the Kampuchea-Thailand border on the basis of respect for each other's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

The joint communique, stressing the position of the three Indochinese countries, said the Indochinese countries are doing their best so that, together with other countries in the region, they may build new relations on the basis of the principles of peaceful co-existence between states of different political regimes. At the 36th UN General Assembly, the Lao foreign minister, on behalf of the three Indochinese countries, put forward a 7-point proposal aiming at gradually turning Southeast Asia into a zone of peace, stability and cooperation.

The Vientiane ministerial conference reflects the aspiration of the Indochinese countries to restore peace to rebuild their countries. The peoples of Southeast Asia and the rest of the world share their aspiration which, however, counters the interest of U.S. imperialism and Chinese expansionism. What U.S. imperialism and Chinese expansionism want is war in order to achieve their expansionist ambition. For this reason, they sow dissension between the three Indochinese countries and the ASEAN states and incite the latter to a confrontation with the Indochinese countries. The Indochinese peoples and the peoples of the ASEAN countries are not deceived by this plot. The joint communique stressed that the expansionist policy of the Beijing ruling circles in collusion with U.S. imperialism is the cause of the tension in Southeast Asia, not the differences between the ASEAN states and the Indochinese countries.

For their national independence and peace, the three Indochinese countries are determined to struggle against the policy of aggression and intervention of the Beijing reactionary circles in league with U.S. imperialism. The militant solidarity of the three Indochinese countries in their common struggle has borne fruit. To defend national independence, sovereignty, peace and stability in Southeast Asia, it is necessary for the peoples of this region to unite against the intervention of the Beijing expansionists, U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries. In the interest of peace, cooperation and stability, the Indochinese peoples are holding out their hand to all nations and, as the joint communique of the three Indochinese foreign ministers stressed, they welcome the trend existing within the five ASEAN states in favor of a dialogue.

DK FOREIGN MINISTRY DENOUNCES VIENTIANE FORUM

BK210706 [Clandestine) Voice of Democratic Kampuchea in Cambodian to Kampuchea 2330 GMT 20 Feb 82

["Statement by the Democratic Kampuchean Foreign Ministry Spokesman Denouncing the Hanoi Vietnamese Clique's Farce in Vientiane" -- read by announcer]

[Text] Recently the Hanoi Vietnamese staged another awkward farce in Vientiane: Their so-called Vietnamese foreign minister's conference with the Vientiane and Phnom Penh puppets. This was a threadbare farce, but they ordered their two puppets to applaud and acclaim that this was a new development. In fact, this Vientiane farce was staged by the Hanoi Vietnamese for the following reasons, in a continuation of their perfidious maneuvers:

1. To bury the Kampuchean problem caused by their aggression by claiming that there is only conflict between them and Thailand.

2. To avoid the implementation of the UN resolution, which demands the total withdrawal of their troops from Kampuchea.

3. To divide the ranks of peace- and justice-loving countries which support the struggle for national defense waged by the Kampuchean people and Democratic Kampuchea, particularly the ranks of the ASEAN countries, in an attempt to weaken the pressure on them and to make these countries stop supporting the struggle for the national defense of the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government.

The Democratic Kampuchean Government vehemently denounces and condemns this Vientiane farce and the maneuvers of the Hanoi Vietnamese. There is currently no sign that the Hanoi clique wants to withdraw its troops from Kampuchea in accordance with the UN resolution. On the contrary, the clique clings to the use of law of the jungle by further suppressing and massacring the Kampuchean people and intensifying its most atrocious war of aggression, expansion and genocide in Kampuchea. Its activities and proposals in the international arena are only attempts to make others accept its invasion of and aggression against Kampuchea as a fait accompli. It is well known that whenever it faces difficulties, the Hanoi Vietnamese clique resorts to devious maneuvers to hoodwink others. World public opinion will never fall for its tricks.

The Democratic Kampuchean Government is convinced that all the peace and justice-loving countries throughout the world will continue to apply pressure to Vietnam and take stronger measures to force it to withdraw all of its troops from Kampuchea, in accordance with the UN resolution, and will give more support to the just struggle of the Kampuchean people and the Democratic Kampuchean Government.

KHAMTAI SIPHANDON GREETINGS ON USSR ARMY DAY

[Greetings message from Gen Khamtai Siphandon, national defense minister of the LPDR, to Marshal Dmitriy Ustinov, national defense minister of the USSR, on Soviet Army Day anniversary -- dated 23 February]

[Text] Respected comrade minister, on the occasion of the 64th founding anniversary of the Red Army of the USSR, on behalf of all cadres and combatants in the entire LPLA Armed Forces and in my own name, I would like to heartily extend to you, comrade, and, through you, to all fraternal cadres and combatants in the entire Soviet Armed Forces, militant solidarity warm salutations and best wishes.

Over the past 64 years, thanks to the talented and clear-sighted leadership of the CPSU -- noble and glorious Leninist party -- the Soviet Army and Navy, together with the heroic Soviet people, have written new pages of history and have continuously scored magnificent achievements in the struggle in the cause of communist construction. They have become indomitable, vanguard combatants of the era and have opened a path advancing to socialism and communism, thereby building their country into the strongest country in the world. They have become an army with prosperous fighting experiences and which is equipped with modern techniques and which firmly grasps and incessantly promotes and expands the advanced military sciences of invincible Marxism-Leninism. They serve as an example of fighting and construction for the armies of proletarian class and of various oppressed and intimidated countries in the world.

With prosperous and strong economic and defense potential and with advanced science and technology, the Soviet Army and Navy have now become invincible armed forces with sufficient strength to safeguard the Soviet people's revolutionary gains and to fulfill their noble international obligations in the defense of various countries in the socialist community and in the maintenance of world peace. They have positively struggled to implement a peace plan with a view to stepping up the process of detente vigorously and to checking imperialism, with the U.S. imperialists as chieftains who have colluded with the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists in opposing the revolution and waging a new world war.

As close comrades, our Lao Army and people have always followed, in a spirit of joy and confidence, the growth and development of the Soviet Army and Navy. In this joyous atmosphere, the various Lao People's Armed Forces wish the Soviet Armed Forces, under the leadership of the CPSU headed by beloved and respected Comrade Leonid Brezhnev, success in implementing the resolutions of the 26th CPSU Congress and great achievements in the cause of building and maintaining communism in the Soviet Union and in fulfilling their noble, glorious international obligations.

In their revolutionary cause, the Lao Army and people have profoundly acknowledged that all their achievements and victories are results of the great, effective support and assistance given by the Soviet Army and people and by other fraternal socialist countries. On this occasion, I would like to express profound thanks and gratitude, on behalf of the LPLA and the Lao people, to the party, government, army and fraternal people of the Soviet Union for the aforesaid great and precious support and assistance.

I wish for the daily growth of the Soviet Army's strength. May the relations of fraternal friendship and militant solidarity between the armies and peoples of friendship and militant solidarity between the armies and peoples of Laos and the Soviet Union be everlasting! I wish the comrade minister good health and new, still greater success in your noble, glorious cause.

VNA REPORT ON CHEMICALS FIRED INTO PRK DENIED

BK231154 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in Thai 1000 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] A 21 February VNA report, citing SPK, alleges that on 11 and 14 February Thailand fired 105-mm artillery shells containing toxic chemicals into an area south of Phnum Malai, causing severe vomiting to 20 local people. Foreign Ministry spokesman Chet Sutcharitkun rejects the allegation as totally false. He denies that Thailand has such ammunition in its inventory and adds that Thailand has never sought to obtain such ammunition. In addition, Thailand has never fired artillery shells into the area in question.

It is to be noted that VNA's groundless accusation was made in order to divert attention from the condemnation from the people of the world about Vietnam's use of chemical weapons in Kampuchea and Laos. In addition, this shameless fabrication against Thailand shows that Vietnam has no sincere desire to maintain good relations with Thailand as it has claimed repeatedly or as appeared in the statement of the foreign ministers of the three Incochinese countries issued in Vientiane.

SRV ENVOY INFORMED OF IMPOUNDMENT OF AN-26

BK221518 Hong Kong AFP in English 1502 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Text] Bangkok, 22 Feb (AFP) -- Thailand today formally informed Vietnam that it would impound -- pending further investigation -- a Soviet-made military aircraft that crash-landed in Thai territory adjacent to Cambodia on February 11 with 13 Vietnamese soldiers on board.

Thai official sources said the message was conveyed to Vietnamese Ambassador Hoang Bao Son by Thai Deputy Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs Chawan Chawanit, acting as director general of the Thai Foreign Ministry's Political Department.

Hanoi had demanded the "prompt return" of the two-engine Antonov-26 and its crew, saying the team were en route from Phnom Penh to Vietnam when they "lost contact." A Vietnamese mechanic died after the plane belly-flopped in a tapioca field, 50 kilometres (31 miles) inside the Thai border district of Sa Kaeo.

A brief Thai Foreign Ministry statement said Mr. Chawan, during a meeting at the ministry this afternoon, informed the Vietnamese ambassador of the findings of a preliminary investigation by the Supreme Command.

Sources said Mr. Chawan made it clear that Thai military investigators had found that the Soviet-made transport aircraft had not strayed into Thailand accidentally and that the plane and its crew would be held until a satisfactory explanation was obtained. Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila earlier said that Thailand was prepared to return the plane and its passengers if it could be established beyond doubt that there was no ill-intention in the incident.

NEWSPAPERS COMMENT ON SRV PLANE INTRUSION

BK190930 [Editorial Report] Three Thai language papers -- MATICHON, THAI RAT and MATUPHUM -- on 17 and 18 February carry editorials commenting on the crashlanding of a Vietnamese Soviet-made Antonov-26 transport plane which took place in the border province of Prachin Buri on 11 February.

The 17 February MATICHON editorial, entitled "The Strong Fence of the Nation," hails the action taken by the Thai military in dealing with the incident with "beautiful military and political success." It notes: "The incident has proved the effectiveness of the country's fence along the Thai-Kampuchean border and convinced the Thai people of the defense capabilities of the Thai Armed Forces."

The editorial continues: "Thailand has proved to the world that it does not want to quarrel or engage in any conflict with Vietnam. Thailand is ready to forgive Vietnam if the latter harbors no ill will toward Thailand."

The editorial concludes by saying: "The situation along the Thai-Kampuchean border is very delicate." As long as the fighting continues inside Kampuchea, both intentional and unintentional intrusions and shellings inside Thai territory are unavoidable. Therefore, we must always be prepared to win a quick victory in case of aggression or violation of our territory. Meanwhile, the Thai Government must be truly neutral in dealing with the Kampuchean problem, otherwise the other side will be able to find a pretext to launch aggression or create a war situation."

The 17 February THAI RAT editorial, entitled "The Vietnamese Plane," says the Thai authorities investigating the crashlanding of the Vietnamese transport plane at Sa Kaeo District, Prachin Buri Province, found no evidence that the violation of Thai airspace was intentional. The paper says the authorities believe that the plane strayed into Thailand and have suggested that the plane and its crew be returned to Vietnam. Although relations between Thailand and Vietnam are not very smooth, the way that Thailand is handling the incident shows in the eyes of the world's people that Thailand wants good relations and genuine peace for this region.

"The Thai side has not taken any action -- which it would legally be entitled to do -- against the Vietnamese plane which was violating Thai airspace. Ironically, Vietnam has clamorously demanded the return of the plane in an aggressive and unfriendly manner, even going so far as to accuse that the Thai side forced the plane to land inside Thailand.

"As a matter of fact, the Thai side should take this opportunity to tell the world what Vietnam is doing in Kampuchea. The presence of Vietnamese warplanes or transport aircraft in Kampuchea shows that Kampuchea has lost its sovereignty and is under Vietnamese control."

The 18 February MATUPHUM editorial, entitled "The Policy Unity," notes that statements by the government and the military on the crashlanding of the Vietnamese plane seem contradictory. It quotes Assistant Army Commander Gen Athit Kamlang-ek as saying: "The plane will be returned to Vietnam at the latter's request" despite of the fact that the investigation has not yet been completed.

The editorial says: "It is believed that General Athit does not want his statement to blame any party. Of course, his statement is based on his sense of patriotism and an attempt to ease the tension along the Thai-Kampuchean border. Regardless of General Athit's good intention, it is suggested that the government review its policy-making procedures, particularly in cases dealing with big problems like the Vietnamese plane's crashlanding. This job should be handled by the agency that is directly responsible for the maintenance of foreign relations -- the Foreign Ministry -- because any matter pertaining to international politics is complicated and must be executed through wise diplomatic maneuvers to ensure the country's stability."

The editorial continues: "Whether General Athit's statement on this issue is in line with the government's foreign policy or not, such a hasty statement has created grave concern over the lines that divide the responsibilities and duties of all government agencies."

NATION REVIEW ANALYZES SRV 'AGGRESSIVE ACTS'

[Editorial: "Vietnamese Escalating Provocation"]

[Text] If in writing about the Vietnamese military plane intruding into Thailand and crashing here, we strongly urged goodwill and a logical approach, we have been foolish; but we still maintain it is better to be foolish than to be illogical or show ill will. The Vietnamese, it appears now, seem to have borrowed an idea from the Chinese and are trying to teach Thailand a lesson. Again, if Hanoi will pardon us, let us be logical. There have been: 1) intrusion of Thai airspace and the crash, 2) incursion of Vietnamese troops into Thailand, 3) the dropping of "yellow rain" from a Vietnamese plane on Thai territory on two occasions.

If these are not aggressive acts, we do not know what they are. And to hide their own inhuman act of dropping yellow dust or "bio-toxins" over Thai territory, Hanoi has made the ridiculous charge that Thailand is lobbing shells with toxic chemicals across the border into Kampuchea: Those of us in Thailand know very well we do not have chemical weapons and that accusation against Thailand was made to cover up its own use of "yellow rain." Phnom Penh Foreign Minister Hun Sen is on record stating clearly that the Vietnamese forces must clear the Thai area across the border if they are to subdue the Khmer Rouge. And, possibly, he was only unwittingly revealing a plan that had been worked out in Phnom Penh by the Vietnamese command.

The Vietnamese are inviting a confrontation -- no, they are/forcing/ [slantlines denote italics as published] a confrontation with the Thai Armed Forces. The three points we have mentioned above in chronological order clearly show that the Vietnamese are escalating the provocations. The battle-hardened Vietnamese war machine has failed, during three dry seasons, to mop up the ill-equipped Khmer Rouge guerrillas. And, right now in the fourth dry season, they are again being frustrated. Time is not on the side of Hanoi because the Soviet Union is not exactly a cornucopia of arms and money and, further, the latest news from Beijing suggests that Prince Norodom Sihanouk and Khieu Samphan have agreed to work together. Son Sann has already agreed to a loose coalition and he may accept the new formula worked out in Beijing.

This must be deeply worrying the Politburo in Hanoi. From the Kremlin's point of view, despite all the advantages of keeping Vietnam as its surrogate in this region, the priority is not high -- Afghanistan where Soviet soldiers are dying and events in Poland take precedence in Moscow over the Kampuchean war. Vietnamese leaders are fully aware of this problem. They are also aware that if a proper coalition front is formed between the three Khmer anti-Vietnamese factions, arms may openly reach the Khmer Rouge and there are several countries like the members of ASEAN who may be sending much needed food and medical supplies.

What is even worse from Hanoi's point of view is that they cannot afford to mis-read China's mood. We do not pretend to be able to second-guess Beijing, but it is not necessary for Thailand to do so. But for Hanoi it is essential not only to work out what are China's options and which one she will take if the Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea continue their series of provocations going even to the limit of spraying toxins over Thai territory. We are using the word "limit" in the full meaning of the word because there is a /limit/ [slantlines denote italics as published] to which the Vietnamese can go.

CONTRADICTIONS OF SRV STATEMENT AT VIENTIANE NOTED

[Unattributed commentary: "Nguyen Co Thach's Statement"]

[Text] On the surface of it, the statement made by the Vietnamese Government at the recent so-called conference of the foreign ministers of the three Indochinese countries in Vientiane that Vietnam respects the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Thailand should be welcomed. But on closer study the contradictions in the statement become apparent.

Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity is violated nearly everyday by artillery shells, mortar, small arms being fired into Thailand by Vietnamese troops in Kampuchea. Not only has there been property damage and loss of lives, but Thai villagers all along the Thai-Kampuchean border have at one time or another had to be evacuated and have not been able to lead their normal lives.

On 11 February, a Vietnamese military plane violated Thai airspace and crashlanded in Thailand about 50 km from the Thai-Kampuchean border. Earlier, on 16 December, a Vietnamese plane had dropped bombs on Thai territory at Pont Nam Ron District, Chanthaburi Province. On 17 February about 300 Vietnamese with Heng Samrin troops entered Thai territory at Sap Tari Vilage, Pong Nam Ron District of Chanthaburi Province and killed 5 border patrol policemen.

The incidents enumerated are recent ones, but similar incidents have been taking place for the last 3 years since Vietnam invaded Kampuchea in December 1978, overthrew the government in Phnom Penh and installed the Heng Samrin regime in its place. One result of that action is that Vietnam's western border, instead of ending at Kampuchea, now extends across Kampuchea and reaches the Thai border. Therefore, since 1979 there have been heavily armed Vietnamese troops on the Thai-Kampuchean border many hundreds of kilometers from Vietnam.

Because Vietnam has occupied Kampuchea with around 200,000 troops, now for more than 3 years there has been growing resistance from patriotic nationalist Kampuchean forces. Vietnam has been trying to suppress these forces, but the forces have grown in number rather than being weakened. Thailand is sympathetic to these nationalist forces because Thailand along with other peace-loving countries of the world cannot accept that one country may use military force to overthrow the government of another country because that government holds policies which it does not like. This Vietnam did with the Kampuchean Government despite the fact that the Vietnamese Government had given full support and sanctuaries to the Khmer Rouge all along.

These then are several of the many contradictions present in the Kampuchean situation which should be a background to the Vietnamese statement concerning Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity. We too would like to emphasize that we would believe such a statement once all Vietnamese troops have been withdrawn from Kampuchea. No Vietnamese troops can then fire into Thailand, no border patrol police troopers would then be killed by them, and no Antonov-26 will have the opportunity to allegedly stray into Thailand.

DISCREPANCIES ON POL POT'S HEALTH REPORTED

AFP Reports Hospitalization

BK221144 Hong Kong AFP in English 1113 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Excerpt] Bangkok, 22 Feb (AFP) -- Pol Pot, the hardline ideologist of the deposed Khmer Rouge regime, has recovered from the high blood pressure which had him hospitalized in Bangkok, but his health is still poor, informed diplomatic sources here said today. The name of the hospital which treated Pol Pot, generally believed to have the most responsibility for the bloody massacres in Cambodia when his regime was in power from 1975 to 1979, is unknown.

The 54-year-old leader has had at least two secrecy-shrouded stays in hospitals, once in December and once at the beginning of this month, the second hospitalization lasting for "some time," the sources said.

Khieu Samphan Denies Reports

OW230905 Tokyo KYODO in English 0851 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Beijing, Feb 23, (KYODO) -- Khmer Rouge leader Khieu Samphan Tuesday denied press reports that the resistance group's armed forces commander Pol Pot is in a Bangkok hospital for unidentified illness.

"He (Pol Pot) is not in Bangkok," Khieu Samphan said but added: "Fighting in jungles is severe. Soldiers cannot enjoy good health all the time."

Without going into details, Khieu Samphan said, "Nobody can escape malaria in jungles. Mr. Pol Pot has been working continuously but he runs fevers once in a while."

Khieu Samphan is now in Beijing for talks with Prince Sihanouk on the proposed formation of a coalition government against the Vietnam-backed regime in Phnom Penh.

There has been few word on what Pol Pot has been up to since he was replaced by Khieu Samphan as prime minister in December 1979.

Pol Pot is accused of mass murders of his countrymen during his 1975-79 reign of terror.

KHUN SA REPORTED TO BE HIDING IN BURMA NEAR BORDER

BK190413 Bangkok NATION REVIEW in English 19 Feb 82 p 1

[Text] Opium warlord Khun Sa is hiding in a jungle inside Burma, about five kms from the Thai-Burmese border opposite Ban Hin Taek, a military spokesman said yesterday.

Col Somsak Srisupandist of the Supreme Command said Khun Sa and a large number of his Shan United Army (SUA) troops are now hiding in an area called Khun Samsao. He said the deep jungle which is between the border and the Mae Sai River in Burma is inaccessible by the Burmese forces which are massing along the other side of the river.

Supreme Commander Gen Saiyut Koetphon recently set up a new centre to maintain security and improve the standard of living of the villagers in the three provinces of Chiang Mai, Chiang Rai and Mae Hong Son, Col Somsak said. The new centre is specially assigned to provide protection to tribesmen in 12 northern villages, including Ban Hin Taek and Ban Mae Salong where there are remnants of the Chinese Nationalist Party of Kuomintang, according to Col Somsak.

The Kuomintang remnants were previously engaged in drug trafficking like the SUA whose former stronghold was at Ban Hin Taek.

The centre, called the Northern Prevention and Development Centre, replaces Headquarters 04 which was formerly responsible for northern hilltribe people.

'SOCIALIST COMMUNITY' CALLED MAINSTAY OF POLAND

OW221255 Hanoi VNA in English 0736 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 22 -- NHAN DAN today, in an extensive article on the situation in Poland, described the Soviet Union and the socialist community as a whole as the strongest mainstay of the Polish people and their primary factor of success in settling the present crisis. The paper says:

The Polish situation has brought into focus the sharp contrast between the war-mongering, aggressive and interventionist policy of U.S.-led imperialism and the foreign policy for peace, friendship and cooperation pursued by the Soviet Union and the other members of the socialist community.

Taking advantage of difficulties and mistakes in the process of socialist construction in Poland, the imperialists and their henchmen have created a tragedy and committed towering crimes in Poland. Polish communists and the Polish peoples as a whole after many painful days have been forced to take drastic measures to remove the danger of a civil war, save socialism and foil the class enemy's vicious schemes. Now, coming out of the crisis, the Polish society bears deep wounds in all fields, economic, social and ideological, but the entire people are tidying up their beloved country. To correct mistakes and overcome the crisis is a very complicated work, and to cope with their consequences is no easy matter. In their life-and-death struggle to defend the gains of socialism, the Polish people are surmounting great obstacles. The U.S. imperialists, mad at the failure of their subversive scheme against Poland, have taken a series of cruel moves of retaliation and sabotage.

However, the Polish people, in these difficult moments of their country, have on their side many brothers, friends and comrades of the same class and ideal, the biggest one of whom, who given them the strongest support, is the Soviet Union. And sharing this cause with the Soviet Union is the rest of the socialist community. Poland's own efforts are a primary, decisive factor to overcome the disaster. The Soviet Union's support is an international factor of prime importance ensuring Poland's success and its advance. That is why the enemies of socialism are frenziedly opposing the Soviet Union and making all sorts of slander to smear this great socialist country, the firm mainstay of world peace and revolution. Lenin's country has long been linked with Poland in militant solidarity and mutual assistance, the best expression of which is the lives given by 600,000 Soviets for Poland's liberation and the fruitful cooperation between the two countries through decades of socialist construction in Poland.

In the face of the painful events in a fraternal, neighbouring country the Soviet Union could not leave the Polish people in the lurch. It has whole-heartedly supported Poland in all fields as requested by the Polish party and state. Materials, equipment, food and consumer goods worth many billion rubles sent by the Soviet Union to Poland have greatly helped reduce Poland's difficulties and create conditions for a gradual stabilization of the situation. This is a noble, selfless and generous assistance full of proletarian internationalism. The party, state and people of Poland have highly valued the friendship and fraternal assistance of the Soviet Union and the other countries in the socialist community, and have affirmed that the Polish-Soviet alliance guaranteed the inviolability of Poland's borders.

It is regrettable that some people in Western Europe have in the name of communism and socialism distorted facts and echoed the imperialists and the international reactionaries in attacking and defaming in a very wicked manner the Soviet Union and other countries in the socialist community. While they did not lift a finger on the naked intervention of imperialism in Poland, those persons have been raving about the "responsibility" of Soviet Union and other countries in the Warsaw Treaty for the "intervention in the life and the choices of the Polish United Workers Party". Their condemnations are even more virulent than those of Reagan and Haig, and what is most ironical of all is that they did that in the name of communism.

Those people, who styled themselves communists, have invented the myth about the "intervention" of the Soviet Union and the other members of the Warsaw Treaty in Poland. They deplored that the Soviet Union had prevented the "process of reforms" in one country or another. They dismissed what they call the "Soviet model" in order to deny the historic role of realist socialism which has been established in a series of countries, of which the Soviet Union is the most representative. History of the world in this century has eloquently demonstrated the position of the Soviet Union and the socialist community. Without the success of the October Revolution and the birth of the socialist system, socialism would remain a doctrine to be substantiated by reality. Without the invincible strength of the socialist community, imperialism would have continued to rule the roost over our planet. That is the biggest truth of our century, which even the imperialists could not deny. Without the victory of the Soviet Union over fascism, the fascist danger would still weigh heavily upon the whole mankind and the communist parties would not have been able to exist. What is the factor which is shaping up the situation of the world and the trend of development of human history if not the world socialist system? Today the imperialist ogre already has in its hand weapons stores that can wipe out the whole mankind. Then, who is the first to prevent such a disaster? Why is it that nearly 40 years after the Second World War, peace continues to be safeguarded? Why is it that in the former fascist countries the communist parties have become a major political force?

The existence of the Soviet Union and the assistance of this great socialist country has always been an objective fact of paramount importance to ensure the success of the genuine revolutions.

The Vietnamese people, through their own experiences in the three wars against aggressions, have clearly seen the great role and the nature of the assistance shining with proletarian internationalism given them by the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, and the Soviet state and people. The fraternal solidarity and the devoted assistance, including assistance in weapons and other war materials of the Soviet Union and other fraternal countries, has been very great and effective and continues to be a factor determining the victory of Vietnam in the fight against aggression, as well as in the building of socialism and the defence of their socialist motherland. The Vietnamese Communists and people put a very high value on this assistance, and will be forever grateful for it.

Some people who called themselves communists in Western Europe have not only launched verbal attacks on the Soviet Union and the other countries in the socialist community over the Polish question. On the question of paramount importance of our era which is to struggle to defend peace, they have dished out allegations which have nothing in common with reality and are moreover very harmful. In their speeches and documents made in the name of communist parties they put the Soviet Union and other countries in the socialist community in the same basket with the United States and the other members of the NATO. They even made people think that the Soviet Union should be responsible for a slack in the process of detente. This is one of the most odious distortions. These persons have distorted the foreign policy of the Soviet Union, their eyes shut to the fact that the achievements of detente so far have been due actually to the untiring efforts of the Soviet Union. Adopting the attitude of "standing outside all blocs" as if they are living in the moon, they are actually opposing the Soviet Union's efforts aimed at preventing the export of counterrevolution and preventing the warmongering imperialists from changing the present balance of force which is not in their favour.

These pseudo-communists have even gone farther. In assessing the events in Poland they have put forth some of their erroneous viewpoints, which have stuck to them for a long time now. They are propagating viewpoints on the "loss of the driving power" of the road of the October Revolution, on the failure of the "Soviet model", on the third state and third road of socialism, and so on and so forth. What is actually the substance of these allegations? They pleaded that their viewpoints do not mean that they repudiated the great value of the October Revolution or the progress it had brought to mankind. But this confirmation is only a thinly-veiled attempt to cover the essence of their intention which is to deny the role of the Soviet Union and realist socialism. Because their subjective theories about the failure of the Soviet model and about the socalled crisis taking place in the Eastern Europe countries actually mean that they consider socialism non-existent or not yet taking shape in the Soviet Union or any other countries in the socialist community.

They are looking for another model, probably in another world without class and class struggle, the world of angels. Today, some people are trying to chart out another road which they say is better than the existent socialism and also better than capitalism. But they still have to prove it by reality.

Who has made the biggest sacrifices for mankind and is shouldering the heaviest tasks of defending world peace and checking the war provocations and aggressions of U.S. imperialism? Who is the strong counterweight to NATO?

Obviously, it cannot be the above rhetoricians, but before all, it is the incomparable sacrifices made by the Soviet people. Had the Soviet Union not had to shoulder the biggest international obligations, the living standard of the Soviet people would surely have been much higher than at present. Some people are talking of a society which, once born, would have everything in the best order and shape. Such a society is only an utopia, no more and no less. Revolution is a long and infinitely complicated process and one in which mistakes are inevitable. The above sages themselves have committed errors and are committing errors even though they are reluctant to admit it. History will never evolve in the form of a series of miracles but through struggles full of blood and tears.

It goes on: "The fraternal friendship, all-sided cooperation and militant solidarity based on the ideals of Marxism-Leninism and socialist internationalism have bound our two parties, governments and peoples.

"We highly appreciate the support and assistance given by the Communist Party, the government and the people of Vietnam to the measures taken by the authorities of the Polish People's Republic to overcome difficulties, and defend and develop the fruits of socialism.

"We believe that the Polish-Vietnamese relations will continue to develop for the benefits of our two peoples and of peace and socialism.

CONFERENCE DISCUSSES LABOR DISTRIBUTION

BK201710 Hanoi NHAN DAN in Vietnamese 4 Feb 82, pp 1, 4

[Text] The Council of Ministers recently held a conference in Hanoi to discuss tasks concerning the distribution of labor and the population and the building of new economic zones and settled farming and settled living areas in 1982 and subsequent years.

He energetically condemned the U.S.-Chinese collusion to oppose the Afghan revolution and voiced Vietnam's firm support for a political settlement to the situation around this country as expounded in the Afghan Government's August 24, 1981 statement.

The ambassador refuted the charge of violation of the right to self-determination of the Kampuchean people and pointed out that it is nobody but the imperialists, colonialists and Chinese expansionists who have continuously and brazenly trampled underfoot the right to self-determination of the Kampuchean and the other Indochinese peoples.

The representatives of the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, Cuba, the German Democratic Republic, Hungary, and Poland denounced hypocrisy of the imperialists, expansionists and reactionaries in demanding the right of the Kampuchean people to self-determination. He stressed that the legal seat of Kampuchea at the U.N. as well as at the Human Rights Committee must be handed over to the Government of the People's Republic of Kampuchea, the Kampuchean people's authentic representative.

The conference was chaired by Vo Chi Cong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and vice chairman of the Council of Ministers, and attended by comrades responsible for various central branches, sectors and mass organizations; vice chairmen of people's committees from provinces and cities; and representatives of a number of districts, new economic zones and settled farming and settled living areas.

Pham Van Dong, member of the VCP Central Committee Political Bureau and chairman of the Council of Ministers, addressed the conference.

The conferees heard and evaluated reports presented by representatives of the Ministries of Agriculture and Forestry, the guidance committee for distribution of labor and the population and representatives of various localities and establishments.

Although we experienced numerous difficulties during the 5 years from 1976 to 1980, we have scored initial and significant achievements in carrying out the major party and state policies on the distribution of labor and the population, the building of new economic zones and establishing settled farming and settled living areas. This has created favourable conditions for the impelmentation of state policies in the coming years.

Some 1.5 million people (750,000 workers) have been relocated from densely populated to underpopulated areas and from cities to the new economic zones. Thousands of new population centers have been established, creating 200 additional villages, 7 new districts, 300 cooperatives and 200 farms, while old state farms have been enlarged and have received more manpower.

Some 650,000 hectares (10 percent of the arable land reclaimed thus far) of virgin land have been reclaimed in various localities. Of this figure, 500,000 hectares -- including 380,000 hectares planted in grain crops -- have been cultivated. This success is of great significance because, with the amount of grain produced on this newly reclaimed land, we will be able to attract people from other localities more easily. The provinces of Gia Lai-Cong Tum and Dac Lac have received the most people from other localities. This has in turn increased the gross production volume of the new economic zones in the provinces, which currently account for half of the total grain production in these provinces. These two provinces have basically resolved their food problem.

We have initially built various important zones for the cultivation of specialized industrial crops such as coffee, pineapple and tea, and especially rubber, in Nam Bo.

The development of new economic zones in various localities was further combined with the task of settling farming and life. Over the past 5 years, some 59,000 hectares of virgin land have been reclaimed in various centers of settled farming and settled life. This includes 19,000 hectares of ricefields, 27,000 hectares of forest land and 8,000 hectares of long-term industrial crops. We have built hundreds of small irrigation projects, 450 schools and nurseries, 300 health stations, nearly 300 water tanks and wells and 118 retail stores.

As a result of the emergence of new economic zones and centers of settled farming and settled life, some of the thinly populated areas which formerly had some security and order problems have now become secure and stable.

These initial results are primarily due to the correct policies and guidelines of the party and state on the distribution of labor and population, the reclamation of virgin land and the establishment of new economic zones and centers of settled farming and settled life. Our people, whose revolutionary spirit is very high, have responded to the party's appeal and have sacrificed their personal interests and feelings in order to contribute their efforts to the great and long-term cause of national construction. Millions of people have volunteered to leave their native places in the plains where their livelihood was stable to live in these outlying deserted areas -- some are thousands of kilometers away -- withstanding all kinds of hardships in order to build a new life and a new society.

All local authorities and some sectors at the central level have begun to display some effort. Cadres in charge of this task are devoted, withstand hardships and consistently fulfill their duties.

The conferees pointed to the shortcomings which had precluded the proper fulfillment of the requirements set forth by the party and the state, thus lowering the economic results. There are numerous new economic installations and centers of settled farming and settled life. However, only 20 percent of them have stabilized their production. The percentage of newly reclaimed land which has been put into production is still low (80 percent) [figure as published]. The livelihood of the people in most of the new economic zones is still difficult. Some of the shortcomings are due to the fact that the authorities at all levels and all sectors have not fully realized the strategic importance of this task. They have not reached an identity of views and have not exerted great efforts in leading and guiding the task of making uniform and timely investments in accordance with the guideline which stipulates that "the state and the people work together and the central and local authorities and the people share the same concern." Proper attention has not been paid to the preparatory, planning and designing tasks; the calculation of investment results; the task of cadre organization; or to the formulation of policies aimed at encouraging the people to finance land reclamation or to make monetary contributions to this task.

The conferees unanimously agreed on the task set forth by the Council of Ministers for the 1980's, which is to distribute the work force so as to fully use the 10 million hectares of agricultural land (planted with two crops annually on the average), the 15 million hectares of forest land and hundreds of thousands of other hectares to raise fresh water and sea fish. Under the 1981-85 5-Year Plan, the country will redistribute from 2 to 2.5 million people, including more than 1 million workers. Millions of workers and people must be relocated from the Red River Delta and the central coasts to the Mekong River Delta, eastern Nam Bo, the Central Highlands, and the mountainous areas of the former 4th, 5th and northern regions in order to develop the economy and culture. The labor forces will be relocated within and between provinces in a planned, positive, uniform, economical and consistent manner. The labor forces will be immediately distributed and assigned primarily to agriculture, forestry and fishery. They will gradually develop industry, culture and so forth, securing balances for each planning stage and ensuring enough manpower for national defense.

With regard to the task of settled farming and the life of nomads, the conferees realized that proper guidance should be provided because of the specific complexities (watershed areas and the difficult livelihood of ethnic minority people). Under the 1981-85 plan, or shortly thereafter, we must strive to complete this task.

Talking to the conferees, chairman of the Council of Ministers Pham Van Dong stressed the strategic importance of labor distribution, which is aimed at satisfactorily exploiting the land potential, especially arable land, to contribute to developing our country's agriculture comprehensively. This will help solve various important problems including economic, military and international relations problems, and so forth.

In the next 10 years, we must strive to distribute the workforce, if land reclamation is to be satisfactorily carried out, in order to put the remaining arable land into production and to cover millions of hectares of bare hills with greenery. The importance of this task must be emphasized so that all members of the party, the people, the state, the army, the central and local administrations, and every individual will struggle to get this task done.

All echelons and sectors from the central down to the grassroots levels must arm themselves with a correct view concerning this urgent task of strategic importance. The tasks of redistributing manpower, carrying out land reclamation, building new economic zones and resettling the people require extraordinary efforts and should not be treated lightly, as they have been over the past few years. We must continue to think and study in order to devise appropriate policies and measures. Just as do other major revolutionary missions, these tasks require that we examine and tackle them in a revolutionary and scientific manner. This means that we must initiate at all costs a widespread, steady and uninterrupted mass movement while relying on basic surveys to devise the most effective and appropriate development plan. In practice, we must select those areas which are near, easily exploited and convenient for movement. We must work on these first before tackling those areas which are distant and difficult to exploit and which require large capital investments. We must make full use of the work force of all related sectors and must motivate the work force of various colleges to participate in conducting surveys and devising programs and plans in a satisfactory manner.

The chairman of the Council of Ministers pointed out: By satisfactorily combining revolutionary and scientific thinking, we can avoid obstacles and deficiencies, do what should be done, and obtain practical results in a gradual manner. We must satisfactorily review our past activities -- both the distant and recent past -- in order to find out and study in detail our successes and our failures. On this basis, we must determine what we have done right and what we have not done correctly in order to draw appropriate lessons for the benefit of our present and future tasks.

To carry out this task satisfactorily we must implement the motto: "The state and the people work together; the central and local authorities and the people share the same concern." We must implement this guideline to stir up a movement and motivate all people, sectors and echelons to work together.

Past experiences have shown that many localities have made initial efforts and fulfilled their tasks better than the central sectors. The chairman of the Council of Ministers expressed the hope that localities will continue to carry out their tasks more satisfactorily and that various sectors will strive to surge forward to fulfill their tasks in an outstanding manner. He said that the central sectors, by using the capability of localities, provinces, districts and the people, must take full responsibility in formulating plans to build and strengthen the new economic zones in both the economic and cultural domains.

Various central organs, such as the economic, cultural, scientific, technical and internal affairs branches and so forth, must understand their problems and responsibilities.

They must establish a contingent of cadres specialized in each field and organize seminars to study problems relevant to their tasks. For quite a long time, we have failed to do this systematically, with proper planning, or consistently from beginning to end. Now it is essential to change our system fundamentally. Coordination must be regulated among branches and between branches and localities to carry out various promulgated positions and policies satisfactorily, so as to improve the livelihood of the new economic zones in all fields: economic, cultural and so forth. At the same time it is essential to consider and study various new and major policies.

The chairman added: We must carry out motivation tasks satisfactorily, provide equipment for the compatriots who move to the new economic zones, including those who have already resettled, in order to create a sentiment of devotion to the fatherland and to the great cause of building a new nation in which everyone has a chance to participate. Various central sectors must also create in themselves such feelings and sentiments.

The chairman of the Council of Ministers urged sectors and localities to formulate plans to carry out this task satisfactorily and to make periodical checks scrupulously. He praised a number of localities for their initial efforts and commended Ha Nam Ninh Province in the Red River Delta and Minh Hai Province in the Mekong River Delta for making a joint agreement to carry out this major party and state task satisfactorily. He expressed the hope that the provinces in the Mekong River Delta, the Central Highlands eastern zone and the Red River Delta and other provinces will make joint agreements similar to that of Ha Nam Ninh and Minh Hai in order to fulfill their tasks.

The chairman of the Council of Ministers also urged the forestry sector to take advantage of the party and state's intentions in redistributing the labor force to carry out satisfactorily the tasks concerning afforestation, protection, conservation and exploitation of forests. It is necessary to combine tasks concerning agriculture and forestry with the tasks of building settled farming and settled living areas in order to turn our country into a forest-rich nation. At the same time, a plan to protect forests must be formulated during the process of building the new economic zones.

REVIEW OF FEBRUARY ISSUE OF TAP CHI CONG SAN

BK221356 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 1000 GMT 21 Feb 82

[Review of the February 1982 issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN]

[Summary] "The February 1982 issue of TAP CHI CONG SAN has been published with an editorial entitled 'Increase the Fighting Strength of the Contingent of Cadres and Party Members.' After affirming the fine revolutionary character of our contingent of cadres and party members and pointing out the weaknesses and shortcomings regarding the revolutionary quality and ethics of a number of cadres and party members which have presented no small hindrance to the organization of implementing the party's line, caused bad political and economic consequences and adversely affected the people's livelihood, the editorial stresses: The historic tasks which the party has to shoulder and the new situation of its struggle call for an increase in the fighting strength of the contingent of cadres and party members. Generally speaking, this means that the quality and capability of cadres and party members must be improved and that all basic conditions must be provided for everyone to fulfill the tasks entrusted to him.

"The editorial says: All party committee echelons and party organizations should apply themselves to educating cadres and party members and creating every necessary condition for them to raise ceaselessly their Marxist-Leninist theoretical level; firmly grasp the party's line, positions and policies; and enhance their cultural standard and scientific, technical and professional knowledge, especially economic knowledge. It is necessary to organize cadres -- especially leading cadres -- to study economic theories, economic policies, and economic organization and management, thereby creating a movement for the entire party to learn how to carry out economic work.

"Along with educating cadres and party members and enhancing their consciousness and their ideological and educational levels, we must constantly attach importance to education with the aim of improving their revolutionary ethics and quality. An extremely important requirement of the education and qualitative development of cadres and party members is to heighten their understanding of the communist ideal. This is the most important quality of a communist.

"The results of the efforts to improve the quality of the cadres and party members depend not only on political and ideological indoctrination but also on the organizational building of the contingent of cadres and party members. This is the key measure to raise the capacity of the party and the state for leadership and organization of implementation.

"To satisfactorily bring into play the strength and talents of the contingent of cadres in general, and the contingent of leading cadres in particular, aside from the personal efforts of each cadre and stepping up the training of cadres in all respects, we must urgently improve the organizational and managerial mechanism and improve the party and state apparatuses. The quality of the party depends decisively on the quality of the contingent of party members. We must base ourselves on the requirements concerning the qualifications of party members to improve various tasks in building the contingent of party members. To do so, we must satisfactorily consolidate party chapters and build and strengthen party committee echelons.

"In conclusion, the editorial says: Increasing the fighting strength of the contingent of cadres and party members is not an exclusive task of party committees and party organizations at various levels, but, first of all, a personal responsibility of each cadre and party member. At present, our party is about to hold its fifth national congress. With the collective spiritual power of the entire party, the congress will adopt correct resolutions, thereby opening up a new era of development for the Vietnamese revolution. Increasing the strength of the contingent of cadres and party members is to provide a strong guarantee for the successful implementation of the resolutions of this congress."

Next is an article by (Nguyen Khanh) entitled "Some Opinions on Improving the Work System of Party Committee Echelons." The article says: In reality, a collective leadership can ensure the revolutionary and scientific nature of its activities only if its members follow a good work system. After pointing out that the process of carrying out a concrete task always involves three different phases -- preparing for taking a decision, taking a decision, and implementing a decision -- the article says: "The work system is one of the organizational measures ensuring the satisfactory fulfillment of all the three phases in the process of leadership."

Also featured in this issue of the journal is an article by (Pham Quan) entitled "Bring Cadre Management Work up to Date." The article stresses: "A Correct Political Line and a Correct Cadre Line Are the Prerequisite Conditions Guaranteeing the Results of the Efforts To Build and Develop the Contingent of Cadres. The Results of Cadre Work Partly Depend, However, on the Organization of Cadre Management."

The article then urges: Cadre management work should be brought up to date to meet the demands of the new tasks. Outdated regulations should be quickly eliminated.

"Next comes an article by (Nguyen Van Phung) entitled 'From the Joint Conference To Found the Party to the Fifth Party Congress.' Recalling our party's activities over the past more than 50 years, the article points out: Since its founding, during more than half of this historic period, the party had to operate illegally under dictatorial and reactionary regimes and in wartime conditions. This helps explain why the party has held only four congresses during more than one half century of activities. It also explains an important characteristic of our party's life: The party's major lines and policies were defined not only in its congresses but also in many Central Committee plenums and, at times, in the conferences of the Standing Committee or the Political Bureau.

"These conferences not only performed the function of concretizing the resolutions of party but, in fact, also performed the functions of a party congress. Historic realities have proven that all the orientations and lines charted by the various congresses as well as by these conferences were correct and helped bring about great victories of historic significance and an epochal nature. From its practical activities, our party has also succeeded in drawing useful lessons on how to overcome the limitations imposed by historical conditions and how to bring into fullest play its collective spiritual power."

In an article by (Ton Quang Duyet) entitled "From the Nha Rong Pier to the Pac Bo Grotto" the journal recalls various periods of President Ho's revolutionary activities, from the day he left Vietnam in quest of national salvation until his return to the country to directly lead the Vietnamese revolution.

Featured next is an article by (Nguyen Thanh) entitled "Comrade Nguyen Ai Quoc With the Paper (LE PARIA)" marking the 60th anniversary of the organ founded by Uncle Ho and some foreign friends.

In its "Ideological Life" feature, the journal carries an article by (Nguyen Trung Thuc) entitled "Our Lifestyle," which "condemns the nonsocialist lifestyle and points out the requirements of building our socialist lifestyle."

Under the title "Fully Understand and Scrupulously Implement the Military Service Law," the journal features an article by Lt Gen Dang Vu Hiep [title as heard] which points out: "In view of the demands of the situation and the new tasks, the Military Service Law was promulgated by the National Assembly to develop our people's fine tradition of national defense and to guarantee the people's collective mastery in building an all-people, comprehensive and modern national defense system. At the same time, the law is aimed at creating proper conditions for citizens to fulfill their military duties and to contribute to building our army into a mighty and increasingly standardized and modern force equipped with a strong standing component and a powerful reserve component, and ready to defeat any aggressive enemy and to firmly defend the socialist Vietnamese fatherland."

Next comes an article by (Nguyen Duc Thien) entitled "The multifaceted war of destruction waged by the Chinese expansionists and hegemonists." The article says: After the lamentable defeat of their 1979 war of aggression, the Chinese reactionaries, realizing that purely military measures could not be used to annex our country, shifted to waging a multifaceted war of destruction against us in an attempt to weaken us in preparation for a large-scale war of aggression when the conditions are ripe.

In an article by (Le Xuan Vu) entitled "In the Mirror of History" the journal comments on the Beijing expansionists' anger at Vietnam's efforts to develop its national tradition of patriotism and struggle against foreign aggression.

Next is an article by Thanh Tin entitled "Poland: The Decisive Offensive Against Reactionary Forces." The article hails the revolutionary emergency measures applied by the Polish Military Council for National Salvation to prevent the henchmen of imperialism from provoking a bloody civil war.

DIRECTIVE ON AGRICULTURAL SEED PRODUCTION

BK131138 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 2300 GMT 12 Feb 82

[Text] On 9 February 1982 the chairman of the Council of Ministers issued a directive on the task regarding crop seeds. The directive reads as follows:

In order to overcome shortcomings and develop what has already been achieved, if the task of agricultural production and the management of crop seeds is to be satisfactorily carried out to serve the plan for agricultural development in the coming years, the chairman of the Council of Ministers hereby instructs that:

1. The Ministry of Agriculture must continue to step up providing guidance for the implementation of Resolution No 209 of the Council of Ministers on the task regarding crop seeds.

2. The Ministry of Agriculture is duty bound to provide close guidance for the management and supply of all kinds of crop seeds for agricultural production on a national scale. Its guidance must cover activities ranging from the conduct of research and experiments to the supply of crop seeds for production. The Ministry of Agriculture must first of all closely manage the import and export of crop seeds. Whenever there is an import contract to be signed, related sectors and localities must seek approval fromthe Ministry of Agriculture.

3. The Ministry of Agriculture must provide guidance in carrying out projects and plans for the production of crop seeds. It must also ensure the quality of seeds reserved for emergency use when there is a natural calamity. With vegetable seeds in particular, the Ministry of Agriculture must provide necessary guidance so that enough seeds -- including seeds reserved for emergency use -- can be produced to supply various areas throughout the country. From 1982 onward, it must not request the allocation of foreign currency for the import of seeds, except for those seeds used in the production of vegetables for export. All seed-producing establishments at various levels must be operated in accordance with the profit-and-loss business accounting procedures.

4. All state-run agricultural production establishments and cooperatives must organize units and teams in charge of producing and selecting seeds. These units and teams must be managed separately and must be provided with specific equipment in order to ensure the production and preservation of seeds in a satisfactory manner. They must adopt an appropriate pricing policy toward those establishments and individuals involved in the production of seeds, and must devise a clear-cut reward-and-penalty system in order to ensure good results in the supply of seeds.

5. The Ministry of Agriculture must coordinate with the State Planning Commission and the Ministry of Construction in distributing capital and material investments in a proportionate manner in order to complete, between now and 1985, building the system of rice varieties and seed storehouses at the central and provincial levels; and building a number of key stations specialized in producing vegetable, subsidiary food crop and industrial crop seeds.

The Ministry of Agriculture and various provinces must help various districts consolidate their level-II seed-producing stations and must help low-level units consolidate their seed-producing teams.

In order to ensure the establishment of a system of crop seeds in accordance with a uniform plan, the Ministry of Agriculture is responsible for unifying the management and providing guidance for annual capital investment in the building of seed-production facilities at the central and local levels.

6. The Ministry of Agriculture is responsible for providing training for cadres in charge of seed-related activities, and for disseminating documents to guide and urge localities to implement this directive.

MARCOS EXPRESSES NEED FOR ASEAN ECONOMIC MEETING

HK230131 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Text] President Marcos plans to propose a summit meeting of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations to speed up implementation of the ASEAN economic projects. He said the summit appears necessary, because of delay in implementing the projects. FEBC's Al Govar has details on the president's plan:

[Begin Govar recording] President Marcos today expressed concern over the reportedly sluggish implementation of the economic projects of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations. Advised by newsmen of reports that the projects of the ASEAN economic ministers were being delayed because of lack of support from top-level people, the president said he would propose a summit meeting if necessary to keep the projects going. He directed the Ministry of Foreign Affairs to look into the problem and report to him on the status of the projects.

The ASEAN economic ministers at their last meeting in Kuala Lumpur on March 8 and 9, 1976, made a basic agreement on five ASEAN industrial projects, one for each member country, and funding was led by Japan. The five projects are the Urea project for Indonesia, the [word indistinct] sulfate project for Malaysia, diesel engine project for Singapore, the rock salt soda project for Thailand, and the copper fabrication plant for the Philippines. MARCOS REPEATS HOPES FOR STRONG OPPOSITION PARTY

HK210024 Manila Far East Boradcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 20 Feb 82

[Text] In our lead story today, President Marcos reiterated yesterday his hope that the fragmented opposition groups can organize into one strong party. He said this is the only way by which they can expect to put up a fight within the next 2 years. The president was referring to the forthcoming elections for Barangay officials, the autonomous governments in regions 9 and 12, and of members of the Batasang Pambansa. The president said a strong opposition is essential for a strong democracy, in that it keeps the party in power alert, active and upright. The president stressed the need for a strong opposition to prevent members of the majority from committing abuses.

ENRILE DISCUSSES MINDANAO PEACE, ORDER SITUATION

HK200105 Manila Far East Broadcasting Company in English 2330 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile said yesterday that the peace and order situation in the southern Philippines has been stabilized, except in the province of Cotabato. He said the continuing strife there is mainly due to the struggle for power between two factions of the rebel Moro National Liberation Front. Minister Enrile reported this in a briefing for three Saudi Arabian journalists visiting the Philippines. The defense minister also said the Muslim rebels in the southern Philippines constitute no more than 10 percent of the Muslim population there.

MINDANAO ARMY CHIEF DISCUSSES MNLF, NPA TIES

HK230127 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Text] The Southern Command has discovered that NPA and MNLF rebels have trained side by side in various rural areas. General Delfin Castro said the military is closely monitoring the movement of rebel factions, which are banding together because of depleting ranks. More on that story from (June Francisco):

[Begin (Francisco) recording] Castro said this at a briefing for Saudi Arabian journalists at the southern command headquarters in Zamboanga city. He said this has confirmed reports that the MNLF and the NPA have banded themselves to fight the common enemy, the government.

Castro also indicated that several followers of the MNLF had surrendered in the past years upon knowing that their self-styled MNLF government, Nur Misuari [as heard], is a communist. Misuari, he said, used to be a ranking official of the (Katabaan Makabayan), an outlawed student communist group. He said Misuari is a close associate of Jose Maria Sison, the head of the communist movement in the country.

Castro also told the visiting Saudi Arabian journalists that the government is fighting three common enemies, the MNLF, the NPA and the Social Democrats. [words indistinct] the MNLF has split into three groups, the Misuari faction, Hasim Salamat, and the MNLF [word indistinct] group. [end (Francisco) recording]

LEADING MNLF COMMANDER, OTHERS SURRENDER

HK220043 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 21 Feb 82

[Text] A top MNLF leader has given himself up in Karomatan, Lanao Del Norte. He was identified as (Palawan Dihamel), alias Commander (Palau Khalid). (Khalid), who had a 50,000 peso price on his head, surrendered with 4 of his followers. They yielded several firearms.

The government reports that 46,000 Muslim rebels have turned their backs on rebellion since 1973. The former rebels are now leading peaceful and productive lives. The government scored in its pacification campaign because of its sincerity and efforts to develop Mindanao. Also, many rebels were disenchanted by the MNLF leadership.

ORGANIZED LABOR URGES POLICE EXPULSIONS

HK190105 Manila Domestic Service in English 2300 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Text] Organized labor is urging the expulsion of policemen and security guards engaged in union busting. Labor groups led by the Trade Union Congress of the Philippines [TUCP] are also urging that the Philippine Constabulary [PC] and the Metro Manila Commission [METROCOM] take over strike-bound companies, pending the guidelines on picketing. The TUCP said the presence of PC and METROCOM troops would prevent clashes and injuries and make strikes peaceful. (Arvin de Nacion), who covers the labor beat, has the rest of the story:

[Begin (De Nacion) recording] This is to eliminate or minimize deaths and physical injuries to strikers due to participation of scabs, policemen and security guards. Democrito Mendoza, president of the TUCP, asks all government agencies to immediately act on various pending measures to avoid any further violence during strikes. Mendoza says the presence of the Philippine Constabulary and METROCOM soldiers is a better guarantee for peaceful picketing rather than local policemen and security guards, for obvious reasons. Mendoza says that during strikes, workers have been killed by security guards and aggravated by the blatant participation of local policemen and security guards known to be pro-management. Only yesterday 18 working women were injured when a car broke through their picket lines at the Capital Carmen Incorporated at Rizal. Three of them were seriously injured, while a pregant woman was also hurt. Mendoza asks, and these are his words, do we have to wait for another striker to die to act and stop this very disturbing trend in the Philippine labor movement? [end (De Nacion) recording]

Following the spate of strikes, TUCP President Democrito Mendoza suggests the reactivation of the Labor Ministry's conciliation system to mediate labor disputes. Mendoza said strikes are spreading, even in the provinces. [Begin Mendoza recording] Considering the present situation, where the prices are really soaring up high, and the wages remain low, so there is a very big disparity, resulting in the impression that the ordinary worker cannot live decently. [end Mendoza recording]

SAKURAUCHI'S U.S. VISIT IN MARCH PREVIEWED

OW231311 Tokyo KYODO in English 1244 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 23 (KYODO) -- During his scheduled visit to Washington next month, Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi will express Japan's intention to lay stress on building up its air and maritime defense capabilities and to tighten military cooperation with the United States, sources close to the foreign minister said Tuesday. The sources said Sakurauchi has formulated his basic positions on defense and security problems, major items in the talks with the American partners, along with trade issues.

Sakurauchi plans to make his first visit to the United States as foreign minister between March 20 and 25, according to Foreign Ministry officials. Sakurauchi will soon meet with Defense Agency Chief Soichiro Ito for consultations about his trip, the sources said.

The foreign minister's declarations on military matters should satisfy U.S. calls for Japan to take on a greater share of the defense burden in the Asian and Pacific region, the sources said. In its national defense report for fiscal 1983, the United States cited Japan as a keystone in the American advance defense strategy in Asia and the Pacific.

Sakurauchi will tell American officials that the buildup of air and maritime defense forces will be given priority in the next mid-term defense program estimates, covering the five years from 1983 to 1987. The program estimates are now being compiled by the Defense Agency for approval before the end of the 1981 fiscal year which falls in March. Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki pledged to reinforce defense capabilities for the 1,000-mile sealanes during his visit to the United States last year. The U.S. 1983 defense report called on Japan to improve its defense capabilities in the air and on the sea so as to secure the sealanes around the country.

The sources said that Sakurauchi will explain that as many as possible of the requests made by U.S. officials during last year's bilateral working level talks on security issues will be met in the 1981 mid-term defense program estimates.

In regard to the cooperation in military technology urged by the United States, Sakurauchi will express his intention to deal actively with the problem, in line with a statement by Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki in a recent Diet session to the effect that Japan must respond to the U.S. request (on the matter). The foreign minister will also accept acceleration of the joint study of possible responses to an emergency on the Korean Peninsula, a study agreed to between Japan and the United States last month, the sources said.

The sources went on to say that Sakurauchi will pledge Japan's further efforts to lighten the U.S. burden of stationing its forces in Japan. In Japan's fiscal 1982 budget, expenditures for support of U.S. forces stationed in this country amount to yen 51.5 billion (dollar 224 million), including labor costs. The figure involves a huge increase -- 18.5 percent over last year, compared with a 6.2 percent boost in the overall budgetary spending.

Sakurauchi will say that Japan will "contribute to world peace and stability through political and economical means," according to the sources. The foreign minister will stress Japan's contribution through economic cooperation at a time when negotiations are underway between Japanese and South Korean officials over the South Korean request for a dollar 6 billion in Japanese loans.

ITO, SAKURAUCHI VIEW DEFENSE ISSUE IN LOWER HOUSE

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 24 (KYODO) -- Defense Agency Chief Soichiro Ito Wednesday called Japan's yen 2.6 trillion (dollar 11.3 billion) fiscal 1982 defense spending a "minimum" required to build up its defense capability. The proposed defense expenditure, now under debate in the Diet (parliament), is up 7.75 percent from the current fiscal year, compared with a 6.2 percent overall budget increase and an increase of less than 3 percent in education and welfare spending.

Speaking at a meeting of the House of Representatives Special Committee on Security, Ito said the United States has been seeking greater defense efforts by its allies. He said, "It is necessary to maintain and promote the mutual trust in the Japan-U.S. security treaty by keeping such a request in mind."

So far, Ito went on, Japan has failed to attain its 1976 defense buildup plan while defense equipment is becoming outdated and combat strength still inadequate. Therefore, Ito said, the proposed fiscal 1982 defense spending is a minimum needed to modernize Japan's Self-Defense Forces.

He also indicated greater Japanese defense efforts are required because of the Soviet military buildup in the Far East both "quantitatively and qualitatively." He said, "The Soviet armed forces in the area are becoming more active." In contrast, he said, the presence of the U.S. Pacific Fleet has declined. Japan has to take note of this situation in considering its national defense, Ito added. He said the Soviet Union's continuous military buildup is also responsible for increased confrontation between Western and Eastern bloc countries. Ito described the current international situation as "unstable and changing" as symbolized on the Korean Peninsula and in the Middle East.

His defense policy speech was followed by an address by Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi, who shared Ito's concern over the Soviet military buildup. But Sakurauchi said Japan is ready to conduct a "positive diplomacy" in an effort to remove "unstable constituents" against world peace. He did not elaborate. He said Japan's national security also depends on the smooth and effective execution of the bilateral security treaty and the possession of moderate but qualified Self-Defense Forces.

Calling economic assistance to other countries part of Japan's "comprehensive security policy," Sakurauchi said, "We will do all we can" to help South Korea carry out its 1982-86 Economic Development Plan. South Korea has requested dollar 6 billion in aid for the five-year development plan.

The foreign minister also said he is happy to see defense cooperation between Japan and the United States being strengthened. "It is very important to ensure satisfied bilateral relations in which the Americans understand that their security commitment to Japan complies with their national interests," Sakurauchi added.

MINISTER PREDICTS FIRM STANCE IN U.S. AIR TALKS

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 23 (KYODO) -- Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi said Tuesday Japan will not make unreasonable concessions in the forthcoming air talks with the United States in March. But Sakurauchi did not go into details on the subject, when asked during a cabinet meeting about prospects of the March meeting by Kunio Tanabe, director general of administrative affairs in the Prime Minister's Office.

Tanabe, referring to a recent meeting in Washington between a Foreign Ministry official and U.S. leaders, expressed concern about the stalled negotiations on revision of the current air agreement. Tanabe asked the government to take a cautious attitude toward the whole aviation issue during the next meeting starting March 8 in Washington.

ELECTRONICS ASSOCIATION COUNTERS U.S. CRITICISM

OW231231 Tokyo KYODO in English 1207 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 23 (KYODO) -- The Electronic Industries Association of Japan Tuesday refuted growing U.S. criticisms that Japan is trying to sweep the U.S. semiconductor market. In a statement, the association said that Japan-U.S. trade in integrated circuits (IC) is virtually balanced, with Japanese exports to the United States totaling yen 71.2 billion (dollar 309.6 million) in 1981 as against yen 70.5 billion (dollar 306.5 million) worth of imports from that country.

The statement also said that Japanese and U.S. semiconductor manufacturers enjoy equal opportunities for investment in each other's country and that their relationship is complementary. The complementary relationship is exemplified by the fact that Japanese companies produce mainly memory chips that can be mass-produced while U.S. enterprises principally manufacture bipolar integrated circuits by drawing on advanced U.S. military and space technology.

The statement says the Japanese and U.S. Governments confirmed the necessity to promote free international semiconductor trade when they agreed on a semiconductor import tariff cut last September.

The association issued the statement because criticisms are mounting in the U.S. semiconductor industry and U.S. Government agencies to the effect that Japanese semiconductor manufacturers are attempting to "invade" the U.S. market. Such criticisms have become especially strong since the Japanese share of the U.S. semiconductor market recently reached 70 percent for 64-kilobit random access memory (RAM) chips, dubbed the "first generation of very large scale integration (VLSI)."

On this point, the association said leading U.S. companies like International Business Machines (IBM) already possess advanced manufacturing technology in this field. Other American semiconductor makers are also making preparations to begin production of 64-kilobit ram chips, it added. The association said it plans to conduct seminars in the United States in the near future to win better U.S. understanding of the Japanese position in bilateral semiconductor trade.

EC CONCERN OVER LOW INTEREST RATES ANALYZED

OW231229 Tokyo KYODO in English 1158 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Excerpts] Tokyo, Feb 23 (KYODO) -- Japan's relatively low interest rates on export credit threaten to develop into a new source of economic friction with both the U.S. and Western European nations, government sources said Tuesday. They expressed this fear in disclosing that European Community (EC) delegates had strongly demanded the raising of Japan's interests to prevailing European and American levels during recent informal negotiations here. The negotiations were in preparation for formal talks to be convened in Paris on March 10 by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD).

The EC officials complained that Japan's low-interest export credit constitutes one factor behind its vigorous export growth, the sources said. The U.S. is likely to go along with the EC's demand, they said.

The Paris meeting of the 's working party on export credit will review the so-called "guideline" interest rate fixed under an OECD-sponsored "gentlemen's agreement" aimed at preventing excessive competition in exports to developing nations and communist countries. This temporary agreement is to run out on May 15 and will be reviewed at the Paris meeting next month.

In Japan, long-term prime lending rates of commercial banks have been reduced to 8.6 percent a year, lower than the OECD-fixed "guideline" rate, as a result of money rate adjustment following a cutback in the Bank of Japan's official discount rate on December 11 last year. Therefore, the sources said, Japan would insist on lowering its "guideline" rate, since in Japan's current situation any raise would be tantamount to imposing a "penalty" on exports, as a leader of the Export-Import Bank of Japan puts it. However, Japan is in for tough bargaining at a time when it is under heavy fire from the U.S. and Western Europe due to its massive trade surplusses with those areas.

CONCERN ABOUT FRENCH TRADE IMBALANCE EXPRESSED

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 22 (KYODO) -- The government is racking its brains to find what Japan can do about mounting French calls for early correction of the current bilateral trade imbalance before French President Francois Mitterrand's Japan visit scheduled for April, government sources said. The French Government reportedly hopes to settle the issue once and for all when it sends Foreign Trade Minister Michel Jobert next month to Tokyo prior to the president's visit, the sources said.

French irritation with the current state of Franco-Japanese trade is mounting rapidly as a result of the failure of two bilateral trade conferences since last autumn, the sources noted. At the conferences, held last September and last month, France demanded that Japan take import promotion measures for 20 items, including a cut in the import tariff and liquor tax on brandy and wine, and stepped-up imports of cheese. The Japanese side promised to take import promotion steps for 10 items but this failed to satisfy the French side. The French Government has thus proposed the dispatch of the foreign trade minister to Tokyo in mid-March, according to the sources.

According to Japanese figures, the French trade deficit with Japan trebled in the past three years from dollar 310 million in 1979 to dollar 1.04 billion last year. The sources said the Foreign Ministry is earnestly studying the advisability of lowering the import tariff and liquor tax on brandy and wine, but the Finance Ministry is opposed to the idea. They quoted Finance Ministry officials as saying there is no necessity for Japan to make unilateral concessions while France currently controls imports of 27 items from Japan.

But if Tokyo fails to take effective measures to quell French dissatisfaction with the present state of bilateral trade, the sources noted, Japan may come under fire at the eighth economic summit of seven industrial democracies to be held in France in June. The government is thus racking its brains about what "gift" Japan can offer to Mitterrand when he comes to Tokyo, they said.

LAOS TO BE GRANTED ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT AID

OW191053 Tokyo KYODO in English 1036 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 19, (KYODO) -- Japan will extend a yen 51,758,000 (dollar 220,000) grant to Laos for economic development and improvement of the people's welfare, the Foreign Ministry said Friday. The ministry said the grant will be provided in accordance with the resolution adopted at the ministerial conference of the Trade and Development Board (TDB) of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development in March 1978.

Notes on the extension of the grant were exchanged in Vientiane between Japanese Ambassador to Laos Yoshinao Odaka and Laotian Foreign Minister ad interim Khamphai Boupha.

NODONG SINMUN FLAYS 'TEAM SPIRIT 1982' EXERCISE

SK240422 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2250 GMT 24 Feb 82

[NODONG SINMUN 24 February commentary: "Reckless Playing With Fire Must Be Stopped at Once"]

[Text] Because of the war commotions staged by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique, a grave situation threatening peace on the Korean Peninsula is being created. The large-scale war exercise called "Team Spirit 1982," which was kicked off in mid-February, is now reaching a dangerous stage.

According to a report, an advance party from the U.S. 25th Infantry Division, which had left an air force base in Hawaii, arrived on the eastern front in South Korea via Osan Air Force Base. At the same time, several thousand troops from the division are reportedly ready to leave for South Korea soon.

Earlier, upon the arrival of the U.S. Navy transport ship Mercury at Pusan, modern marine combat equipment and some 500 vehicles which had been transported by the vessel were sent to the area where operations will be carried out. Troops and equipment of the U.S. 3d Marine Brigade airlifted from Kadena Air Base in Okinawa were deployed in the Pohang and Yechon areas. The U.S. imperialist aggressors are bringing a large number of troops, aircraft and warships and other combat equipment into South Korea from the continental United States and their overseas bases.

In addition, according to a foreign report, 14 warships of the U.S. 7th Fleet task force secretly carried out large-scale maneuvers in the East Sea in early February. Meanwhile, the U.S. Defense Department announced that 18 A-10 close support aircraft and 1,200 air force personnel will be assigned to the U.S. forces in South Korea, and that 24 A-10 aircraft would be sent in the second half of this year. It also announced that over 100 Hawk missiles and hundreds of rocket engines would be provided the South Korean puppets.

The U.S. war machine is making a fierce move on the Korean Peninsula. These military maneuvers are aimed at attacking us. It is not by chance that the U.S. imperialists, while carrying out an unprecedented military buildup, are staging the war exercise by mobilizing their army, air force, naval, and amphibious troops, tactical and strategic air squadrons, and the heinous 7th Fleet, including the aircraft carrier Midway, from the U.S. mainland, the Pacific region and U.S. military bases in Japan.

This is to refine the preparations for operations to attack the northern half of the republic. This is no secret. If they had no intention of igniting a war, they would not mobilize large numbers of troops and equipment and waste a tremendous amount of resources and money to stage military commotions. All the facts show that the U.S. imperialists' aggressive scheme to ignite a new war in Korea is becoming more blatant and is reaching a more dangerous stage. Synchronizing with the large-scale military movements of the U.S. imperialists, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is staging a shooting exercise in the West Sea. Thus, South Korea is now under a horrible war atmosphere amid the thunderous noise of airplanes and tanks and exploding gun shells.

The war exercise commotions staged by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique are an extremely reckless and dangerous provocation aggravating the situation and disturbing peace in Korea, bringing the situation to the brink of war.

Today our people and the world's people are demanding preservation and consolidation of peace in Korea and an early and peaceful settlement of the reunification question. After the proposal calling for the establishment of a confederal state for the fatherland's reunification was put forth, and in particular since the proposal urging convocation of a 100-man joint conference as a consultative body for the fatherland's reunification was announced, their voices are even shriller.

At a time when the peaceful settlement of the Korean question has become an urgent demand of the times and the nation and we are making every effort to achieve this end, the U.S. imperialists and the South Korean puppets are staging large-scale war exercises by mobilizing their armed forces. This is an intolerable provocation challenge to our people and the peace-loving people of the world.

The frantic war commotions and military buildup carried out in South Korea disturbing peace in Korea and hampering its peaceful reunification eloquently show that on the Korean Peninsula the threat of aggression is coming from the South.

The southward invasion and the North's military superiority clamored about by the U.S. imperialists and the Chon Tu-hwan clique are nothing more than a camouflage to conceal this. Because of their criminal maneuvers, South Korea is a hotbed of new war. The situation on the Korean Peninsula is being extremely aggravated.

The U.S. imperialists are indeed haughty and impudent occupiers and aggressors going on a rampage to obstruct the reunification of Korea, indefinitely hold South Korea as their colony and military base and realize an aggressive ambition against Korea. By flattering his U.S. masters and getting more weapons and war equipment during the ongoing war exercise, the Chon Tu-hwan clique is scheming to continue the military terror rule by force of arms and to realize an ambition for long-term power.

Calling in the aggressive forces and offering the nation's land as a war exercise ground for the aggressors to promote a war fever and create a war atmosphere is an act which could be committed only by those nation-selling traitors who do not care about the country and the nation. This once again clearly shows that the puppets have no desire for reunification and that their gibberish about reunification is nothing more than a plausible facade put forth to conceal their belligerent and splittist nature.

The war exercise staged by the U.S. imperialists and the puppet clique endangers peace on the Korean Peninsula. This is a serious threat not only to peace in Korea and its peaceful reunification but also to peace in Asia and the world. The United States is scheming to threaten the Korean people and realize its aggressive ambition against Korea. However, this is an anachronistic dream and a foolish act. Our people are closely watching the war commotions of the belligerent elements and will not overlook the military provocations of the aggressors and their stooges. The U.S. imperialists must not instigate the puppets to war and splittist maneuvers but stop the reckless playing with fire and immediately withdraw from South Korea, along with all their aggressive forces.

This is the demand of the times. If the U.S. imperialists ignore this just demand and continue to seek the adventurous military policy, they will be fully responsible for all the consequences. As aggressors and war lunatics, they will face even stronger denunciation and rejection from our people and the world's people.

YUGOSLAV PAPER CITES LEADERSHIP OF KIM CHONG-IL

SK240122 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 23 Feb 82

Comrade Kim Chong-il has also greatly contributed to developing literature and art. His literature work and theory have greatly contributed to developing literature and art in this country. One example is his unique theory on the new communist human being.

PARTY CENTER'S LEADERSHIP IN CONSTRUCTION HAILED

SK231540 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1517 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 23 (KCNA) -- A constant economic progress has been made and a number of grand monumental edifices have been erected in recent years in the Democratic People's Republic of Korea. This is a shining fruition of the tested leadership of the glorious party centre which is carrying into practice the lofty intentions of the respected leader Comrade Kim Il-song through bold and daring operations. Our party possessed of unexcelled grit designs and organizes everything in a bold and daring way and energetically leads the masses to carry out the work once started to the end.

The Munsu Street to be lined with many public buildings and high-rise flats for more than ten thousand families is now under construction in east Pyongyang. Among them flats for several thousand families have entered the final stage. Great miracles have been wrought thanks to the leadership of the glorious party centre which designs everything in a grandiose way and organises bold operations.

In June 1975, the workers of the Ullyul mine finished the project of laying a long-distance belt conveyer linking the mining district with islands in the sea in a matter of one year or so. This was a bold project. If this conveyer is extended further to link islands with each other, new land as big as a county will be obtained. The functionaries concerned had originally worked out a plan to lay this conveyer up to the shore of the sea from the youth mining district of the Ullyul mine. At that time our party unrolled a far-reaching plan of laying the conveyer first to Nunggum Island in the sea off the shore and then to more islands. Following this example, the project of laying a large-scale concentrated ore transport pipeline extending 98 kilometres from the Musan mine, a leading ore mine of Korea, to the Kim Chaek iron works over steep mountains and valleys was completed in a brief period.

When the Pyongyang metro was under construction, our party put forth a bold and unique policy of building it not merely as a means of solving the traffic problem in a big city but as a great artistic work of high ideological and artistic value and led the constructors to miracles and innovations. Thus, the Pyongyang metro has been built splendidly with our own wisdom, technique and materials, not wedded to any existing practice or relying on others' help, to be an underground Pyongyang and the cream of architecture.

In May 1975, several months before the 30th anniversary of the founding of the Workers Party of Korea, our party organised vast operations for effecting a great revolutionary upswing on all fronts of the national economy to fulfil the yearly assignments and the six-year plan before the 30th founding anniversary of the party.

As a result, the six-year plan was fulfilled one year and four months ahead of schedule in terms of total industrial output value, the major industrial targets of the six-year plan were hit with flying colors and an unusually bumper harvest was reaped by the 30th founding anniversary of the party.

A vast project of reconstructing the Moranbong Stadium on an expansion basis has now entered the final stage in Pyongyang. The project entails the removal of 70,000 seats and other old structures, building of pent roofs over the stand which would have far more seats than before and moving of several hundred thousand cubic metres of earth in lowering the ground and building the foundations.

Functionaries had thought that the project would take one year and a half if work is accelerated as fast as possible. But, the party set the daring goal of shortening this period of the project based on a bold calculation and powerfully organised and mobilised functionaries and working people to attain the goal. The constructors who deeply realised the intentions of the party have nearly completed the reconstruction of the stadium of world standard in a short period of three months by creating an unprecedented construction tempo.

Thanks to the far-reaching plan and bold and daring operations of the party, the large Pyongyang Maternity Hospital with up-to-date medical facilities and the Changgwang health complex with modern service and hygienic facilities have been built and the magnificent Changgwang Street lined with twenty to thirty-storied modern flats has made its appearance in less than a year in Pyongyang, the capital of revolution. Besides, the ice sports center of a new and unique conic form 63.5 metres high with a total floor space of over 25,000 square metres and the modern Chongnyu restaurant with 1,000 seats inside and 600 seats outside have been built in one year and a half on the scenic bank of the Potong River.

NODONG SINMUN DISCUSSES REVOLUTIONARY SPIRIT

[NODONG SINMUN 22 February editorial: "Let All Cadres and Party Members Become Genuine Revolutionaries With Indomitable Revolutionary Spirit"]

[Text] Today we live and carry out the revolution in the most glorious era. Our people's struggle is becoming more rewarding. A brilliant vista is opening for our future. As our revolution advances and its future seems more promising, we must more vigorously accelerate our socialist construction. To this end, ideological education must be intensified to make the people more firmly prepared politically and ideologically and to ensure that they struggle indomitably with lofty consciousness and zeal.

In this regard, it is very important to make cadres and party members genuine revolutionaries with an indomitable revolutionary spirit. Our party members and working people are becoming more and more zealous to emulate the revolutionary spirit of those young communists who struggled during the early days of the Korean revolution and to bring about an even greater upsurge in socialist construction.

This is evidence of our people's preparedness and determination to carry on the revolution to the bitter end. Young communists such as Kim Hyok and Cha Kwang-su were models of genuine revolutionaries with indomitable revolutionary spirit. They showed how those who had set out on the road of revolution should live and struggle.

The struggle and characteristics of those young communists are precious models to be emulated by revolutionaries. It is indeed an honor for our cadres and party members to arm themselves with the indomitable revolutionary spirit of those young communists and to struggle to win victories in revolution and construction.

The indomitable revolutionary spirit displayed by the young communists of Korea is a spirit that is displayed in the relations between leader [suryong] and fighters and between leader [yongdoja] and fighters and among revolutionary comrades in arms. In other words, it is a noble revolutionary spirit that has something to do with the stand and attitude and the fighting spirit and characteristics of the fighters who hold the revolutionary leader [yongdoja] in his esteem.

For codres and party members, to become genuine revolutionaries with indomitable revolutionary spirit means to faithfully uphold the revolutionary leader [yongdoja] in the severe class struggle, to firmly protect and defend his ideology and to become undaunted revolutionaries who would sacrifice their lives to implement his ideology.

A revolutionary with indomitable revolutionary spirit is a noble title that can be conferred on the most undaunted and noblest communist revolutionaries. For revolutionaries, nothing is more honorable than to attain this noble title. To devote oneself to uphold the revolutionary leader [yongdoja] is the fighter's revolutionary duty and supreme task.

In the revolutionary struggle, leader [suryong] and fighter form an inseparable body. Leader is a brain of the revolution and fighter is a struggle who devotes himself to the revolution. It is a precondition for the victory of the revolution that fighters loyally uphold the leader [suryong]. The revolutionary struggle of the working class advances and triumphs through the correct leadership of the leader [suryong] and the sacrificial struggle of the fighters who uphold him. By synthesizing opinion and the demands of the working people, the leader advances correct ideas and lines and organizes and mobilizes people to implement them. The ideas and leadership of the leader are implemented by the fighters' activities and struggle. Therefore, the leader should be rallied around by many undaunted fighters and revolutionary comrades-in-arms with indomitable revolutionary spirit. The revolutionary struggle to implement the leader's ideas and leadership is a very honorable task. At the same time, it is an arduous task. The task accompanies a serious class struggle aimed at smashing obsolete things and remaking nature and society in a revolutionary manner. Therefore, without revolutionaries who overcome difficulties and trials and sacrifice their lives to implement the leader's ideas and leadership, the revolution cannot advance victoriously.

The long history of the communist movement shows that around the great leader [yongdoja] leading the revolution there were always faithful fighters who upheld and assisted him. When such fighters firmly protect and defend the leader and are ready to sacrifice their lives in the struggle to carry out his orders and directives, the revolution can be victorious. Otherwise, the revolution faces difficulties. This is why genuine revolutionaries consider it more precious than their lives and their lives' honor to uphold their leader [yondoja].

The leader [suryong], the leader [yongdoja] of the revolution, is a teacher who nurtures and leads fighters with great trust and love. The revolutionaries, all under the care of the leader [suryong], learn about the principle of the class struggle and the truth of the revolution and bring themselves up as competent leading cadres and fighters willing to undertake responsible revolutionary posts and carry out heavy tasks. Therefore, communist revolutionaries regard it an unshakable faith and noble moral obligation to respect and believe in and to uphold and follow the leader [yongdoja], who provides a true life for them and leads them in the revolution. Indomitable revolutionary fighters are ironclad revolutionaries with such firm and noble spiritual and moral traits.

In the Korean communist movement, great models of genuine revolutionaries with indomitable revolutionary spirit were molded. This is a matter of great pride to the Korean communists. The indomitable revolutionary spirit which the young Korean communists displayed during those early days of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle was the purest and most undaunted revolutionary spirit, one unprecedented in history.

In those dark days, when our people were suffering under the oppressive rule of the Japanese imperialists, Kim Hyok, Cha Kwang-su and other young communists upheld the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song as the leader [yongdoja] of the Korean revolution, as a guiding star and as the sun, and devoted themselves to the struggle to implement the revolutionary ideology of Comrade Kim Il-song.

At the time of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, those who protected and assisted the young marshal Comrade Kim Il-song were older than him. But they upheld and assisted him with all their heart and protected and defended him at the expense of their lives. On the road of advance under the leadership of the marshal, they considered their sacrifices as honor and bliss, indomitably struggled by overcoming difficulties and trials and defended the honor of the fighters of the marshal under all circumstances.

The endless devotion and sacrifice in venturing to do anything to defend and implement the ideology and line of the great marshal and sacrificing their lives to secure the well-being of the marshal -- these are the noble revolutionary spirit which those indomitable fighters bestowed on us. With this revolutionary spirit, we can carry out the struggle under all circumstances and live a rewarding life. Today, for our cadres and party members, preparing themselves as revolutionaries with an indomitable revolutionary spirit is an important question for victoriously accelerating the revolution and construction under the leadership of the party.

The great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: We must prepare for an arduous struggle. We must emulate the heroic struggle of the fallen revolutionary fighters and inherit and further develop their fighting spirit.

Our revolution, which was launched in the 1920's by the respected and beloved Comrade Kim Il-song, is now victoriously advancing in the 1980's. Indeed, great achievements have been won in our revolution. Nevertheless, our struggle has not ended yet. We must continue to advance along the long and rugged road in order to achieve the reunification of the divided fatherland and to win the final victory of the revolution. To victoriously accelerate the revolution and carry it on to the bitter end, we must nurture many undaunted revolutionaries with an indomitable revolutionary spirit such as was possessed by Kim Hyok and Cha Kwang-su.

Even today, when socialist and communist construction has advanced far, we try to emulate the revolutionary spirit of the fighters in the early days of the revolution. This is to uphold the revolutionary leader [yongdoja] as they did and to more victoriously accelerate our revolutionary cause. When there are many revolutionary fighters with indomitable revolutionary spirit, trials can be overcome and the revolutionary struggle can be victorious. This is an unalterable truth proven by the history of the Korean revolution.

There have been countless trials during the more than half century of our revolution. However, the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song has always been railed around by indomitable revolutionary fighters -- during the early stage of the revolutionary activities, during the period of the armed struggle and during the construction of a new fatherland and the severe war. During times of trial, they firmly protected and defended the great leader and devoted themselves to assisting him.

Because the fighters who possessed an indomitable revolutionary spirit struggled during the period of the anti-Japanese revolutionary struggle, going through fire and water to protect and defend the general at the cost of their lives and to implement his idea and line, they defeated a great million-man force armed to the claws. Thanks both to the wise leadership of the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, who possessed profound wisdom, an ironclad will, an expert organizational ability and a generous heart and to the dedicated struggle of the indomitable fighters, who persistently struggled to implement the leader's plan, we brilliantly accomplished the historic cause of founding the party and building the country in the difficult and complicated circumstances following the liberation, repelling the enemy's maneuvers.

We cannot recall the fact that the lifeline of our revolution has been correctly maintained and that the brilliant reality we see today has unfolded without recalling the fighters who possessed an indomitable revolutionary spirit who resolutely protected and defended the party and the leader.

As shown by history, when fighters, possessing an indomitable revolutionary spirit, firmly rally around their leader [yongdoja] there will be no work which they cannot accomplish. Only when we have many revolutionaries who possess an indomitable revolutionary spirit can we reliably safeguard the party and the leader and continuously carry out our revolution to the end, no matter what grim difficulties or trials we may encounter to the future.

Today, our people are assigned the task of implementing the magnificent program of socialist construction set forth by the historic sixth party congress. This task is unprecedentedly weighty and vast. It can be successfully accomplished by the dedicated and tenacious struggle of cadres and party members. If our cadres more highly display an indomitable revolutionary spirit to implement the leader's plan, overcoming all difficulties, just as Kim Hyok and Cha Kwang-su did, they can enact a greater upsurge in socialist economic construction and continuously glorify the history of a great revolutionary upsurge.

Preparing the cadres and party members as true revolutionaries who possess an indomitable revolutionary spirit is the glorious task of vigorously forging ahead with socialist construction by firmly consolidating the ideological and organizational foundation of our party and by enhancing its leadership role.

Our party is a political staff headquarter which assumes entire responsibility for the destiny of the Korean revolution and the people. Without strengthening our party, we cannot hope for the victorious progress of the revolution and the bright future of the people. Today, our party has been strengthened organizationally and ideologically as never before, and its militant functions and role have greatly increased. Based on the achievements we have already made, we should more firmly prepare cadres and party members as indomitable revolutionaries like Kim Hyok and Cha Kwang-su so that we can more successfully carry out the work of consolidating the foundation of the party and victoriously advance the revolution and construction. In this way, we can further strengthen and develop our party into an ironclad militant unit with a solid foundation, unwavering no matter what difficulties and trials it may encounter, and into the most powerful unit which leads the chuche revolutionary cause along a single, ever-victorious road. This shows that training a great number of revolutionaries who possess an indomitable revolutionary spirit constitutes the way for firmly guaranteeing the brighter future of our party and the revolution.

The more the party is strengthened and develops and the more the revolution develops, the greater the demand that cadres and party members tenaciously struggle with an indomitable revolutionary spirit. Today, we live and are carrying out our revolution in circumstances different from those of the period of the revolution's beginnings. However, the revolutionary spirit is not at all different from what it was then. By possessing the indomitable revolutionary spirit which the young communists in 1920's displayed, all of us should become Kim Hyok and Cha Kwang-su of the 1980's.

In particular, it is important for cadres -- the commanding staff of the revolution -- to firmly arm themselves with the invincible revolutionary spirit. Cadres hold a very important position in upholding their leader [yongdoja] and in realizing his ideas. A number of vigorous fighters who directly assisted the party and the leader [suryong] and loyally fought for them throughout their lives turned out during the force of our revolution. When our cadres follow and learn the lofty examples of the revolutionary patriots who safeguarded, protected and held in high esteem the party and the leader [suryong], they can brilliantly fulfill their mission.

Today, our party organizations are confronted with the important task of making the cadres and the party members firmly prepare themselves as invincible revolutionary fighters just like the young communists. This is a most important task which the party organizations should stress in indoctrination work. When all party organizations, cadres and party members properly carry out this work, we can firmly guarantee brilliant fulfillment of the chuche revolutionary cause and effect a new turn in socialist construction.

It is a basic requirement for cadres and party members in becoming genuine revolutionaries with an invincible revolutionary spirit to deeply cherish the faith to hold the party and the leader [suryong] in high esteem. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song has taught: Our comrades might face difficulties and various complex problems and waver in carrying out their work. However, they should cherish firm revolutionary faith, trusting the party.

In other words, if we have such a revolutionary faith as I have the party center, I struggle for the people, I am resolved to dedicate my life to the revolution, I will always remain faithful to the party, people and revolution, I am not afraid of death, I will not disgrace my political life even if my flesh perishes, then we can overcome any difficulty.

The faith to uphold the leader [yongdoja] to the end by firmly trusting him constitutes the most important ideological and mental characteristic of a genuine revolutionary. The lofty honor and dignity of invincible revolutionary fighters can be preserved only when they adhere to their faith under any circumstance. The young Korean Communists in the past held fast to their revolutionary principles at the risk of their lives and devotedly struggled. This was possible because they cherished firm faith, holding their leader [yongdoja] in high esteem. They realized the greatness of Comrade Kim Il-song, who displayed prominent talent and traits as the leader [yongdoja] in the course of the actual struggle. They firmly believed that the Korean revolution could win victory only if they followed Comrade Kim Il-song. Thus, the faith of the young communists in their leader [yongdoja] remained an absolute one which was not dampened by anything.

The faith deeply cherished by our cadres and party members today is a firm political resolve and will to carry out the revolution to the end by following the party center and trusting the party. This faith is a lofty ideological emotion formed and consolidated as a result of our understanding of the party's greatness and invincible strength and of our traversing the road of rewarding struggle together with the party.

Our functionaries and party members should forever vigorously advance on the road of loyalty by always cherishing such faith. All cadres and party members should firmly believe the road shown by our party is the very one for victory and glory and should firmly establish the trait of remaining loyal to the party's leadership to the end.

Our revolutionary fighters can find a rewarding and happy life only when they live and struggle with the firm belief that they must share their joys and sorrows with the party to the end, entrusting their entire destiny and future to the party. They are displaying the invincible revolutionary spirit in the struggle to strenuously safeguard and protect the authority of the leader [yongdoja] and to realize the revolutionary idea of the leader [yongdoja] by giving their all.

Ensuring the authority of the leader [yongdoja] is an important task for the victorious advance of the revolution and is the primary mission of revolutionary fighters. By invincible revolutionary fighters is meant ardent revolutionaries who absolutely trust their leader [yongdoja] and protect his authority and dignity without any deviation.

It was a proud tradition of the Korean communist movement to firmly safeguard and protect the leader [suryong] under any circumstance and in any difficult situation. All cadres and party members should defend and protect the leader [yongdoja] of the revolution politically and ideologically, even at the risk of their life, under any circumstances and in any situation by following the examples set by the anti-Japanese patriots.

They should enhance the party center's leading authority in every way by strengthening the party's combat capability and by more thoroughly ensuring the party's guidance over the revolution and construction. Cadres and party members should display an invincible revolutionary spirit by dedicating all their strength and wisdom to bringing the party's lines and policies to brilliant fruition.

It has been the unique militant temperament of the ardent young communists to unhesitatingly risk death in order to defend and implement the ideas and lines of the leader [yongdoja]. Accepting the tasks assigned by the great general as supreme orders, they fulfilled the general's ideas and plans at any cost, struggling without surrendering even in isolated outposts and enemy territory.

Such spirit and such traits in life and struggle should be accepted by our cadres as their firm faith. Assuming an attitude worthy of masters of the revolution and with a sense of boundless dedication, all cadres and party members should brilliantly fulfill the tasks assigned by their sectors and the party. They should highly demonstrate the revolutionary trait of accomplishing the mission assigned by the party at any cost, under any condition.

Thus, they should effect a decisive turning point in production and construction and in all sectors of economic management. They should successfully carry out the Second 7-Year Plan and 10-point prospective targets of socialist economic construction.

In order to become genuine revolutionaries with invincible revolutionary spirit, cadres and party members should constantly discipline and educate themselves. Revolutionaries who have the invincible revolutionary spirit are not ordinary revolutionaries. They are the owners of strong temperament and vigorous fighting spirit who are willing to make themselves human bombs and cross the death line for the leader [yongdoja].

Turning the people into ardent fighters means realizing the basic trait of communists at a lofty level. We should make all efforts to perfect ourselves at this level. All cadres and party members should have the lofty determination and resolution to become invincible revolutionary fighters as were Kim Hyok and Cha Kwang-su. They should put this determination into practice without fail.

We should sincerely and constantly promote party spirit, not forgetting our pledge that we will remain faithful to the party and the revolution throughout our lives. We should endlessly glorify the honor of our glorious party's revolutionary fighters. All cadres and party members, taking the party organizations as their motherly bosom, should entrust everything to these organizations and lead a party life in a voluntary and sensible way. Cadres, in particular, should follow the examples of the invincible fighters who thoroughly upheld their leader [yongdoja]. They should become genuine revolutionaries able to meet the party's expectations and trust by disciplining and perfecting themselves.

Deeply understanding the principle of revolution is an important guarantee in becoming genuine revolutionaries with invincible revolutionary spirit. The invincible revolutionary spirit is a communist spirit, based on lofty awareness and feeling coming from the people's hearts. Therefore, we should fully understand the principle of the revolution to arm ourselves, to live and to struggle with such spirit.

If we do not correctly understand the principle of revolution, we cannot abide by our creed, nor can we correctly carry out our revolutionary task in accordance with the party's intent. By effectively conducting indoctrination on the principle of the revolution, party organizations should help cadres and party members correctly understand the correctness of the revolutionary struggle, the inevitability of victory and the decisive role of the leader [suryong] and the party in the development of history and in the cause of the working class. In particular, it is important for party organizations to help cadres and party members understand in principle relations between the leader [suryong] and fighters and between the leader [yongdoja] and fighters in the revolutionary struggle of the working class and the method of acquiring the traits and personality of truly indomitable revolutionary fighters, citing historic facts.

Thus, party organizations should develop all cadres into resolute revolutionaries who do not waver, whatever difficulties and trials they may encounter, who abide by revolutionary fidelity, who hold in high esteem the party and the leader [suryong] and who, possessing an ironclad will, do not yield until broken.

Vigorously struggling to accomplish the chuche revolutionary cause which the young Korean communists developed under the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song's leadership is the noble historic task assigned us today. Our party is taking the lead in the sacred struggle to perform this task. The KWP is the organizer, encourager and guide of all the victories of our people. Our party organizes and leads all the worthwhile struggles waged today to complete the chuche revolutionary cause and to provide our people with greater happiness. Only by following the leadership of our party can our people achieve the final victory of the revolution, the endless prosperity of the fatherland and the happiness of their posterity, generation after generation.

Today, our people are confidently resolved to show endless loyalty to the party and to follow its leadership to the end. Today, firmly rallied around our party center with a single will and desire, are veterans of the revolution, who, holding in high esteem the great leader Comrade Kim Il-song, have traversed the road of struggle over a long period of half a century; old functionaries, who, following the banner of the party, have struggled for 20 to 30 years; and the new generation, which is seething with chuche-type blood.

When this loyal revolutionary rank overflows with an indomitable revolutionary spirit, we will have nothing to dread and will achieve victories, overcoming all difficulties and trials.

By firmly preparing themselves as indomitable revolutionary fighters, to meet the requirements of the cause of imbuing society with the chuche idea, all cadres and party members should complete the revolutionary cause, following the party's leadership.

FRENCH MINISTER BACKS SEOUL ON KOREAN SITUATION

[Text] Paris -- French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson said Monday that "the French Government fully understands the situation of the Republic of Korea" and that there is no change in France's stance toward South and North Korea. The French minister was responding to visiting Korean Foreign Minister No Sin-yong's request that the French Government support the position of South Korea on the two-Koreas problem.

During the foreign ministers' meeting, held at the Foreign Ministry here, No also said that the French Government should not recognize the Pyongyang government unless the East European countries recognize the Seoul government.

Cheysson's remarks, the first manifestation of the French Government's policy since the coming into power of the Socialists in May last year, indicate the French Government policy of not establishing diplomatic relations with North Korea. In the meeting, which took place over dinner, Cheysson voiced the hope to visit Seoul within this year when No invited the French minister.

Exchanging views on bilateral economic relations, the French minister said that he hoped to rectify the current two-day trade imbalance in favor of Korea, and to expand France's participation in Korea's economic projects, such as the construction of the Seoul-Pusan express electric railway and the tidal power plant in Asan Bay. France wants to sell Korea a metro (subway), new Airbus planes and possibly two additional nuclear power stations. Korea currently has 10 nuclear power stations, two of which are French. But it reportedly wants to acquire two more. Later in the day, No visited the Eurodiff nuclear power station at Tricastin, southern France.

No, who arrived here Sunday for a three-day visit, the first by a Korean foreign minister, also paid a courtesy call on President Francois Mitterrand at the Elysee Palace earlier in the day, during which he delivered to the latter a personal letter from Korean President Chon Tu-hwan. The exact contents of the personal letter were not known, but according to a Korean official in No's entourage, President Chon reaffirmed existing friendly and cooperative relations between the two countries, and expressed the hope for closer cooperation in all fields.

During his courtesy call on Mitterrand, No explained the Republic of Korea's Government's efforts toward the peaceful unification of the Korean Peninsula, including Chon's Jan. 22 unification formula. No later expressed satisfaction over the results of the meeting, which also took up ways of further strengthening bilateral cooperative relations.

The Korean foreign minister also met with External Trade Minister Michel Jobert later in the day, and discussed the expansion of two-way trade and economic cooperation. During the meeting, the French minister said that he hoped to visit Seoul around June this year. No left Paris Tuesday for Nigeria, on the fourth and final leg of his two-week overseas tour.

KOREA HERALD REVIEWS CHON'S ECONOMIC POLICIES

[Editorial: "Chon's Economic Thought"]

[Text] President Chon Tu-hwan's recent interview with an American magazine on world financing and banking amounts to a revelation of A to Z about what and how he and, for that matter, his government are going to achieve. He discussed a wide range of questions, from foreign affairs and economic policies to his style of governing.

Such a disclosure, a striking one to all appearances, is welcome as it underlines the ongoing endeavor to open up society in general and government administration in particular. And the interview in question, addressed to international partners of Korea, will be quite conducive to widening the avenue of communication and understanding between the two sides -- a key to strengthening their partnership in mutually beneficial undertakings.

Especially noteworthy of the extensive topics dealt with in the interview is his elaboration of the economic philosophy as well as policies of the present government. He said that he will see to it that the nation's economic policies are not distorted by extraneous factors, such as political pressures, as is often the case in developing countries. This principle is vital in keeping the developing economy on the right track but, of course, this is easier said than done in many cases.

In hindsight, the Korean economy was also affected by noneconomic elements that crept into the process of economic policymaking during the past decades of high growth. Some of the problems facing us today, such as the need to restructure part of the heavy industry line, obviously entailed the interference of noneconomic pressure with the formulation of industrial blueprints. A good deal of such pressure may be traced to political rather than economic effects which were to be expected of the overinvested or unbalanced sector of the economy presently in need of remedy.

As the economy has begun to rise from the unprecedented doldrums of the past few years, the nation is looking forward again to vigorous growth within the present decade. This is certainly feasible, given the proven potential for the nation's economic upsurge. But a mature approach to the economy is essential to averting the kind of errors and mistakes that we have already committed or even that others have made in the process of moving into advanced phases. In order to see the president's conviction that the economy must be operated according to economic considerations and judgements stand in reality, more open and lively debates of policies not only in the course of drawing them but also carrying them out will be cardinal.

Another point worth special note is the president's economic liberalization policy, particularly for investments requiring foreign capital. To begin with, Korea's incentives for foreign investment have been comparatively favorable during the high-growth period of the 60's and much of the 70's. But, of course, increasing demands for foreign capital under the rapidly expanding economy have failed to meet with a matching pace of liberalization of rules of foreign investment. It is heartening to learn that legislative proposals have already been made to the National Assembly to streamline measures, additionally reducing red tape to encourage foreign investment.

Liberalization certainly is the central theme of policies of the Fifth Republic in terms of both ideological and realistic approaches. In this respect, the economic philosophy bared by President Chon is fundamental to broadening the scope of liberalization.

SPECIAL ASSEMBLY SESSION TO BE CONVENED 26 FEB

IRAN NOTIFIES SOUTH KOREA OF OIL PRICE CUT

SK240151 Seoul THE KOREA TIMES in English 24 Feb 82 p 7

[Text] Iran has cut its crude oil price by $2 per barrel -- the third price reduction this month. With the oil value readjusted downward, the price of Iranian light crude was brought down to $30.20 a barrel and heavy crude to $28.30.

The Ssangyong Oil Refinery Co. said yesterday it received from the National Iranian Oil Co. (NIOC) Monday a Telex notifying it of the price cut. In the beginning of this month, Ssangyong said, the state-run NIOC decreased its crude price by $4. The nation now gets 50,000 barrels daily from Iran. The nation's daily oil imports total 616,000 barrels on the basis of oil-supply contracts. Of the total, 53 percent or 327,000 barrels come from Saudi Arabia.

Officials at the Energy-Resources Ministry said the Iranian action would have no impact on domestic oil prices. According to them, the effect on local oil prices will be small -- 1.38 percent -- in terms of crude costs only.

The value of the Korean won currency against the U.S. dollar has depreciated by 2.81 percent since Dec. 1 last year when the government raised domestic oil prices. The value of the Korean won currency was 690 won against one U.S. dollar on Dec. 1. As of yesterday the value was set at 712.30 won, reducing the Korean currency value by 2.81 percent. All in all, they pointed out, the nation still has an oil cost-push factor of 1.43 percent. If Saudi Arabia cuts its oil prices by $1 per barrel, they said, the cut will erase the cost-push factor.

The Iranian price reduction came as the OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) was seeking an oil ministers' meeting Saturday to help reduce the present oil surplus to boost prices, they explained. They said Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter, was under heavy pressure to cut its present production ceiling of 8.6 million barrels a day.

SEOUL CITES REPORT ON N. KOREAN OFFICER'S PURGE

SK240007 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 2200 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Report by KBS Tokyo correspondent Chong Yong-sok -- It has been reported that the North Korean puppets have purged North Korean Army Col Gen Kim Chol-man, the officer in charge of the special military operations against South Korea and a member of the KWP Military Commission, for his failure in operations against South Korea.

TONGIL ILBO, a paper published by Koreans in Tokyo, quoted a source familiar with the situation in North Korea as saying that Kim Chol-man was purged because of his failure in operations against South Korea during the presidential election in February and elections of national assemblymen in March 1981 and in blocking the hosting of the 1988 Seoul Olympics.

BRIEFS

EXPORTS IN 1982 -- Seoul, Feb. 12 -- Korea's exports so far this year topped 1.87 billion U.S. dollars, up 12.3 percent from the same period in 1981, according to a tally released Friday by the Commerce-Industry Ministry. The tally also showed that exports since the beginning of February were worth 413 million dollars, a 57.1 percent increase over the corresponding period a year ago. Ministry officials attributed the brisk export performance primarily to increased government loans to exporters and the lowering of bank interest rates which boosted the competitiveness of Korean-made goods abroad. GOMBOJAB INTERVIEWED ON PEACE IN ASIAN REGION

AU221136 Budapest NEPSZABADSAG in Hungarian 18 Feb 82 p 3

[Text] Damingiyn Gombojab, member of the Politburo and secretary of the Central Committee of the Mongolian People's Revolutionary Party (MPRP), has received Oszkar Fuzes, member of our paper's staff, in Ulaanbaatar, and answered his questions concerning security in Asia.

[Question] Party Secretary General Yumjaagiyn Tsedenbal took a highly significant initiative to promote peace and security in Asia at the 18th MPRP Congress. What is the essence of his proposal?

[Answer] By the beginning of the eighties, the danger of warlike confrontation has considerably increased in the world. Imperialism is responsible for this, and primarily U.S. leading circles which, opposing the positive changes that have transpired in the world, are again trying to change the strategic balance of power to their advantage. Reactionary forces of the NATO countries, and primarily the present U.S. administration, are pursuing a guideline of active preparations for war, are constantly increasing their military potential and are threatening the peace and security of the peoples of all continents.

This adventurous and aggressive guideline is the main reason for the intensification of tension throughout the world, including Asia, the Middle East, the Indian Ocean area and elsewhere.

An Effective International Instrument

To contribute to alleviating international tension, the 18th MPRP Congress has proposed: The Asian and Pacific Ocean countries should conclude a nonaggression convention in which they relinquish the use of force in mutual relations.

The essence of this proposal is that it should strengthen those most general principles of interstate relations that are laid down in the UN Charter, the Bandung declaration and international documents that in general regulate relations among the countries of this area.

The convention must be based on the following principles: Mutual observance of independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, the inviolability of state borders, equality, non-intervention in domestic affairs, renunciation of force and the threat of force, a peaceful settlement of disputed issues and mutually beneficial cooperation.

We are convinced: The conclusion of a pact of the Asian and Pacific Ocean countries would considerably improve the general international situation. Positive participation of the permanent members of the UN Security Council -- as Mongolia proposes — would ensure its function as an effective and important international instrument from the first moment of its validity, because, in some form, three of the five permanent members of the UN Security Council are linked to the area in question.

To Reduce the Danger

[Question] What were the reasons for elaborating the initiative?

[Answer] No task is more important and pressing today than restraining the arms race, averting the danger of war that threatens the existence of mankind as a whole.

This applies particularly to the Asian Continent, because that is where half of the inhabitants of our planet live. Washington's and Beijing's conquering and adventurous aspirations are the source of an intensification of tension and a development of conflict situations that may bring about serious and dangerous consequences — and not only with regard to the peace and security of the peoples of Asia, but for the whole world. Economic and political pressure, blatant intervention in other countries' domestic affairs, armed intervention against neighboring countries, making territorial demands and extensively supporting reactionary, dictatorial regimes have become an integral part of this policy.

Military-political cooperation has strengthened between the United States and China, and so has the endeavor to draw Japan into the imbroglio of these dangerous plans and to further aggravate the situation in Asia, which is tense in any case. It is fitting to note in this connection: The decision of the U.S. leadership to deliver modern weapons, including offensive weapons, to China opens a new phase in the policy aimed at establishing a "united front" against the Soviet Union and the socialist community, and threatening the peoples' national independence and social progress.

On our densely populated continent with its powderkegs of innummerable conflicts, what is needed above all is for everyone who holds peace, liberty and national independence dear to make constructive efforts to uphold them.

[Question] What echo has there been to the proposal among the countries concerned; has there been a concrete reaction?

[Answer] On the whole, our proposal has found understanding and a lively echo among the peace-loving forces of the Asian Continent, and the Soviet Union and the rest of the fraternal socialist countries have ensured their support for it. To expound the peace initiative, Comrade Tsedenbal has sent a personal message to almost 50 heads of state and government of Asian and Pacific Ocean countries, as well as to the heads of the permanent member countries of the UN Security Council.

It is obviously too early to sum up the replies. In any case, it emerges from the replies of the heads of state of a few Asian countries that they are seriously examining it on merit, all the more so because the ideals of consolidating peace and good-neighbor relations are close to the peoples of Asia and Oceania. We are confident that the countries concerned will listen to the voice of reason and realism, and actively and collectively participate in protecting the peoples of this extensive area from the danger of warlike conflicts.

Additional Steps

[Question] What additional steps will Mongolia take toward realizing the proposal?

[Answer] When Mongolia submitted the proposal, its premise was that the realization of this peace initiative calls for joint efforts by all peace-loving forces, including the various parties and organizations and the public of the Asian and Pacific Ocean area. We are aware that Mongolia, as the initiator of the proposal, together with the fraternal parties and countries, will have to make active steps toward promoting the proposal.

On 29 June 1981, the Mongolian parliament, the Great People's Hural, made an appeal to the parliaments of all Asian and Pacific Ocean countries to unite their efforts to overcome the danger of war and create lasting peace. We have presented this appeal to the governments and parliaments of most countries of the region concerned and, by way of an official document of the UN General Assembly, informed all member countries of the world organization about it. We will direct our additional efforts toward striving to explain in every possible manner that our proposals run in an identical channel with initiatives of the Soviet Union, the three fraternal Indochinese countries, the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan and other peace-loving countries toward strengthening peace and security in Asia and the adjacent regions. We hope that these concepts serving the strengthening of security will be understood and supported by the peace-loving and realistic-minded forces of our turbulent continent. We are convinced that the fraternal countries of the socialist community and other progressive forces will extensively support the realization of this initiative.

CHAN VEN STATES SUPPORT FOR PRK-SRV SOLIDARITY

BK240820 Phnom Penh Domestic Service in Cambodian 1100 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Interview given to station correspondent by Chan Ven, secretary general of the Council of State, vice chairman of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council and chairman of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association, on a number of issues relating to Kampurchea-Vietnam Solidarity Day -- recorded, date not given]

[Text] [Question] I am from the radio Voice of the Kampuchean People. Here are some questions that I would like to ask you, Mr Secretary General of the Council of State and chairman of the Kampuchea-Vietnam Friendship Association. First, in accordance with the Third Front Congress, the Kampuchean people throughout the country observe 18 February 1982 as Kampuchea-Vietnam Solidarity Day. Would you please tell us about the significance of this (?first) Kampuchea-Vietnam Solidarity Day?

[Answer] The Third Congress of our KUFNCD has proscribed that 18 February is to be the memorial day of Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity. Concerning the significance of Kampuchea-Vietnam Solidarity Day, I would like to affirm to all compatriots that Kampuchea-Vietnam Solidarity Day is the day to commemorate the third anniversary of the signing of the treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation between the PRK and the fraternal SRV. Comrade Chairman Heng Samrin said at the meeting to mark the third anniversary of the 7 January victory: Concerning the emergence of the glorious 7 January, we must always be grateful to the Vietnamese Communist Party, government, people and army for having saved us from the danger of genocide and for their current efforts -- both material and moral -- to help us in the defense and reconstruction of our country. As mentioned in the speech by our comrade chairman, it was thanks to the unconditional support of the Vietnamese party, government, people and army that on 7 January 1979 our people toppled the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime -- most subservient lackey of the Beijing hegemonist-expansionists -- totally liberated our beloved fatherland and brought about their new life.

It is to be noted that the Kampuchea-Vietnam treaty was signed at a time when 600,000 Chinese troops were invading the northern border of Vietnam. This clearly attests that the 18 February treaty constitutes an event of great historic significance for the two nations. Particularly, it is the factor that ensures the constant progress of our Kampuchean revolution. I would like to inform you about the significance of the 18 February treaty. Firstly, it has enhanced the tradition of solidarity between the Kampuchean people and the fraternal Vietnamese people, which is the factor guaranteeing all victories in the construction and defense efforts in each country. In this respect, both Kampuchea and Vietnam have promised to make every effort to constantly protect and broaden their traditions of militant solidarity, friendship and fraternal cooperation.

As Comrade Chairman Heng Samrin has stressed, history has linked the two nations -- Kampuchea and Vietnam -- together in the struggle against the common enemies for the independence and peace of each nation. The two nations have helped each other three times and have achieved victories, that is, the victories over the French colonialists, the U.S. imperialists and the Beijing international reactionaries and expansionists. The most significant thing, the Kampuchean people must always remember is that Kampuchea and Vietnam are neighbors who share the same fence. This means that they are brothers. Moreover, they must remember that if we unite, we will survive; but if we divide, we will die.

The second significance of the 18 February treaty is that it opened a new page in the history of the special relations between Kamuchea and Vietnam, because, on the one hand, this bond of solidarity and friendship is based on mutual trust and assistance as brothers of the same family, that is, equality and mutual interests.

On the other hand, both Kampuchea and Vietnam have promised to assist each other in political, military, economic, cultural, technical, scientific and all other fields. This assistance is long-term in nature, meaning that the two sides will join hands and assist each other until both Kampuchea and Vietnam succeed in building a socialist system which is prosperous, bountiful and glorious and full of happiness.

The third significance of the 18 February treaty is that solidarity with Vietnam has been described as our most significant feat of arms for the successful defense and construction of our fatherland. This means that, although now and for a long time to come, the enemies of all stripes -- the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique, the Son Sann group, the Sihanouk group, the Beijing reactionary and expansionist clique, the U.S. imperialists, some ASEAN countries and all other new and old colonialists and imperialists -- are seeking and will continue to seek all kinds of subversive maneuvers to facilitate their return to invade and oppress Kampuchea again, thanks to the assistance of the Vietnamese people and army, we have frustrated and will continue to frustrate all these maneuvers. It is to be noted that Kampuchea and Vietnam are in the same situation, that is, they are agricultural countries and were similarly ruined by war. However, Vietnam was the first to overcome its difficulties. Vietnam has much experience in the defense and construction of the country. Thus, it is a most valuable lesson that benefits the Kampuchean revolution in the defense and construction of the country in the future.

Another question is: Why have the enemies of all stripes sought all means to subvert Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity? It is because they know that Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity is a strong feat of arms, thus they must try by all ways and means to subvert this solidarity and to weaken and split us so that they can easily come back to oppress us. For this reason we must always maintain that solidarity with Vietnam is our sharpest and strongest feat of arms. We must safeguard this solidarity in order to fight and frustrate all maneuvers of the enemies of all stripes. Comrade Chairman Heng Samrin has stressed: Solidarity with Vietnam, which is indispensable for the cause of building and defending the Kampuchean revolution, constitutes its strategic line. Thus, the Kampuchean patriots constantly must hold high the banner of international solidarity, particularly solidarity with Vietnam.

[Question] According to what you have just said, Kampuchea-Vietnam Solidarity Day is linked to the Kampuchea-Vietnam treaty of friendship and cooperation. Now, would you please explain to us on the implementation of this treaty and its effects on our Kampuchean revolution?

[Answer] What I would like to tell all the beloved compatriots is that following the signing of the treaty on 18 February 1979 we made achievements in all fields. In particular, in the past more than 3 years, we succeeded in all fields. We will discuss developments in economic, cultural, technological and scientific fields, the improvement of our people's livelihood and the increase in the Kampuchean people's defense and security forces.

Speaking briefly, in the economic fields, as you have seen, Vietnam has given us hundreds of tons of rice and seed and sent tractors to help our people till the land in the provinces along the Kampuchea-Vietnam border. Vietnam has helped to repair Kampuchea's factories and enterprises, thus enabling them to resume operations from the start. Vietnam has helped to repair roads, bridges and so forth, and helped us transport foodstuffs to the people. Despite its own difficulties, Vietnam has given us material and equipment necessary for construction work. This was how Vietnam has helped us in the economic field.

Let me also stress the assistance in the cultural, educational, scientific and technical fields. The Vietnamese comrades have provided us with experts in all ministries, offices and units. Vietnam has helped to train medium-and high-level cadres, particularly at the Ho Chi Minh City and Hanoi political schools. Moreover, Vietnam has supplied our faculties of pedagogy, medicine and pharmacy with professors. Furthermore, our Vietnamese comrades have given our students and instructors equipment and school materials. In addition, the Vietnamese forces also help to build schools in the localities. What is most precious to us is that since the 7 January liberation they have helped us chart a new leading line in the reconstruction of our country. All of this is in the cultural, educational, scientific and technical fields.

In the social and public health fields, Vietnam has given us many hospitals and doctors and much medicine and medical equipment. Vietnam has helped our people to restore their physical strength in time.

In the field of defense and security, our Vietnamese friends have provided us with men to maintain security and do defense work for our people. They continue to conduct sweep operations against the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan remnants and they spare no efforts to defend the hundreds of kilometers of our border with Thailand.

In the diplomatic field, our Vietnamese friends have made every effort to assist the PRK. They have contributed to increasing the strategic Vietnam-Kampuchea-Laos alliance and solidarity and our relations with the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries, enabling the position and prestige of our PRK to soar high in the international arena. This has also created favorable international conditions for the defense and construction of our Kampuchean fatherland.

[Question] According to you, the implementation of this treaty is of great significance to and has an impact on our Kampuchean revolution. What is your impression of this treaty?

[Answer] This treaty is most significant and useful to our Kampuchean revolution, in particular at the present time. However, it may be effective not merely for the period of 25 years as agreed upon, for we may very well prolong or extend it beyond the 25 years as long as our enemies of all stripes continue to use sabotage activities and maneuvers against us. For this reason, I hold that this treaty is of special usefulness and significance to our Kampuchean revolution in particular, and to the three Indochinese nations in general. Moreover, the solidarity of the three Indochinese nations, particularly the solidarity between Kampuchea and Vietnam; has contributed to the defense of peace in Southeast Asia and the world. Therefore, what should our Kampuchean people do in order to enhance Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity?

First, it is my opinion that we must strengthen close and permanent solidarity with the fraternal Vietnamese army to fight the enemies of all stripes and maintain security. We must love and support the Vietnamese soldiers and cadres just as we would love and support our own kith and kin or children.

Secondly, cadres as well as combatants of our army must maintain solidarity and cooperation with Vietnamese experts and soldiers in order to carry out all revolutionary duties, including the duty to strengthen their own forces in the defense and construction of our beloved Kampuchean fatherland.

Thirdly, we must at all time uphold vigilance against all maneuvers of the enemies of all stripes who are trying to split Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity. We must not spread rumors; we must not indulge in extravagances; at the same time, we must report to the authorities and armed forces and unmask those who spread rumors to split the Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity on a timely basis.

In conclusion, we would like to express thanks to the fraternal Vietnamese party, government people and army for having tirelessly assisted and for continuing to assist our Kampchean people. We hope Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity, on the one hand, and Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos solidarity, on the other, will last forever and develop steadily in line with the slogan: "United we stand, divided we fall." Thank you.

KAMPUCHEA LAUDS PRK-SRV SOLIDARITY TIES

BK181454 Phnom Penh SPK in French 1456 GMT 17 Feb 82

[Text] Phnom Penh, 17 Feb (SPK) -- The Kampuchean and Vietnamese peoples are jubilantly celebrating the anniversary of the signing of the Kampuchea-Vietnam treaty of peace, friendship and cooperation, which symbolizes the loyal and fraternal relations between the two peoples, the paper KAMPUCHEA says.

In an editorial carried in its latest issue marking the date of 18 February, which was proclaimed by the Third Kampuchean United Front for Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] Congress as the day of Kampuchea-Vietnam solidarity, the KUFNCD central organ points out:

Kampuchea and Vietnam have been geographically and historically bound to each other in the struggle against the common enemy, for freedom and independence. The loyalty of the two peoples was tempered and tested in the revolutionary movement against French colonialism and U.S. imperialism, and in the liberation of Kampuchea from the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan regime, henchman of the Beijing expansionists. Responding to the Kampuchean people's sacred aspirations, the fraternal Vietnamese people and armed forces, motivated by the spirit of proletarian internationalism, have come to their aid in their national defense and national construction.

During a period of just a little over 3 years, the Kampuchean people have achieved great successes in liquidating the aftermath of the Pol Pot regime and have frustrated the perfidious maneuvers of the Chinese expansionists in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionary forces against the Kampuchean revolution. These revolutionary gains are inseparable from the devoted assistance of the Vietnamese Armed Forces. This is a splendid manifestation of the relations of friendship, solidarity and cooperation between the two peoples. The Kampuchean people will never forget the sincerity and heroism of the Vietnamese people and combatants who have made sacrifices for their just revolutionary cause.

The enemies, regarding the solidarity between our two peoples as a grain of sand in their eyes, have sought by all means to break it so that they may once again practice genocide against the Kampuchean people. However, the experience which the Kampuchean people have gained in the course of their history of struggle has only strengthened their will and their confidence in the KPRP's correct leadership. General Secretary Heng Samrin has said: So long as the palm trees still grow in Kampuchea and the Mekong River still flows, the relations of friendship between Kampuchea and Vietnam will last forever like the Ural Mountains.

Over the past 3 years and more, the friendship, solidarity and close cooperation between Kampuchea and Vietnam have been constantly consolidated on the basis of mutual interest and for the sake of the Kampuchea-Vietnam-Laos alliance, and have been strongly supported by the Soviet Union, the socialist community and progressive opinion the world over.

The strategic Kampuchea-Vietnam alliance is a determining factor for the victory of the revolution in the two countries. The two peoples undertake to consolidate their ties of friendship, solidarity and cooperation in all fields and to consolidate the revolutionary gains, national independence and socialist construction in their fatherlands.

The Kampuchean party, people and armed forces are determined to hold high the banner of patriotism, to maintain good relations with the fraternal socialist countries and progressive peoples in the world, and to consolidate the relations of solidarity and cooperation between Kampuchea and Vietnam so as to achieve the common objective of independence, freedom, peace and prosperity, and to contribute to the defense of stability and peace in Southeast Asia and the rest of the world, KAMPUCHEA concluded.

DECREE ISSUED ON IMPLEMENTING REGULATIONS

BK231533 Vientiane Domestic Service in Lao 0000 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Decree No 2 of the LPRP Central Committee, the Supreme People's Council Standing Committee and the Council of Ministers of the LPDR concerning the intensification of control and verification of the implementation of resolutions and instructions of the party and state -- dated 16 February]

[Text] The LPDR has entered the second phase of the 5-year period of its independent development and has recorded firm achievements on this path. Positive achievements have merged from all strata of social life in the economic, educational, cultural and public health fields and in the establishment of the state management and a new economic system. A document of political significance, which has been approved in conformity with the line and policies of the LPRP, is Decree No 408 dated 27 November 1980 of the LPDR Council of Ministers pertaining to the basic lines for economic and social development of the LPDR for 1981-85.

The development tasks for continual national progress, laid down in the programs on the distribution of new, modern and basic technical knowledge to all economic and basic construction sectors, on pushing the agricultural work to advance rapidly and on the improvement of the people's living conditions should draw the constant attention to all heads of ministries, departments, divisions, administrative committees, factories, plants, construction sites, cooperatives, various party organizations and trade unions.

Nevertheless, these tasks cannot be effectively implemented if they are not thoroughly improved and modified, and if each branch of the state and economic apparatuses fails to fulfill its duties correctly and clearly, to resolutely oppose conservatism, red-tapism, bureaucracy and localism, to reveal one's weak points, to oppose indifferent attitudes toward the working people's requirements, and to eliminate those conspiring and sympathizing with the capitalist and reactionary sectors and those distorting party lines and policies.

The various mesures taken to oppose bureaucratic tendencies and other weak points and shortcomings in the affairs of the state and economic apparatuses have produced certain results. Efforts to turn the national economy into a planned economy and the utilization of economic instruments such as prices, prices of processed products, profits and credits have been further improved. In implementing their work, various management organizations have increasingly practiced criticism and self-criticism and have achieved some good results in observing, evaluating and summing up as scheduled the work and activities of various economic branches and other sectors. If compared with the overall tasks of the country, however, such achievements are merely initial ones in the heavy task of improving state apparatuses which are still working in a bureaucratic manner, thus achieving limited results. These apparatuses are not yet paying enough attention to their work and still lack the spirit of enthusiasm and real objectives.

The serious shortcomings of the apparatuses in carrying out work is that they have not been properly organized with regard to controlling the implementation of party and state resolutions and instructions. Lenin wrote: Accounting and controlling labor quantity and the distribution of products constitute the true nature of socialist transformation. It can then be said that the political domination by the proletarian class has been established and ensured -- Lenin's complete works, vol 35, pp 199-200.

In a people's democratic republic, the control work includes all the economic activities, social and cultural construction, production and distribution and state apparatuses' activities. The implementation of this control work is a primary responsibility of party and state apparatuses and of the heads of all economic management branches.

The organization of constant control work with the direct participation of the working people has become the goal of the present time and in an urgent task for improving and repairing the whole management system. The lack of such controlling work precludes the fruitful implementation of party and state resolutions and instructions and results in the serious violation of state regulations and discipline and in the ineffective utilization of our abilities and existing strength.

For this reason, the LPRP Central Committee, the Supreme People's Council Standing Committee and the Council of Ministers of the LPDR issue the following orders:

1. To establish party and state control committees of the LPRP Central Committee and the Council of Ministers of the LPDR;

2. To stipulate that the party and state control committees -- comprising chairmen and committee members who are leading cadres and generally trusted representatives of various trade unions, youth and women's organizations, the press, workers, cooperative members and intellectuals -- shall be approved by the LPRP Central Committee and the Council of Ministers. Cadres responsible for the apparatuses of the committees shall be approved by the LPRP Central Committee. All activities of the committees shall be carried out under the direct guidance of the LPRP Central Committee and the LPDR Council of Ministers;

3. In accordance with the second order of this decree, and in conformity with the implementation of this rule, the party committee and the administrative committee of a province must establish a provincial party and state control committee. All activities of this committee shall be carried out under the guidance of the provincial party committee and administrative committee and, at the same time, under the guidance of the higher party and state control committees respectively;

4. In order to verify the implementation of party and state resolutions and instructions at the district level, the establishment of a subcommittee attached to the district administrative committee is needed. This subcommittee should comprise the most active representatives of party organizations, trade unions, and women's and youth organizations currently working at various factories, plants and organizations. The subcommittee's activities shall be assigned by the first secretary of the party committee or by the vice chairman of the district administrative committee, who will be jointly and unanimously approved by the party committee and the administrative committee of the province;

5. The various factories, plants, cooperatives, offices and organizations, after receiving permission from the party and state committees of the LPRP Central Committee and the LPDR Council of Ministers, shall establish subcommittees of the workers, cooperative members, engineers, technicians and cooperative employees. The members of such a subcommittee shall be selected from the most active and respected cadres who are loyal to the cause of the socialist revolution;

6. The party and state control committees of the LPRP Central Committee and the LPDR Council of Ministers, the provincial party and state control committees and the various party and state control subcommittees shall be formed as one party and state control organization of the LPDR. The guidance given by the various party and state control committees at the higher level must be associated with the activeness, initiative and creativity of the various party and state control committees at the grassroots level, in conformity with each committee's responsibility for its assigned tasks. The activities of such committees shall be coordinated with the various organizations which are responsible for domestic affairs, the people's court and with the trade unions, women's organizations and the Lao People's Revolutionary Youth Union;

7. The activities of the party and state control committees of the LPRP Central Committee and the Council of Ministers and their subcommittees at the grassroots level are mainly aimed at supporting and assisting the party and the government in the task of controlling and verifying the implementation of the formulated resolutions and instructions, improving state rules and principles and the social order in all sectors of production and distribution and in the work of state management apparatuses.

These organizations must study and profoundly grasp the work conditions at the grassroots level, correctly evaluate the objective conditions of the implementation of economic and social development plans, pursue the possibility of more optimally utilizing material, labor and financial resources, and struggle to oppose actions that violate state regulations and procedures. The spirit and objective of control is to heighten the responsibility for assigned tasks. This does not constitute any interference in the role and actual practice of the heads of the various economic branches. This is to search for and eliminate in a timely manner weak points and shortcomings. Overall state interests must be maintained everywhere at all times.

The various party and state control organizations must positively promote new and progressive things, resolutely oppose all obstacles that may check socialist construction in our country and fulfill all tasks in accordance with party and state lines.

The decisive factor to enable the various party and state control organizations to function effectively is to mobilize the members of the Lao People's Revolutionary Youth Union, the masses who are outside the party, and women and youths to participate widely and positively in control work. Work must be done openly and extensively through meetings held by the working people, the press and radio stations. Attention must be paid to studying letters and complaints and suggestions from the people of the country.

The assignment of tasks to the party and state control organizations does not relieve the party and state economic organizations of their responsibility for controlling the implementation of party and state resolutions. On the contrary, it is necessary to heighten the responsibility of all leading party and state economic organizations from the highest to the lowest levels for the unconditional implementation of party and state resolutions and instructions.

REACTIONS TO SRV BORDER INCURSION, AN-26 CRASH

Prem Statement

BK231516 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] The prime minister has said that the clash between Thai border patrol policemen and a Vietnamese military force near the Thai-Kampuchean border, which resulted in the death of five Thai officials, does not signify a change in Vietnam's military strategy, it was just another Thai border violation -- an act which has been committed by the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin force many times in the past -- according to the prime minister. He explained the above to newsmen at Government House this morning to prevent any misunderstanding on the matter. The prime minister pointed out that clashes had taken place before due to violations of the Thai border by the Vietnamese-Heng Samrin forces.

Regarding Vietnamese aircraft spraying yellow rain in Thai territory, the prime minister said the medical science department is carrying out tests on the samples and no conclusion has been reached so far.

Asked about the Foreign Ministry's actions on border incidents, the prime minister said the Foreign Ministry and the Defense Ministry, particularly the Supreme Command, have had excellent coordination regarding border incidents. For example, the military invited the Foreign Ministry for consultations about the Vietnamese aircraft's violation of the Thai border.

The prime minister said a meeting of representatives of the three armed forces was held yesterday to discuss the general border situation. He said there is no major problem as far as the border is concerned and noted that the morale of officials on the border is good.

Report on Border Situation

[Excerpts] Government forces at the Thai-Kampuchean border have been put on alert because of stepped-up fighting between Vietnamese-backed Heng Samrin troops and Kampuchean resistance forces, Prime Minister Prem Tinsulanon said yesterday.

However, although there had been frequent hot pursuits and landing of stray shells in Thai territory recently, he did not think the situation was serious, General Prem said.

Meanwhile, field military sources reported yesterday that more Vietnamese reinforcements have moved close to the border area opposite Ban Saen Suk, about 17 kilometres to the south of Aranyaprathet, indicating an imminent major suppression push against Khmer Rouge forces entrenched on Phnum Malai Mountain.

The sources said an impending major battle was also indicated by activity by about 20,000 civilians under the Khmer Rouge, who are reportedly ready to cross over the border into Thailand as soon as heavy fighting erupts.

Fighting raged on late yesterday afternoon as Vietnamese forces mounted attacks against the Khmer Rouge strongholds near O Sam Por Bridge, about two kilometres from Ban Saen Suk.

Military sources said that the Vietnamese bid to capture the bridge was aimed at paving the way for the moving of heavy weaponry, such as tanks and artillery units, into the area for attacks on the Khmer resistance in Phnum Malai Mountain.

Meanwhile, the number of Thai villagers along the border who have moved for safety to the holding centre at Ban Thai Samat, about five kilometres north of Aranyaprathet, yesterday rose to 275.

More villagers are expected to move from Ban Wang Mon, Khok Sabaeng, Saen Suk and Khlong Namsai, all of which are situated near fighting on the other side of the border. Authorities have distributed rice and other necessities to the villagers at the centre.

Minister: Mycotoxin Not Found

[Excerpt] A yellowish dust allegedly dropped near the Thai border by Vietnamese aircraft during the Vietnamese troops incursion into Chantaburi Province last week was found to be non-poisonous, Public Health Minister Dr Sem Phringphuangkaeo said yesterday.

He said laboratory tests had shown that it was a mixture of crushed flowers and fungus and not the mycotoxin, "yellow rain," as officials earlier feared. He added that doctors had injected distilled water containing the dust into mice. After 15 hours the mice were still alive and showed no signed of damage to their nervous systems, according to a laboratory report.

Samples of the dust were collected this week from rooftops, trees and fields in Pong Nam Ron District. Tests are still being carried out on the substance.

Protest Lodged With UN

BK231141 Bangkok Voice of Free Asia in English 1100 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Message from Thailand's permanent representative to the United Nations to the UN secretary general -- date not given, read by announcer]

[Text] Excellency, persuant to my latest note on this matter, upon the instruction of my government I have the honor to bring to your attention the following incidents:

1. On 17 February 1982, Vietnamese troops numbering 40 men intruded 1 km into Thai territory at Ban Sap Tari, Pong Nam Ron District, Chanthaburi Province and attacked a Thai border patrol police unit of 15 men, causing 5 deaths on the Thai side. During the fighting 20 mortar shells were fired by the Vietnamese troops from Kampuchean territory into Thai territory, injuring one civilian.

2. On the same day during the said incident, another group of approximately 300 troops were deployed and stationed close to the scene of the fighting about 2 km inside Thai territory until early in the morning of 19 February.

These blatant violations of Thai sovereignty and territorial integrity once again demonstrate the total disregard of the principle of international law and the UN Charter. Thailand strongly condemns these systematic acts of aggression falgrantly committed by the Vietnamese forces and reaffirms its legitimate right of self-defense against all forms of foreign aggression.

POST Analysis

[From "Eye on Indochina" Column by the Chongkhadikit: "Keeping Hold of the Evidence" -- capitalized passages published in italics]

[Text] THIS ARTICLE SHOULD BE READ IN THE CONTEXT OF A DESIRE ON THE PART OF BOTH THAILAND AND VIETNAM FOR IMPROVED RELATIONS, WITH THAILAND WISHING TO SEE VIETNAM INDEPENDENT AND STRONG ENOUGH TO DEFEND ITS INDEPENDENCE AS IT HAS DONE IN THE PAST.

INVESTIGATION INTO THE ANTONOV-26 INCIDENT IS TO BE FAIR AND EXPEDITED, ACCORDING TO THAI OFFICIALS. IF THE AFFAIR IS CLEARED, THE PLANE AND THE CREW AND PASSENGERS WILL BE RETURNED TO VIETNAM WITHOUT FURTHER ADO.

THE ARTICLE DEALS WITH QUESTIONS THAT HAVE BEEN RAISED IN OFFICIAL MINDS CONCERNED WITH SECURITY AND NO JUDGMENT IS INTENDED UNTIL COMPLETION OF THE PROBE.

Why is the Vietnamese Antonov 26 not being returned immediately but instead causing a political-military furor?

High-ranking officials had previously stated that there would be no problem about returning the aircraft which crashlanded in Sa Kaeo District of Prachin Buri Province on February 11. First, the pilot's claim that he lost his way was not supported by the course charted by Royal Thai Air Force [RTAF] radar. Also, the compass was found in good working order. The Soviet-made plane headed directly for the Thai border and crashlanded about 50 kilometres inside the Thai border. Second, the other claim that the plane had run out of fuel did not hold water. There was oil in the tank.

It was also found that the pilot was far from an amateur or novice, having flown over 4,000 hours. He knew what he was doing: That is the way our RTAF investigators feel.

The plane, normally a transport, carried equipment showing that it had been converted for military purposes. There were a couple of switches -- one for opening a bomb bay to drop bombs and the other for dropping paratroops or parachuted goods. Most important strategic item was electronic surveillance equipment which RTAF inspectors say could be used for monitoring Thai troop communications, therefore identifying them, knowing their numbers and dispositions, and their operational plans. This and other installations have been dismantled from the plane for close examination.

Two of the 13 aboard the plane at the time of the crash are found to be conversant in Thai.

While our officials were at first to give the benefit of the doubt to the Vietnamese about their plane, the discovery of the various instruments and of the fact that two of the men aboard can speak Thai well have raised the questions of the mystery of the plane's mission.

After looking through the plane, an RTAF team dismissed the theory that the plane had accidentally strayed out of course and unintentionally crossed into Thai territorial air space. When radar showed the plane crossing over the frontier, two Air Force F-5Es scrambled to track it and force it down. However, the pilot of the plane must have noted the specks on his radar and knew his plane had been sighted. He flew down to a low altitude, it is surmised, causing the interceptors to miss him. However, as he emerged from the clouds he was seen by the fighters.

It is believed that the pilot then decided to stage a crash-landing to give an excuse of having lost course, flown into Thailand by mistake and run out of fuel.

The RTAF reported on its findings to the Supreme Command and the National Security Council. A decision was reached to hold the aircraft and transfer all aboard and alive for interrogation in Bangkok.

Questions to which answers have to be found include:

1. Why was it flying so deep into Thai territorial air space?

2. What was it specially trying to listen to with its electronic surveillance equipment?
3. Did it drop any troops into Thai territory to encircle hilly terrain on the border and move in on Khmer Rouge forces resisting an intensified offensive by Vietnamese and Heng Samrin forces?
4. Did it drop supplies to such troops?
5. Was it making a survey of the area for a future incursion into Thailand?
6. Was it making a "dry run" for some kind of operations within Thai territory?

All these and other questions are bothering the minds of authorities responsible for the security and defence of the country. Our officials are trying to get satisfactory answers before releasing the plane and its crew and passengers.

There is no intention on the part of the government to aggravate relations with Vietnam but it has a duty to perform on behalf of national security.

SITTHI DISCUSSES DHANABALAN VISIT, SON SANN

BK191631 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 19 Feb 82

[Text] Singaporean Foreign Minister Dhanabalan arrived this morning for talks with Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila on political settlement of the Kampuchean problem. The Singaporean minister, who is also chairman of the ASEAN Standing Committee, arrived in Thailand at 0940 today after he visited other ASEAN countries and held talks with their foreign ministers. At 1130 he met the Thai foreign minister at the Foreign Ministry. The two had lunch together and later held talks which lasted for about 2 hours. The Singaporean foreign minister left Thailand at 1630 today.

Foreign Minister Air Chief Marshal Sitthi Sawetsila reported to newsmen after his meeting with the Singaporean minister that Thailand is the last leg of the Singaporean foreign minister's ASEAN tour in order to hold talks with ASEAN foreign ministers on the settlement of the Kampuchean problem. During this meeting, the foreign minister said they discussed the new proposal of the Indochinese group of countries. ASEAN adopted an identical view, he said. The Thai foreign minister said there is nothing new in the latest proposal by the Indochinese countries. The problem is not between Thailand and Kampuchea, or between Thailand and Vietnam. If the Indochinese countries, especially Vietnam, really want to hold talks, why did they not agree to hold talks under the agreement put forward in New York? The ad hoc committee is already there. Why therefore have they picked on Thailand only for talks? The foreign minister said the Singaporean foreign minister also shares this view.

Asked whether Son Sann's reported refusal to attend the meeting in Beijing of the three Kampuchean resistance factions would be an obstacle to the move to form a coalition government in order to solve the Kampuchean problem, the foreign minister said it is up to the three Kampuchean factions to make their decision whether or not to attend the meeting. However, it would be good for them if they would agree to meet.

PRASONG DISCUSSES SECURITY THREATS, ARMED FORCES

Army Club Speech

BK221506 Bangkok Domestic Service in Thai 1300 GMT 22 Feb 82

[Excerpts] Speaking at a gathering of members of the security club which was held at the army club today, National Security Council Secretary General Squadron Leader Prason Sunsiri said Thailand and ASEAN countries have done their best to restore peace and security with respect to the Kampuchean problem.

If their efforts yield no satisfactory progress, they may just sit back and let whoever created the problem try to solve it on their own, and in the meantime if any event should affect Thailand's sovereignty and territorial integrity we will retaliate vigorously in accordance with our plans. His speech was on the topic: external situations which affect national security.

Prasong said the external situation which currently is affecting our national security most seriously is the situation in Indochina, particularly the fighting in Kampuchea which is becoming more vigorous of late. As Thailand is the frontline state closest to the situation, military and political effects of the situation will affect it most easily and readily. The Soviet Union is exploiting the conflicts and suspicion existing in this region. Its assistance to Vietnam since 1979 has totaled some $2 billion in the form of various arms and equipments, including AN-26 transport planes. A total of 45 AN-26 planes were given to Vietnam for operations in Kampuchea. These planes have been modified for bombing and aerial support missions. This same kind of plane has violated Thai airspace on several occasions and one crashed in Prachin Buri recently.

Prasong said Soviet-Vietnamese relations are based on their mutual interests which support each other both in the short and long-term. Soviet assistance to Vietnam will be continuous and might increase in the future. Prasong said Vietnam is pawning its future with the Soviet Union, whose long term interest in this region is self-serving, not that of Vietnam.

NATION REVIEW Report

[Text] Vietnam has helped Laos expand its armed forces to three divisions for the first time -- boosting Lao forces from 50,000 to 67,000 strong, a senior Thai official reported yesterday.

National Security Council Secretary General squadron leader Prasong Sunsiri also disclosed that the Soviet Union had assisted Laos in the setting up of a electronic intelligence station and satellite communications station at Muang Pone Hong, about 51 km north of Vientiane.

"Also, the Soviet Union has helped Laos build a new 150-kilowatt radio broadcasting station," the NSC chief said.

Squadron leader Prasong was speaking yesterday on "external factors affecting national security of Thailand" at the army club for members of the security production club. He said that the general economic situation in Laos remains grim.

"Whether Thai-Lao relations would improve or not would be determined to a significant measure by the Thai-Vietnamese relations and also depending on the situation in Kampuchea since Vietnam and Laos cooperate very closely on the question of Kampuchea -- so much so that Lao soldiers have been sent to help Vietnamese troops fight against the Khmer resistance groups in Kampuchea at the moment," Prasong added.

Laos, he said, has allowed about five divisions of Vietnamese troops in that country. At the same time, direct Soviet influence and role in Laos had been growing.

Prasong pointed out that Moscow and Vientiane had signed a five-year aid agreement (1981-1985) covering Russian assistance to Laos in the economic, scientific and technical fields.

SRV REQUESTS ACCESS TO CRASHED AN-26 CREW

BK231232 Hanoi International Service in Thai 1130 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] On the afternoon of 23 February, Dang San, acting director general of the Consular Department of the SRV foreign minister, had a meeting with the Thai charge d'affaires in Hanoi and delivered a message from the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry to the Thai Foreign Ministry on the following matter:

On 11 February a Vietnamese military transport aircraft -- an AN-26 with serial number 264 -- with 13 Vietnamese citizens aboard left Pochentong airport in Phnom Penh, Kampuchea, to return to Vietnam. Due to faulty communications and direction guidance equipment, bad weather and inability to make contact with ground facilities, however, it got lost and had to land in Thai territory. The persons on board are now being detained by the Thai authorities.

On 12 February the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry reported this matter to the Thai Embassy in Hanoi and asked that the Thai Government allow the early return of the aircraft and the persons on board to Vietnam. The Vietnamese Embassy had already contacted the Thai Foreign Ministry on this matter, but to date it has not received a response. The Vietnamese ambassador has not had access to the victims of the incident. The Vietnamese Government proposes that the Thai Government please return the aircraft and crew to the Vietnamese side. In the meantime, the Thai side is asked to provide conveniences to the Vietnamese ambassador for him to have access to the victims, including both the healthy and wounded ones.

QUAN DOI NHAN DAN Editorial

[Excerpt of QUAN DOI NHAN DAN 23 February editorial: "Celebrate the Glorious Historic Day of the Heroic Soviet Army and Navy"]

[Text] Fighting for a common noble goal and ideal throughout the past few decades, the peoples and troops of both the Soviet Union and Vietnam have been closely attached to each other on the basis of proletarian internationalism and have helped each other wholeheartedly, building up the great Soviet-Vietnamese friendship.

Our people and their armed forces are very proud of the militant solidarity tempered and tested in the long course of revolutionary struggle in the interests of the people of each country, of world peace and of the security of nations. The Vietnamese people and armed forces enthusiastically and highly value the comprehensive cooperation with the Soviet Union and its wholehearted assistance to Vietnam, considering it a very important factor ensuring victory in building socialism and defending the socialist Vietnamese fatherland.

We shall always remember the great deeds of the heroic Soviet people and armed forces with respect to our Vietnamese people's revolutionary cause during the two resistance struggles against the French conlonialists and the U.S. imperialists for national salvation as well as during the present struggle against China's expansionism and big-nation hegemony, which is aimed at annexing Vietnam and Indochina in order to pave the way for its expansion into Southeast Asia.

We were deeply moved and grateful when respected and beloved General Secretary Brezhnev asserted: Solidarity with and assistance to Vietnam is a dictate of the Soviet people's hearts and minds.

With the signing of the Soviet-Vietnamese treaty of freindship and cooperation and with the relations of comprehensive cooperation on an ever-larger scale and in all domains, a new great universe has actually opened to the peoples and armies of our two countries.

The recent successful visit of Marshal Ogarkov, the Soviet Armed Forces chief of the General Staff, is another brilliant manifestation of the friendship and militant solidarity between the peoples and armies of the Soviet Union and Vietnam.

NHAN DAN MARKS 26TH CPSU CONGRESS ANNIVERSARY

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 23 -- The achievements recorded by the Soviet people in the first year of the 11th Five-Year Plan eloquently proved the great vitality of the Soviet society, which has reached the peak of developed socialism and is building the material and technical foundations of communism, says NHAN DAN in an editorial today. The paper, marking the first anniversary of the 26th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, says the congress not only was an important event in the life of the Soviet people but also exerted a far-reaching influence on the historic advance of the whole mankind.

After reviewing the all-round economic achievements recorded last year, NHAN DAN says that through the results of their labour the Soviet people have affirmed the correctness of economic strategy laid down by the 26th congress: "To ensure the further improvement of the Soviet people's well-being on the basis of the steady and constructive development of the national economy, accelerated scientific and technological progress, the transition of the economy to the road of intensive development, the more rational utilization of the country's production potential, the maximum saving of all types of resources, and an improvement in the quality of work".

The paper continues: "While steadily advancing in building the material and technical basis of communism in their country, the Communist Party, the government and the people of the Soviet Union have made untiring efforts and have recorded many important achievements in the struggle to defend and consolidate peace. The mainstay of peace on our planet today is the Soviet Union and other countries in the socialist community. To prevent the disaster of a nuclear war and check the arms race have been and remain the highest objectives of the Leninist foreign policy of the CPSU and Soviet Government. The peace programme for the 1980's adopted at the 26th CPSU Congress includes combined measures to limit and reduce the number of nuclear missiles and strategic weapons of other kinds, purify the international atmosphere and safeguard and consolidate peace. Resolved to implement this peace program, the CPSU and the Soviet Government in 1981 put forth many new initiatives. The fulfilment of the foreign policy laid down by the 26th congress found an important expression in the visit made to the Federal Republic of Germany by L.I. Brezhnev, general secretary of the CPSU Central Committee and president of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR, the proposals he made during that visit once again showed the intention of the Soviet Union to curb the nuclear arms race in Europe.

"Last year the world situation grew more complicated due to U.S.-led imperialism's policy of arms race, conflicts and military supremacy. Many flashpoints appeared in the world, but the Soviet Union's calmness and sense of responsibility have greatly contributed to defending the fruits of detente and have encouraged nations to push ahead their leading cause, the struggle for peace. In the eyes of progressive mankind the Soviet Union is always the great peace militant".

"The Vietnamese people," NHAN DAN SAYS, "greatly rejoice at the new success of the fraternal Soviet people. A year has gone by and the militant solidarity and close cooperation between the parties, governments and peoples of Vietnam and the Soviet Union have further developed. The talks in Moscow last September between L.I. Brezhnev and Le Duan were another important milestone in the warm Vietnamese-Soviet relations".

"The Vietnamese people admire the fraternal Soviet people. They firmly believe that under the zealous, clear-sighted leadership of the Communist Party, headed by esteemed Comrade L.I. Brezhnev, they will make still greater achievements in their advance towards communism," NHAN DAN concludes.

NHAN DAN HAILS VIETNAMESE-MONGOLIAN FRIENDSHIP

OW230819 Hanoi VNA in English 0659 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Text] Hanoi, VNA, February 23 -- The national paper NHAN DAN today expresses the Vietnamese people's joy over Mongolia's recent conferment of the Sukhe Bator Order on the three top leaders of Vietnam. The conferment, NHAN DAN says, is a manifestation of the profound sentiment of the Mongolian Government and people toward Vietnam and a high evaluation of the services of the three Vietnamese leaders, Communist Party General Secretary Le Duan, Council of State President Truong Chinh and Council of Ministers Chairman Pham Van Dong, in the cause of socialism and world peace and in the promotion of the militant friendship between the two countries.

The paper goes on: "Vietnam's revolutionary victories have been associated with the great support and assistance of the Soviet Union, Mongolia and other countries in the socialist community. During their national construction and defence, the Vietnamese people have enjoyed the sincere and profound solidarity and firm support and assistance based on socialist internationalism of the Mongolian party, government and people. The treaty of friendship and cooperation between Vietnam and Mongolia has been observed successfully for more than 20 years now, and their militant solidarity has become closer now that the two peoples are facing the same direct and dangerous enemy -- Chinese expansionism and hegemonism."

The paper expresses the Vietnamese people's most sincere gratitude to the People's Revolutionary [as received], the government and the fraternal people of Mongolia.

DELEGATION ATTENDS DEVELOPING COUNTRIES MEETING

[Text] Acting upon a suggestion of Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, on 22 February a consultative conference of developing countries opened at the Hall of Sciences in New Delhi. Prime Minister Gandhi attended the conference and delivered an opening speech. Participating in the conference were delegates of 44 countries from Asia, Africa, Latin America and even Europe, including delegations from Vietnam, Cuba and Nicaragua.

The Vietnamese delegation was led by Vice Foreign Minister Hoang Bich Son. The consultations in New Delhi are aimed at two main goals: first, to exchange views on the outstanding problems between developing countries and developed industrial countries and on this basis promote global negotiations in order to advance toward establishing a new just and equal economic order; second, to discuss measures to strengthen cooperation among developing countries further in order to develop collective self-reliance thereby creating necessary stimuli for implementation of the program of economic cooperation among nonaligned countries which was approved at the sixth summit conference of nonaligned countries in Havana, Cuba, and the program of action on economic cooperation among developing countries which was approved in Caracas, Venezuela, in 1981.

The conferees also exchanged views on measures to intensify the development of food production and agriculture in order to have a perfect system of food reserves and to develop all sources of new energy and substitutes and financial sources in order to advance toward establishing separate funds for the developing countries and intensifying cooperation in the industrial, scientific, technical and commercial fields.

Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi delivered an opening speech. She presented nine specific suggestions for consideration at the conference in order to make international cooperation more effective.

PROBLEMS NOTED IN 10TH-MONTH GRAIN PROCUREMENT

BK141516 Hanoi Domestic Service in Vietnamese 0400 GMT 14 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary: "Concentrate all Capabilities on Quickly Procuring 10th-Month Grain in Former Nam Bo Provinces"]

[Text] The successful implementation of the plan for procuring 10th-month grain in the former Nam Bo provinces is a very important part of our efforts to achieve a nationwide grain balance in 1982. However, the results achieved in procuring 10th-month grain there have so far remained at too low a level as compared with the plan norms. As of 25 January, 1982, the Mekong Delta provinces had completed only 17.9 percent of the plan. Such slow progress was due to many reasons, especially due to crop conditions. The onset of drought early in the planting season made the rice crop ripen at an uneven rate and almost 2 months behind schedule. By the Lunar New Year, the various provinces had only finished reaping the rice crop on approximately one half of the cultivated area during the busiest days of the year.

Judging from the actual crop conditions, we can see that although the results already achieved in grain procurement are meager, we have ample capabilities and conditions for meeting the requirements. Following the Lunar New Year holidays, the 10th-month rice has entered its main ripening stage and peasants have been busy reaping it. The winter-spring rice is expected to yield a bumber crop in the coming months. Meanwhile, all localities have just successfully concluded party congresses at all levels and are enthusiastically emulating in scoring achievements to greet the forthcoming fifth party congress. A joyful and enthusiastic atmosphere permeats the spiritual life of the peasantry in the former Nam Bo provinces, whose inhabitants are noted for their tradition of carrying out revolutionary activities under party leadership and for their untiring struggle for the fatherland's independence and freedom. Obviously we now have the additional opportunity and advantages. It is necessary to exploit them and concentrate all our efforts on procuring grain in excess of all the plan norms assigned by the central government.

In this season's procurement norm structure, tax paddy, debt paddy and paddy recovered as per two-way contracts will account for 70-80 percent of the total amount of grain to be delivered to state granaries. This is an advantage. By meeting these three norms, we will basically fulfill the plan. Therefore, all localities must satisfactorily carry out political and ideological education work toward cadres, party members and peasants so that everyone will be fully aware of their obligation toward the state and scrupulously honor it.

The situation of the grain market in the former Nam Bo provinces is now developing in a fairly complex manner. Some bad elements among the peasants and traders are hoarding paddy and waiting for higher prices or for the release of valuable commodities by the state before they will sell it or exchange it for state commodities at huge profits. Meanwhile, a number of organs and units from distant municipalities and provinces, driven by their own limited and immediate interests, have flooded rice-growing areas with money and commodities in their efforts to purchase paddy at prices higher than those established -- thus having a negative psychological impact on the peasants; upsetting prices; placing false strains on the grain supply in the key rice-growing areas, especially the Mekong Delta provinces; preventing the peasants from fulfilling their obligations; and hampering efforts to procure grain for the state. This situation calls for efforts by us to control the market more satisfactorily and at the same time, to effectively purchase grain at agreed-upon prices in a different manner. Such effective methods for purchasing paddy or rice at agreed-upon prices such as those employed by Hau Giang Province -- using the services of women's unions and small merchants -- by An Giang and Dong Thap Provinces -- enlisting the help of private rice mills -- by Tien Giang Province -- giving out contracts to production units -- and other localities should be studied and put into practice.

To stabilize the market the state does not pay higher prices; its policy is to satisfactorily combine the cash purchase of goods with the sale of state commodities at prices that can make up for the differences between state purchase prices and market prices, thus offsetting the losses sustained by peasants in selling paddy to the state. We must be very flexible in using cash and commodities for grain procurement purposes. Agricultural supplies, which are not yet available in great quantities, should be used first of all to support production in the winter-spring and summer-fall crop seasons; and their distribution must be covered under two-way contracts with peasants. Construction materials and industrial goods which are in short supply and in great demand on the market should not be exchanged for paddy in a liberal manner; they should rather be sold to peasants for the purpose of offsetting the purchase prices paid by the state for paddy. Meanwhile, ordinary commodities should not necessarily be exchanged for paddy or sold to offset prices; they may be widely sold for cash, which will in turn be used to purchase paddy at agreed-upon prices and so forth.

As the fifth party congress approaches, to greet it in the most realistic and significant manner possible all localities in former Nam Bo provinces should take advantage of this opportunity and favorable conditions to intensify guidance, satisfactorily carry out political and ideological indoctrination, fully prepare money, commodities and material-technical bases, and organize with urgency and creativity all activities related to grain procurement and storage so as to successfully fulfill and overfulfill the grain procurement plans for this year's 10th-month rice season and the coming winter-spring crop season.

NHAN DAN ASSESSES NAM BO AGRICULTURAL CHANGES

[Text] Since the conference held by the VCP Central Committee Secretariat in October 1981 to review agricultural transformation work, the Nam Bo provinces have actively implemented various VCP Central Committee directives and resolutions on agricultural transformation. Kien Giang, Cuu Long, Minh Hai, Ben Tre and Tien Giang launched movements to consolidate and broaden production solidarity teams in conjunction with adjusting land ownership and consolidating and developing production collectives and agricultural cooperatives. Long An, Song Be, Dong Nai, Ben Tre, Tay Ninh and Dong Thap sent cadres to various districts to disseminate the directives and resolutions issued by the VCP Central Committee and those issued by their provincial party committees regarding agricultural transformation. Kien Giang and Cuu Long in particular expanded their agricultural transformation movements down to the village level.

The Nam Bo provinces also sent out groups of cadres to undergo training and to visit and learn from the experiences of a number of production collectives which had satisfactorily applied the system of product contracts with laborers in Hau Giang Province and Ho Chi Minh City.

To date, the Nam Bo provinces have established 176 cooperatives and 4,513 production collectives, incorporating 199,469 peasant families and 191,411 hectares of land into the collective production system. A total of 750 production collectives and 22 cooperatives have applied end-product contracts with labor groups and laborers.

However, the development of the agricultural transformation movement is still slow and limited. In the last month of 1981, only 54 new production collectives were set up, mostly in Ben Tre and Hau Giang. Some provinces have failed to pay due attention to consolidating and developing production solidarity teams. Little has been done to train cadres and to consolidate and strengthen the organs charged with guiding agricultural transformation work in provinces and districts. Many sectors and levels related to agricultural transformation have not formulated concrete plans to participate in this work satisfactorily in keeping with the spirit of the VCP Central Committee directives.

SUZUKI, MIYAZAWA HIT NEW U.S. TRADE PRESSURES

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 25 (KYODO) -- Japan Thursday strongly hit back at renewed U.S. pressure for Tokyo's additional trade concessions, with a government spokesman charging that Americans know little of the free world's trade rules. U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige warned a visiting Japanese trade delegation in Washington Wednesday that trade protectionism in the U.S. could not be checked unless Japan did "something dramatic" to allow foreign goods greater access to its market.

In an unusually strong-worded rebuttal, the government spokesman, Chief Cabinet Secretary Kiichi Miyazawa, said, "Those who know of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) would highly appreciate Japan's efforts" to open its market. "I doubt if Americans know of the GATT rules," he told a press conference, adding "that's why they have introduced reciprocity legislation that could send us back to the 1930's."

Referring to Tokyo's decision to implement the tariff cuts two years ahead of schedule and lift or ease 67 nontariff trade barriers, Miyazawa declared "No other country could do as much." He also said Japan had made tremendous efforts to have the number of import items subject to quantitative quotas reduced from more than 100 to 27. Some countries keep similar restrictions on more items than Japan and some European countries impose discriminatory import curbs on certain Japanese goods in violation of the GATT rules, he said.

Miyazawa said Japan ought to be cautious about some Americans "who began to use the word 'unfair' in describing Japan." Pointing out that an increasing number of American journalists and congressmen are now using the word, he said: "I think in many cases this is based on misunderstanding...but you must be cautious when the man in the street begins to call Japan unfair."

Reactions of other Japanese officials to Baldrige's warning were one of bewilderment. Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki said he found U.S. demands too vague. "Unless they (Americans) talk in specific terms, you can't tell whether (their position) is really harsh or flexible," he told newsmen. "If we are asked to do this or that, then we can study and reply 'we can do this but cannot do that.'"

Suzuki said later at a separate press conference that his economic ministers will meet possibly early next week to discuss what additional steps Japan can take. "If there should be something we can do, I think we must put it into action right away," he said. The prime minister added that he plans to see Masumi Esaki, head of the trade delegation now visiting Washington, as soon as he returns Saturday.

Replying to an opposition member in the Diet (parliament), Economic Planning Agency Director General Toshio Komoto said the government will study what it can do further to alleviate trade friction with the U.S. and Europe. Komoto said that the present trade friction has stemmed from the lower purchasing power of the Americans caused by the global economic slump. While saying that revitalization of the world economy as a whole must come first to resolve the trade friction, Komoto said, "We will discuss what measures the government should take after a briefing from the Esaki delegation."

NHK TELEVISION INTERVIEWS SUZUKI ON U.S. TIES

OW240457 Tokyo NHK Television Network in Japanese 1300 GMT 23 Feb 82

[Interview with Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki, entitled "Japan-U.S. Relations and Japanese Foreign Policy," by economic commentator Isamu Miyazaki and NHK announcer Korehito Obama -- recorded; date and place of recording not indicated]

[Text] [Obama] We appreciate your taking time out for this interview today despite your busy schedule. We would like to ask you some questions, mainly on Japan-U.S. relations. Lately, the increasing U.S. trade deficit with Japan has generated moves within the U.S. Congress to introduce reciprocity bills. First of all, what is your view of these moves?

[Suzuki] I am very much concerned with the reported moves, mainly in Congress, concerning the introduction of reciprocity bills. Although I believe bills of this kind do not necessarily reflect the same circumstances, if these bills are designed to seek a trade balance in a retrogressive way, or check imports from Japan for securing a balance of U.S. international payments, I do not think they will contribute in the least to a constructive resolution of the situation. If one is not careful, retaliatory actions will be repeated in the name of reciprocity. If this is the case, the situation will become rather aggravated and worsen. I am worried about this.

On the other hand, Japan is responding to liberalization proposals by the United States and the European Community [EC] with an open mind. It takes a forward-looking attitude, with a resolve to improve whatever there is to be improved. We therefore want the United States to come up with specific proposals on improvements, not on such protectionist, or, rather, reciprocal, bills. It was to that end that we created the OTO [Office of Trade Ombudsmen] system.

[Miyazaki] The text of the reported bills contain such phrases as "mutually" and "in consideration of the other party's position." People might easily accept them as seeking cooperation and, therefore, as good bills. Originally, reciprocity was the word used to express the concept of an expanding free trade under which, for example, a nation would reciprocate when its trade partner reduced tariffs. In the latest case that emerged, however, reciprocity is used in such a way as you mentioned, that is, if it is not handled with care, it may lead to a curtailed balance, although I believe that the people involved are acting in good faith.

Therefore, as you said, efforts should be made to remove any misunderstanding between the two nations and to keep those bills from being formally introduced in Congress. About the trade frictions of this nature, what is your view of their background?

[Suzuki] I feel that in the final analysis, it boils down to this: Both the United States and the EC countries today find themselves in an unprecedentedly difficult economic situation. Economic difficulties are the root cause of the frictions as we see them today. With after-effects of the second oil crunch still lingering on, economic growth continues to be sluggish. Unemployment has increased tremendously. I understand that more than 10 million people are jobless in EC countries, and 9.5 million in the United States. Under these circumstances, if imports from Japan and other countries should continue to increase, it might very well generate a critical feeling among their peoples that we are exporting unemployment to the United States or the EC nations. That kind of feeling is possibly behind the present trade frictions.

Such frictions are not limited to Japan-U.S. relations; very severe frictions exist between the United States and the EC nations. For example, the former discontinued the trigger price system on steel imports from the latter and initiated legal action on dumping charges. Meanwhile, in agricultural products, EC nations are even subsidizing farmers to encourage their exports to the United States. Frictions thus became quite severe, didn't they? On the other hand, EC countries imposed tariff surcharges on synthetic fiber imported from the United States. All these reflect economic difficulties in the countries concerned. Therefore, the advanced industrial nations -- Japan, the United States and European countries -- are required to cooperate to refloat the world economy. They must make efforts in that direction; otherwise problems cannot be solved.

[Miyazaki] I agree. The two oil crunches in the 1970's caused high prices and economic setbacks. As a result, as you said, all industrial countries are suffering from a slack market. A common phenomenon in all these countries, particularly in Japan, is the fact that the respective domestic demand is extremely low. The growth rate is approximately 1 percent at best. These factors make it difficult for a nation to absorb its labor force.

Statistics indicate that the unemployment rate failed to go down from the previous year's level in any of these countries. This would give one an idea about the extent of economic difficulty. In the United States and European nations, unemployment is higher among young people in particular, a factor giving rise to social or political problems and adding to tensions.

On the other hand, while prices continue to remain high in the United States and European nations, although they have come down more or less recently, consumers in those countries would naturally demand goods less expensive and of better quality. Accordingly, one may say that there indeed exists an environment for imports from Japan to increase. This makes the situation even more difficult to deal with. As you said, the basic problem lies in the fact that the world has not yet completely recovered from the oil shocks.

[Obama] Economic difficulty has become common place; nevertheless, Japan appears to be better off. In this situation, it may be that those reciprocity bills represent an attempt to divert the people's attention by shouting "Japan is the culprit." Well, I do understand that you, as prime minister, are in no position to say that, and that if you did, there would be unnecessary repercussions abroad. So, please take it as my monologue. I hear that the U.S. Congress will hold comprehensive hearings on Japan in March. What is your intention with the planned hearings?

[Suzuki] I feel that, as Mr Obama has just said, a serious misunderstanding about Japan or a lack of information about this country is one of the major factors causing the present situation. In this connection, Ambassador to the United States Okawara has been very active in meeting members of the U.S. Congress and visiting American cities to make speeches and explain about Japan. Furthermore, we have just sent the Esaki mission to the United States as part of our parliamentary diplomacy for the same purpose. The Foreign Ministry has various plans to promote dialogue and contact at all levels and in all areas. It is our plan to seek your cooperation, too, Mr Miyazaki.

I feel that deepening mutual contact and understanding is the way to resolve or ease the current trade frictions. I must note that it is an economic issue we are trying to deal with; inasmuch as Japan-U.S. economic relations involve as much as $60 billion in trade every year and have grown so extensive in scale, economic frictions, to some extent and on some specific items, should be expected as a natural phenomenon. One important thing, however, is that economic frictions must not be turned into political issues. I feel that economic issues should be dealt with as economic issues and as quickly as possible.

It was from this point of view that we moved forward by 2 years the tariff cutback as agreed in the GATT Tokyo round of negotiations. Japan took this action on its own, regardless of the position of other countries. In addition, respecting the question of import barriers -- although I have never really thought that our market is as closed as is claimed -- I found it necessary for Japan to show its positive posture toward an open market and trade liberalization. To that end, we made a review and, as a result, took correctional measures on 67 items. Here again, some people say that "after all that publicity, you came up with measures on only 67 items. They are not more than the tip of the iceberg, aren't they?" They are wrong. For example, speaking of manufactured goods remaining subject to heavy tariffs, Japan has 5 items on the list against 6 on the U.S. list and 27 on the French list. Thus, in manufactured goods, too, Japan is ahead of other countries in liberalization. Nevertheless, imbalances have occurred between Japan and the United States and between Japan and the EC as we see them today. Therefore, we did an item-by-item check and turned up 67 items. That is how we did it.

Moreover, thinking that what had been done was not sufficient, that further complaints could come from the United States and the EC, I created, within the Cabinet, what could be called the headquarters for trade liberalization and dealing with complaints, with its contact points in ministries concerned -- the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of Health and Welfare, the Ministry of Agriculture and Forestry, and so forth. We want the United States and the EC to let us know what complaints they have. We will try to take correctional measures everywhere such measures can be taken and everywhere misunderstanding is found to exist.

[Miyazaki] I frequently visit foreign countries myself and often meet people accusing Japan of keeping its market closed to foreign imports on the basis of an outdated image. It seems to me that the Japanese are not very good at the PR business. Once they embark on a PR program, they become so eager about it, often committing excesses. [laughter] What is required to help solve problems is a steady and reasonable amount of PR, conducted daily; however, such measures as you just mentioned -- measures involving heavy tariff items still remaining on the lists, items under restriction, and the Tokyo round tariffs -- and the motivations behind those measures, as you have expressed, have little effect on understanding among the general public. You also mentioned the office for dealing with foreign complaints that began business, but foreign firms are reportedly reluctant to present their complaints to the office. Under these circumstances, I think it is necessary to promote PR activities in many different forms.

[Obama] I have one question in that connection. The growing U.S. demand on Japan is said to have something to do with the fact that this is the election year in the United States -- off-year elections. Members of the U.S. Congress are exposed to various demands from constituents; they would convey such demands to Japan -- even in an exaggerated form. With this fact in mind, Japan will be better off if it speaks up on whatever if should, I think. What is your comment?

[Suzuki] I agree absolutely. I would like to point out one thing, however. While Japan is a small country made up of islands, with every part of it, from Hokkaido to Okinawa, under a homogenous system, the United States is such a big country, with each state wielding big power and virtually acting independently. Systems are different between states. What is said by a senator or congressman from one state would not necessarily represent the view of all Americans.

Farm products such as wheat and feed grain represent the mainstay of the economy in some states while other states are known for their cattle and beef production. The latter would complain that Japan has failed to liberalize beef imports, saying it should buy more American beef. However, Japan purchases as much as 12 million tons of feed grain from the United States, along with 4 million tons of soybeans and another 4 million tons of wheat. It must be noted here that if beef imports were increased sharply, it would erase the nation's need for importing feed grain. I wonder if the American farmers involved have ever thought about this point. I believe they lack state-to-state coordination. As I said, if we increase imports of American beef, it would become unnecessary for us to import feed grain. This would affect farmers in the feed grain zone. It is quite natural, in this election year, for congressional representatives from Detroit to focus on the automobile issue while those from the cattle states on the beef issue and those from California on the citrus fruit issue. One cannot deny that the upcoming off-year election is one of the factors spurring on U.S. public opinion over the trade friction issue.

[Miyazaki] Well, that may be the case. However, it should be noted that under democracy members of Congress are naturally expected to represent the views of their constituents.

What you said may be one aspect of the present situation, but there is another aspect; namely, the United States, finding the Japanese attitude irritating, complains that since Japan is an economic giant now, it should fulfill its international obligations. So, with respect to the election-year problem it might be appropriate for Japan to try to enter the ring for a match, but I find it more important for this country to fulfill its obligations.

[Suzuki] As you pointed out, Mr Miyazaki, our nation needs to deeply reexamine itself on that point and deepen its awareness of its international obligations and role. In the 1960's, or around 1955, Japan was still in the postwar rehabilitation period during which industries — including manufacturing industry, international trade as well as agriculture -- were heavily subsidized under protectionist policies. As the economy grew, government subsidies were virtually eliminated, except in some sectors of agriculture.

Our industries are on their own now; technological innovations have been carried out to increase productivity. As its economic power has grown, the nation is now able to produce goods of better quality at lower prices.

In the 1960's Japan was still a fledgling nation with its Gross National Product accounting for only 3 percent of that of the world -- it has now become approximately 10 percent. In those days, it was treated as a child -- and protected in a way. On the world economy train, it was offered a special seat. Now, it has come of age and has grown into a big young member of the world with its Gross National Product accounting for 10 percent of that of the world. Should it continue to behave like a spoiled child and try to hang on to its seat on the train instead of offering it to others, it will naturally offend other people on the train. Other people will very well demand some concessions from it.

Therefore, we need to reexamine ourselves on this point and be ready to make international contributions and play an international role commensurate with the nation's capabilities and conditions. We should realize this point.

[Miyazaki] The United States and the other countries are asking what Japan is willing to do then. For instance, take the question of trade liberaliztion. They have brought up the question of farm products as you have just mentioned and have asked us to make efforts in the services sector including banking services. I think a considerable degree of misunderstanding lies herein. Therefore, I think it is important that, before bringing up these issues, we should exchange information on our respective circumstances and try to understand them at all levels.

[Suzuki] Of late, they have been taking up overall problems and not just limiting themselves to separate items such as automobiles, color TV sets and the like. They say that in the banking and other services sector, Japan is rather closed and very discriminatory as compared with the United States. But I think there is a striking difference between the banking administration system in the United States and in Japan. The U.S. Federal Government has virtually no power to regulate bank administration; this authority is entrusted almost entirely to the state governments. Of those states, some authorize the establishment of bank branch offices, and some do not. So, even in the United States the circumstances vary depending on the state. However, in Japan, American banks are authorized to set up branches in exactly the same manner as Japanese banks are. They are not discriminated against. The Bank of America and other banks having branches in Japan are happy, saying that they are allowed to engage in very good business. If they want to buy up a Japanese bank -- since they are not prohibited from doing so -- I think they can if they can reach agreement with the bank concerned. The difference is only in the system, and Japan is according American banks exactly the same treatment as that accorded to Japanese bankers -- even in setting up branch offices. Therefore, there is by no means any discriminatory treatment. In this respect, I feel that the system is not thoroughly understood.

[Miyazaki] As you said earlier, Japan has liberalized almost all of its industrial products, and I believe that talks on farm products have progressed at various levels as well. But there is no denying that there is a lag in the services sector, the banking question included. One of the signs is the high interest rate, about which I would like to question you. Even some of those Americans supposedly well-acquainted with Japanese affairs argue that Japan is intentionally depreciating the yen's value and promoting exports.

Of course, I do not believe this is true, and I think there is a gap in understanding. In connection with this question, U.S. interest rates seem to be very high and other countries are annoyed by them. In the case of Japan, the government is pursuing a policy of reducing the trade surplus to an appropriate level by expanding domestic demand as much as possible. But I get the impression that this is not going very well.

[Suzuki] The high U.S. interest rates is a problem area, about which Japan and the EC are making strong representations to the United States. As I said earlier, Japan lowered tariff rates 2 years ahead of schedule. As a result, Japan is expected to lose approximately $20 billion in tariff revenues. However, the effect of the fluctuations in the yen's exchange rate is greater than that of the lowered tariff rates. The Japanese yen depreciates because of the high interest rate policy of the United States. As a result, even if we lower tariff rates, Japan's imports will not increase because of the cheap value of the yen. On the other hand, exports will increase and the trade imbalance will widen further. Fortunately, prices in Japan are said to be the most stable in the world. However, if this situation continues, if the yen continues to depreciate, prices will inevitably go up.

[Miyazaki] Indeed, prices have risen a little.

[Suzuki] Yes. Therefore, we are worried about these aspects. The government is pursuing a policy of helping to attain economic growth and business recovery through domestic demand. What we find most difficult and restraining in doing so is that, even though we want to run finance more flexibly, we cannot do so under the restraints of high U.S. interest rates.

[Miyazaki] Since the U.S. Government is making a desperate effort to curb inflation, it is not impossible to understand why, to some extent, the United States sets high interest rates. However, as you said, since this high interest rate policy annoys not only Japan but also other countries, will you be taking up this matter in your talks with leaders of other countries, at the summit meeting in June?

[Suzuki] In that sense, I think that the summit scheduled for June in Versailles, France, will be a very important meeting. As I mentioned earlier, the world's economy as a whole is now sluggish and, therefore, unless we do something to activate it and improve business, it will be impossible to resolve the so-called trade war or trade friction. I pay particular attention to the plight of the developing countries, the Third World countries, hit harder by economic difficulties than the advanced countries.

They have more than $500 billion in accumulative liabilities and yet they are unable to pay even the interest thereon. Therefore, I think they are in a catastrophic situation indeed. It is a situation which cannot be left alone because of employment, inflation the worsened international payments situation and other factors. In this sense, advanced countries should cooperate with each other in helping reactivate their economies and, simultaneously, render economic cooperation to the Third World. By doing so I think that they will be helping to improve the world economy as a whole. Therefore, I think that the forthcoming Versailles summit should discuss these questions. In this sense, President Mitterrand of France, who is to chair the summit, is scheduled to visit Japan in April. Since Mr Mitterrand should have views about the Versailles summit, I plan to discuss these things with him in Tokyo.

[Obama] Are you planning to discuss the high U.S. interest rate policy with him, maybe like agreeing to ask U.S. President Reagan how long he is going to keep this policy?

[Suzuki] Well, this issue has been raised quite often -- at the OECD meetings, at the finance ministers' meeting of advanced nations and also the Ottawa summit. As Mr Miyazaki pointed out, the United States is now devoting all its energy to overcoming inflation before anything else. Fortunately, the effort is slowly paying off. The previous two-digit inflation has now been arrested to a one-digit level. Washington asks us to wait a little longer. They say they are adopting a high interest policy, not because they want to, but because they have no alternative. They ask us to understand this and wait a little longer. On our part, we are hoping that the United States will succeed in its economic policy, largely because the recovery of the U.S. economy is, after all, conducive to the world economy as a whole.

[Miyazaki] I certainly hope the summit will hold that kind of constructive debate. Incidentally, there is another important meeting in June. It is the Second UN General Assembly Special Session on Disarmament. I understand that you, Mr Prime Minister, are planning to attend. At present, the people of the world, including the Japanese, are very much concerned with the highly escalated nuclear arms race between the United States and the Soviet Union. Since the countries concerned have reason to increase their military potential, I think that this is a very difficult problem. What plans do you have, Mr Prime Minister, in attending the General Assembly on Disarmament?

[Suzuki] I do not need to say here and now that Japan is the only country in the world victimized by A-bomb attacks. For the peace of the world, the nation is appealing for nuclear arms reduction and for the eventual abolition of nuclear arms. At the last disarmament session, the then-Japanese Foreign Minister Sonoda delivered a very impressive speech. In accordance with this national desire, I plan to frankly address myself to the UN General Assembly about the Japanese people's call for disarmament, and nuclear disarmament in particular. Although I have been discussing economic problems, in order to promote world peace and also to save the present worldwide economic plight, I think it is necessary to arrest, at a low level, the vast sum of funds being funneled into armament, by means of disarmament and arms control, and to spend the reserves arising therefrom effectively for the reactivation of the Third World or the world economy as a whole.

Otherwise, I think that the world cannot be saved, nor can a truly lasting peace be achieved. I plan to appeal about these things. In this connection, I was very much enlightened by reading a book by Mr Miyazaki, "Economics of Disarmament" [Gunshuku-no Keizaigaku"].

[Obama] I certainly agree completely with what you say, Mr Prime Minister. But, despite the so-called zero ceiling set for compiling the budget for the next fiscal year, only defense spending stands out as being increased by as much as 7.75 percent. This looks a little contradictory to what you are now saying. How can you explain this?

[Suzuki] I have been repeatedly explaining about that at the Diet. Anyway, Japan has its Constitution and basic defense policy, which calls for the independent defense of the country. To this end, it is necessary to maintain the minimum necessary level of self-defensive power or defense potential. In 1976, the government worked out what is called an outline of the defense plan. The outline calls mainly for a buildup of basic defense power. We will maintain the minimum necessary level of self-defensive potential, but we will not become such a military power as to pose a threat to neighboring countries and we will abide by the three nonnuclear principles to the bitter end. We are making earnest efforts to build up the minimum necessary level of defense power for our self-defense within this framework. The fiscal year 1982 budget was formulated as part of this.

We are making earnest efforts at the level of 6.5 percent last year and 7.75 percent this year. I believe it is an undeniable reality that world peace is being kept at present on the basis of military equilibrium between East and West. While maintaining that equilibrium, we should reduce armament to lower levels on a gradual basis by means of disarmament and arms control. In this regard, I am appealing to the nation to understand that Japan needs to maintain the minimum necessary level of defense power.

[Obama] You said earlier that economic problems are one thing and political issues are another, and you do not want to make economic problems a political issue. You said that you do not want to make a political issue out of economic friction with the United States or to link it with the defense issue. I hope you will stick to that basic position to the bitter end.

[Suzuki] When I met with President Reagan and other U.S. Government leaders during my visit to Washington last May, President Reagan told me that he has no intention of linking the defense issue with the economic and other issues. He said that he will not make any specific requests about the defense budget. He said the United States only hopes that Japan will handle it independently, from a position commensurate with its national strength and situation. That was clear.

[Miyazaki] I think that both Japan and the United States should resolve their economic friction, even at the cost of a little sacrifice on both sides. As you mentioned, Mr Prime Minister, trade between Japan and the United States amounts to more than $60 billion and new merchandise is constantly appearing. Therefore, I think that it is impossible to totally dispense with friction for good. There will be this sort of situation every so often. As there is the term "crisis control", there should be "friction control" -- controlling the situation so as not to let friction be created and, if it is created, doing something to prevent it from spreading to other sectors. I think that it will be dangerous if such friction is linked to the defense question or political issues.

[Suzuki] In that sense, the so-called Japan-U.S. Wiseman's group, in which Mr Ushiba and other gentlemen were involved, has been presenting its frank recommendatons to both the Japanese and U.S. Governments. I think that the group was of great significance and the Japanese Government is striving along lines recommended by the group. I think that it is now necessary to hold exchanges, contacts or dialogues at all levels -- not limited to those gentlemen only. I think it would be good for controlling the present Japan-U.S. friction to try to resolve issues at an early stage on the basis of mutual understanding obtained through those efforts.

[Obama] Mr Prime Minister, our time is running out. What outlook do you have toward a reduction of exports, or business recovery in Japan for that matter, as one of the means of resolving the trade friction issue?

[Suzuki] It is very difficult for only Japan to score full marks while the rest of the world is faced with such terrible economic difficulties. Let us take monetary policy for example. We already talked about it, but we should resort to every conceivable means to promote economic growth and stability, no matter how little effect it may produce. Price stability, for instance, is most important. By promoting price stability, it is possible to expect an increase in individual consumption. We also want to increase private investment by every means. To this end, the government is extending various considerations respecting the taxation system and other areas to small and medium businesses. In dealing with the housing question as well, we want to make various efforts.

[Obama] That is the area we very much want to hear about, but to our regret, our time has run out. Please allow me to finish this interview here and now. Thank you very much.

[Suzuki] Thank you.

ABE, SAKURAUCHI, KOMOTO ON U.S. TRADE DEMANDS

OW250951 Tokyo KYODO in English 0939 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Tokyo, Feb 25 (KYODO) — International Trade and Industry Minister Shintaro Abe said Thursday the U.S. Congress is likely to pass some of the so-called "reciprocity" bills relating to Japan-U.S. trade. Abe made the prediction at a session of the House of Representatives Budget Committee to back up his opinion that Japan-U.S. trade friction has become very serious.

Foreign Minister Yoshio Sakurauchi also told the lower house committee that Japan must meet U.S. demands conveyed to Masumi Esaki, chairman of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party's Special Committee on Internatonal Economic Relations visiting the United States, or through diplomatic channels, calling for opening up the Japanese market to U.S. farm products and service industries.

Sakurauchi stressed he would make efforts to meet the U.S. demands, in keeping with domestic circumstances, before his visit to the U.S. scheduled for late March.

In expressing his opinions about the severe U.S. demands, Sakurauchi also complained of insufficient American appreciation of Japanese measures to ease or lift 67 nontariff barriers and other efforts to make the market more accessible to foreign countries. He said he will place top priority on securing U.S. understanding of these efforts when he visits the U.S.

Toshio Komoto, director general of the Economic Planning Agency, also said the government would decide on a Japanese response to the U.S. demands as soon as possible.

The ministers were answering questions raised by Socialist Tsunetoshi Tanaka on trade frictions.

KCNA: SR-71 AROUSES 'INDIGNATION AND RESENTMENT'

SK241550 Pyongyang KCNA in English 1542 GMT 24 Feb 82

[Text] Pyongyang, February 24 (KCNA) -- The U.S. imperialist aggressors frantic with manoeuvres to provoke a new war in Korea again infiltrated the "SR-71" high-speed, high-altitude reconnaissance plane into the sky above Kangnyong Peninsula, South Hwanghae Province, and the sky above the military boundary east of Kosong, Kwangwon Province, of our country, from 12 hours 38 minutes to 56 minutes on February 24 to commit espionage acts against the DPRK.

These days the U.S. imperialist warmaniacs are ever more frantically committing espionage acts against the DPRK, while holding the frantic war exercises codenamed "Team Spirit 1982" against our people and continuously bringing a large armed force of aggression into South Korea. Espionage acts committed by spy planes of the U.S. imperialist warmaniacs in the eastern and western airspace of our country numbered as many as 16 this month alone.

Such repeated military provocations of the U.S. imperialist aggressors are arousing vehement indignation and resentment among the entire Korean people and the officers and men of the People's Army.

The U.S. imperialist warmaniacs must not miscalculate the self-restraint of our people for the country's peace and peaceful reunification. If the U.S. imperialist aggressors do not want to repeat a bitter setback they sustained in their past military provocations against our people, they must immediately stop all hostile acts against our country.

RPR STATEMENT SUPPORTS 100-MAN JOINT CONFERENCE

SK241342 (Clandestine) Voice of the Revolutionary Party for Reunification in Korean to South Korea 0300 GMT 24 Feb 82

["Text" of RPR spokesman 23 February statement -- read by announcer]

[Text] On 10 February the North's Committee for the Peaceful Reunification of the Fatherland [CPRF] issued an important program, proposing to politicians in the North, South and abroad the convocation of a 100-man joint conference. According to the proposal, the 100-man joint conference is to assume as its fundamental mission the discussion of all proposals for national reunification, including the proposal for founding the Democratic Confederal Republic of Koryo [DCRK], and matters aimed at realizing collaboration and exchanges between the North and South.

Recognizing the North's proposal for the convocation of a joint conference of politicians as another patriotic proposal for promoting the independent and peaceful reunification of the fatherland, RPR members and masses of all strata are now showing sympathy with this and daily raising their voices, insisting that the 100-man joint conference be convened.

The RPR warmly welcomes, positively agrees with and supports the proposal for the convocation of the 100-man joint conference, which embodies the wide-ranging policies for North-South political negotiations previously set forth by Marshal Kim Il-song -- the lodestar of national reunification and the great sun of the nation -- and reflects the unanimous will of the nation.

Reunification of our country can only be achieved through a broad North-South dialogue free of interference by outside forces, on the basis of peaceful, democratic principles and grand national unity. We consider the North's proposal for convening the 100-man joint conference as a very realistic approach which will remove grave obstacles placed on the road to reunification and provide afresh a roundtable conference for national reunification.

As is widely known, owing to the Chon Tu-hwan ring, which is strongly protected and controlled by the U.S. imperialists, confrontation between the North and South has reached an extreme stage, the barrier to national division has become stronger and the nation's reunification -- the paramount national aspiration -- is becoming more distant.

Assuming it as his life-long mission to turn South Korea into a colony and military base for the U.S. imperialists, the dirty pro-U.S. flunkeyst traitor Chon Tu-hwan clique has been frenzied in fabricating two Koreas, not a unified state. It is the traitor Chon Tu-hwan who took the lead in building a steel-reinforced concrete wall, higher than an obstacle constituting a border ought to be, along the truce line which divides the nation's territory and in turning South Korea into the chaos of a fascist colonial military dictatorship. It is also the traitor Chon Tu-hwan who has arrested, imprisoned, tried and punished en mass democratic personages of all strata and patriotic students demanding democracy and reunification and who has committed, without the slightest compunction, unpardonable crimes in murdering his fellow countrymen for fascism and division.

Turning a deaf ear to the proposal for the founding of the DCRK, the only great program for national salvation and the nation's reunification, this dirty splittist-maniac mocked the people by propounding a fantastic proposal for talks between the supreme authorities. And, after signing a criminal document for permanently stationing in South Korea the U.S. troops which are the fundamental obstacle to the nation's reunification, he has persistently insisted on simultaneous admission of the North and South into the United Nations.

The traitorous Chon Tu-hwan clique, which has been babbling about the theory of achieving reunification in the 2000's while running along the road to permanent division, again recently prattled about a proposal for reunification. This stems from its vicious intention to escape isolation at home and abroad and to reverse the situation which is favorably developing towards peaceful reunification.

For this reason, the Chon Tu-hwan ring's 12 January proposal is pointless, not worth discussing and impossible to realize. Also, the provisional agreement on basic relations between the North and South and the 20-point model projects -- which, the clique claimed, have given concrete shape to the provisional agreement -- are nothing but plagiarism of part of what the North has long proposed and which the clique has laced with aroma of reunification. The false character of the clique's proposal for reunification is indisputably proven in the South Korea-U.S. joint war exercise codenamed "Team Spirit 1982" which is being frenziedly staged at this moment.

The treacherous Chon Tu-hwan clique is a vicious, antinational, antireunification group incompatible with national reunification. What a shameless mockery of the people and unpardonable insult to reunification for such a group of people who have turned against their own country to babble about reunification and dialogue.

North-South dialogue should be conducted in a sincere and productive manner under the leadership of reunification-oriented forces, not splittists. The Chon Tu-hwan ring -- a group of murderous thieves who brutally slaughtered thousands of fellow countrymen and traitors who have sought perpetual division under the slogan of sham reunification and who have long been strongly denounced by all fellow countrymen -- should be unconditionally excluded from those who are authorized to participate in discussions of reunification. There is no room at the dialogue site for reunification for existing opposition parties -- spurious political parties -- because they act as the military dictator's tool with the political license issued by traitor Chon Tu-hwan.

To open the door of dialogue between the North and South to discuss the reunification question under circumstances in South Korea in which, plagued by fascism, there is no political party, there is no other way than to have renowned politicians from the North and South sit together and talk with one another just as North Korea has proposed. North Korea's recent proposal for convening a 100-man joint meeting is the only way to make it possible to hold a dialogue for reunification. This proposal is a very timely and rational step for negotiations.

South Korean politicians should actively respond to North Korea's generous proposal for convening a 100-man joint meeting, appreciate its conscientious and wise effort and contribute to creating an atmosphere of communication between the North and South and of national unity and to providing a broad arena to discuss the measures for the fatherland's reunification and the question of coalition between the North and South.

Politicians of various circles, including democrats who have followed the course of national salvation with a desire for reunification, should actively participate in a 100-man joint meeting, overcoming all difficulties. This is the surest way for contributing to the fatherland's reunification and discharging their duty as politicians. We urge them to strive with dedication and a single desire for national salvation to achieve North Korea's proposal for convening a 100-man joint meeting.

The Chon Tu-hwan ring should not prevent the convocation of the 100-man joint meeting but unconditionally help South Korean politicians participate in the round-table meeting of the North and South. Without remedying the dark situation in South Korea, in which the most basic rights of the people and freedom to discuss reunification are systematically violated, we cannot expect any meeting of politicians from the North and South and overseas for democratic discussions of reunification.

To help convene the 100-man joint meeting and to bring this meeting to a successful conclusion, our party demands that the fascist tyrant rule and rackets to provoke a war of invasion against the North end; that freedom of the press, publication, assembly, demonstration and organization and the conditions for peaceful reunification be guaranteed; that all the political prisoners who have been illegally imprisoned be released unconditionally; and that an atmosphere of grand national unity be created. In particular, we demand that the Revolutionary Party for Reunification which protects and represents the people of all walks of life, including the masses of workers and peasants, be legalized and that the free activities of all progressive and democratic political parties and social organizations be guaranteed. The treacherous bunch's criminal maneuvers to make national division permanent and fabricate two Koreas through collusion with foreign forces should be stopped. The frantic rackets of the "Team Spirit 1982" exercise, which runs counter to the country's peaceful reunification, should be unconditionally and immediately canceled.

The 100-man joint meeting of politicians from the North and South and overseas will be convened not automatically but only through the process of a nation-saving struggle to repel the persistent challenge of the splittist forces at home and abroad. With the people of all walks of life, our party will vigorously and continuously struggle to oppose the fascist military dictatorship and eliminate obstacles to reunification. It will make every effort to convene the 100-man joint meeting.

The glorious day when we end the tragedy of the division of the national territory and the people and all fellow countrymen of the North and South lead a happy life on a unified, beautiful 3,000-ri land will surely arrive.

NODONG SINMUN ARTICLE STRESSES PARTY LEADERSHIP

SK230336 Pyongyang Domestic Service in Korean 2235 GMT 22 Feb 82

[NODONG SINMUN 23 February special article: "Upholding the Party's Leadership Is an Honorable Mission of the People's Government [chongkwon]"]

[Text] The elections of deputies to the Seventh Supreme People's Assembly [SPA] is conducted in a period during which the status of our republic has been incomparably enhanced and new upsurges have been effected in all fields of the revolution and construction. The upcoming elections are of particular significance because they will unfold a brighter prospect for the future of the republic struggling to complete the revolutionary cause of chuche, following the leadership of our party. For this reason, all working people are unanimously joining the work to conduct the elections with more enhanced political zeal than ever before.

The government of the republic is the revolutionary government of chuche founded by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and led by our party. A most important problem in strengthening and developing our people's government as a powerful weapon to implement the party's revolutionary cause and a revolutionary government of chuche type is to thoroughly strengthen the party leadership over the people's government.

Firmly ensuring party leadership over the people's government is a demand in building the people's government. The people's government is the protector of the freedom and rights of the people and is a powerful weapon of the revolution and construction. In order to smoothly carry out its role and mission, the people's government should maintain a working class position and the principles of the revolution and devotedly serve the people. This can be realized only when the party leadership is guaranteed.

The party is the supreme organization which plays a leading and guiding role in the proletarian dictatorship. Therefore, the existence of the people's government and its strengthening and development cannot be contemplated, and implementation of the historic cause for the construction of a socialist and communist society cannot be contemplated separately from the party leadership.

Our people's government, which took as its lofty mission to uphold and follow the party leadership from the first day of its foundation, has traversed a glorious road of victory by infinitely and faithfully following the party's leadership. The party leadership has been a decisive guarantee for enabling our people's government to be strengthened and developed into an invincible revolutionary government with powerful combat capability and vitality. Today we are faced with an arduous but honorable task of actively accelerating the struggle for the complete victory of socialism, for the achievement of the fatherland reunification and for the completion of the chuche cause.

This reality urgently demands that our party's leadership be firmly exercised in all activities of the people's government. Our people's government's upholding and following of the party leadership is a fundamental demand arising in the brilliant implementation of the historic task to model society after the chuche idea. The respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song taught: Modeling society after the chuche idea is the ultimate goal of the government of the republic. The government of the republic should strive to occupy the ideological and material fortresses of communism by fostering all members of society into communistic human beings of chuche type and thoroughly reforming society in conformity with the demands of the chuche idea.

The struggle to model society after the chuche idea is a struggle to build socialism and communism in our country. It is also a sacred struggle to provide all of the people with an independent and creative life. Modeling society after the chuche idea is a great mission of the government of our republic. For the people's government, struggling to thoroughly safeguard the interests of the working masses and to provide the people with a more affluent and civilized life, there is no more lofty mission than to struggle to model society after the chuche idea. The task to model society after the chuche idea in our country has traversed a proud road of victory under the leadership of our party. This task can be completed only under the party leadership.

Today our party has extensively pointed out various principle problems arising in modeling the whole society after the chuche idea and ways for solving them, and it has led this rewarding struggle. All of our party's lines and policies, including the policy to vigorously carry out the three revolutions of ideology, technology and culture in all fields of socialist construction, the policy to independently and creatively solve all problems arising in the revolution and construction in our own way and the policy to thoroughly implement the mass line in the guidance and management of the socialist economy, all of these clearly elucidate revolutionary ways making possible constant progressing the revolution and construction and rapid implementation of the cause of modeling the whole society on the chuche idea.

These policies of our party are the guidelines and principles which the people's government should resolutely and constantly maintain in its activities. For our people's government, which adopts the modeling of the whole society on the chuche idea as its struggle goal, to uphold and follow the party leadership means to thoroughly embody and implement the line and policies set forth by the party center in all sectors of the revolution and construction.

When the organs of power at all levels firmly grasp the line and policies of the party and thoroughly implement them, constant advance and progress can be made in all fields of human and social reformation and economic and cultural construction. By doing so, the organs of power should bring the application of the chuche idea in all fields of politics, economy and culture into full bloom and accelerate the historic advance toward communism.

For our people's government to follow the party's leadership constitutes a firm guarantee for enhancing the government's function and role. Enhancing the function and role of the people's government is of significance in accelerating the revolution and construction.

Our people's government is a powerful weapon for socialist construction. Only when the function and role of the people's government are constantly enhanced can the vast and difficult task of socialist construction be successfully carried out and the genuine freedom and rights of the popular masses be firmly guaranteed. These functions and roles of the people's government cannot be enhanced automatically. They can be constantly enhanced only under the correct leadership of the party.

The KWP is the organizer and guide of all victories of the government of the republic. Our party has clearly clarified basic problems arising in enhancing the function and role of the people's government at every stage of the development of the revolution. These basic problems include not only the struggle goal of the people's government and its activities but also the work method and work style that all functionaries of the organs of power should follow.

The function and role of our people's government, enhanced through the process of working in accord with the intent of our party, which upholds the party leadership, are discharged in this process. When it advances, firmly grasping all policies presented by our party, the people's government can not only effect constant upsurges in the tasks of thoroughly carrying out the Taean work system and of accelerating the 10 prospective goals and four-point nature remolding program and in other tasks in socialist economic construction but also rapidly develop work in the fields of science and technology and of literature and art.

Today our people's government has become a genuine revolutionary government enjoying the absolute support and trust of the people, an independent socialist government which is vigorously supporting the revolutionary cause of our people. This is precisely because of the firm leadership of the party. This is a source of honor and pride for our people's government.

In upholding and following the party leadership, it is important that our people's government thoroughly embody in its activities the plan and intent of the party center. The party of the working class is the general staff of the revolution leading the cause of socialism and communism to victory.

Revolutionary struggle is organized and led by the party. Therefore, it is a noble struggle for the advance of the revolution for the people's government to implement the party's plans and ideas. Our party has advanced a lofty goal for the chuche-ization of society and is implementing the great plan for socialist construction. The lines for reaching the 10 long-range goals of socialist economic construction and the chuche-ization, modernization and scientization of the national economy and the plan for the intellectualization of society -- all these magnificent master plans of our party reflect the party center's intent and determination to further strengthen the political and economic might of the country and to realize the aspirations and ideals of our people.

The functionaries of the organs of power must be fully aware that their activities constitute an honorable struggle to implement the party's plans and intent. They must devote themselves to this end. In doing this, they must see to it that our party's plans and intent bear fruit in the revolution and construction.

Defending and further glorifying the achievements of our party are also fundamental issues which our people's government must always deal with to uphold the party's leadership. During the historic course of leading the revolutionary cause of the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song, our party has won great achievements which will never perish. The achievements which our party has won in the revolution and construction — party and state construction, military construction, and economic and cultural construction — are a precious foundation for the acceleration of our revolutionary cause and the achievement of the endless prosperity of the country and the nation.

Our people's government is a chuche-type government which has inherited the tradition of the anti-Japanese revolution and a revolutionary government defending the precious gains, including the socialist system, which our people have won with their blood. Otherwise, our people's government could not accomplish its mission.

Today, the U.S. imperialists and their stooge, the Chon Tu-hwan fascist clique, are going on a rampage with bloodshot eyes to disturb our socialist construction and obliterate our revolutionary cause. Under these circumstances, our people's government must further enhance its role as a tool of class struggle and proletarian dictatorship in order to defend the achievements of our party and the revolutionary gains from the aggressive maneuvers of the enemy and to persistently advance socialist construction.

The government of our republic is a powerful tool of the revolution. It was founded by the respected and beloved leader Comrade Kim Il-song and is led by our party.

By upholding the leadership of our party, functionaries and working people will strengthen the government of the republic as firm as a rock and will complete the glorious chuche revolutionary cause.

MINISTER PROPOSES UNIFICATION TALKS FOR MARCH

SK250144 Seoul Domestic Service in Korean 0100 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Statement by ROK National Unification Minister Son Chae-sik issued in Seoul on 25 February -- recorded]

[Text] The proposal for national harmony and democratic unification made by President Chon Tu-hwan is practical, rational and comprehensive. All the people have fully welcomed it, and it has won broad international support. Proposing the formation of a national consultative meeting for unification to formulate a unification constitution and the signing of an interim agreement on basic relations between the North and South to normalize these relations, President Chon Tu-hwan has urged the North Korean side to respond to talks between the supreme leaders of the North and South Korean authorities to achieve this end.

Making it clear that this proposal tolerates the North Korean side's proposal, our government on 1 February proposed to promptly carry out 20 pilot projects to achieve exchanges, cooperation, social opening-up and alleviation of tension between the North and South. Demanding in a stereotyped manner the withdrawal of the U.S. forces from South Korea and the abandonment of an anticommunist policy, however, the North Korean side has refused to accept our rational proposal for unification. Moreover, the North Korean side on 10 February proposed the convocation of a joint meeting of politicians from the North and South. It arbitrarily selected and announced a list of 50 figures from our side for participation in this meeting. Since then, it has absurdly said our government authorities, parties and social organizations are not qualified to become partners at a dialogue.

The North Korean side's act of picking quarrels over the qualifications of the opposite side while referring to dialogue and arbitrarily announcing a list of figures from the opposite side at dialogue is unprecedentedly brazen and senseless. This is intolerable no matter what excuse may be used.

It is outrageous for the North Korean communists to pick a quarrel over our political order while maintaining one-man dictatorial rule for 37 years, trying to achieve hereditary inheritance of this power and mercilessly suppressing en masse the 1.8 million North Korean fellow countrymen.

Strongly urging the North Korean side to correct this wrong attitude at the earliest possible date with a single desire to expedite the fatherland's peaceful unification -- the people's desire -- through dialogue between the North and South, we make the following proposal:

First, North and South Korea will hold a meeting of high-ranking officials of North and South Korea in Seoul, in Pyongyang or at Panmunjom in March.

Second, this meeting will discuss the holding of talks between the supreme leaders of the North and South Korean authorities to convene a national unification consultative meeting to formulate a unification constitution and to normalize relations between North and South Korea, matters concerning the meeting the North Korean side proposed on 10 February 1982 and various issues which should be settled quickly to achieve exchanges, cooperation, social opening-up and alleviation of tension between North and South Korea.

Third, the delegation to the meeting of high-ranking officials of North and South Korea will be composed of nine representatives each with a ministerial-level official as senior representative. The list of the representatives of our side to this meeting is as follows: senior representative -- No Tae-u, second minister for state affairs; deputy representative -- Kim Sang-kuk, deputy secretary-general of the Advisory Council for Peaceful Unification Policy; representatives -- National Assemblyman Yi Yong-il from the Democratic Justice Party, National Assemblyman Kim Mun-sok from the Democratic Korea Party, National Assemblyman Kang Ki-pil from the Korea National Party, National Assemblyman Paek Chan-ki from the Democratic Socialist Party, Yi Hong-ku, consultant to the Advisory Council for Peaceful Unification Policy, Kim Tae-so, consultant to the Advisory Council on State Affairs, and Song Han-ok, director of the Secretariat for South-North Dialogue, National Unification Board. We hope the North Korean side will respond affirmatively to this proposal.

GOVERNMENT WILLING TO 'CONSIDER' N-S RAILWAY

SK250333 Seoul YONHAP in English 0325 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Text] Seoul, Feb. 25 (YONHAP) -- South Korean Unification Minister Son Chae-sik said Thursday that South Korea was willing to "positively consider" a possible formal proposal by North Korea for the construction of a railroad linking the two Koreas. Speaking at a news conference, where he proposed an inter-Korean high-level meeting, Son said, "We would give positive consideration if North Korea makes a formal proposal for the construction of a railroad linking South and North Korea, because we ourselves proposed the creation of a road linking Seoul and Pyongyang as one of the 20 pilot projects to be undertaken by South and North Korea."

Son was commenting on a statement made last week by a spokesman for the North Korean National Railroad Office that North Korea had once proposed the construction of a railroad linking the two Koreas. Son said, however, he did not regard the statement as a "formal proposal."

CHUNGANG ILBO VIEWS U.S. CALL FOR RECIPROCITY

[Editorial: "U.S. Move Toward Reciprocity"]

[Excerpts] The United States and West European countries are in full swing to counter Japan's unilateral export offensive. To cite one such example, the U.S. Congress took the initiative in legalizing various restrictions: The bills for reciprocity legislation, submitted one after another by members of Congress, are part of it.

With nothing tangible to show in its efforts to ease the friction arising in trade with Japan, the U.S. Congress finally began to move. In addition, Brock, head of the Office of the United States Special Trade Representative [STR], gave strong testimony at the public hearings of the U.S. House of Representatives on 11 February. In his testimony, Brock said that the U.S. Government plans to include service and investment under presidential prerogative by further strengthening Article No. 301 of the 1974 trade law, which regulates unfair trade acts by foreign countries.

Such an attitude on the part of the STR shows the ever-stiffening trade policy of the United States, in connection with the U.S. Congress' proposal for recoprocity legislation. The primary target of reprocity laws is Japan, which recorded a trade surplus of $18 billion in trade with the United States in 1981. However, we cannot but view that such a strong countermeasure against trade deficits by the United States will effect us. This is because the bills for reciprocity laws are likely to develop into protectionism.

If the United States demands reciprocal market conditions from other countries, our country will not be exempted. If the U.S. pressure to the Japanese market brings about tangible results, it could function to our advantage. This could lead to broadening the markets in the advanced countries and, therefore, to invigorating the world trade as a whole.

What is important is that international trade conditions no longer allow a specif country to launch an excessive trade offensive against other countries. Countries should pursue mutual benefit through fair trade.

Since our country has been recording chronic trade deficits, we need not worry about the immediate effect on us of such moves. However, there is a possibility of a dispute if excessive exports continue to accumulate with a specific country. The United States' reprocity laws are, in fact, closely connected with us.

UNEN SUPPORTS MPRP FOREIGN POLICY INITIATIVE

OW250357 Ulaanbaatar MONTSAME in Russian 1450 GMT 18 Feb 82

[Text] Ulaanbaatar, 18 Feb (MONTSAME) -- The struggle to develop good-neighbor relations between states, to strengthen mutual understanding and trust between peoples, to eliminate hotbeds of tension and conflict and to peacefully settle contentions of issues is the MPR's consistent foreign policy line. This stems from the peace-loving essence of the foreign policy of the MPRP and the socialist state, writes the newspaper UNEN in its editorial.

As an Asian socialist state, the paper notes, the MPR pays particular attention to the problem of peace and security in this region, where, through the aggressive actions by forces hostile to the cause of detente, peace and social progress, a complex and tense situation remains. At present the imperialists together with the hegemonic power crudely interfere in the internal affairs of Asian countries and increasingly step up their aggressive actions. The ever-growing political and military contacts among Washington, Beijing and Tokyo deeply contradict the basic interests of the region's peoples. Under these conditions the only constructive step which would lead to the establishment of peace and calm on this continent is the beginning of a broad political dialogue among Asian countries, and the settlement of contentious issues through peaceful means. Guided by this the MPR came forward with a proposal to draw up and conclude a convention on mutual nonaggression and nonuse of force in relations between states in Asia and the Pacific region, the paper notes.

This important foreign policy initiative put forward by the 18th MPRP Congress with the aim of consolidating peace and security in Asia, UNEN further writes, finds clear understanding and ardent support from states and peoples in the region. In particular, this is illustrated by the responses to the messages of peace directed by Y. Tsedenbal to the heads of states and governments of 50 foreign countries including the permanent member-states of the UN Security Council and also to the leaders of the UN and a number of other international organizations. All this serves as a convincing confirmation of the steady growth of the MPR's international prestige.

The MPR's proposal to convene a conference of Asian and the Pacific countries with the aim of drawing up a convention is of exceptional significance and is destined to become the beginning of a broad political dialogue among the states of the region. Its successful implementation, the paper notes, would be an important step in the cause of stirring up and mobilizing the Asian peoples' efforts directed at the establishment of lasting peace in this region. In this way People's Mongolia makes its contribution to the cause of the struggle being consistently waged by the Soviet Union, other fraternal socialist countries and peace-loving forces for the realization of the peace program put forward by the 26th CPSU Congress, UNEN concludes.

General Secretary Heng Samrin spoke of the development of Kampuchea thanks to the efforts of the Kampuchean people and to moral and material aid from Vietnam, Laos, the USSR and other countries in the socialist community. Issues Joint Communique

[Lao-Kampuchean joint communique issued following the Lao Front for National Construction delegation's 16-22 February visit to Kampuchea -- dated 22 February]

[Text] In response to an invitation of the Kampuchean United Front for National Construction and Defense [KUFNCD] National Council, a delegation of the Lao Front for National Construction [LFNC] Central Committee led by Comrade Faidang Lobaliayao, vice president of the Supreme People's Council [SPC] and of the LFNC Central Committee, paid a friendship visit to the PRK from 16 to 22 February 1982.

During the visit, the LFNC Central Committee delegation called on President Heng Samrin, general secretary of the KPRP Central Committee, president of the State Council and honorary president of the KUFNCD National Council. It attended a grand meeting held by the Phnom Penh residents to welcome the delegation's visit. The delegation then visited the historical Angkor Wat -- a precious heritage of Kampuchean civilization -- in Siem Reap Province. It also visited the detention camps and graveyards of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique who had committed genocidal crimes. It visited some economic, social and cultural establishments, museums and the orphans' center in Phnom Penh capital.

In addition, a delegation of the KUFNCD National Council led by Comrade Chan Ven, secretary general of the PRK State Council and vice president of the KUFNCD National Council, held a meeting with the LFNC Central Committee delegation led by Comrade Faidang Lobaliayao, vice president of the SPC and of their development in national defense and building and in the consolidation of friendly relations and all-round cooperation between the two peoples and fronts. At the same time, the two sides discussed various problems of common interest concerning the international situation and the situation in Southeast Asia. The meeting proceeded in an atmosphere of cordiality and mutual understanding.

The Kampuchean side was elated over the achievements scored by the Lao people under the leadership of the LPRP, the LPDR Government and the LFNC Central Committee in defending and building the country over the past 6 years. These great achievements have raised to an ever higher level the new shape of the LPDR in the international arena. They are a contribution to the overall strength of the three countries of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam for safeguarding security and stability in the region and the maintenance of friendly relations and wide cooperation with the peoples of neighboring countries and the world.

The Kampuchean side solemnly condemned the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, in collusion with the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries, for carrying out their dark schemes with the hope of sabotaging the Lao revolution by continuously making propaganda distorting and slandering the correct political line of the party and Government of the LPDR. Moreover, they have fostered, assisted, trained and supported the exiled Lao reactionaries and sent them to carry out activities creating disturbances in Laos.

The Kampuchean side once again denounced the dispatch of troops along the Lao-Chinese border by the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists who aim to seize and annex various points along the Lao-Chinese border and to step up threats and economic blockade against the LPDR. The Kampuchean side announced full support for the LPDR in its resistance against all dangerous schemes and acts of enemies who are considered by the Kampuchean side as common enemies.

The Kampuchean side was firmly convinced that with their overall strength and internal solidarity, under the clear-sighted leadership of the LPRP and the LFNC Central Committee, and with the strength of friendship, solidarity and militant cooperation among Laos, Kampuchea, Vietnam, the Soviet Union and other fraternal socialist countries as well as progressive, peace-loving people in the world, the Lao people will be able to safeguard their revolutionary gains and securely defend their country forever. The Kampuchean side wished the Lao people, new, still greater successes in implementing the eighth resolution of the LPRP Central Committee and the first 5-Year Plan and in fulfilling their international obligation.

The Lao side wholeheartedly hailed the great, praiseworthy revolutionary achievements scored by the Kampuchean people under the correct leadership of the KPRP, the Council of Ministers, and the KUFNCD National Council over the past 3 years following the liberation of the country. The Lao side was elated to note that the serious situation in Kampuchea left behind by the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique has been settled, a new life for the people has been guaranteed, and the revolutionary administration has maintained tranquillity for the people and social order in general. Noteworthy are the achievements scored in boosting production during the rebuilding and defense of the country.

Their new victory serves as a great strength which guarantees forever a secure future for and the destiny, growth and development of the PRK.

The Lao side was elated to learn -- and wholeheartedly supports -- that the Third Congress of the KUFNCD National Council has set 22 March as the day of Lao-Kampuchean militant solidarity. This was the day when the top-level Lao delegation led by President Souphanouvong paid an official friendly visit to Kampuchea in 1979 after the liberation of the Kampuchean nation. It is, therefore, a day of significance for the two peoples of Laos and Kampuchea in particular.

The Lao side solemnly condemned the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists for colluding with the U.S. imperialists and other international powers in assisting and supporting the shattered forces of the Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique and its other faithful reactionary lackeys to oppose the PRK.

The Lao side announced its resolute recognition of the PRK as a completely independent, sovereign, democratic and peaceful state. The Council of Ministers of this republic represents the entire people and has been set up in conformity with the Constitution. It is also a legitimate representative of the Kampuchean people. The Lao side considered as an injustice the decision of the United Nations to allow the genocidal Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique to retain the Kampuchean seat in the United Nations. It is regrettable that such a decision has adversely affected the prestige and role of the United Nations. The Lao side was convinced that the Kampuchean people are the genuine masters of their own country's destiny and that they will certainly achieve new, increasingly greater successes in implementing the resolutions of the Fourth KPRP Congress and of the Third Congress of the KUFNCD National Council in order to defend and lead the country in its advance to socialism.

The two sides welcomed the great victories recorded by the fraternal Vietnamese people in defeating all acts of threats and aggression of the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, in rebuilding their country and in fulfilling their sacred proletarian, international tasks, in particular in helping liberate, save and revive the Kampuchean people. The Vietnamese people have saved the Kampuchean people from the danger of genocide by the rebellious Pol Pot-Ieng Sary-Khieu Samphan clique. They have also wholeheartedly assisted the Kampuchean people in defending the fatherland and rebuilding the country. The two sides expressed their conviction that uncer the clear-sighted leadership of the Vietnamese Communist Party [VCP] the heroic Vietnamese people will achieve new, still greater successes in implementing the resolutions of the Fourth VCP Congress.

The two sides unanimously agreed that the friendly relations and the militant solidarity among Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam are a significant factor determining the victory of the three countries and are an overall strength contributing to the maintenance of stability and peace in the Southeast Asia region and the world.

The two sides solemnly condemned the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists, the U.S. imperialists and the NATO clique for their interference in the internal affairs of countries in all regions, which has consequently caused instability and tension in the world. The two sides denounced the U.S. imperialists for producing a large number of weapons and other equipment and for their new decision to produce chemical weapons. Their acts represent a threat and a great danger to world peace.

The two sides vigorously supported all the correct proposals of the Soviet Union in its meeting with the U.S. powerholders on the reduction and destruction of weapons and other equipment already produced or to be produced, and on an end to the arms race.

The two sides supported the peoples of Cuba, Nicaragua, El Salvador and other countries in Central American and in the Caribbean, who are suffering from the threats, interventions and invasions by the Yankee imperialists. The two sides demanded that the Reagan government promptly end its dangerous acts.

The two sides supported the struggle of the Arab, Palestinian and Namibian people and other people in South Africa against oppressive and intimidative Zionism, apartheid and racism, and demanded that those people be given their fundamental rights of self-determination.

The two sides supported the Angolan people in their resistance against the agression of the international pirates of the racist South African regime's army. The two sides solemnly denounced this barbarous aggression and demanded that the South African authorities put an end to their international piratic acts against the Angolan people.

The two sides also solemnly condemned another international pirate, namely Israel, for its acts in the Middle East where they have seized Syrian territory in the Golan Heights. These international piratic acts serve as undeniable evidence of the fact that Israel has no intention of living in peace, settling problems of peaceful coexistence, or solving problems with the Arab, Palestinian and other peoples in this region. Israel has only served the U.S. imperialists' policy to expand their aggression.

The two sides unconditionally supported the Afghan people who are struggling against the dangerous interference in their internal affairs by the U.S. imperialists and other reactionaries.

The two sides expressed satisfaction over the success of the fifth conference of the three nations -- Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam -- which was held in Vientiane on 16 and 17 February 1982. This conference clearly showed the desire of the three peoples of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam to struggle persistently against the policy of intervention and aggression of the Beijing big-nation expansionists and hegemonists and the U.S. imperialists in order to maintain peace and stability in Southeast Asia and to strengthen the friendly relations and cooperation with the neighboring peoples and countries in this region.

The two sides were very satisfied to note that the militant solidarity and wide, firm and all-round cooperation of the three peoples of Laos, Kampuchea and Vietnam have become a strong force victoriously safeguarding the national independence and the establishment of socialism in the three countries.

The two sides expressed pleasure and elation on noting that the LFNC Central Committee delegation's visit was gloriously successful. This visit is a contribution to further strengthening and consolidating the relations of friendship, militant solidarity and all-round cooperation between the two fraternal peoples and fronts of Laos and Kampuchea.

The Lao side expressed profound thanks to the KUFNCD National Council of the fraternal Kampuchean people for the warm, cordial welcome.

Comrade Faidang Lobaliayao, on behalf of the LFNC Central Committee, invited the KUFNCD National Council to visit the LPDR. The Kampuchean side accepted the invitation with pleasure. The date and time of the visit will be fixed later.

ACCEPTANCE OF INDOCHINESE PROPOSALS URGED

BK250900 Phnom Penh Domestic in Cambodian 0400 GMT 25 Feb 82

[Unattributed commentary: "They Are Trying To Oppose the Wish for Peaceful Coexistence"]

[Text] The fifth foreign ministers conference of the three Indochinese countries of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos held recently in Vientiane more clearly showed the latter's reasonable proposal and correct good will to China and Thailand as well as ASEAN countries. The judicious proposal unanimously put forward by the three countries, however, was rejected by the Beijing, Thai and Singapore ruling circles.

Once again we deem it necessary to recall the correct position and good will of the fifth foreign ministers conference held in Vientiane by the three Indochinese countries of Kampuchea, Vietnam and Laos who wish to coexist in peace and cooperation with other countries in the region, first of all China and Thailand which have common borders with them, as well as with the other countries of the ASEAN grouping.

Regarding the PRC, the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples continue to pursue a time-honored policy of friendship by preserving the links between the peoples of the three nations and the Chinese people. As in the past, the peoples of the three Indochinese countries have the desire to reestablish normal relations with the PRC on the basis of mutual respect for independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity, of nonaggression and noninterference in each other's internal affairs and of relations of equality, mutual benefit and good neighborhood and settlement of disputes through peaceful means.

Concurrently, the PRK, the SRV and the LPDR have once again expressed their wish to see the Chinese side respond positively to the 28 January 1981 proposal of the three Indochinese countries concerning the signing of a treaty of peaceful coexistence with the PRC. The PRK and the LPDR fully support the good-will proposal of the SRV contained in the 30 January 1982 note from the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry to the Chinese Foreign Ministry in which the former asked the latter to put an end to acts of armed hostilities in the border region between the two countries, called for a third round of talks without a time limit between Vietnam and China in order to guarantee peace and stability along the border and requested that consultations on all questions of common interests be held between the two sides. The two countries fully support the 31 January 1982 message of congratulations from Premier Pham Van Dong to the secretary general of the United Nations who proposed that Vietnam and China observe a truce along the border during the recent Tet occasion.

All of this reflects the correct desire and good will of the three Indochinese countries and shows that there is no better way out than this solution.

If the Chinese side instead rejects these proposals, however, it means that China has carried out and is carrying out a hostile policy against the three Indochinese countries with the aim of worsening tension in the region. Moreover, Thailand's rejection of the Vientiane foreign ministers conference has been warmly hailed by the Beijing ruling circles. This is proof showing that Beijing wants Thailand to continue to follow in its and U.S. imperialism's footsteps in opposing the Kampuchean, Vietnamese and Lao peoples forever. More particular still, Beijing wants to see the ASEAN countries and the Indochinese countries confront each other and hopes to further aggravate the relations between the two groups of countries.

Regarding Thailand, the peoples of the three Indochinese countries have always respected its independence and sovereignty. Although the Thai authorities have continued to pursue a hostile policy against the three countries in the Indochinese Peninsula since the beginning, the peoples of the three countries have always maintained friendship with the Thai people and have desired to establish good-neighbor relations with Thailand in the interest of each country concerned and of peace and stability in Southeast Asia. The Thai authorities, however, have always refused to recognize these realities. They have instead colluded with Singapore in going against the good will of the peoples in the three countries and following the policy of the Chinese big-nation expansionists and hegemonists.

Therefore, the fact that Thailand and Singapore have opposed the wish for peace and stability of the three Indochinese countries proves that Thailand and Singapore are running totally counter to the interests and aspirations of their own peoples. They should be aware by now that the policy they have been pursuing against the Indochinese countries in the past years has not given them anything but failure. If Thailand and Singapore continue stubbornly to adopt such a policy, they will certainly meet with a more serious setback in the future.

At present public opinion in the world knows perfectly well who really wants peace and stability in Southeast Asia. Therefore, if the Beijing, Thai and Singapore authorities really have the good will to settle the tense situation in Southeast Asia as they have so often claimed, China, Thailand and Singapore must positively respond to the correct, judicious and good-will regional peace proposals of the three Indochinese countries.

DEFENSE MINISTRY MARKS SOVIET ARMY ANNIVERSARY

[Text] Recently the Defense Ministry organized a meeting at the Infantry School to mark the 64th founding anniversary of the Soviet Army and Navy. Attending were Comrade Meas Kroch, chief of the General Political Department; Comrade Prum Chhav, deputy chief of General Staff; Comrade Cheng Than, deputy chief of the General Logistics Department; Comrade Keo Tan, director of the Infantry School; Comrade Kiselev, military attache of the Soviet Embassy accredited to the PRK; many cadres from the Soviet Embassy and the Defense Ministry and many cadres and trainees of the Infantry School.

Opening the ceremony, school director Keo Tan made an address hailing the glorious anniversary day of the heroic Soviet Army and Navy and the immense victories they have won in the past 64 years. He stressed the bonds of solidarity and thanked the Soviet party, government and army for their assistance to the revolutionary cause of the Kampuchean people.

He stressed: [Begin recording] On the 64th anniversary of the Red Army and Navy of the Soviet Union, we would like to express sincere salutation and greetings to our Soviet comrades and comrades in arms who are resolutely standing on the forefront of the struggle against imperialism and other reactionary forces, always deserving to be the valiant armed forces of the most powerful government in the world and the bastion of peace and happiness.

Hail to you, comrades. It is true that physically you are thousands of kilometers away, but morally you have always been with us and have always been a source of encouragement for our people and the KPRAF. On behalf of the Kampuchean Infantry School, on the occasion of the founding anniversary of the Soviet Red Army and Navy, we would like to extend to the valiant Armed Forces of the Soviet Union our sincere gratitude for the great assistance you have accorded the KPRAF and our Infantry School. [end recording]

Afterward Comrade Kiselev, Soviet military attache to the PRK, took the floor to recall the heroic past of the Soviet Army and Navy. He went on to talk about the brilliant victories scored by the Soviet Army and people during World War II and about how the workers in Russia fought off the aggression by imperialism in defense of the world's worker-peasant power. About the role and duty in the cause of defending world revolution, the comrade stressed:

[Initial words in Russian fading into translation] Today, the Soviet Army is the fighting tool of our people of all nationalities. In the unified ranks of our army and navy, representatives of all nationalities can be seen as members of the same combat family. This is possible thanks to political indoctrination in the spirit of friendship, brotherhood and solidarity, mutual esteem and mutual assistance. The combatants of the Soviet Army are always ready to smash all aggressive forces in defense of the independence and freedom for their beloved people and fatherland. They have never forgotten the teachings of Comrade Leonid Brezhnev, general secretary of the CPSU, who said that, faced with the most complex situation of today -- especially very recent developments -- all of us must remain constantly combat ready to defend the revolutionary cause and always keep in mind our historic responsibility for the destiny of the fatherland and the whole world.

This ceremony ended with the chanting of slogans hailing the bonds of friendship and fraternal militant solidarity between Kampuchea and the Soviet Union.

[Begin recording of slogans being shouted] Long live the everlasting solidarity and friendship between the Kampuchean and Soviet peoples and armies! [cheers] Long live the PRK! [cheers; end recording]

[Text] On 23 February 1982 at 1200 Prime Minister Khieu Samphan once again held talks with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, former Kampuchean head of state, on the issue of uniting Kampuchean national forces to fight the Le Duan Vietnamese enemy aggressors and race exterminators. After exchanging views and reaching a unanimity of views with each other, Prime Minister Khieu Samphan on behalf of the two parties summed up the significance of this round of talks to Chinese and foreign reporters.

He said: "After the discussions on 21 February, Samdech told you that any tripartite coalition must be supported by all three parties. He reported on a number of principles to unite the three parties in order to cooperate with each other in harmony. These principles are not complicated. They are: 1) The principle of tripartism. 2) Any party cannot have dominant rights over other sides. 3) Important issues must be decided and agreed upon by a consensus of all parties.

Concerning the legal status of the Democratic Kampuchean state, which we raised in order to guarantee the legal status of the coalition government, it does not mean that any party has to be integrated into nor to be under the Democratic Kampuchean institutions. Our wish is to maintain and defend the legal status of the Democratic Kampuchean state, which is a UN member. This is a strong point in our struggle in international law, because the Democratic Kampuchean state is a victim of the Vietnamese aggression which is a violation of the UN Charter."

After the discussions and meeting with reporters, Samdech Norodom Sihanouk and his wife invited Prime Minister Khieu Samphan and other members of the delegation to lunch. The talks and the luncheon were held in an atmosphere of sincerity and mutual understanding.

VODK: NO PEACE IN REGION UNTIL SRV WITHDRAWS

[Unattributed commentary: "Southeast Asia Cannot be a Peaceful, Free and Neutral Zone Unless the Vietnamese Withdraw All of Their Troops From Kampuchea"]

[Text] On 17 February Adam Malik, vice president of Indonesia, appealed to the ASEAN countries to continue to exert more efforts to solve the Kampuchean problem. He indicated that ASEAN is not an enemy of Vietnam but it wants the Vietnamese to withdraw their troops from Kampuchea.

A solution to the Kampuchean problem would be a big contribution toward building the Southeast Asian region into a peaceful, free and neutral zone. The Southeast Asian nations, especially the ASEAN nations, have hoped to create this peaceful, free and neutral zone for a long time, but this wish has not been able to materialize. Furthermore, during the past few years, Southeast Asia has become a very tense and dangerous region in the world. What are the causes of all of this?

On 16 February Thai Foreign Minister Sitthi Sawetsila made a statement that the tension in Southeast Asia is directly caused by the Hanoi Vietnamese aggression and occupation of Kampuchea which are flagrant acts violating the principles of nonalignment and the UN Charter.

Luis Moreno-Salcedo, the Philippine delegate at the 38th UN human rights conference, stated on 17 February that the military aggression and occupation of Kampuchea and Vietnamese policy are threatening international peace and security, particularly that of the countries in Southeast Asia.

Until the danger of aggressive war caused by the Vietnamese troop occupation of Kampuchea is ended, there can be no long-term political stability nor peace in Southeast Asia. The whole world unanimously realizes that the aggressive and expansionist war -- aimed at swallowing up the territory and exterminating the people of Kampuchea -- destroys peace and stability in Southeast Asia. This has caused permanent tension in the region every day. The danger of escalation looms all the time.
